"The courses of training contemplate a total [illegible] of four summers, although [illegible] is no obligation either to continue the C. M. T. C. course or to enter any other military service. The R. M. S. & T. declared. The first year, or Basic course, has a minimum of military training and a maximum of athletic and recreational activities [illegible] the next three years the military training is progressive, with the object of fitting the student for a commission in the Officers' Reserve Corps, should he decide to take the examination after further study.

"The student who attends a C. M. T. Camp is under no expense. The Government defrays all necessary costs. Wholesome food, uniforms, Army cots and blankets, athletic equipment, laundry service, and railroad fare to camp and return are supplied the student without charge.

"Enthusiastic endorsement of C. M. T. C. training has come from leaders in all fields. President Coolidge as well as 32 Governors have sent their sons to camp. High church officials, college heads and labor leaders have written in praise of the training. The endorsements received by the War Department include letters from athletic coaches at more than forty nationally prominent colleges.

Intercollegiate News

SWIMMING IMPORTANT IN OTHER COLLEGES

Water sports are beginning to be of more importance in many of the larger colleges. Yale, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania and Columbia all have their swimming teams and are very active in this sport. In competition with seven other colleges Yale recently emerged victorious by not losing a single meet, and thus annexed for the fourth successive year the Intercollegiate League title.

DARTMOUTH TO ABANDON SPRING GRID PRACTICE

It was recently announced by Harry R. Heneage, supervisor of athletics at Dartmouth, that this year the Big Green would abandon spring football practice. This news was a surprise to many athletes who were preparing to attend this practice session which is usually held just after the spring vacation in April.

EXPELLED FOR OVER-EMPHASIS OF ATHLETICS

Too much stress upon athletics was the cause for the expulsion of West Virginia University from the North Central Association of College and Secondary Schools. Inadequate supervision of athletic funds and proselyting by alumni were among the charges levied against the university. It was also claimed that alumni of W. V. U. raised a fund with which to induce athletes to attend the college and encourage athletics.

STUDENT SENATE VOTES FOR BASEBALL SMOKER

[illegible] held last Friday night, Tuesday, March 27, was decided upon as the date for the Student Senate smoker. Plans are being made for a snappy time that will be full of life and spirit. There will be lively [illegible] smokes, refreshments and everything that goes to make a good pep meeting. This will be the first smoker of the baseball season and we should give the boys a good send-off [illegible] southern trip. They will have some hard games to play and we want to show that we are backing them. The best way to demonstrate your college spirit is to come to the smoker and help make some noise. Let's all feel it our duty to go to this smoker and help our team win.

COLLEGE CHOIR TO SING AT EASTER SERVICE

The program for the Lenten Concert, to be given in the Ira Allen Chapel at four o'clock Sunday by the University Choir, assisted by the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs is as follows:

PART I. LENTEN MUSIC

Doctor Smart, pastor of the College Street Congregational Church, and professor of Biblical Literature at the University, will read the scriptures.

The concert soloists will be Catherine Bassett, Eleanor Koenig, Della Martin, Marion Miller, Marion Sargent, Roger Albee and J. H. Hoxie. A women's quartette, composed of choir members, Marion Baldwin, Margaret Corbin, Mary Davis, Dorothy Fowler, Cynthia Lynch, and Mailia Putnam, will give several selections. Miss Miriam N. Marston will preside at the organ.

Wanted: More Athletes

(From New Student)

How to get good athletes. That is the source of worry at the University of Colorado. So pressing is the problem that The Silver and Gold gathered opinions from every possible source on the best ways for bringing high school stars Boulderwards, and published them for aid to patriotic students. The chief difficulty seems to lie in the University's reputation as a place where study is demanded. The Coloradans are valiantly trying to overcome this reputation.

There was a grand free-for-all snowball fight last Tuesday morning between the engineers and members of a certain English class in the museum building. There were no casualties, but it is reported a few cars got pestered pretty good and a few necks forcibly washed.

Freshmen who desire to scrub the eligibility department should attend a meeting at 1:30 in room 2 North College Tuesday. The work will consist of getting grades from the deans' offices and giving or securing help to athletes who are low in their studies. The scrubs will be assigned men in their own class to work with.

CO-ED INDOOR CONTEST FOR TROPHY TONIGHT

The indoor meet, which is to be staged in the gym tonight, will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock and bids fair to be a keen contest, with the Frosh wanting to win the cup and the Sophs being equally anxious to defend it. The trophy was won by 1930 last spring.

Competitive marching with special emphasis placed on posture will be the final feature of the evening. The sophomore class, distinguished by green ties, will come on the floor from the south door of the gymnasium, while the Freshmen, in regulation jerseys, will enter from the north door.

Something entirely new will be the exhibition of Danish gymnastics by the Sophomores and the ladder work by the Freshmen. Both classes will also demonstrate their routine apparatus work, after which the Sophomores will exhibit the Varia and a Slovak dance and the Freshmen will perform the Brown Bear and also a Sailor dance.

Each part of the program will be awarded a certain number of points by the Sweater Club; and the class which scores highest will receive the trophy.

After the indoor meet the freshman girls will meet an all-star team picked from the three upper classes. This game will take the place of the usual championship game inasmuch as the class of 1931 is the indisputable winner of the girls' inter-class tournament.

The probable line-up for the "All-Stars" is: "Dot" Gurney, '30, r.f.; "Billy" Hayes, '28, l.f.; "Dith" Wheatley, '29, c.; Ramona Munn, '29, [illegible] "Monkey" Morgan, '29, r.g.; "Betty" Burke, '28, l.g.

FRATERNITY INITIATIONS

SIGMA ALPHA CHI

Sigma Alpha Chi fraternity held its formal initiation Saturday, March 17. Following the degree work at the house a banquet was served at the Hotel Vermont. Many alumni besides the members of the active chapter were present at the banquet. The following men were initiated: Phillip G. Andrews, '30, of Cambridge, Mass.; Donald E. Coburn, '31, of Hardwick; Charles N. Crockett, '31, of Burlington; Americo Gloria, '30, of Barre; Franklin A. Sears, '30, of Brattleboro; and Arthur Sharples, Jr., '31, of New Bedford, Mass.

Junior Year May Be Spent In France

The Institute of International Education has sent out the following notice to American colleges which is of special interest to present sophomores:

"American college students can now spend the junior year in France and secure courses for which full credit will be granted by most colleges toward the Bachelor of Arts degree. The program of work is not an easy one and only those should undertake it whose record at college has been uniformly high. A minimum of four years of French, in high school and college combined, is also necessary.

The courses available for American college juniors are limited to the general fields of literature, economics, philosophy, history, and the French language. No courses are available in the natural sciences, chemistry, physics, or biology, that can be successfully correlated with those given in the first two years of an American college.

The cost of the year, July to July, which includes twelve weeks in the summer session of a French University, is about $1,500. This will cover the round-trip ocean voyage, railroad travel in France, room and board, tuition fees, and all other necessary expenses except for clothing.

Advantages that may be secured from a year's study in France:

(1) Ability to read, write, speak and understand French with ease—a rare accomplishment in the United States.

(2) Preparation to teach French, or to fill governmental or business positions in French-speaking countries or in business correspondence with them. (French can be used for business purposes in half of the countries of Europe and in many of the larger countries of South America.)

(3) Broadening of one's point of view growing out of a year's study of a civilization other than one's own.

(4) Acquaintance with a great literature and acquisition of a capacity to enjoy it that will be a permanent possession. Opportunity to see and to study some of the world's greatest collections of painting and sculpture; and to see and to hear masterpieces of opera and drama.

(5) All of these things without loss of time in the college course and at an expense not much greater than that for the average twelve weeks vacation trip to Europe.

A limited number of scholarships of $300 each have been established for the purpose of giving some assistance to highly recommended students who can not afford the full cost of the year abroad. These scholarships will be awarded only to students who are to be members of organized and supervised groups approved by the Committee on Undergraduate Study in France.

PROFESSOR H. G. BENNETT LECTURES IN VERGENNES

Professor Howard G. Bennett and Mrs. Bennett, accompanied by five members of the Women's Glee Club, went to Vergennes Wednesday, where Professor Bennett lectured on Shubert before a large audience of music lovers in the Bixby Memorial Library. Vocal illustrations of Shubert's songs were given during the course of the lecture by soloists, Miss Hazel Ladd, '30, Miss Mary Davis, '29, and Miss Hazel Burnap, formerly a member of the Women's Glee Club at Vermont, and at present supervisor of music in Vergennes. A sextette composed of the Misses Marion Baldwin, Margaret Corbin and Marion Sargent, together with Misses Ladd, Davis, and Burnap gave a few groups of the composer's songs.

The evening of Shubert was brought to a close by a piano duet, the Unfinished Symphony, played by Professor and Mrs. Bennett.

DRAMATIC CLUBS PICK PLAY FOR JUNIOR WEEK

"Adam and Eva" is the title of the Junior play to be given during Junior Week. A joint meeting of the two honorary dramatic societies, Wig and Buskin and Masque and Sandal, was held in the Marsh Room of the Billings Library, Tuesday evening, March 20, for the purpose of selecting a play. The committee on selection of a play reported and, after careful consideration, "Adam and Eva," a three-act comedy by Guy Bolton and George Middleton, was finally selected.

Try-outs for the play will be held on March 26 and 27, next Monday and Tuesday, at 4 P.M. in Room 3, North College. Anyone in college is eligible to try out at this time. Professors A. B. Myrick and Frederick Tupper and Max Andrews, the coach, will act as judges at the try-outs to select the players.

Infantile Paralysis at Stanford

After eight cases of infantile paralysis were discovered on the campus of Stanford University, college authorities examined a large number of students, and asked others to refrain from leaving the campus for fear that they might carry the germs abroad.

In the first stage of firing in the National match, fifteen men fired and the scores of the first ten were counted. Vermont's ten high men totaled 1,900 out of a possible 2,000.

HOOVER AND 'AL' SMITH LEAD IN STRAW VOTING

(By New Student Service)

Herbert Hoover continues as the presidential favorite in the colleges with Al Smith trailing along as outstanding Democratic choice. Of 2,21[illegible] ballots cast at the University of Cincinnati, Hoover received 1,281, which was 58 percent of all votes cast, and 75 percent of the Republican poll. Smith stood second with 436 votes which represented 88 percent of the Democratic choice. The Anti-Saloon League might be interested to know that Smith's main support came from the law college. Here Hoover defeated the New York governor by only four votes, whereas in the other schools he gathered many times the Smith vote. Coolidge and Dawes followed the two leaders in the order named. Willis did not fare well with his fellow Ohioans, receiving only 32 votes.

At Middlebury College the high men were again Hoover and Smith. Of 529 votes cast, Hoover received [illegible] and Smith 110. Smith's support came mainly from the men.

On March 19 colleges throughout the country took part in a two-day straw vote on the presidential possibilities. Seventy institutions were represented in this first comprehensive attempt to measure college opinion on the forthcoming nominations. Five Republicans and five Democrats were named on the ballots, although voters were free to write in the names of other choices. Those listed were Curtis Dawes, Hoover, Lowden, Willis, Donahey, Reed, Ritchie, Smith and Waish of Montana.

Stanford University, which has high hopes of becoming alma mater of a president, will dedicate its 1928 year book to its most prominent alumnus, Herbert Hoover.

SIGMA PHI WINS BOTH INTERFRATERNITY RELAY AND INDOOR TRACK CUPS

Owls Gain Second Place With But Three Points Less Than Leaders

Sigma Phi captured both cups offered to the winning fraternity track teams in the annual relay race and track and field events. Friday afternoon Sigma Phi won the relay cup by defeating Lambda Iota in the finals. Sigma Phi's time was 2:53:2 and the Owls were close with 2:54:8. Sigma Phi received ten points toward its score for winning the relay and the Owls got five as runners up. These points proved to be the ones to win the meet in the cage and gymnasium Saturday afternoon.

The Independents who finished third scored 27 points in the meet while Sigma Phi scored 21 and Lambda Iota 23. Nevertheless, with the relay points Sigma Phi came out on top with a grand total of 31 points and the Owls followed closely with 28. Howard of the Independents was the high scorer of the meet with firsts in the 30-yard high hurdles and the running high jump.

Results of the events:

Broad jump—Won by Bond, Alpha Tau Omega, 18 ft. 11 in.; second, Osterhus, Phi Mu Delta; third, Mace, Sigma Phi; fourth, Maynes, Sigma Nu.

30-yard high hurdles—Won by Howard, Independents, 4:6; second, Ashcraft, Sigma Phi; third, Hopson, Sigma Phi; fourth, Rich, Independents.

One-mile run—Won by Arnold, Phi Mu Delta, 5:8:4; second, Davis, Lambda Iota; third, Martinetti, Phi Mu Delta; fourth, Edson, Lambda Iota.

30-yard dash—Won by Beaupre, Independents, 3:9; second, Costine, Phi Delta Theta; third, Morse, Sigma Phi; fourth, Crockett, Sigma Alpha Chi.

Shot put—Won by Kropper, Phi Delta Theta, 38 ft. 2 in.; second, Parks, Delta Psi; third, Loudon, Lambda Iota; fourth, Morse, Sigma Phi.

440-yard dash—Won by Woodward, Kappa Sigma, 59; second, Eaton, Lambda Iota; third, Graves, Lambda Iota; fourth, Huey, Sigma Nu.

Pole vault—Won by Willard, Independents, 10 ft. 6 in.; second, Lyman, Sigma Phi; third, Robinson, Sigma Delta; fourth, Bolton, Phi Delta Theta.

Hammer throw—Won by Mace, Sigma Phi, 37 ft. 11½ in.; second, Parks, Delta Psi; third, Mackay, Sigma Alpha Chi; fourth, Loudon, Lambda Iota.

30-yard low hurdles—Won by Douglas, Kappa Sigma, 4:2; second, Beaupre, Independents; third, Hopson, Sigma Phi; fourth, Crockett, Sigma Alpha Chi.

Two-mile run—Won by Wood, Zeta Chi, 10:49:1; second, Davis, Lambda Iota; third, Arnold, Phi Mu Delta; fourth, Maynes, Sigma Nu.

High jump—Won by Howard, Independents, 5 ft. 6 in.; second, Franceschi, Independents; third, Woodward, Kappa Sigma; fourth, Lyman, Sigma Phi.

880-yard run—Won by Eaton, Lambda Iota, 2:22:6; second, Graves, Lambda Iota; third, Martinetti, Phi Mu Delta; fourth, Rice, Kappa Sigma.

TROPHY AWARDED 1930 WOMEN FOR WINNING INDOOR COMPETITION

Freshmen Take Basketball Cup —Anna Perkins Wins "Best Posture" Essay Prize

The women's indoor meet, held in the gymnasium Friday evening, was won for the second consecutive time by the class of 1930 and proved to be one of the best in recent years. Much credit is due Miss Cummings and Miss Blanchard for their winter's work.

Shortly after seven-thirty the Freshmen, led by Elizabeth Westin, entered from the North door and marched once about the room. There were so many that a perfect square was formed, and the combination of good posture and efficient marching made a pleasing start for the evening's performance. Immediately afterwards the Sophomores, led by Narcissa Goodsell, repeated these tactics, entering from the South, but their numbers were fewer and they did not make such an impressive showing, although the posture was good.

The next thing on the program was a competitition in marching tactics between the two lower classes. Of special interest was the backward marching of the Freshmen and the slow time marching of the Sophomores. Perhaps because of the smaller group, perhaps because of their longer practice, the class of 1930 had less difficulty in keeping their line straight.

The apparatus work was extremely well done, the Freshmen displaying a confidence that won the approval of the audience, and the Sophomores showing evidence of longer training and experience. However, this was perhaps the most difficult thing to judge, since the work was not the same for both classes and every student was proficient in the apparatus work she performed.

The demonstration dancing by the Teacher Training students was one of the most enjoyable numbers. The students presented the dances with a sureness, a grace, and an enthusiasm that brought forth continued applause from all those present.

The hit of the evening, however, was the demonstration of Danish gymnasties put on by the class of 1930. An absolutely novel thing, it won instant approval and the girls showed team work and keen interest in going through these difficult and strenuous exercises.

The last event of the evening was the competitive dancing. The Freshman dances, the American Sailor and the Brown Bear, were novel and were excellently done. The Sophomore dance, Varia, was not so unusual but made a splendid showing.

Following the meet, came the basketball game between the All-Stars and the Freshmen, which the former won by a score of 9-8. The playing was fast every minute of the time, both teams showing wonderful co operation and teamwork. The All Stars drew first blood when D Gurney dropped in a pretty one from the side, but they did not keep their lead long for, after an exhibition of perfect passing, H Wright caged a twin counter for the Freshmen. Just before the end of the half E. Perelman replaced

"When The Team Goes South" Smoker 7:15 At Gym Tonight

Rousing Send-off To Be Given To Baseball Nine Leaving Thursday Night—Mayor Beecher Among Speakers

Once more the Vermont baseball team is to take the early southern trip to gain practice for their later season's games. Some hard contests will be played before they return to Burlington, and they will be played on diamonds undoubtedly unlike Vermont's and before a crowd that will be cheering for the other team. A rousing send off is in order for the nine, and this will be given at a Student Senate smoker which will be held in the gymnasium this evening at 7:15. The crack R. O. T. C. band will be in attendance to thrill the cheerers with some fiery numbers.

The speaking program is to include the clever "Hank" Dresser, varsity coach of baseball versatile "Luck" Conway, captain of this year's nine, "Sabe" Abell, manager of the team, Mayor C. H. Beecher and "Doc" Newton, one time speedy pitcher for Vermont and now with the Pittsburgh "Pirates."

Attendance should be record-breaking because not only smokes will be distributed but refreshments of ice cream and cookies will be served after the program. Freshmen are required to attend.

Plans were completed by the committee in charge last Friday night, consisting of W. C. Chadbourne, '28, chairman; L. G. Leary, '28, and A. G. Sirois, '30.

The Catamounts are scheduled to play a game at Georgetown University in Washington, two with the U. S. Marines at Quantico, the Navy at Annapolis, Catholic University at Washington, Drexel Institute at Philadelphia, New York University at New York, Fordham at New York, St. John's at Brooklyn, and the Army at West Point.

THURSDAY P. M. CLASSES

Afternoon classes on Thursday, March 29, will commence at 1:20, and 2:20, instead of at 2 and 3 o'clock, respectively, as usual.

SELECT MEMBERS OF CAST OF COMIC OPERA GIVEN BY GLEE CLUBS

H. E. Goddard Assigned Title Role in "Mock Doctor" to be Presented in May—Faculty Members Unite to Make Production a Success

A comic opera, the Mock Doctor, by Gounod, will be staged in the gymnasium Saturday evening, May 5, by student talent. Dido and Aeneas, a signal triumph of music and dramatic art, was presented last spring. Professor Howard G. Bennett will be assisted by Professor J. T. Metcalf, who will be dramatic director of the opera, and by Mme. Elizabeth Bradish and Miss Miriam N. Marston, instructors in music. Miss Mary Maude Patrick, who made last year's production most effective by her vivid and realistic costume designs, will supervise the costuming of the Mock Doctor.

The dramatic personae of the opera was announced Thursday evening as follows:

SGANARELLE, the Mock Doctor	H. E. Goddard, '30
GERONTE	B. Baker, '31
LUCINDE, his daughter	Hazel D. Ladd, '30
JACQUELINE, nurse of Lucinda	Marion E. Sargent, '28
VALERE, LUCAS, servants to GERONTE	R. T. Krogh, '30; S. Segel, '31
M. ROBERT	Whitney Safford, '28
LEANDRE, in love with LUCINDE	M. B. Jenks, '30

A chorus of 40 paysans, members of the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs assisted by University Choir members, will complete the cast.

Three of the principals sang in the previous opera. Hazel Ladd, '30, of Richmond Hill, N. Y., played a memorable rôle as Dido, Queen of Carthage; and Marion Sargent, '28, of Burlington sang the rôle of the first witch. H. E. Goddard, '30, of Cohoes, N. Y., who led the sailors' chorus in Dido and Aeneas, will be Sganarelle, the Mock Doctor.

The Mock Doctor is based on Molière's Le Medecin Maigré Lui, with music parts by Gounod, composer of Faust.

CURRICULUM FREEDOM IN VOGUE AT HAMLINE

(By New Student Service)

Revision of the curriculum to permit more freedom of study has been announced at Hamline College by President Alfred F. Hughes. Majors and minors have been abolished, the first and last two years of work separated, and requirements reduced in number. "Gateway" courses in the freshman and sophomore years will introduce the student to the college, and thereafter he will be free to select his own subjects. The only demand is for 36 hours of concentrated study. The "gateway" courses will be liberal and varied. Particular emphasis is being placed on the junior and senior years. After caring for the demanded 36 hours, the student may browse as he pleases, or he may limit his work to one field. Provisions will be made for granting the exceptional student research facilities if he is able to carry his work beyond the limits of courses offered. Similarly, by arrangement with department heads, study may be done outside of class rooms and with no direct reference to courses.

CLEVER ACTS FEATURE ANNUAL WINTER RALLY

The annual winter rally of W. A. A. took place at Robinson Hall last Thursday evening. After a buffet supper of ham, scalloped potatoes, rolls, ice cream, cake, and cocoa, the various classes vied in presenting stunts. The members of the Senior class, considering themselves wise in worldly experience, explained for the benefit of their less fortunate companions "Her Supreme Sacrifice." The Juniors, fresh from an hour with Mr Moore, proceeded to give a "Caricature of Argument." Then the Sophomores, bearing in mind the indoor meet, held the assembled women of a hectic day in "Miss Cummings Office." Last but not least came the Freshmen with a clever and romantic story, "Ah."

The directors of the various dormitories, Dean Patterson, Miss Cummings, and Miss Alexander, officiating in the capacity of jurors, rendered a judgment in favor of the Juniors' stunt, in which Dot Cottrell, Marion Everest, Dot Moorby, Lucy Morgan, Fran Howley, and Esther Nelson participated.

Another feature of the evening was a fashion show. The manikins—Anna Darling, Frances McKean, and Ruth Field displayed ensembles, afternoon and evening dresses furnished for the occasion by F. D. Abernethy Company. At this time, the effect of good and bad posture was effectively demonstrated.

Business of a more serious kind was the turning over by the old officers of their offices to the new council. Marion Backus, '29, and Marion Everest, '29, were elected delegates to the A. C. A. C. W. conference to be held at Skidmore College the 13th and 14th of April.

A meeting of the senior women was held last Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock in the old chapel for the purpose of picking out canes. The class was so evenly divided that it was decided that two types would be official. One-half chose walking sticks, which differ from the usual canes in that there are no crooks at the ends. The other half chose canes similar to those picked out by the men, although somewhat smaller and more slender.

Professor Crockett of the faculty spoke before the Vincitia Club of Barre, last Wednesday evening. His speech dealt chiefly with Vermont leaders of other days.

"WHEN THE TEAM GOES SOUTH"

With the Easter recess approaching students' eyes are turned homeward and to thoughts of coming spring, with its shining days and sleepy atmosphere. For a long time Easter has also meant the start of the varsity nine towards the South for its first games.

Tonight there is to be a smoker in the gymnasium to give the team a send-off. Anything less than a large majority of the student body should be taken as an absolute insult by the members of the squad who have been practicing since Kake Walk time. Baseball has been the big sport at Vermont for a generation, it is through this sport that we obtain publicity of the better sort. This year we have had a number of defeats in basketball and football, which, even if taken in a sportsman-like manner, reflect unfavorably upon the people outside of the University.

If Vermont is to take her place in the sporting world this year it must be through its baseball team. The members of the nine are human and if they feel that the entire student group is watching them, cheering them, with them in spirit, they are more liable to have the morale and the winning spurt that means fewer lost games. Whether they get a right start or not is everything. Let's give the team a rousing send-off!

Less than one-half of the students voted in the presidential poll and it is quite possible that Hoover wasn't the choice of the majority of the school. Comparison of the per cent, voting here and in the national election, there is little difference. In other words the men and women at Vermont are just average as far as interest in national politics is concerned. Middlebury with several hundred less students than are enrolled here cast a vote of only 34 less.

The Easter and Lenten music at the Chapel, Sunday, was very inspiring. It would improve the singing very much if there were a few more men.

An annual spring mutiny against military has occurred in some of the larger universities with compulsory military training. Washington, headed by an Episcopal Bishop, has formed a league favoring elective military; California has founded a similar organization, declaring war on war; thirteen students at the University of Minnesota have been expelled from Minnesota for refusing to attend classes in Military and the President emeritus of Duke University came out against such a course in instruction. Vermont seems especially adapted to Military Training, and protests have been few and far between, perhaps because we have been lucky enough to have obtained distinguished records for several years, rating at the top during the past war, or maybe it is because we are behind the times.

CHAPEL

To the Editor of the Cynic
Dear Sir:

The Chapel situation is deplorable and it is not due to any atheistic attitude of the students of this University. There are definite and distinct reasons why the attendance is small but this note shall not deal with those reasons. I only wish to make a suggestion which if acted upon will increase the attendance and also arouse greater interest in the Wednesday morning services. Kindly consider it and if it meets with your approval present it to the student body for action.

Therefore, I suggest that the seating capacity of the Chapel be so arranged that the Faculty and each class have a section of its own. The Medical students to be included with the Academic Seniors, or if they wish have a section of their own. This arrangement, however, is to be made by some committee chosen for the purpose. The Seniors to come first, of course not because they are any better, but somebody has to come first and as they have suffered the longest they should be first, then the Juniors, followed by the wise Sophomores, and last but not least by the hope of Vermont, the Freshman class. Care should be taken not to cause any delay in coming out of the Chapel, for some colleges allow the Seniors to come out first, and if they are placed in front there will be a delay caused by waiting for them. They could come out in any order, or the Seniors and Juniors be placed on one side of the room and the Sophomores and Freshmen on the other. The Freshmen are usually placed in the Balcony but this is not necessary.

These are only suggestions made in order to describe the idea, and the main suggestion is made with the hope that it will be a means of creating a greater interest in the Chapel with the result of a greater feeling of unity among the students of this University.

Sincerely yours,
"Only 28"

EDITOR'S NOTE: There has been such seating plan in the past, but strict adherence has not been made by the different classes. Why not put the Freshmen in the front rows?

PROFESSOR GEORGE G. GROAT

Professor George Gorham Groat was born at Green Island, N. Y., on December 15, 1871, the son of William Henry and Fidelia Anna (Gorham) Groat. He received his A.B. degree from Syracuse University in 1895; his Pd.M. from the New York State Normal College in 1897; his A.M. from Cornell in 1901; and his Ph.D. from Columbia University in 1905. On June 18, 1902, he married Elizabeth Westeen Schiffer, of Albany, N. Y. He taught at Round Lake Academy for one year, was a teacher in the New York State College for Teachers for six years, from 1897-1903, in the Morris High School, New York, 1904 to 1906, lectured at the New York University School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance from 1906 to 1907. In 1907 he became professor of economics and sociology, and secretary of the faculty at Ohio Wesleyan University and held these offices until 1913 when he became professor and the head of the department of commerce and economics at the University of Vermont, a position which he still holds. He has been vice-president of the Vermont State Conference of Social Work, and is a member of the American Economic Association, the American Association for Labor Legislation, of the Institute Solvay (Bruxelles) of the Weltioörl schaftliches Archive, of the Rotary International, of Delta Upsilon fraternity, and Phi Beta Kappa. He is the author of numerous books, among which are: "Trade Unions and the Law in New York;" "Attitude of American Courts in Labor Cases;" "An Introduction to the Study of Organized Labor in America." He often contributes to economic periodicals.

AT THE DORM

BY CONVERSE HALL

GLEANED FROM THE CO-ED ISSUE

"Ah! I got their number now!" cried the professor, picking up a Co-ed (issue).

So the women are getting a new dorm at last. Well, s'better Slade than never.

The front page announced a meeting of the Co-ed Press Club. We hope they were able to iron out many of thoir difficulties.

The women will soon debate Middlebury, upholding the affirmative side of the question, Resolved: "That this insurance house condemns tho United States' policy in Nicaragua."

News item: "Dorothy Cottrell will lead Dramatic Society." We feel sure that if this implies that the new president of Miscue and Scandal will turn shepherdess, all will flock to her aid. G'wan, I'll lamb ewe!

News heading: "Bluestockings elect Strong President." Well, waiting is a tough game, you know. Thanx to E. L.

We notice that the Glee Club will soon give a Lenten Never-Returned Concert.

The catty co-ed can certainly chat cleverly, can't she? And we immediately saw the point of the Old Mill.

We read that the "Electrical Engineers Want Proposed Society." There is also a rumor that the Co-eds wish a proposing society.

"Basketball Tourney Progresses Rapidly." Sure, the dames are always playing a fast game.

In all loyalty to our class we predicted an easy win for the Freshwomen over the notably weak Juniors, who had an excellent team with the exception of their forwards, guards, and center.

"Co-ed marksmen—." Did she land 'em all? Or are they all up in the air over her?

Did you notice the intimate cut of the "Retiring Women's Staff of the CYNIC?" Thanx to E. L.

Trophy Awarded 1930 for Winning Indoor Competition

B. Burke as guard, and the period ended with the score 5-2 in favor of the Frosh.

In the second half B Burke came back to her old position and E Perelman took D. Wheatley's place at center. The playing was, if possible harder than before but as a result of good passing and clever side stepping the All Stars succeeded in getting four baskets to the Freshman's two, although A. Darling collected two free tries for 1931. Shortly before the end of the game J. Lanou relieved J. Hayes at forward.

Immediately following the game Marion Backus, president of W A A, awarded the 1931 numerals to Justine Rogers and Ruth Cohoe, white sweaters to Dorothy Carpenter and "Billy" Hayes, both of the Senior class. The highest honor, the Old English "V," given for sportsmanship, skill, and scholastic standing, was awarded to Lillian Marsh, '28.

Catharine Bassett, '29, chairman of Posture Week, awarded the prize for the best "Posture Essay" to Anna Perkins, '28; and the honorable mention to Ruth Leonard; and the prize for the poster to Florence Keyes, '29, with honorable mention to Vera Chadburne. The result of the dormitory posture competition follows—Redstone: E. Anderson, '28, and M. Rice, '31. Robinson: C. Whitney, '31. Theta House: M. Lawrence, '28. Rand House: M. Eisenwinter, '31. Campus House: R. Field, '31. Allen House: D. Hudson, '31. Grassmount: N. Owsley, '30.

The basketball cup was awarded to the Freshmen and received in their behalf by Anna Darling.

Muriel Cleveland, president of the Sweater Club, awarded the cup for the meet to the Sophomores and it was received by Janice Goodrich, class vice-president.

The members of Upsilon Tau Alpha held a St. Patrick's party at the Vermonters' Club House Thursday evening, March 22. Games were played, stunts presented and dancing followed. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, Dorothy Hudson, Isabel Briziski, Frances Illingworth and Louise Brown.

We are told that the retiring president of the Women's Student Union has maintained an excellent Batten average throughout her college course; and as for the new president, just give her any test and she'll Bassett.

Maurice Bisson of the Algonquins asks all the ferocious readers of this column to keep ever in mind, while perusing this issue of the CYNIC, the maxim which same found in a western (ham and egg) dance hall:
"Don't shoot the drummer—he's doing his best."

And with these few words of wisdom, may we add our sincere congratulations to those already echoing about the school this truly excellent Co-ed issue!

MARY'S ANSWER TO JOE CONVERSE

Dear rah rah boys of Converse Hall,
We've tried our best to help amuse
You homesick childlings far from home.
And the hand that pats, you'd fain abuse!

Well, rah rah boys of Converse Hall,
With leather lungs that yell and wail,
And radio that mars our rest,
A nurse sure hates to try and fail.

So, rah rah boys of Converse Hall,
Lanky lubbers, blubbering dears,
Do flashing lights and maiden coos
Abate your nightly childish fears?

Now, rah rah boys of Converse Hall,
We've got a nursery over here
With little bottles nice and cute,
How'd you like some baby's beer?

And, rah rah boys of Converse Hall,
What makes you think your yells and noise,
Your flickering lights and squeaking horns
Could change one bit a nurse's poise?

"The Scotch people are beginning to walk backwards."
"Why's that?"
"So they can save their front steps."

Elliot is a member of the Sigma fraternity and interested in other campus activities. A. E. Merrill, '30, of Wallingford, was selected as treasurer. Merrill is a member of the Sigma Alpha Chi fraternity.

At the same time it was decided to elect the editor and business manager of the Freshman Handbook for the class of '32. L. O. Clayton, '30, of Bennington, was chosen as the editor. Clayton is a member of Sigma Alpha Chi fraternity, vice-president of Gold Key and a news editor of the Cynic. W. H. Burr, '30, of Barre, was selected to serve as the business manager of the Handbook. Burr is a member of the Sigma Alpha Chi fraternity and an assistant sport editor of the Cynic.

The permanent Y. M. C. A. secretary, M. D. Powers, gave a short talk on the future of the "Y" at Vermont and mentioned a few things that other college Y's are doing.

In the address of the evening Professor DeForest praised the work of the outgoing president and his cabinet very highly. He proposed several new plans whereby interest along spiritual lines might be aroused here at Vermont.

President-elect C. E. Bond will choose his cabinet immediately in preparation for the installation of the new officers and cabinet to be held soon after the Easter vacation.

CHOIR AND GLEE CLUBS GIVE EASTER CONCERT IN CHAPEL

Fantasia by Professor H. G. Bennett Is Organ Interlude—Program of Lenten and Easter Music

A sacred concert of Lenten and Easter music was given in the Ira Allen Chapel Sunday afternoon by the University Choir, assisted by the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs with Professor Howard G. Bennett as musical director. Doctor Isaac Chapman Smart of the College Street Congregational Church read from the scriptures.

The program was divided into two parts. Part I consisting of Lenten music and Part II of Easter music. The concert was fittingly opened with Bach's Chorale Prelude on "O Sacred Head Now Wounded," played by Miss Natilee Marston, organist, before an audience of faculty, townspeople and students which filled the chapel to the doors. The concert singers entered during the Processional Hymn, "O Sacred Head Now Wounded" by Hassler, which was the basis of the organ prelude by Bach.

"Surely He Hath Borne Our Griefs," from the "Messiah" by Handel was rendered by the Choir, with full appreciation of the tragic appeal in its words and beautiful music. Miss Marion E. Sargent charmed her hearers when she sang in a sweet contralto with perfect enunciation the wonderful song from the "Messiah," "He Was Despised."

The round and deep alto voice of Della Martin and the clear high soprano of Marion Miller were exquisitely blended in a duet from the "Stabat Mater," "Inflammatus et Accensus" by Pergolesi. The "Quando Corpus Morietur" and "Amen" from "Stabat Mater" were sung by the women of the Choir.

The final chorus from the "St. Matthew Passion," by Bach, sung by the Choir, concluded the program of Lenten music, its theme more calm and assured than the troubled tone of the first selection from the "Messiah."

Part II was opened with the Scripture Reading, which prophesied and coordinated with the nature of the music. Professor Bennett was himself composer of the organ interlude which followed the Scriptures, a beautiful fantasia elaborated from "Christ ist erstanden." This German piece of the 12th century was sung by the Choir.

Verses of "O Filii et Filiae," French song of the 17th century, were rendered by the Choir with the Glee Clubs answering, and solo parts by Miss Sargent, R. H. Allee and J. H. Hoxie.

Miss Eleanor K. Koenig sang with excellent vocal rendition and expression the selection from the "Messiah," by Handel, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," which is sung everywhere throughout the Christian world on Easter morn.

A sextette composed of Dorothy Fowler and Hazel Ladd, first sopranos, Margaret Corbin and Cynthia Lynch, second sopranos; Mailla Putnam and Marion Baldwin, contraltos, sang in sweet melody one of Massenet's most beautiful pieces from "Mary Magdalene,"—"Bring Flowers for Our Hearts' Pure Devotion."

"Unfold, Ye Portals Everlasting" by Gounod in two parts, Glee Clubs answering Choir, filled the chapel with the glorious chorus, so typical of the sentiments of Easter. An effective ending to the Easter program was the faraway sweet voice singing from above "Christ is Arisen" in answer to the prayer and benediction. The soloist was Catherine B. Bassett.

GAS AND LIGHT TOO

Oh, well, here's another about Mrs. Newlywed:

A young bride went down to the telephone company to see about having a telephone installed in her bungalow. She asked what the rates were, and after being told, insisted that they ought to be lower for her. Upon being refused, she asked to see the manager, and when he said, "But, madam, why should we give you a special rate?" she replied innocently, "Oh, but we buy all our telephones from your company."

Lawton Moore Formulates Nine Standards of Debate Judgment

[illegible] the behavior of the Vermont [illegible] and not consult with anyone during the debate. Each judge shall render a written vote, "affirmative," or "negative" after the formal contest. [illegible] given.

2. Absolutely no consolation vote shall be given, unless it is felt that the [illegible] deserves to be disqualified for a moderately rational or unfriendly attitude, gross errors or deliberate misrepresentation of facts. A team should be severely cut, or voted against for irrational attitude. ("Unfriendly attitude" includes an over forceful delivery, sarcasm, ridicule, personal [illegible] the ability or the knowledge of an opponent, personal remarks or questions, interrupting an opponent, and speaking overtime. A speaker may only finish his sentence briefly on the expiration of time.)

3. Do not count or weigh the arguments for each side. The decision must positively not be on the merits of the proposition, nor on the relative weights of evidence and the argument produced in the debate, but the decision shall be based on the relative skill of the teams (even if the sides were reversed or another proposition discussed). (There is no question of constitutionality, custom or law.)

4. The contest shall not be judged as an oratorical contest, but on the basis of skill (cleverness) in argument. By far the most important element in judging is skill in questioning and answering opponents, and, other things being reasonably equal, the team with the most skillful question and answer style should win. Deficiency in rebuttal, and "canned" (memorized) rebuttal are very bad. (Every speech after the first affirmative shall be partly or entirely rebuttal.)

Other essentials are:

5. Thorough, correct, and clear analysis of the proposition. Good organization of arguments and proofs. (The burden of proof on the affirmative is no greater than the burden on the negative to disprove. No new argument nor new proof, except to support an argument which an opponent had attacked can be used in rebuttal.)

6. The avoidance of argumentive fallacies (among which are: issues not clearly stated or proved, hazy authority or proof, false assumption, false use of cause and effect, arguing in a circle, ignoring the question, evasion of a reasonable and fair meaning of a word, shifting ground, appeal to tradition or prejudice, false analogy, partial proof.)

7. A natural, low voice and a sincere fair, persuasive, free style delivery. Mental ability, not vocal ability, except for its moderation, is on test. ("Free style" involves no great use of notes.)

8. No chart or map shall be displayed to the audience, except that newspapers and books may be. Letters and telegrams have no more value, in a debate, than equal authority in print.

9. Which team did the more real thinking during the debate? Evaded the fewest questions? Which is the cleverest bunch of "lawyers"? Which is the better debating team?

Do not vote on the proposition. That is a very unfair thing to do. The debate and judgment are to discover which is the better debating team, not which is "right."

Professor Moore is now giving this system practical tests in order to make any revisions or additions which may be valuable. He has presented it already to several colleges for approval, of which Springfield has accepted it "in toto," and St. Michael's and Maine with minor changes. It is probable that the principles will be published in the future after they have been thoroughly reviewed and considered.

Old Graves To Be Moved

The graves of more than 200 war heroes in Chalmette National Cemetery, just south of New Orleans, must be disturbed after the occupants have slept peacefully since 1812. The removal of the dead, all in the "unknown soldier" section is made necessary by the recent decision of Mississippi river engineers that an additional levee must be constructed through a part of the hallowed burial grounds to protect two southern Louisiana parishes from possible flood danger from high waters.

The Women's Physical Education Department announces that classes will meet as usual Monday and Tuesday of this week, and will meet at the regular periods on Wednesday and Thursday, so that the students may sign up for outdoor sports. It will not be necessary to wear regulation gymnasium suits at this time. No excuses or cuts will be allowed during the week of the twenty-fifth.

The Women's Rifle Team of the University of Vermont defeated the team of the University of [illegible] a score of 500-496. The [illegible] attracting considerable attention [illegible] East, as evinced by the [illegible] picture, accompanied by a [illegible] will appear in the Boston [illegible]

Professor Evan Thomas [illegible] went to Washington, D. C. [illegible] a meeting of the Washington [illegible] Association of the University

LITERARY MAGAZINE ANNOUNCES ELECTION OF EDITORS AND MANAGERS

Constans Holden Heads Editorial Board of Vermont News Publication—Major Jenks Chosen Financial Manager for Ensuing Year

The Vermont Literary Magazine announces the following elections for the year 1928-1929: Editor-in-Chief, Constans M Holden '29. Assistant Editors, Catherine B. Bassett '29, Dorothy Cottrell '29, Janice M. Goodrich '30, Clifford E Morse '30; Financial Editor, Major B. Jenks '30; Assistant Financial Editor, Paul W. Kinney '30.

Miss Holden, the new editor-in-chief, has been prominent in literary circles during her three years in college. She is Women's Sporting Editor of the Cynic, a member of Bluestockings, and has been an assistant editor of the Literary Magazine since its establishment last year. She is also Vice President of the International Club and a member of Press Club. Her fraternity is Alpha Xi Delta.

Miss Bassett is President of Women's Student Union, a member of Bluestockings, Dramatic Club, Choir, Glee Club, Eta Sigma Phi and several athletic teams and the Kappa Alpha Theta Fraternity. Miss Cottrell is Chief Justice, President of Masque and Sandal, Press Club, a member of Eta Sigma Phi, Bluestockings, Exchange Editor of the CYNIC, Glee Club and Kappa Alpha Theta. Miss Goodrich is a member of Delta Delta Delta, the CYNIC Board, Bluestockings, and has contributed several poems to various magazines. Mr. Morse is a member of the U. V. M track team and of the Sigma Phi Fraternity.

Mr. Jenks is a member of Delta Psi, an assistant manager of the CYNIC, and a member of the College Choir and the Glee Club.

Mr. Kinney is a member of the Sigma Delta Fraternity.

All are well qualified for their respective positions and a very successful year is expected under their leadership. Three or four contributing editors will be elected in June, election being based on work handed in to the editor between now and then. All college students who are interested are urged to contribute.

HOOVER LEADS SMITH IN UNIVERSITY POLL

Herbert Hoover and Gov. "Al" Smith of New York together polled more than three quarters of the total number of votes in the country-wide university ballot, results of which are announced today by The Independent, a national weekly. The secretary of Commerce alone, with 22,086 votes was awarded almost half the undergraduate and faculty total in thirty-nine colleges and universities. Smith came in only a fair second with 13,534. Reed was runner up to the Democratic leader, with Dawes and Lowden trailing Hoover in that order.

Of the seventy publications invited by The Independent to represent their colleges in conducting the poll, approximately forty-five accepted. And of this number thirty-nine have reported final results with the rest delayed because of vacations and examination periods. The ten men, five Democrats and five Republicans, chosen to appear on the ballots received in all 46,879 votes, while the total count for all the choices, including a score or more names not generally listed, approached 60,000. Among these the also rans were Will Rogers, Aimee Semple McPherson, "Big Bill" Thompson of Chicago, Lindbergh, Norman Thomas, Senator Heflin of Alabama, President Butler of Columbia, and a college professor. Five women's colleges took part: Wellesley, Mt Holyoke, Smith, Bryn Mawr, and Connecticut. In all these institutions

VARSITY DEBATING TEAM WILL CLOSE SCHEDULE

By Meeting Yale, Bates, and Middlebury, the Varsity Debaters Will Close the Debating Season This Month

Meeting three of the strongest teams on the Catamount schedule the Vermont debating team closes its season this month. Debating Yale Bates, and Middlebury, Vermont expects to put a good finish to an otherwise mediocre season. The Vermont debaters have dropped contests to Springfield and to St. Michael's, have met Dartmouth here, and have debated Clark and M. A. C. away. Due to cancellation of debates scheduled for the next two weeks with M. I. T. and Colby, Vermont's schedule of home debates has been diminished to three.

On the 12th of May a Yale team will come to Burlington to meet a Vermont affirmative team on the question, "Resolved, that the United States is not yet civilized." On the same day a second Vermont team will uphold the negative of the same question at Yale. In each case Vermont will be represented by two men debating on the Oxford plan. Decisions will be handed down at both debates by two officially-appointed judges, each with one vote, and by the audience which will deliver one vote to whichever team it gives a majority of its ballots. The teams for these debates have not yet been picked.

Vermont meets Bates at Brattleboro on the negative of the question, "Resolved, that democracy is a failure." Debating on the Oregon plan, E. F. Moore, '28, Louis Lisman, '31, and F. A. Sears, '30, will uphold the forensic prestige of Vermont. Bates has several times held the intercollegiate debating championship, and, as in the case of Yale, Vermont is opening debating relations with the Maine College this season. In the debate Lisman will act as lawyer for Vermont, Moore will be witness, and Sears will deliver the rebuttal.

On an unspecified date in May, Vermont will meet the Middlebury debaters at Burlington in a three-man Oxford contest. Vermont will debate on the negative of the proposition, "Resolved, that the United States should cease to protect by armed force the investments of its citizens in foreign countries except after a formal declaration of war." The debate with Middlebury is an annual affair and in the last two years the two teams have broken even, each carrying off a unanimous decision. I. A. Hince, '28, and H. M. Macomber, '30, will debate for Vermont. The third member of the team has not yet been selected.

The postponed co-eds' debate with Middlebury will be held sometime before the first of May. The Vermont women will debate at Middlebury in an Oxford no-decision contest on the proposition "Resolved, that this house approves the policy of the Coolidge administration in Nicaragua."

FEDERAL INSPECTION TO OCCUR MAY 16, 17

Annual Inspection of Military Department Will be Held on Back Campus by National Officers

Federal inspection of Vermont's R O T C battalion will be held on May 16 and 17. Last year Vermont made the distinguished service class and expects to repeat this year.

Beginning Monday, April 16, a new plan of instruction will commence. Companies A and B will drill on Mondays and Companies B and C will drill on Tuesdays and Companies A and C will drill on Thursdays. On Friday the regular Battalion Formation will be held as usual. There will be no classes of instruction on Wednesday but this period will be used for a make-up period instead. This will make two make-up periods a week and students who have excess cuts should take advantage of them. All classes of instruction will be held at 7:30 A M unless otherwise announced on the bulletin board.

Freshmen will start outdoor rifle marksmanship Monday also. Sophomores and Juniors will begin outdoor practice with the automatic rifle and machine guns.

STUDENT A. I. E. E. MEETING

Vermont's student branch of the A. I. E. E. will hold a meeting tonight of especial interest to charter members in the Engineering annex at 7:30.

Professor Dickenson will give an illustrated lecture on "Electrical Progress in 1927." All interested students are invited to attend.

THESPIANS PRACTICE DAILY IN PREPARATION FOR JUNIOR WEEK PLAY

Gregory Edson and Jeanette Beecher Selected for Title Roles in Forthcoming Production of "Adam and Eva"

Rehearsals are now being held daily at four o'clock in the afternoon at the Vermonters' Clubhouse on Summit Street in preparation for the presentation of the play "Adam and Eva" some time during Junior Week.

The cast of characters selected at the try-outs which were held on March 26 and 27 is as follows: Adam, Gregory Edson. Eva, Jeanette Beecher. Julie Dewitt, Muriel Cleveland; Clinton Dewitt, Harvey Butterfield; Aunt Abby Rocker, Dorothy Cottrell; Horace Pilgrim, Lloyd Turner. Delamater, Eugene Knapp. Lord Andrew Gordon Thor Krogh; Joiner King, Herrick Macomber; Corinthia, Janice Goodrich.

These characters were selected by Professors A. B. Myrick and Frederick Tupper, and May Andrews, the coach, who served as judges in the try-outs.

The play, a comedy in three acts, was written by Guy Bolton and George Middleton. It is reported that at the first rehearsal, when Act I was read for the first time, that the players gave way to gales of laughter. Rare amusement and clean entertainment is promised to all who are fortunate enough to witness this play.

VERMONT JOURNALISTS TO PUBLISH DAILY NEWS

The Burlington Daily News will on Monday, April 30, be published by the students of Mr. Crockett's class of Journalism. The News in its Wednesday evening's issue, of April 11 under the heading U. V. M. Class in Journalism Newspaper Men and Women on for Day to Issue News, April 30, writes the following:

On Monday, April 30, the class in journalism at the University of Vermont will lay aside their textbooks and turn to the practicalities of newspaper making, for on that date The Daily News will be given over to these embryo newspapermen and women, for a day. That it will be one of the most complete and finest editions of a newspaper ever published in Burlington goes without saying for Prof. Walter H. Crockett has a hustling class of young men and young women well prepared and capable of handling both news and editorial content.

It will be an edition replete with feature stories and containing all the 'spot' news of the day. Going on the job in the morning the students will stay with the paper until the edition is put to bed at four o'clock in the afternoon. During the intervening hours they will have each carried out their own particular jobs whether on telegraph, city or copy desks, covering the regular news beats in the city and pounding out feature stories, society or editorials. The entire news and editorial content will be 'up to' the young journalists to produce and whatever hand Professor Crockett and the regular News staff have in it, if any, will be merely in an advisory capacity.

This is the first time that any class in journalism at the University has been given similar opportunity and The News is pleased to be the instrument by which the instruction they learn in the classroom may be put to actual test. It would be unfortunate if anyone missed having a copy of this edition, so better mark April 30 as a red letter date on the calendar and be sure to get your copy.

The first classes will consist of lectures on rules and elements of the various sports and for this reason it is expected that every member will be present.

VARSITY NINE LOSE SIX, WIN FOUR CONTESTS ON ANNUAL SOUTHERN TRIP

Navy, Army, Drexel and St. John's Beaten by Green and Gold Baseball Team

Vermont's ball tossers returned home after an invasion of the south during the Easter holidays. The invasion proved rather successful, even though they lost six out of ten games, as most of the nines that the Green and Gold faced had been outside for two or three weeks before their first contest while Vermont had only one day's practice in New York on the way down. Last year they won four contests but did not play as many games as this year due to old Jupe Pluvius. However, the team struck fine weather on this trip and didn't have to postpone one game.

The first battle was with Georgetown who boasts one of the strongest college teams in the south. Here Vermont made a very good showing, losing finally 12-10 but in this game they were regular hitting pools gathering 15 hits off the deliveries of Gillispie and Fogarity. Prentice got four, Cogswell three and Captain Conway connected for an entire trip around the bases.

Moriarity started for Vermont but was sent to the showers in the sixth when the Washingtonians scored seven runs. He was replaced by Schoppe who twirled five balls the remainder of the contest allowing only one scratch hit.

Score by innings

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R.	H.	E.
Vermont	1	1	0	2	1	0	2	2	0	10	15	3
Georgetown	0	1	2	7	2	0	0	0	*	12	17	2

In the second and third frays the Vermonters met Tom Keady's Quantico Marines and here lost both affairs. Schoppe pitched the first and panned 10 men but due to poor support and a little wildness at times they came out on the small end of a 7-1 score. Vermont had lost its batting eye and couldn't seem to touch the Marine pitcher.

The second game ended 5-2 with Talcott pitching. It looked as if the maple sugar boys might take one from the Marines but the soldiers had just a little more punch and put across two more runs than Vermont. In this contest the hitting was better but the fielding was still somewhat erratic.

The next game the following day saw the Burlingtonians annex their first win by sending the Navy down to stinging defeat to the tune of 8-1. Don Moriarity was responsible for this win in a large way as he allowed the Middies only three scattered hits and fanned twelve men. This was the first time Vermont has defeated the Navy in five years. Although held scoreless until the seventh with the Middies holding a one-run lead, the maple sugar boys found Wilson's weak spot to be bunting and scored four runs as the result of six consecutive bunts. They finished the day with three more scored one more in the eighth and Winchenbach was heavy hitter for the day getting two out of four times at bat.

Score by innings

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E

At the capital Vermont dropped their fourth loss to the strong Catholic University nine. Poor baseball judgment lost the game for the Cats. Schoppe and Talcott held the C. U. boys to eight hits but three of these were doubles and one triple besides 2 walks and one wild pitch. Vermont touched Byrn for seven hits but could only score two tallies.

This was the first errorless game that Vermont played and it was a hard one to lose.

Score by innings

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E
C. U.	0	0	0	2	2	0	1	0	*	6	8	1

Next game was in the Quaker City when the Dressrites won their second contest from Drexel 7-3, giving that team its first set-back of the season. There was a pitching duel between Talcott and Thompson up to the ninth with the score at a deadlock of three all. However, Vermont got to Thompson and when the dust had cleared, the boys from the Champlain country had chalked up four more. The game ended this way with Drexel being unable to tally in their half of the final frame. Cogswell, Winchenbach, Talcott and Wood each made two hits apiece; Conway hit a double.

Vol. 46 — April 17, 1928 — No. 43

Normal has again made her annual pilgrimage into the sunny South and although the results are far from satisfactory in games won and lost it is true that the greatest of outdoor practice that this trip afford is found. When the National and American Leagues went south a month ago it was not for the purpose of seeing how many games the various clubs could win but for a chance of looking over rookies and getting into shape for the long grind ahead. It is primarily for this same purpose that the Green and Gold makes her journey into the South each year. We should not look therefore at the won and lost column but at the improvement that the team has made during this period.

To be sure some people have to lose but do not forget that most all of the squads that Vermont must have been practicing out of doors for weeks before and some of them have even played scheduled games with college nines. Vermont is therefore at a decided disadvantage when it comes to opening and in batting into a real game. A good many of us think their practice in the cage is just as good as the real thing but this is far from being true. Practice in the cage is just like it. It is a game devoid of all of college to practice without any practical experience.

Let us hope the boys have got all the errors out of their systems and will be able to show us some real baseball when they open at Centennial Field against St. Michael's on the 28th of this month.

FRATERNITY COMBINATIONS

In a recent issue of the Amherst Student it was said, "The 1930 delegations of Chi Psi, Phi Kappa Psi and Theta Delta Chi fraternities have been barred from voting for one year due to evidence of combines. This action was decided by a vote of the Student Council. It is hoped by the Council that it will not be necessary to impose this penalty on any fraternity or group of fraternities in the future." This action was taken after a special investigation was made, and positive proof obtained of a combination.

It is remarkable that no comment was made in the editorial columns of the issue about the matter, for this is a step that few colleges appear to dare to face. Fraternity politics, like parties in governmental elections, appear to be ever in evidence, and little has been done towards the abolishment of this evil. It is a subject that strikes at the very roots of fraternities, for the success of the majority of fraternities are judged by their activities on the campus.

In boosting the combines its advocates state that the best men of each group are candidates for election and little harm is done by electing any of them. They also claim that in entering the combine the participants fraternities favor the men for whom they are casting their votes.

Against the combinations is always the argument that it is unfair and undemocratic. A minority controls the elections of an entire class. It is, without a doubt, undesirable to the unparticipating majority.

There are many ways to combat the combines among them being investigation and control by a responsible student representative body and by a complete turnout at class meetings. As the subject is primarily a fraternity matter it would perhaps be better to have an interfraternity organization strong enough to enforce its decisions with the assent of a general student representative group. Upon request a general investigation would take place and action could be taken by the group.

In class elections it is entirely possible to take the "ice" from the combinations because they represent actually a very small percentage of the class. More interest on the part of more students would result in a better representative group of elections.

PHILOSOPHY OF LOVE

How I love the little birds.
They are so free from self
I shoot them, every one I can
And put them on the shelf.

Ah, I love the flowers that bloom
So greenly in their place
I pull them up with roots and all
And put them in their place.

My girl she is the sweetest thing
So free from guilt and guile
Next Monday, if the sun do shine
Intentions I shall file.

SOCIAL EVENTS

A beautiful post-Lenten wedding took place Saturday at the Sixteenth Congregational Church at very high noon. The bride, Alice Claire von Strichnine, daughter of Mr and Mrs. John Paul Jones von Strichnine, of Washington, Mississippi and St. Paul, is a member of the Social Turnovers, W. C. T. U. and the Girl Scouts. She is a graduate of Southern University and was such a good student that she attended this institution for seven years. The groom, Baron Sahara Desert, comes of a long line of Sheiks, and is connected with the judiciary department of this country under which he served ten years. Having a natural gift at sewing and tailoring all his own clothes, he may be correctly termed a self-made man.

The bride was gowned in long gunmetal stockings, a delicious Paris chapeau and an exquisite Spanish bridle veil. The groom entered followed by his corsage, I mean his cortege, consisting of twelve of his trusted containers who have long been in the service of his illustrious family.

The bride and groom left the church in a Veritableecstacy. This must be one of the new European voitures de gaz.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In the last issue of the CYNIC "Only '28" presented a detailed seating plan for chapel services. "Only '28" writes "The chapel situation is deplorable, and it is not due to any atheistic attitude of the students of this University. There are definite and distinct reasons why the attendance is small ....I only wish to make a suggestion which if acted upon will increase the attendance and also arouse greater interest in the Wednesday morning services." And "Only '28" continues to say that the Seniors should come first, and then the Juniors followed by the Sophomores and then the Freshmen. Or, he says, Seniors and Juniors could sit on one side, and Freshmen and Sophomores upon the other.

The Editor's Note which follows this letter reads: There has been such seating plan in the past, but strict adherence has not been made by the different classes. Why not put the Freshmen in the front rows?

Of course, the Editor's Note is a bit amusing since the only reason why the Seniors' traditional places should be suddenly given over to the Freshmen would be to make it possible for the Seniors to get out of chapel first, that is as soon as they can.

Before we should get excited as to where the students of the different classes should sit, we should first get the students to attend chapel. As to placing Freshmen in the front rows, that is the surest way of keeping them from chapel altogether, and eventually to put an end to chapel itself.

We must take things as they are. Conditions today are not so bad. The students who attend chapel from a class by themselves, not classes '28, '29, '30, '31, but a special class of students. It is worth while holding chapel just for these students, small as their number may be. And for Heaven's sake, let us not divide them up into groups, as we would just so many cattle. It will be time enough to think of devising a seating plan when more students do attend chapel, but just now let things remain as they are.

Judge Cowles of the Burlington City and Juvenile Court spoke to Miss Holbrook's senior education classes last week telling them of the function of the Juvenile Court. At this time Miss Holbrook was in New York attending the Public Education Association Conference where she spoke on "Visiting Teacher Work in Vermont."

Tuesday evening Miss Sara Holbrook spoke at the Parent Teachers Association at Champlain School. She explained her work as visiting teacher in this city.

OUR FACULTY

DOCTOR ALDINGER

Dr. Albert Kurwin Aldinger, dean of physical education at Vermont, is one of the best known men in his profession. Born on July 4, 1873 at York, Pa., he received his prep school education at the State Normal School in Bloomsburg, Pa. In 1899 he received his M D degree at this university, and from then until 1906 he acted as a director in physical training at the state normal school. Dr. Aldinger then served as a chairman of physical training at the High School of Commerce up to 1908, when he accepted the assistant directorship of physical training in the New York public schools, in which capacity he served until 1915. During that period, he was married to Gertrude Stevenson.

He then became first assistant director in athletics at the New York Training School for Teachers, later becoming the director of physical training of the public schools of New York and occupying that post together with the secretaryship of the Public Schools Athletic League and the directorship of Extension Courses in Physical Training at C. C. N. Y. until 1925.

Among the many other honorary and distinctive positions he has held are those of the presidency of the New York Physical Training Society and the New York Athletic Research Society.

He published Courses of Study in Physical Training used in the High School of Commerce, and the elementary schools of New York City and like institutions; and also collaborated with Mr. Goldburg in writing Goitre Incidents of Girls.

His active and prominent life may well be taken as a source of pride on the part of the University of Vermont, where he now functions as head of the physical and health education department.

Communications

We have just received the following notice from State President of the Shut-in Society for Me., N. H. and Vt. Branch:

601 Hall Street,
Manchester, N. H.

At Easter we hope to cheer about three thousand people, including many in Homes for Aged, County Farms and Incurable Hospitals.

As far as possible, gifts are made by members able to help themselves in this way. I furnish them with material, so all they earn is clear gain.

First, we take our blind people, then all over seventy and under twenty, and the others in the order of their helplessness.

Contributions will be very gratefully received, for the amount of work done depends upon the generosity of our helpers.

Faithfully yours,
ETHELYN W. BURRELL.

HATS OF THIS SPRING FEMININE AND FELT

"Femininty" is one word that stands [illegible] among all others employed to describe the fashion trend of the spring [illegible].

In spite of the seeming simplicity of the season's hats, they are more feminine than they have been for a long time. By that I do not mean frilly things but a certain softness that spells charm for all of us." This is advance work on millinery from Miss Catherine Griebel, extension clothing specialist of the New Jersey Agricultural College, who has been selected for a series of style shows in Vogue during the first two weeks in May.

It is interesting to note that felt is the outstanding fabric in millinery, as it goes on to say.

Straws, principally Ballibuntl and Panama, are in demand, but these are most successful when treated like felt, in similar types of soft silhouette. Some black satin hats are to be seen, but again these are soft and follow closely the lines of the felt hats.

The important colors for spring are the several tones of beige, blues, jewish greens, and scarlet. This last goes under the name of firecracker red, Chinese or lacquer red—sometimes sealing wax red. Shades of violet appear more frequently as the season advances, and there is promise of brown as an important color for sports wear. A silvery grey is good too.

Trimmings are limited to pins, ribbon or cellophane braid. Shiny trimmings are notable, such as satin bands on felts instead of grosgrain. A few of the felts are flower-trimmed. They are severely simple in design, and the flowers chosen are tiny, like violets. These are sewn close to the hat, so that the silhouette is not lost.

Generally speaking, hats are small and fit close to the head. The tiny little skull cap is most in evidence wherever smart women gather. Often the cap is almost unadorned—a bow, perhaps, appliques of self-colored veil and sometimes a tiny nose veil. Ribbons head in this type of hat. Brims, when they are usually notched over the forehead or turn up coronet fashion

Movie Kissing Barred in China

Peking's film censor has decided that kissing no longer shall be permitted on motion picture screens in China's capital. Kissing is ruled out of date, he has decided, because of the "moral effect" on the younger generation.

In this acting, he takes a leaf out of Japan's book, where kissing long ago was barred from the screen. The conservative Oriental knows nothing of the kiss. His methods of displaying affection are quite different. The western innovation appears to him if not astonishing.

Exhibitors in Peking rather sympathize with the censor, if they are familiar with the screen palaces frequented by the Chinese proletariat. The films shown in the Chinese cities outside the Tartar walls, are at least a generation old, and often are the first ever made.

WOMEN'S DEBATING TEAM DEFEAT MAINE ORATORS

A women's debating team of the University of Vermont met the representatives from the University of Maine on the forensic platform Tuesday evening, March 27, at Rutland, and received a two to one decision in its favor on the question: "Resolved, that this house condemns the policy of the Coolidge administration in Nicaragua." Frances E. Howley, '29, of Rutland and Janice M. Goodrich, '30, of Richmond represented Vermont and upheld the negative of the proposition against Izora Hutchinson and Caroline Cousins of Maine.

The Rutland Herald, commenting in its columns upon this debate, said in part: "The speeches made by both teams showed careful study in preparation, including a knowledge of the historical background of the situation in Nicaragua, which was brought out as well in the open forum after the debate, when the four speakers answered various questions put to them by the audience which filled the hall." The Herald also paid tribute to the spirited nature of the rebuttal, and to the quickness of both sides in combatting one another's arguments.

Maine forcefully upheld arbitration as the best way of treating with Nicaragua, while Vermont contended that American armed intervention is beneficial to Nicaragua, having proved its worth in the past, and that it is appreciated by Nicaraguans themselves.

The debate was held in the assembly hall of Rutland High School. The board of judges was made up of William A. Sargent, Miss Mary R. Houghton and Rev. Arnold S. Yantis of Rutland.

Conservative Trend in University Styles

(By Fairchild News Service)

An increase in the importance of what is known as metropolitan style in its influence on university men's dress is one of the outstanding developments of the year in this field. This is the belief of the Daily News Record and Men's Wear, authoritative style publications of New York, after early spring visits to eastern universities and interviews with merchants and tailors who supply the eastern college men with their apparel.

One man who was interviewed, the senior salesman of a Fifth Avenue firm which has visited the colleges near New York for many years, said that never before in his experience had university students so closely approximated in their dress the dress of smart city men. Daily campus wear, of course, still is informal, but on "dress-up" occasions or when going away on vacations, the students take a great deal of pains with their attire, this observer said.

A peak lapel jacket, according to this authority, fitting well at the waist, had been sold in quantity to students at the institutions he visited. This jacket has two buttons, and is in marked contrast to the loose, rounded-lapel, three-button jacket worn so much previously by all sorts of students.

Young men at the universities also achieve smartness by the use of English custom last shoes having narrow toes and generally trimmer lines than the broad-toed and freak models sometimes affected by students.

Another surprising development in university style is the approval by many eastern students of the shirt having a half-starched bosom with horizontal stripes. With this shirt is furnished a separate collar, starched, and matching in color and pattern. Pale green, light blue and hello, a shade resembling lavender and new this season, have been popular in this type of shirt.

Many students wear plain white shirts, with starched collars attached, especially when going away from the institution they attend. Recently a "little Easter parade" of university men taking trains for their spring vacation, was observed. The derby hats, starched collars, neat shoes and dark, dressy overcoats, all items of the smart city man's attire, were by far in the majority.

NEW ENGLAND COLLEGES PLAN LEAGUE SESSIONS

The League of Nations still holds the limelight, even among American students, for New England colleges have planned to hold a model session of the League of Nations which will be held in Johnson Chapel, Amherst College on Saturday, April 7. Delegations of the various countries belonging to the League will be represented in so far as it is possible by nationals of the countries who are attending these colleges. Since in many New England colleges there are clubs whose purpose is to bring together for discussion foreign students and those interested in questions of vital international importance, it was decided that a meeting organized after the League of Nations would be the most efficient way to discuss such questions as: disarmament, security and arbitration; tariffs and their effects on international payments; and questions arising from United States and Pan American Conference proceedings will be used. Each delegate is to be well prepared to speak on these questions and present personal points of view on the issues raised. Last year at Syracuse and this year at Cornell this plan was successfully carried out, and it hoped that this session will fulfill all expectations.

The Council hopes to have one or more members of the League Secretariat present during the session, and have them speak informally on subjects of contemporary American interest. The following colleges are represented on the Council: Mount Holyoke, Smith, Springfield, Amherst and Massachusetts Agricultural.

It really seems that something valuable should come out of this meeting when a group of students interested in international relations seriously meet to discuss these so-far insolvable international problems.

Radcliffe is also to have a delegation which is under supervision of the International Club. However, if any one who is not a member of the Club is at all interested in becoming a member of the Radcliffe delegation, she should speak to Caroline Keene, '28, President of the International Club. It is a splendid opportunity to express one's interest in world affairs, and to obtain a clearer insight into the practical workings and problems of the League.—Radcliffe Daily

WOMEN'S VARSITY FIVE AWARDED BASKETBALLS

The annual basketball banquet was held at Robinson Hall on Tuesday evening, March 27. At that time the Varsity team was announced and each member was awarded a silver basketball by W. A. A. The girls receiving this honor are: guards, Elizabeth Burke, '28; Jean Wappler, '31; forwards, Dorothy Gurney, '30; Harriet Wright, '31; center, Francis McKean, '31, side center, Ramona Munn, '29.

At that time Margaret Corbin, '29, was elected captain of basketball for the season 1928-1929. Peg will be a senior next year; she is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity, secretary of Bluestockings, and has been on several athletic teams.

Estabel Perelman, '30, was chosen cheerleader for the coming year. Estabel has been prominent in athletics and is well fitted for her new office.

The guests of the evening were Miss Patterson, Miss Spaulding, Miss Cummings, and Miss Blanchard. Flossie Farr Hard, '23, was toastmistress and called for the following toast order:

1. Miss Blanchard delights in "Blowing the Whistle."
2. We say:

Co-eds Practice Leap Year

Willamette College has just passed through two weeks of real leap year life. The student body had passed a resolution whereby the girls were to take care of the fellows for two weeks. They even called for their dates and paid for them. Probably the co-eds were broke by the end of the two weeks and were glad that leap year came only once during the four years at college.

Fraternity Initiations

TAU EPSILON PHI

Kappa Chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi held its annual initiation evente March 23 and 24.

The initiates are Irwin Agel '31, of Burlington; Abraham Rosenfield '31, of Bristol, Conn.; Edward Roth '29, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Samual Rothman '30, of Burlington.

A banquet was held in honor of the initiates on the evening of March 23 at the Hotel Vermont Roof Garden. Toasts were given by Professor Benjamin F. Ladd, Irving Werner M.'29, Dr. Dewey Katz M.'25, Arthur Schneller M.'28, and Edward Roth '29. Guests from Omicron Chapter of McGill University were present.

The formal dance took place March 24 in the main salon of the Hotel Vermont with Professor and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter and Dr. and Mrs. Dewey Katz as chaperones.

Yet even with the handicap of 1,000 years the women will beat the men. Men have another name for women: the gift of Creation."

After traveling for 18 months through the Orient, China, Japan, India, Siam, and Java, she says, "The Orient has as great a message for us if we would but hear it as the West has for them, and as the world develops we shall find ourselves nearer the hearts of the East." Miss St. Denis, knowing Katherine Mayo personally, whose book "Mother India" has caused so much discussion, talked most interestingly on this subject, saying that the book does not aim to be a picture of India, as critics think, but has one theme and sticks to it. "There is but one way to receive criticism—analyze it, separate the true from the false, and apply it. Yet," she went on, "not in 20 years have I met an East Indian that could stand one moment of criticism—their whole attitude is one of defense. The School of Denishawn believes that India has a great message of spiritual, philosophic and artistic beauty and interest," reaffirmed Ruth St. Denis in parting, "and that message should be harkened to without prejudice."

WISCONSIN CHALLENGES RIGHT OF FREE SPEECH

(By New Student Service)

On the front of Bascom Hall at the University of Wisconsin, is a bronze tablet, the gift of the class of 1910, bearing the following inscription:

"Whatever may be the limitations which trammel inquiry elsewhere, we believe that the great state University of Wisconsin should ever encourage that continual and fearless sifting and winnowing by which alone the truth can be found."

The inscription was taken from a report of the board of regents, in 1894, following an historic controversy on academic freedom that resulted from the espousal of economic "heresies" by Dr. Richard T. Ely.

During the University's recent literary gala following the cancellation of Mrs. Bertrand Russell's lecture, a black funeral plaque was found hanging on the famous "free speech" tablet. On it was the legend:

Mrs. Bertrand Russell.

This was not mere horseplay, or a act, to judge from undergraduate opinion expressed following the suppression and still being expressed. The net result of the Madison episode so far as students at Wisconsin and elsewhere are concerned, is the feeling that the University generally credited with being the forward of academic freedom in the United States, failed when put to the test.

A student writing in The Cardinal said:

"I came to this university from a distant state solely because I felt that it was the most liberal institution in this country. When I find liberalism and freedom being carelessly cast aside by our president and dean of men, it seems that I might just as well have gone to Podunk Normal, where I could be sure that there would be no liberalism and so would never expect it."

An alumnus wrote that the University has lost something of its prestige in the nation as a liberal institution. "It has long been a notion that the right of peaceful assemblage and of free speech was more of an actuality in Wisconsin than in most other states."

That Mrs. Russell did speak, that her talk led a Chicago Tribune reporter to remark "Why, I've got to file two words for the Tribune on this lecture, and I haven't got a single sensational statement to hang on her," that parents praised and students denounced the wholesale cancellations—even may be forgotten. But student feeling in Madison is that President Frank's "good taste" defense was a betrayal of the "Wisconsin idea"—the winnowing and sifting by which alone the truth can be found—and that the University is now merely another state university.

CLARK PRESIDENT SEVERELY OPPOSED

(By New Student Service)

The conduct of President Atwood of Clark University in suspending me and my fellow editors presents a problem in criticism.

President Atwood read my playlet, "Roll Session," and said, "The whole thing is obscene." He told me that mine was "a penitentiary offense." His wife, he said, feared its publication would endanger the morals of the younger generation. He said that the "extramural" influence of the "disgusting" piece would be "evil" in the minds of young as well as old; it would besmirch "the fair name" of Clark. He informed me that my mind was "low," and "dirty," and "bad." He "suspended" me from college, as I have said, but in his conference with me he made it plain I had no chance of reinstatement. Since he meant expulsion he should have said expulsion.

This was the literary opinion, and was the judgment of my mentality, which formed the basis for the expulsion of the editorial board of The Clark Monthly. It has been more than two months since President Atwood banished Francis G. Schweitzer, Bertrand Leveque, and myself.

I have remained passive during the progress of the burlesque, bored with [illegible] lately, however [illegible] senior class of Clark College have resigned, considering it "the only action compatible with self respect." Jacob Freedburg, Seymour Revzin and George Grondahl have all interesting [illegible] President Atwood said: "Your entire career as president has been marked by an arrogant disregard of your responsibilities to the student body. You have substituted caprice for wisdom and temperance. You have quenched every spark of intellectual integrity and freedom on the part of the students. . . . Your latest and however is far more dangerous because you have attacked the student body—every member of it—through these men whom you have summarily expelled. There is a fundamental American principle of justice and liberty at stake. You have grossly betrayed this principle."

One character in the playlet I portrayed as the student nihilist. He may be properly defined as one who believes in nothing, and whose distinguishing characteristic is his great spiritual poverty. Historically, he may be considered as an abortive Bazarov, possessing the apparel of his nihilism but lacking the body of his purpose.

From psychology he gathers vaguely that the mind is the nervous system; he learns from biology that the human nervous system is very likely derived from slimy flatworms clinging to the underside of logs and stones; and from his professor of literature he listens to grave emphasis upon imagination and emotion, divination and spirit and will. Nothing is known of such things in the laboratory; they are nouns and inconsequential, he figures perhaps with some surprise. This seems a bold way of looking at things the professor so solemnly and dully reiterates, and exhilarated, he is moved to bolder conception. With a slight memory of ancient history, for instance, he can say that the church, built on a syllogism, functions as [illegible] form.

This expulsion affair is, after all, merely the surface manifestation of [illegible] disharmony between not only the student body but also the faculty and president. Clark College is divided against itself [illegible] powerful opposition to the administration which believes [illegible] desirable one.

Enjoys Can of Tobacco 16 Years Old

Waxahachie, Texas

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen:

I found while going through his father's effects stored in our baggage room a can of your tobacco, and he has been smoking a pipe he made out of this tobacco.

I also note the revenue stamp on the can which was inclosed. The can was put up in 1910, sixteen years ago. But it was in good condition, of remarkable flavor, and was much enjoyed by me.

I thought you would be interested in knowing how your tobacco held out in these days of fast living.

Yours very truly,

Considering everything the southern trip was quite a success and we now look forward to a good year on the diamond. Although the fielding was rather erratic at times this will probably wear off as they get out doors more.

The hitting has improved considerably over last year. Talcott who could hardly touch a ball last season is now hitting them all over the lot. Howard, who filled the empty outfielder's berth has been a hitting wizard on the southern trip and leads all of the other regular players. In the St. John's game he got 5 out of 6 and in the N. Y. U. contest he hit a circuit smash for Vermont's only score. There was only one contest in which he did not get at least one hit. Prentice, Conway, Smith, Aronson and all the rest have their eye on the agate and that pill is due for some beating if they keep it up.

Coach Dresser was well pleased with the work of his pitchers and looks forward to them having the best season that they have had for some time. Schoppe is greatly improved over last year as is Talcott and Moriarity has lost the lame arm that bothered him so much. At second base Smith was outstanding and he also showed well on the offensive. Howard showed up fine on the offensive and Captain Conway showed some great fielding at times.

COLLEGE RESULTS

Fordham	9—Navy	5
Providence	14—City College	0
Holy Cross	8—Georgetown	2
Villanova	5—Boston Col.	4

Georgetown, who has one of the strongest teams in the south has now lost four games to northern teams in their invasion. She has tasted defeat at the hands of Penn State, Boston College, Harvard and Holy Cross.

Holy Cross had a very successful southern trip and Vermont faces them April 21 at Worcester. The Crusaders have a veteran team and a bunch of sluggers in Captain Savage, Shanahan, and Harrell. It is predicted that they expect to have one of their most successful seasons for some time. April 21 game is the only contest that we play with the Purple this year and we have two hard games, Tufts and Springfield, the two days before.

Winchenbach who was hurt in the Drexel game, suffering a dislocation and broken bones in the hand will be unable to play for about four weeks more. This is quite a loss to the team.

Vermont's final defeat was by the strong Fordham nine to the tune of 8-1. Although Schoppe pitched a fine game due to nine errors by his teammates which was very poor support, the Fordhamites were able to score many more runs than they rightfully deserved. Howard, the Frosh, who had been hitting consistently gathered two more in this game keeping him in the lead in batting.

St. John's, who gave the C. C. N. Y. team such a drubbing, lost to Vermont in a batting festival. When the final man had been put out the score stood 14-9 much to the surprise of some of the dopesters. Talcott pitched a good game but was rather freely hit at times. This was Vermont's third win and they deserved it as they pounded two St. John's pitchers hard. Howard was the star at the plate getting five hits out of six times at bat.

The final game turned out to be another win for the Dresserites when they defeated the Army at West Point 9-6. Moriarity pitched a good game here and kept the hits well scattered while the Burlingtonians continued to pound the agate. Errors were still in evidence but it was very cold and hard to handle the ball in such miserable weather.

The southern trip proved to be very successful and if the boys had had chance to get outside before leaving some of the outcomes might have been much different.

Study-Clock Reconstructed

The famous Muir study-clock has been partially reconstructed and placed in the State Historical Museum of Madison, Wis.

Muir, who was a student at the University of Wisconsin from 1860 to 1861, constructed the machine from odds and ends and used it to regulate his study hours.

It is so constructed that a clock is set to allow a certain amount of time for the study of each course. When the time is up a large cogwheel collapses, the book falls through to its regular position, and another book is brought up to take its place. The process is repeated with each book, until all have been studied.

The San Francisco Ferries

Where do young college men get in a large industrial organization? Have they opportunity to exercise creative talent? Is individual work recognized?

SAN FRANCISCO now has the finest ferry fleet in all the world. Recently there were added to it four Golden Gate Diesel-electric auto ferries; one Southern Pacific Diesel-electric auto ferry; one Northwestern Pacific Diesel-electric auto ferry; and the Key System's two electric-drive giants—the largest passenger ferries ever built. These modern steel boats—all Westinghouse-equipped—give to the Bay cities a ferry service unsurpassed for speed and safety, cleanliness and comfort.

The big jobs go to big organizations. Westinghouse attracts young men of enterprise and genius because it daily provides opportunities for pioneering and outstanding work which smaller companies can seldom offer.

The Key System ferries are each equipped with two 2,250 shp. Westinghouse main propulsion motors; one 1,900-kilowatt Westinghouse generator; and one 3,010-hp. Westinghouse-Parsons turbine. The Southern Pacific, Northwestern Pacific, and Golden Gate boats likewise have Westinghouse propelling motors and generators. Auxiliary units, such as motor-drive pumps and steering apparatus, are Westinghouse on all these ferries.

STATISTICS OF ALUMNI RECENTLY COMPLIED

Statistics compiled in the Alumni office of the University show that the total number of living graduates and non-graduates of the University of Vermont from the first graduating class in 1804 to that of 1927 inclusive, stands at 7,077. This number includes 294 two-year teacher training graduates and 70 specials. The total number of degree graduates now living is 4,155. The total number of non-graduates, in which are numbered the teacher training graduates and specials, is 2,922. Nearly 7,000 alumni are located in the United States and 189 are located in foreign countries.

Of the 7,077 living alumni the Arts and Science Alumni contribute 3,068, 1,740 being graduates and 1,323 being non-graduates. The Medical Alumni numbers 1,874, with 1,410 graduates and 464 non-graduates. From the Engineering Alumni come 1,086, of whom 598 are graduates and 488 non-graduates. The Agricultural College has 760 Alumni, 407 graduates and 353 non-graduates.

The records reveal that 5,360 alumni, graduates and non-graduates, are men. Women were admitted to the University in 1872. They have 1,717 alumni, of which number 905 are graduates and 812 non-graduates.

Geographically Vermont leads the other states with 2,482 alumni out of the 7,077 total. New York ranks second with 1,148 and Massachusetts is third with 952. The only state not to be represented is Nevada.

Working gradually north the next affair was with N. Y. U. in their opening game. The Cats met defeat at the hands of the Violet who turned twelve hits into five runs while the best the Green and Golders could do was one run with seven hits. However, Moriarty fanned ten men and walked only one. Only for some sensational fielding by the New Yorkers the score might have been different. Also the slants of Manfredi puzzled the maple sugar boys at times. However, Howard solved one in the fifth and clouted it for a home run. He also secured another hit while Macomber also collected two.

LAWRENCE A. HINCE TO REPRESENT VERMONT IN ORATORICAL CONTESTS

Prominent Vermont Debater Will Be College's Representative at Dartmouth in National Oratorical Contest

Lawrence A Hince, '28, of Lawrence, will represent Vermont at Dartmouth in the regional finals of the National Oratorical Contest. The selections were made Monday afternoon, April 16, in the Old Mill Chapel by a committee of five judges.

Hince has been very prominent in intercollegiate oratory at Vermont during the past two years. Last year he was one of Vermont's crack debating teams participating in eight or nine intercollegiate and emerging victorious contest. At Middlebury he won second prize of the group of orations offered by Edwin Winship Lawrence of the class of 1901 to the three leading debaters in the annual intercollegiate Vermont fracas. This year he has already participated in four debates. At Dartmouth a year ago he placed among the representatives of the leading colleges and universities of New England with his oration on Constitution.

J. Krogh, '30, of Omaha, Neb., debated against Hince Monday afternoon for the honor of representing Vermont in the National Constitutional Oratorical Contest. Hince spoke for twenty minutes on "The Constitution." Krogh followed with a ten minute oration on "Jefferson and the Constitution." Both speeches were well prepared and the orators spoke forcefully and well. It was the sentiment of the judges that either of the contestants might have represented Vermont almost equally well at Dartmouth. The votes of the individual judges were not announced. It is understood that Hince has been selected.

Professor Moore was in charge of arrangements for the contest. The judges were Prof. A. I. Andrews, Prof. D. B. Prof. Prof. E. L. Meredith, L. W. and P. D. Carleton.

NORWICH MILITARY UNIT TO RECEIVE AEROPLANE

Plans recently made by the newly-formed Norwich Aero Club call for an extensive program, including the addition of a plane to the Norwich military unit and the preparation of landing fields for the more advanced flying.

Through the activity of Major Charles A. Barber and Lieut. John Burns, army officials have become interested in the proposition of beginning a flying course at Norwich and have assisted to the extent of offering flying training to six Norwich cadets during the summer months.

The plane, piloted by members of the club is a "Jenny" type plane will be secured for the University by next fall. The plane will not be for flying use, but will be for the purpose of stripping, reassembling and familiarizing the members with airplane motors. If this plan is successful it is hoped that another year will see a flying service added to the activities of the college. In case a landing field is acquired it is planned to use the field on Dole Hill which is to be used as a landing field.

The Norwich Aero Club was formed last winter by several cadets interested in flying, and has grown in membership since that time. Major Barber and Lt. Burns, having had flying experience, were glad to act as faculty advisors of the club and through their influence much has been accomplished.

The course plans to offer to its members is a ground course in elementary flying. Its chief purpose is to prepare for entrance into the Primary School at Brooks Field. Major W. D. Emerson has offered courses in Aerial Dynamics and Internal Combustion Engines to men interested in the course.

Dartmouth will have a Fine Arts building, it was announced at a recent meeting of the Dartmouth trustees, the gift of Frank P. Carpenter of Manchester, N. H. The new building will cost $300,000.

REHEARSALS FOR COMIC OPERA HELD REGULARLY

Rehearsals for the comic opera "The Mock Doctor" to be given by the Glee Clubs are being held regularly under the direction of Professor H. G. Bennett and Professor J. T. Metcalf.

Eleanor Prunier has recently been chosen to take the part of Martine. Marion Baldwin will be chief attendant and E. C. Slack will take R. T. Krogh's place as Valere since Krogh is to take part in the Junior Week play.

Professor R. O. Buchanan will have charge of the lighting.

A concert will be presented by the Men's Glee Club at St. Albans the evening of April 27. Prof. Bennett has announced.

DOCTOR W. A. DAVISON NAMES GREATEST THING IN LIFE OF MANKIND

Large Gathering of Student Body Addressed on the Subject of Man and His Purpose in Life

"What is the biggest thing in life?" is the question which the Rev. W. A. Davison, secretary of the Vermont State Baptist Convention, put up to the students when he addressed them at chapel service last Wednesday morning.

The Rev. W. A. Davison said that God created man. He would not say how God did so, nor when, nor where, but He did create man and He created him to have possession of the earth, the birds of the air, the creatures of the earth, and the fish of the sea. That is, man was to have control over the domain in which he found himself. And it follows, said the Rev. W. A. Davison, that man was also to have control over himself.

God made man a social being. He made man such that he could enjoy being with his fellow creatures. He made man a business creature, made it possible that he should reap the harvest of the fruits upon the earth. It is perfectly legitimate that man should have money but man should not make this his only goal in life. God made man a passionate creature. But all of these are secondary to the real purpose of life. Man should seek to build character, for character is the man. A reputation is only what fellow beings think of the man, his character is what he really is. Character is built through control over oneself; this, said the Rev. W. A. Davison, is the biggest thing in life.

The Rev. W. A. Davison said that when we are down-hearted not to forget that the "rose will bloom again." He said that we should always do our most for our fellow creatures. We should practice the virtues of Jesus Christ. We should visit the sick to cheer them, and "The rose will bloom again" for us, he said.

He quoted an example where a country doctor was administering to a dying man. A special nurse was in attendance, and specialists had been called. The man was doomed to die. There was very little hope left for him. And one day this doctor came to see his patient and he said to him "The roses will bloom again." The man did not quite understand and the doctor repeated. "The roses will bloom again," and he left. Then one time shortly afterwards, the nurse came into the man's room and he said to her "The roses will bloom again," and he repeated this several times. She thought the man insane, but suddenly she realized that the man had had a new vision. There was a smile upon his face. He was upon the road to recovery.

And the Rev. W. A. Davison said that we should always try to do as much as we can for our fellow creatures.

There was more than the usual attendance at Chapel this morning. Interest in Chapel seems to be growing among the students.

NOTICE

Dr. George K. Pratt, University consultant in mental hygiene, will be at the University for consultations with students on Tuesday, April 24. Students desiring appointments should apply to Miss Holbrook or Prof. Metcalf.

KEY AND SERPENT ANNOUNCE FRATERNITY BASEBALL SCHEDULES

Y. W. C. A. WILL INSTALL NEW CABINET SUNDAY

At a service in the Redstone parlors Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, the retiring cabinet of Y. W. C. A., of which Eleanor Davison is president, will install Marion Potter as leader of the organization also installing the cabinet which is to work with her during the coming year. The members of the old and new cabinets are requested to wear white.

The participants in Sunday's meeting are the following: Eleanor Davison president, Eleanor Taft, vice-president, Muriel Richardson, secretary, Marion Potter, treasurer; Dorothy Hall, finance chairman, Katherine Eckley, publicity chairman, Elizabeth White, meetings; Elizabeth Robelain, social service; Alice Miller, deputations, Ruth Westin, editor of Handbook; Eileen Goodwin, manager; Lillian Marsh, in charge of candy.

The new cabinet: Marion Potter, president; Florence McKenzie, vice-president; Georgina Hubert, secretary; Margaret Parry, treasurer; Margaret Corbin, finance chairman; Harriet Howard, publicity chairman; Marion Tifft, meetings; Gertrude Lingham, social service; Margaret Stanley, deputations; Frances Lavthe, editor of Handbook; Lucy Morgan, manager; Bertha Safford, in charge of candy.

The meeting at three will allow Y. W. C. A. members time to attend Vespers in the chapel.

Professor R. H. Holmes of the physics department of the University of Vermont will read a paper on "Recent Researches Made at the University of Vermont" before the American Physical Society in Washington. Prof. Holmes left for Washington last Monday evening.

Students at Norwich interested in aviation have formed the Norwich Aero Club, an organization which will endeavor to give its members opportunities to gain knowledge of airplanes and their operation.

CATAMOUNTS SOJOURN TO BAY STATE TO PLAY THE BASEBALL GAMES

Massachusetts Invasion to Include Games With Tufts, Holy Cross and Springfield

The Catamounts are in the Bay State this week-end to meet three of the strongest nines in New England. Yesterday afternoon the ball tossers lined up against the Tufts aggregation. The Jumbos have another one of their strong teams this year. With "Lefty" Smith in the box the Medfordites defeated Northeastern Tuesday 6-1.

This afternoon the local team is at Springfield. The Y. M. C. A. school has victories over Mt. St. Mary and Navy but has been defeated twice by Georgetown. Vermont will be out for revenge for its three defeats this year at the hands of Springfield—one in football and two in basketball—and should succeed. Beach and Putnam will probably make up the battery for the home team. The last game of the Massachusetts trip is with Holy Cross tomorrow at Fitton Field, Worcester. The Crusaders won all the games on their southern trip, one of the most noteworthy being a victory over Georgetown which defeated Vermont. The Purple boasts the heaviest crew of sluggers that have represented Holy Cross on the diamond in years. With a pitching staff such as is available Coach Jack Barry seems headed for an unusually fine season. Barry will start Fous who defeated Vermont at Burlington last year or Nekola, the phenomenal sophomore southpaw, on the rubber and Phelan, football captain or Desautel behind the bat.

The men making the trip as announced by Coach Hank Dresser are Aronson, catcher; Moriarty, Schoppe, and Talcott, pitchers; Prentice, Smith, Captain Conway, and Cogswell, infielders; Howard, Macomber, Price, Dimmman, and Sargent, outfielders.

Aronson will have to catch all the games on account of the injury received by Winchenbach on the southern trip. In an emergency Macomber can be used behind the bat with Dimmman in the center garden. "Dimmy" has been doing some fine fielding and is also able to take care of an infield position if the occasion arises.

The squad held its first outdoor practice at Centennial Field Wednesday afternoon previous to leaving for Medford and the showing made on the diamond was inspiring.

25 MEN REPORTING AT DAILY TENNIS PRACTICE

About twenty-five candidates answered Coach Carpenter's call for tennis and are practicing each day in the cage at 3 o'clock. However they expect to get outside in about another week if the weather permits.

Practice now consists of volleying and practice in placing the ball. As yet the play is a little wild and not very much can be said as to who will be the representatives of the team, but the six veterans will be given a close run this year as several of the prospects look promising. Not much can be said until the netmen get outside on the courts.

Davis, the winner of the fall tournament and who would undoubtedly have been wearing the Green and Gold has left school. Coach Carpenter will have to start lining up some underclassmen this year to give him seasoned material for 1929 as Graves, Baldwin and Taylor will be lost to the team by graduation.

Eighteen U. V. M. students played in the Symphony Orchestra at the concert that was given by the orchestra at the Memorial Auditorium last Sunday afternoon.

BOULDER FAVORS PLAN TO CHANGE ELECTION OF GOLD KEY MEMBERS

Would Make Sophomore Organization a True Honor Society —Professor Myrick Reports on Other Colleges

Boulder, honorary Senior society, was given a dinner at Hotel Vermont by President Guy W. Bailey Tuesday evening, April 17, 1928. Arthur H. Myrick, professor of Romance Languages, and Elijah Swift, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, were guests.

A lively discussion of the new method of electing members of the Gold Key Society took place. Professor Myrick gave a talk on what other colleges and universities are doing along this line, especially in regard to their Sophomore societies and functions. As proposed and decided at this meeting of Boulder, Gold Key will become a truly honorary society similar to Key and Serpent and Boulder.

In becoming a truly honorary society, Gold Key it was decided should elect their successors as do the other two class honorary organizations. Members should be elected to the society by the Gold Key men of the preceding class for their prominence in college activities and for character.

As proposed the Gold Key Society of the class of '31 should not include more than 15 members, one from each fraternity and three from the class at large and the Independents together. The society will be smaller than formerly when 21 men constituted full membership.

Boulder deemed it wise to make the society smaller in order to cause it to function more proficiently and more efficiently. A smaller organization will speed up its decisions on questions and conclusions will be more easily reached. Gold Key will also become somewhat more exclusive.

A boulder committee consisting of R. T. Holden, G. S. Talcott, and H. D. Crandall will convene with Gold Key at their next meeting to be held at the Delta Psi House Tuesday night, April 24 to propose the amendment to the society's constitution. Members of Gold Key will vote upon the amendment. It is expected that the vote will be favorable.

The new plan will go into effect immediately. Gold Key will submit the list of 15 men from the class of '31 to the Faculty Council and Boulder for their approval as called for in the plan. There is every reason to believe that the new method of election of Gold Key will prove highly successful.

Gold Key Society was formed in 1922 with a dual purpose: to discipline delinquent members of the Freshman Class and to assist the athletic department of the University at intercollegiate contests by way of ushering, caring after the welfare of visiting teams and entertaining the visitors. For the last seven years one member of this organization has been elected from each fraternity by the fraternity, five from the class at large and four from the Independents making a total of 21. With the proposed change the society's membership will be decreased by six.

WOMEN DEBATERS WILL CONTEST MIDDLEBURY

With the hope of avenging last season's defeat a team of three women debaters will go today to Middlebury to represent Vermont in a contest with the women debaters of Middlebury College in the Mead Memorial Chapel this evening. The debate was previously postponed because of the illness of a member of the Middlebury team.

U. V. M. will uphold the affirmative side of the question. Resolved, that this house approves the policy of the Coolidge administration in Nicaragua. Esther M. Nelson, '29, Ethel B. Blake, '31, and Lena M. Cochran, '31, will make the trip.

Professor H. F. Perkins, professor of Zoology at the University of Vermont, spoke before the members of the Protective League last Monday afternoon on "Using the Good Things in Vermont." He gave suggestions as to how some of the existing organizations in the State might be used to greater advantage.

HYPOCRITES?

Pres. Bernard Iddings Bell, in an article entitled "The Church and the Undergraduate" in the April number of the Atlantic Monthly, discusses the attitude of the average student towards religion and life. President Bell accuses the student of a lack of ability to form his own opinions. He says, "Probably seven-eighths of all undergraduates are devoting all their time accepting without question current opinions, prejudices, and standards. The majority considers the relatively few exceptions, with really questioning minds, as 'all wet'."

In other words Doctor Bell is pointing out that the majority of students are mentally lazy. We know this is too true. The modern educational system seems to like to have students that way, for the student that sits down and memorizes an author's viewpoint and can repeat it, parrot-like, to his professor the next day is considered a good student. He may not, and there is proof that he doesn't, often times, give a single thought of his own to the subject that the text-book is considering. The student who differs slightly from the general viewpoint is "wet" and should be petted.

In scoring the practice of unthinking decisions, President Bell says, "Does the collegian disregard the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act? He does it, not because he is in revolt, but because he wishes to conform to current riddle-class custom. Does he cheat in examinations and defend the practice? He does, and he learned to do it from the worship of success at any price which characterizes our entire age." Such accusations coming from a man who has spent the greater part of his life in teaching the coming generations, should cause the average unthinking college student a little worry. The majority sit back and complacently think of the time when they leave college to make use of their ready-made knowledge. And the man who really can use his brains will be the leader whether he went to college or not.

Many of the more prominent business men of the United States are returning college men because they find others with less prejudices and more willingness to work. "Standardized time wasters" and social climbers are poor assets.

The modern college student has a great deal to live down. The question is, are conditions going to become better or worse in the future? That rests entirely upon the undergraduates' shoulders.

AT THE DORM

THE FLASH

A Musical Comedy in One Act
By Jon Converse

Dedicated to "Mary," whose earnest efforts have inspired this creation.

The cast includes Plaster of Paris, Bob O'Link, Clara Fye, Kladys Kan-bee, Willie Killem and a superb chorus featuring Betty Pinderdress and Laura Demeritmark.

ACT I

Scene—through the window.

The curtain rises at 8:30, having failed to get up in time for Military Training, disclosing a small, square, white room. On a spotless cot lies a man whose face and arms are heavily bandaged, and at his side is a white enameled table covered with an imposing array of bottles. Bob O'Link, the lone occupant of the chamber, raises himself on one elbow and looks long and searchingly at his surroundings. Then, after he has managed to pour a glass of water between the folds of white gauze which practically cover his entire head he breaks forth into weak and rasping song.

WHY I'M HERE

Tune: I Went to the Animal Fair

I lie in the Mary Fletcher,
Adraped all over a stretcher,
The trouble with me?
My bus climbed a tree;
It ruined my map, you betcher!
Loud cries for help I utter,
I hear a policeman mutter:
His roadster's load
On a Burlington road
Threw everything into the gutter."
I tried—

He stops as a nurse enters and comes toward his bed. Clara Fye is perhaps 40-45 years of age and her 275 pounds have never yet permitted her to win a Mirror or Daily News beauty contest. She wears horn-rimmed glasses so that her eyes can horn in on all that passes and her tongue can blow its gossippy horn for all who are compelled to listen. The spotlight strikes her Coty natural bloom, and she bursts forth in the same tune:

I am a nurse so sweet;
I'm shy and quite petite.
Now me to embrace,
Touch hands 'round my waist,
For man is quite some feat.
Yet I am a guardian true.
So what is there I can do?
Just tell me the word,
As swift as a bird,
I fly and bring it to you.

Bob gives her the once over and decides that once is enough.

Just take one look at that nurse.
Great Scot!—she couldn't be worse!
If no other is free
To wait upon me
I think I'll take a hearse, a hearse, a hearse, a hearse, etc.!

She fails to heed his remark, but busies herself at the small table.

Clara: "I think I'll give you a shot. You're delirious."

Bob: Good! Make it straight Scotch. This place would drive anyone delirious. Tell me—tell me—what is that moving spot upon the wall?

Clara: That is Cotius Buzius, a much despised varmint existing among the best regulated families. We find his extermination impossible. We cannot succeed in drowning him, for though we place each bedpost in a glass of water, he contrives to live in the springs.

Bob: Speaking of springs, who holds the high jump record?

Clara: Really, it's so long since I've been out with a good sport that I've forgotten.

Bob: Well, it's Jim Tully. He used to jump rattlers.

Clara: Did any of them ever bite him?

Bob: Any of what ever bite him?

Clara: The rattlers, of course, silly.

Bob: Oh, listen! A rattler's a freight that—

Clara: What's it afraid of, anyway?

(Spotlight—Song.)

THE HEIGHT OF DUMBNESS

Tune: In My Blue Heaven

Good weather to seek in Burlington bleak
That's surely the height of dumbness.
Eight bucks for a quart to be a good sport
That's surely the height of dumbness.
To watch a light flashing through the night,
And then to say,
"There lies a date, a pretty mate.
I'm on my way."
Barnum dished the true stuff.
Yet not true enough:
For that's surely the height of dumbness.

Enter: Chorus of Barre Beauties: Blond, Buxom, Bold, Boisterous Babes. They are looking for a "pick-up," and so immediately pick up the same tune.

It's often been told, when women grow old
They turn to the height of dumbness.
For Harry and Bob the cradles they rob
That's surely the height of dumbness.
"The blubbering dears" with homesick tears,
That loudly yell
"Their leather lungs," their inf'nt tongues
Rome tales could tell
The older dames grow, the less that they know,
That's surely the height of dumbness.

Enter: Willie Killem, an interne, and Gladys Kanbee, a pretty young nurse.

Willie: Here, Here! Stop this noise immediately. Where do you think you are, in chapel? If you don't quiet down at once I'll get Boston's Watch The Ward Society to patrol you!

Clara: Don't mind him. He's only an interne who didn't turn in until three A. M. He's got a grouch and a Haig and Haig headache this morning.

Gladys: Is your patient good looking Clara?

Clara: I don't know. His face is covered. Perhaps if we adopted the same plan we'd get more dates.

Gladys: At least I don't have to. I'm cute, I am.

Clara: Gee, you're modest! Huh! I'll bet you think Dorothy Knapp has nothing on you.

Gladys: Well, at any rate, the last time I saw her she had nothing on herself.

Bob: Girls! Girls! Do cease this vulgar animosity. Miss Kanbee, may I have some water, please? No, don't pour it in the bed. You see these bandages make me drink very slowly. Thank you, grandma. What beautiful eyes you have, grandma.

Reassured by the date of her birth that nothing personal is intended, Gladys turns up her nose, to keep it from bumping on her chest, and leaves the room in disdain and disorder.

The curtain droops suddenly to the stage. "Appleplexity!" loudly announces a coroner in the audience.

BOOK REVIEW

FRENCH INFLUENCES IN AMERICA

(By New Student)

Mr Jones big book is an impressive combination of scholarly meticulousness and critical independence.

Mr Jones starts with the sound assumption that there is little use in discussing America's responses to European cultural influences without establishing some basic cultural estimate of America itself. For a country to accept only such influences as by nature it is capable of assimilating. He charges the historians of literature with neglecting to make this estimate, and the contemporary critics with shirking the job. For his own part he regards America as the product of two movements, partly complementary and largely competing: the cosmopolitan spirit open to European impressions, the frontier spirit, alien to it, and the commercial spirit, intent to build up barriers against it.

This would serve as a good working hypothesis as good as any other of a dozen trios, if Mr. Jones consistently employed the word culture in the sense of the total conception of life that prevails in a country and determines its national characteristics. It seems to be the idea that he has lost track of his mind in his concrete discussion of what transpired in America. Whenever he speaks of culture in the abstract, whenever he thinks of it in terms rather than as a set of concrete, he confines himself to the realm of the arts, the enlightenments of education and cultivation, interests and themes that are vital to the people as a whole but only to a saving minority—that fraction of 1 per cent of the population who are the intellectual and artistic flower. His criticism, however, mainly of popular taste, Mr Jones keeps in mind the Puritans, the frontiersmen, the housekeepers—for whom England is first to be damned—and discusses impressively, with abundant illustration and detail, French immigration, language, manners, art, religion, literature and politics, as American life has been more or less affected by it. It is an extremely engaging book, filled with detail, and told with a detachment that does not even suggest the need of restraint. Mr. Jones, in the slightest degree has written a thesis on his data. But when he comes to the end, he has proved that through the entire period which he has passed in review, the influence on America was unsymmetrical, Catholic, Latin France, admirable for what for its intellect and for its social distinction was the flower of Europe, accepted French influence in the departments of "manners and fashions" With this conclusion no one would in...sue.

CO-ED GLEE CLUB ELECT SEMESTER OFFICERS

Women's Glee Club has recently chosen Vivian Dodge, President and Georgina Hubert, Business Manager for the year 1928-29

Miss Dodge is a member of the class of 1929 and resides in Barre, she has been active in musical circles ever since she entered college and is well qualified for this office

Miss Hubert's home is in Hartford, Conn., she is a member of the class of '31 and has recently been elected Secretary of Y W C A and Publicity Manager of W A A

WOMEN'S RIFLE TEAM PROVES ITSELF SUPERIOR

Once more North and South have met, and again the North has shown its superiority, the most recent occasion being the defeat of the Women's Rifle Team of Tennessee by the Vermont co-eds by the score of 485-472 Since it was shot on the small targets this was one of the most interesting matches of the season.

Thus far, out of a total of seventeen matches the girls of the University of Vermont have won nine, five have yet to be heard from

During the past week varsity letters have been awarded to the following members of the 1927-1928 team, all of whom have an average of 98.7 or better: A. Burns, '28; G Hubert, '31; E. Robelin, '30, R. Seaver, '31; and K. Wright, '28

Well know because we're nurses,
For you'd love to learn.

Bob: Then, dear, you really mean it?
Gladys: Yes, Bobbie dear, I do.
They embrace so fiercely that the asbestos curtain catches fire, but order is soon restored. The tolling of church bells is heard on Church Street and the chorus enters, all taking part in the final song.

SWEET NURSES

Tune: Dream Kisses

Sweet nurses, sweet nurses,
With your broad view of life,
Your flashing beams clashing
Fill the nights with lightning rife
Rah Rah Boys—Converse Hall
We meant nothing at all;
They were not signals true.
Then why all this ado?
Because we're sweet nurses, sweet nurses,
From the M. F. are we!

They were only, only fooling,
They were only, only fooling,
They were only, only fooling
With the Rah Rah Boys from Converse Hall

When The Team Went South

You've heard of knights, who in the days of old,
Went forth, and conquered foes against all odds.
I come to sing of modern heroes bold.
Who fought their battles upon foreign sods
Who left the wintry fastness of our state
To meet with those who live in southern climes;
Who braved a lack of practice; and their fate
Is worthy of Vermont of bygone times.
Perhaps the coaching that these men received
Accounts in no small measure for their game.
Coach Dresser worked. In him the men believed.
Praise up the team, but praise him just the same.

Nay, show me not the scorecard, run by run,
Nor yet percentages all cold and bare.
But rather view it as a task well done.
And welcome royally our heroes fair.
Review each contest; see the game they played.
Think of the victories we may hope to see.
And cheer them onward for the start they made,
And for the fighters they turned out to be.
Each sterling warrior gave the best he had,
And yet a Frosh would surely be untrue
If Howard's prowess failed to make him glad
The Frosh who showed Vermont what he could do!

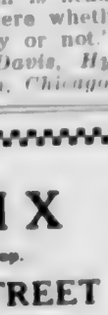
NATIONAL FOREST WEEK BEGINS ON APRIL 22

National American forest week committee of which Theodore Roosevelt of New York is the general chairman for 1928 is composed of more than 100 organizations which represent almost every conceivable form of interest the Federal Government State governments the lumber industry outdoor wild life and recreational interests foresters, forestry and tree associations women's organizations labor groups irrigation and power companies and associations fire-prevention organizations and many others

American forest week is the outstanding opportunity of the year for every form of interest in trees, forests, and conservation to find expression, each in its own way and working in its own local sphere of influence The purpose and aim of the week is that the general welfare may be promoted through the taking of common counsel on the forestry and related problems of the Nation and by the formation of intelligent public opinion that will stimulate action, individually and collectively, under the impulse thus given

Eight years ago, in 1920, the idea of devoting one week of the year to an educational campaign in the interest of forests originated in the Pacific Northwest At first this week was called "Forest protection week," and was largely observed in the West In 1921, President Harding brought the Federal Government behind the idea and issued the first presidential proclamation President Coolidge has given the plan his approval and has issued a proclamation each successive year



In 1925, because of the breadth and importance of the Nation's forestry problem, President Coolidge enlarged the scope of the undertaking and in his proclamation changed the name to American Forest week. Many governors have likewise issued special State proclamations. Canada, in view of the international aspect of the forestry problem, jointly agreed in 1926 and 1927 to celebrate the week concurrently with the United States, and this joint observance by the two countries is continued in 1928 In Canada the week is known as "Save the Forests Week," but its observance is essentially the same in character as in our own country Newfoundland also joined the annual American forest week movement in 1927

American forest week is strictly and wholly educational in plan and purpose. It is an annual call to all citizens of America, both young and old, to lend their interest and support in bringing about better forestry conditions. It has no other goal than that which a rightly informed public opinion may of itself set up and seek.

Spring Song

by

Nonesuch

Low flying clouds veil the misty grey horizon of wet hills, trees and house tops We are aware of earth awakened of growing things the greening patch work of revived grass plots and dirty ice The moist breath of spring swells the tiny leaf buds on the elms and willows

Somewhere the hillside maples giving the treasured sweetness of their winter's store to charm delighted children in distant smoky cities The woods echo the commands of weary men to weary horses as the sugar makers work in frenzied haste to garner the precious fluid of sugar maples in its perfect state

A dash of warm rain is whipped into a damp snow fall covering protesting tiny patches of faint green Shortly the sun will shine banishing the belated snow flurry to warn again the drowsily starting shrub roots and cheer the tiny hearts of venturesome early flying songbirds

Why do hearts beat faster in the springtime? Why does the warm caress of the spring night wind stir up old passions to new fires in young things the world over?

Those lovers wrapt in each other's thoughts thrill again to new glories in shining eyes Brown eyes are browner in the spring time Underneath the velvet black of spring midnight and the bright winking stars, a million hearts stir warmly in the rosy glow of love dreams Sweet faces become more enchanting Warm lips raised with love laden glances thrill adolescent souls with emphatic crescendas Smouldering passions sweep frail humans to Olympian heights

Blow gentle south wind, bring us the fragrance of the wild places, perhaps the silvery echoes of Pan's pipes before this fresh spring turns to smiling summer.

Lindy's Luck Ends

Only 29 of 159 girls in South Hall at the University of Missouri would marry Colonel Lindbergh, if they had the chance Eleven of the 29 were ready to marry the airman without hesitation, fifteen wanted to "date him" first, and three felt that "it wouldn't be bad at all" to stand beside so famous a man Of those who voted negatively, 63 were in love with someone else, 17 said the Colonel is too popular, twelve did not care for his "type," six were afraid he might be killed any minute, and three refused to marry a famous man and be known only as his wife.

PROHIBITION SECRETARY SPEAKS ON COLLEGES

College students are dishonest At least, they are so according to Wilbur Simmons field secretary of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association who spoke to the members of the Young People's Society of the First Church in this city last Sunday evening The following taken from last Monday morning's Burlington Free Press is what the man had to say

Speaking of the condition in colleges Mr Simmons said he had visited many colleges during the past year In those visits he had found it the almost universal opinion of those who had been connected with the colleges for a long period of years that there is less drinking among college students today than there ever has been.

On the other hand, Mr. Simmons said he was convinced that more than 50 per cent of the men and women in the colleges are opposed to prohibition because they think it is not successful and does not accomplish the purpose for which it is intended

Mr Simmons declared that a high percentage of college students cheat in their examinations and find what they think is justification for it They say that the standard in the business world is to achieve success by what ever means and that they are only practicing that standard

Waxes Poetic Over Favorite Tobacco
"A Prescription"

Have you ever noticed right after a meal
How tired and lazy
you always feel?
I'm telling you folks
it isn't a joke,
It will freshen you up
if you try a good smoke.
But whatever you do these lines you must heed,
There's a certain tobacco of course, that you need.
It's packed in a tin,
the tin's colored blue.
Not only the smoking
but the chewing kind too.
Of course if you never are bothered this way,
Just keep the prescription for some other day.
Ask for tobacco,
the best that's on earth;
To shorten the story,
just call it "Edgeworth."

PROFESSOR ANDREWS OF HISTORY DEPARTMENT LECTURES ON EUROPE

Speaks to Members of Ethan Allen Club on Changes that Have Taken Place in Europe

[illegible] through world civilization [illegible] to America, declared Prof. Andrews, of the history department [illegible] Saturday evening in 1921. Prof. Andrews showed in [illegible] Europe has changed [illegible] partly from [illegible] few people [illegible] recognize [illegible] what it was before the [illegible] he said, unless they [illegible] a particular study of it [illegible] Andrews showed in [illegible] Europe has changed [illegible] from the Free Press gives the gist of Andrews talk.

[illegible] that an airplane can fly [illegible] America to Europe or from Europe to America in 24 hours indicates [illegible] great changes are about to take [illegible] Professor Andrews emphasized [illegible] need for America to learn more [illegible] Europe as it is today.

[illegible] of the old Europe [illegible] of supremacy. Wrongs had [illegible] great [illegible] to its neighbors and the streams [illegible] smothered [illegible] that stated in [illegible] fear of the neighbors they [illegible] the greatest hate. Hence [illegible] of the war was born out of [illegible] distrust and fear.

The new Europe is considerably [illegible]. The Russian Empire has [illegible] to Russia increased somewhat [illegible] sovereignty of certain non-Russian [illegible] people in the East and Interior [illegible] until the word Russia is [illegible] of the new title of the Soviet [illegible]. The Austrian empire has become [illegible] most of its alien inhabitants [illegible] the Peace Powers. Austria-Hungary [illegible] paying back to their own people.

The Ottoman empire has become [illegible]. The Arabs have turned their [illegible] Asia. Austria has become [illegible] Austria and Hungary have become practically nothing but Magyar.

The number of new states has increased although it will not do to emphasize too much that the number of these states is increased said Professor Andrews. Poland of mostly Slavic [illegible] people and the new Rumania of nearly twenty million people should be counted in the class of Belgium and Holland.

The speaker said that the general conditions of Europe are closer to normal now than they have been since the [illegible]. It was estimated that of the people under alien rule, [illegible] are only about half as many as there were at the beginning of the World War. There are now about seven million people under governments which are foreign and their own.

The Teacher's Lot

(By New Student)

[illegible] in this Free [illegible] must be in [illegible] In a West Virginia town [illegible] women teachers must see to it that their galoshes are buttoned all the way. Neither men nor women [illegible] smoke in Kansas City [illegible] (to cite a few instances of the way) in which the teachers of our grammar and high schools are cabined and confined by petty rules of personal behavior. They are overshadowed, of course, by the unbelievably ignorant and vicious regulations whereby the teacher is hampered in her classroom [illegible] puppet jerking her arms spasmodically before her mob of youngsters according to the whim of the puppetiest in the principal's office. At ten minutes after ten she must be drumming "The Landing of the Pilgrims" down the throats of [illegible] youngsters. And woe to her if the superintendent should catch her omitting one line of this precious poem. At twelve after one she must be adding fractions, and should she be at long division an explanation is due her superior. The teacher's lot is [illegible].

The American Federation of Teachers is an organization that in a small way is combatting this degrading situation. As yet it has enrolled an infinitesimal part of the army of teachers [illegible]. in Chicago, June 25-29, and it will discuss some of the most obvious diseases of this unhappy profession. More power to it!

ETERNAL YOUTH?

My grandad, raising Duroc hogs,
Said, "Things are going to the dogs;"
His grandad, in his house of logs,
Said, "Things are going to the dogs;"
His grandad, in his English bogs,
Said, "Things are going to the dogs"
His grandad, in his old skin togs
Said, "Things are going to the dogs"
But here and now I wish to state
Those dogs have had a good long wait

"How come you're all wet?"
"I fell into a barrel of cider"
"Did you get hurt?"
"No, it was soft cider."

It was pointed out that there has been extraordinary development of the peasant classes in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Roumania and Austria since the war. In this development of the lower classes the political and economic side of Europe is growing to be more like that of America, the speaker said. Thus great strides have been made for progress in these European countries virtually affected by the war.

Norwich Has Three Promising Hurlers

Coach John J. Burns of Norwich finds that he has a trio of promising pitchers who may prove valuable in bolstering the cadets' hurling staff. These veterans are Lefty Williams and Doc Waining, portsiders, and Joe Tansey, a fast right-hander. From the several candidates Coach Burns hopes that he may find at least one or two capable right handers which he needs to balance the pitching department.

The veteran Norwich backstops Captain Cusson and Jerry Hourin are back again this year and ready to fill their positions. The latter is also an outfielder.

Through the graduation of Captain Joe Garrity of last year's team there is an opening at shortstop which will have to be filled from the list of new men. Veteran infielders still available are Dante Aimi, first baseman; Lawrence Canon, second baseman; and Roger Sherman, who plays third.

Norwich also lost two outfielders, Cliffe and Fitzgerald, through graduation. The cadets' schedule opens on April 25 with a trip into Massachusetts.

Behold the Bootlegger; He Fears Not

THE twist of the wrist, the "throw" of the arm, the shifting of the weight—these are among the many little points which make the skill that you admire in the javelin thrower as he hurls the shaft two hundred feet or more.

As on the track or the football field, in the gymnasium or on the water, so in industry progress is the result of fine improvements—a thousandth of an inch here—a minute variation in a curve there—slight changes foreseen by engineers and carried out by skilled workmen.

It is this attention to detail that is constantly improving General Electric apparatus and contributing to the electrical industry, which, though still young, is already a dominant force, increasing profit and promoting success in every walk of life.

Turk Says

Some people still wear those suspenders with garters and red flannels as being definitely out of the picture as far as the college man is concerned, but you will find that these same people are still telling stories that begin with "who was that lady I seen you with last night." The really smooth boys have been wearing suspenders for some time to keep their "trou" from dragging on the ground. They are really good looking and will make you wish that shirtsleeves were the accepted costume. For the slim ones. And then too besides giving you that feeling of being inwardly well-dressed they certainly do supply that well known "margin of safety."

VERMONT CO-EDS DEBATE AT MIDDLEBURY ON THE NICARAGUAN QUESTION

Women's Debating Team Holds A No-Decision Contest With Middlebury College

In the nobly beautiful Mead Memorial Chapel at Middlebury, the Vermon Women's debating team met the Middlebury team Friday evening April 20, on the question: "Resolved, that this house approves the United States policy in Nicaragua." There was no decision, since the debate was of the American style.

Professor Julius S. Kingsley, of Middlebury presided, and introduced the speakers. Caroline T. Belcher, '29, first speaker for Middlebury, who upheld the affirmative, welcomed the Vermont team and expressed the wish that there might be many more debates between the two colleges. Miss Belcher then presented the arguments that intervention of the United States in Nicaragua was at the request of that country, and that the United States were seeking to coöperate with the existing government and prevent European intervention. Miss Belcher quoted Judge Otto Schoenrich to the effect that when the influence of the United States has been exerted in any country, it has been as a magic wand.

Ethel B. Blake, '31, Vermont's first speaker, attacked the present policy as unjustifiable from the economic standpoint. She stated that the maintaining there, by taxation in the United States, of 35,000 marines for the protection of the interests of a few of America's millionaire bankers is scarcely fair to the public.

Muriel J. Thompson, '29, of Middlebury argued that the U. S. policy is beneficial to Nicaragua politically, because the presence of troops has insured fair elections; economically, because the future of Nicaragua depends on the United States; socially, because the United States has improved the living conditions, industry, and education.

Lena M. Cochran, '31, briefly summarized the history of the political situation in Nicaragua and showed that the United States is maintaining in power in that country a weak president, who holds office only through the illegal deposition of the rightful president.

Gwendolyn C. Thatcher, '28, Middlebury's final speaker, stressed the need of intervention in a country which has been in almost constant revolution for 100 years, and whose 72% illiterate population is now imposed upon by the few families in power. Our own interests and those of our European friends make intervention necessary.

Esther M. Nelson, '29, questioned the moral right of such intervention. "Can a country," she asked, "whose proudest slogan is 'Make the World Safe for Democracy,' be right in maintaining armed troops in Nicaragua?"

The negative rebuttal declared that the United States is at present upholding a minority rule in Nicaragua. The United States' intervention has yet to prove its worth if 72% of the people are still illiterate. The big brother attitude, forced on the Nicaraguans, was condemned.

The affirmative quoted statements to prove that the United States' intervention was welcomed, and that such an act could not be morally wrong, when it is of such benefit to Nicaragua. Few would uphold their non-intervention policy, if the lives of their countrymen were endangered.

Since the debate was not judged, the Vermont team brought back neither victory nor defeat, but the pleasant memories of a friendly contest, well presented on both sides; and of their cordial reception and kind entertainmen by Middlebury College.

A meeting of the University Research Club will be held this evening in Room 3, South College, at 8.00 p.m. Professor Dickinson of the Engineering College will speak on "Magnetic Hysterisis."

O. T. WOOD WINS PLACE IN BOSTON MARATHON

Two Vermont men distinguished themselves in the marathon race held last week in Massachusetts, Clarence DeMar who won the marathon, going the full distance of 26 miles, 385 yards in 2 hours, 37 minutes, 7 4-5 seconds, shattering the course record he set last year, and O. T. Wood who finished twelfth with the time of 2:55:37, 18 minutes slower than the American champion.

Clarence DeMar was once a student at the University of Vermont, in the class of 1911, but he left in his third year. He was also at one time an employe of the Burlington Free Press. He is at present a printer—and a first class Sunday school teacher. While in college, Clarence was a member of the varsity cross-country team.

O. T. Wood is an Electrical Engineering student, of the class of '28. He is captain of the University of Vermont track and cross-country teams. Is the present two-mile champion of the state and holds the state record for this event. Woody also led the only cross-country team that ever conquered Middlebury. Wood played on last year's hockey team. He is a member of Zeta Chi fraternity, and a member of Grey Friars, men's honorary literary society.

On May first and second, the Newman Club is presenting "Laughing Minstrels" at the Cathedral High School Auditorium. Tickets are being sold on the campus.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCE AT SARATOGA SPRINGS ENDS FRIDAY WITH BANQUET

Miss Cummings and Miss Blanchard Return from National Conference of Physical Education for Women

Miss Cummings and Miss Blanchard have just returned from the Conference of the National Association of Directors of Physical Education for Women which was held at Saratoga Springs, New York, under the auspices of Skidmore College. About sixty-five Heads of Physical Education and members of their staffs were present, representing various universities throughout the United States.

The conference opened Friday morning, April 13, when Dr. Williams of Columbia University delivered a very fine talk on "Progress in Education." He stressed the fact that "physical education is not a system of exercises but a way of life" and emphasized the need for fundamental sports as a means of passing leisure time.

Prof. Moore of Skidmore spoke on "Music and Health." In a most interesting manner he pointed out the therapeutic value of music for mental diseases. One rather interesting statement made by Mr. Moore was that if one's activities are above their energy level he will experience boredom; if they are below his energy level, he will be discouraged; while if the two are equal, he will experience satisfaction and happiness. Using as an illustration the case of men on the battlefield, he showed how music will raise the energy level to meet the demands of certain activities. In conclusion, Prof. Moore said that the problem of the future is to keep relationships harmonious and that music would play a large part in such an attempt.

That evening the delegates were entertained at a banquet by the authorities of the college. Dorothy Ainesworth of Smith College was toastmistress and called upon specialists in tennis, archery, basketball, and horseback riding for toasts in their various fields. Miss Randal explained her ideas about teaching tennis which are going to be put into effect at a tennis school which she expects to start in New York. A representative of Skidmore told about the college Outing Club which is a very active institution.

After the banquet those majoring in Physical Education at Skidmore gave an excellent demonstration including tumbling, pyramids, Danish gymnastics, folk and interpretative dancing, and then a specialty, the Indian Ceremonial, which was particularly impressive.

Saturday morning business meetings were held by both the National Association and by the sub-divisions, namely the Eastern, Mid-western, and Western groups.

KEY AND SERPENT PLAN EXTENSION IN SCOPE OF INTRAMURAL ATHLETICS

Junior Honorary Society Held Its Last Regular Meeting of the Year, Wednesday, April 18

Key and Serpent society held what will probably constitute its last business meeting at the Phi Mu Delta House last Wednesday night. At this time the election of members for the coming year took place, in accordance with tradition, but the results will not be announced until Founder's Day. Plans for the annual honor dance were then drawn up, and it was decided to hold the affair sometime prior to June first.

A committee composed of Frank O'Keefe and Arthur Birchard was chosen to arrange for the Key and Serpent banquet. They will report on the matter sometime in the near future.

An important step taken at this time was the planning of the extension of the scope of interfraternity athletics. The Junior society has always regarded with a keen eye the progress of athletics on the hill, and after much deliberation the members decided that a larger function of interfraternity events and their better supervision would be desirable. Their first movement in this direction consists of the drawing up of a new and more elaborate set of rules to govern interfraternity baseball and basketball meets. It is believed that this procedure will tend to eliminate much of the strife and uncertainty that necessarily existed in previous events of this nature.

It was decided during the evening that the second Key and Serpent dance, scheduled for the night of April 28, would not be held.

Last night a social meeting was held at the home of Professor Tupper.

GREY FRIARS DISCUSS LITERATURE AT MEETING

A bounteous supper was spread before fifteen members of the Grey Friars Society last Friday evening at 7.00 o'clock at Sally's Restaurant. The supper was one of the monthly repasts which the society will have throughout the remainder of the year. Besides the members of the society Professors Aiken, Metcalf and Dean attended the gathering.

After the supper, Professor Aiken read an interesting and delightful extravaganza entitled "Literature De-Alcoholized." This reading was written by Professor Aiken and was printed in the New York Times some time ago. In it, Professor Aiken pointed out the effects which would result in literature if all mention of beer, wine and whiskey was omitted. Some of the interesting poems by famous poets would lose their local color. His substitution of soft drinks for hard liquor in various poems produced a humorous effect which was greatly appreciated by the attentive audience.

Prof. Metcalf also entertained the group by an educational talk on play writing and plays. His experience as a coach of plays and his wide knowledge of the field of drama gave him a good background from which to talk. He said that the success of a play depends upon its appeal to the feelings and emotions of the audience. To illustrate his many ideas, he took such plays as "The Critic," "The Drunkard" and "The Strange Interlude." He also compared a play to a song, indicating that a song was judged by its words and music while a play was judged by its words and actions. He further stressed the need for playwriters to know their theatre, for certain plays can be successfully staged in only certain theatres. Another point which he brought out was the fact that it is the simple details which must be stressed because many times it is the small situations which make a play interesting. His speech will, without doubt, be remembered by all those present.

All University of Vermont students who took the New York State Regents Examination on March 16, passed the same. This examination was for the teachers' oral approval certificate in Modern Languages and must be passed by candidates for teaching positions in the State of New York. Seventeen took the examination in French, three in German, and four in Spanish. Seven candidates were of the Junior Class and the remainder were Seniors and graduates.

GOLD KEY

Without a doubt the Sophomore society will be improved if the proposed change, sponsored by Boulder, is carried out. The present method of election has proved, during the past two years, that the number is too large and that too many inefficient, uncooperating Sophomores become members. The desire to wear the hat is strong but the desire to fulfill the duties, namely aiding the Athletic Department and really supervising the wellbeing of the Freshmen, vanishes when it means a little inconvenience.

In the present system the fraternities send their delegates, perhaps men that are popular with their own group but who have little or no desire to carry out the purpose of the organization. The delegates at large, elected in class meeting, are the product of a veritable maze of fraternity politics. Freshmen participating in the election of these men must have a lasting and ever present memory of politics which help to make the rest of their class elections similar. A handful of Independents elect the remainder and it is quite obvious that with so few taking part in their election they are not really represented.

With the group made up as it is how can anyone expect the incoming class is going to respect and obey them? They are informed that Gold Key is a work society, that they are a product of politics and are quite unimpressed.

As for the proposed plan with an experienced body carefully deliberating on membership, having watched the workers of the lowest class throughout the year, it is quite possible that a more efficient, willing and representative group may be chosen. The fact that they are chosen as the best of their class, that they are an honor society and have the interest of the University in the fore should cause the future members, if elected by this new plan, to accomplish more than has been in the past. It is at least worth a trial.

There Grew Some Murder

A blood curdling murder was committed near our beautiful city, a short time ago. The police can not imagine that anyone would dare to do such a thing and are practically paralyzed.

There have been several good clues which the police are keeping secret, one of which is that a Ford sedan was seen driving up and down the river front in a suspicious manner on the night of the tragedy. Chief Burly has set out to look for the car and hopes to find it. The result of his first day's search was a total of two hundred and forty three suspected murderers who finally broke down under cross-examination and confessed that they did all own cars of the description named above.

The head had been severed from the body and it was due to this head floating down the river which caused discovery of the crime. The head was heard singing, "Oh, I Ain't Got No Body" and Patrolman Terrence Regol O'Brian became suspicious and especially so after finding the head, leading him to think, and correctly so, that something was wrong. At any rate we hope that the perpetrator of this heinous crime will be run to the ground. Aye, even beneath it.

Tower Editors Scrap With "John Law"

(By New Student Service)

Two editors of The Tower, literary magazine of Dartmouth College, have resigned because New Hampshire laws by which they are governed differ with them on the definition of what is immoral in literature and what is not. After having three of their stories rejected, the editors decided that the law wins every time. The Dartmouth commented that the decency of New England, "which throws into bold relief the incidental elements of smut, is a parasitic fungus of hypocrisy."

AT THE DORM

By Converse Hall

PROGRESS

A blanket of snow at the window
When the Greyfriars met last night;
On the polished table and leather seats
Played a dim and thoughtful light.

"We are here for a definite purpose,"
Spoke the chairman at the head.
"Our aim is to foster good English;
The art of writing to spread
Who knows but what sits here among us
A Shelley, a Hardy, a Poe?
Let us strive to awaken that genius,
That his powers all mankind may know
We have to address us this evening
Two gentlemen learned and bright;—
They're authors, successful and active."
He bowed to the man on the right.

There in the soft shadows before me
Sat man who had lived and had done
The world had made use of his living,
Full many an honor he'd won.
The whitest of white were his scant locks,
The whitest of white was his beard.
He spoke with clear accent and mellow
Of the dreams he had fancied and reared.

"I have tried," he concluded, "in teaching
To find and develop those souls
Who would earnestly give what was in them
In endeavors to reach worthwhile goals.
I have tried to discover the writer;
I have tried to develop his art.
In at least one case I've succeeded.
And I knew that I would from the start:
He sits here among us, Greyfriars.
He's surpassed me in what I have taught:
He has set up new standards to follow;
And renown to our college has brought.
I've shown him the bit I have mastered;
He has woven it into his work.
My aim, I repeat, in teaching you men
Is searching where genius may luck."

His pupil was speaking. We listened
To a voice that was deeper. His face
Was younger, less weary, more ruddy:
Of aging it yet bore no trace

"Whatever I've tried and accomplished
I owe to the class where I learned
The art of declaring my feelings
And giving the world what it yearned
I owe it to he who has spoken.
His efforts are aiding me now.
But listen, ye Greyfriars, and mark me,
Before you I lay down a vow.
I promise to aid all your trials;
To pass forth the store I received—
That someone among you may profit;
The theory my teacher believed.
I want you to take what I give you,
To use it and bring to your name
By sheer individual merit
The bright, shining spotlight of fame!"

Ploughing home through the still drifting snowflakes.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

The other day a prominent army officer appeared before a number of people in this city and spoke to them upon the C. M. T. C. In part, the man stated:

"These C. M. T. C. camps are fine places to teach young men the value of authority, which the youth of America badly need to learn. The government is not taking these young men to make soldiers out of them but rather to make leaders out of them in time of peace as well as in time of war."

Now I have heard this many times. The C. M. T. C., any sort of military training, especially compulsory military training in our colleges, is not, in the words of the army officer "to make soldiers out of them, but rather to make leaders out of them." It is rather interesting to note how consistently army officers emphasize the point that it is not "to make soldiers out of them, but rather to make leaders out of them." They are afraid, as it were, to admit that it is really soldiers that they are making.

There is no need denying the fact that there are C. M. T. camps and compulsory military, in fact any sort of military, solely for the purpose of making soldiers. There is no need of disguising that fact. If leaders are made at the same time, well and good; so much the better! fine!

The American youth, which incidentally, does not need so badly to learn the value of authority, would be much more appealed to if they were asked in a good straight-forward, frank manner, would they not go to a C. M. T. C. or take military, because it would be better for their country were they trained in the art of war? It is not necessary that the probability of war be shown to them. The past speaks for itself.

I object very much, as I am sure most of us do, to this disguising. We might just as well be open and frank about the nature of things.

And as to this leadership business, it is most likely that leaders, natural-born leaders, are attracted to military, but that carrying a gun on one's shoulders, and obeying commands mechanically, make leaders is a thing which I am certain most people fail to see.

PROHIBITION OR FREEDOM OR BOTH

(By Orville S. Poland)

If I understand the genius of modern youth it is freedom. Youth demands emancipation from the bondage of convention and from social slavery. Someone has pungently remarked that occasional Bohemian youngsters vociferate their emancipation, but they are mistaken—they are just unbuttoned. Prohibition is a part of the youth movement because it is a true form of emancipation. Its purpose is not to make anyone good. It is to make everybody free. Freedom today cannot be obtained by isolation. It must be found in the midst of a highly complex organism. The more complex, the greater the necessity for regulation as a guarantee of freedom. Traffic regulations are unnecessary on the frontier, but are essential on Fifth Avenue.

The Dopefiend

NANI GLUCAS

Vermont invaded Massachusetts over the week-end and came home with two of the three scalps that they were after. However, the first was hardly a real game going only four innings before Jupe Pluvius banished the players from the field. The score then stood 4-0 with the Cats in the lead and going strong.

Schoppe was pitching good ball at the time, but for a few wild pitches, and they had only been able to get one real hit from his deliverings.

Springfield made the Green and Golders step an extra session to take their game, but Conway, Macomber and Price came through for the needed runs to sew up the game.

The Cats touched Beach for 10 hits including doubles by Conway and Macomber and a triple by Moriarty. The best the Red and White could get off of Moriarty's offerings was seven well-scattered hits. He walked only one man and fanned seven.

The greatest surprise of all came, however, when Vermont was defeated by Holy Cross 4-0. It is not the defeat that causes the surprise but the small score. The Crusaders have one of the fastest college nines in the East with a bunch of sluggers included. According to the Worcester papers the Purple fans who went to Fenton Field with the idea of seeing the Crusaders stage another base running romp received something of a surprise.

Talcott pitched great ball and the Purple scored all their runs in one inning, the third.

It was a pitching duel between Fons and Talcott and the papers grant Talcott the better of the bargain. He was touched for ten hits but they were widely scattered, struck out three and walked three. Fons struck out eight but was not as effective at times as Talcott.

Howard was the only Vermont man to get two hits off Fons' delivery, both being singles. He went hitless in the Springfield contest but still leads the batters.

If Vermont can only keep up this fine brand of ball the Burlington fans are due to witness some interesting games this season.

The opening of the season here will be next Saturday when St. Michael's pays a visit for our first home and state contest.

Captain Conway was hurt sliding in the Springfield affair and was out of the Worcester game. However, the injury was not serious and he will be back at his old position again when the game opens Saturday.

Photograph of JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG, taken in his studio while test was being made

After this test, Mr. Flagg wrote:
"Most of us smoke names and think we are smoking cigarettes! The blindfold test proved that to me. It proved also that it is difficult to tell one cigarette from another . . . except in the case of OLD GOLD . . . I spotted that . . . it suited me best even blindfolded. In fact, the man who said 'not a cough in a carload' knew whereof he spoke. It's the smoothness that identifies OLD GOLD. It needs no other trade mark."
JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG

JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG—Nationally known artist and creator of the famous Flagg girl.

How Test Was Made
Subject was blindfolded, and, in the presence of two responsible witnesses, was given one each of the four leading cigarettes to smoke. To clear the taste, coffee was served before each cigarette ...Mr. Flagg was entirely unaware of the identity of these cigarettes during test. After smoking the four cigarettes, Mr. Flagg was asked to designate by number his choice. He promptly replied, "Number 2," which was OLD GOLD.

SMOOTHER AND BETTER—NOT A COUGH IN A CARLOAD

A VERMONT GRADUATE IN ANOTHER LAND SAYS,

"If you would ask me

why our people down here in Eastern South Africa have to pass through a hunger period every year, I should have to tell you quite frankly that the underlying cause can be ascribed to the native peculiarities, whereas Europe is "industrious" and sick of sufficient foresight. After all they are just as much different from human nature as every part of the undeveloped and uncivilized world. They enjoy possession of a lower standard than we but suffer the same pains as all of us.

I come in the heart of Africa in the Belgian Congo Mr. R. H. Stanford Gross. He is a Vermont graduate of the year 1921.

Some of the different factors in the cause of the native suffering can also be attributed to outstanding conditions taking place the past few years. Most governments of Europe are now in the industrial centers — the people producing food but comparatively few. These people in West Africa, native farmers are far better off than those in the old districts because enough food is dropped to them. While those back in the original places consume their products and the other factors that I have mentioned, just have to go hungry and starve. I see no prospect of increasing the production of products but I hope the conditions will improve as the government gets the country better organized and more security for life and property are established.

While we said the proper fact of the hunger in this district it is a fact that there are several buyers located around who make considerable money buying up food and shipping it to the industrial centers. Some time ago I made inquiries into the reasons why the natives are more than they ever were. The replies were varied and amusing. It seems that they aspire to be able to have some one say of them what the engineer once said too me in the U. S. "You stay on the grub gang today." They like to appear always in prosperous standing. After they get the money from selling their food it would not be correct to differentiate if it was generally possible to see it to eliminate their own suffering and improving their condition, however, this is quite impossible. As soon as they amass a little wealth some distant relative or two will most assuredly turn up and claim and COLLECT damages for some person's death who married into the family and died several years ago.

To Americans this will seem queer and in all probability you will wonder why government officials do not interfere. If the native wants his price he will pay the amount demanded. If he goes to the government he will be ostracized from his own society. He chooses the easiest method of ridding himself of the demands and probable vengeance.

Again the native will reason if he has corn, peanuts or beans to store what can be put so that termites, mice and weevils will not molest them? Large granaries are used, but there are not many to be had. Mud storehouses CAN be built but he may not need them — the crops may fail. And so he hoards what little corn he has into cribs in the same way it has been done for generations and hangs it up in a tree and he wraps his small store of peanuts in a bundle of grass and ties it in the crotch of another tree. Then nonchalantly he philosophizes. After all is said and done nature is something kind and I must be all right anyway at least I probably will be quite content until the new crop comes and hunger is past.

This is a letter which will be read regularly in the Cynic columns as the Engineering men all over the world will give their ideas of economic, political, social and religious life in their respective corners of the globe. The writer of this column will correspond with and with and women. Material from the correspondence will not necessarily be quoted at random and analogies will be drawn to enlarging the minds of American natives whenever it is possible.

The idea is entirely born anew in the present generation of students. Its success depends wholly upon the interest of our student body and the people who read this column.

If the readers can give practical suggestions now and then, they will be duly acknowledged and used. Address the Cynic.

The next letter will further concern the causes of starvation in a host of plants and the proposed remedies. Later letters will be from graduates in Europe, Russia, Colombia, Alaska, Cuba and many other points.

CO-ED MANAGERS ELECTED FOR SEMESTER'S SPORTS

At a W A A Council meeting held Friday afternoon the following managers for the spring sports were chosen: tennis, Beatrice Hopkins '29; archery, Irene Wilkins '29; baseball, Juanita Withers '28.

The nominating committee was chosen to make suggestions for the revision of the point system: Lucy Morgan, Margaret Corbin, and Marion Backus.

Marion Baldwin was chosen chairman of Field Day. Miss Baldwin is a member of the class of 1929 and of Alpha Chi Omega fraternity and has been most active in athletics since she entered college.

Doctor A. K. Aldinger, dean of athletics, announces that of the Sophomores and Freshmen taking physical education, 70 have elected track, 57 basketball, 14 wrestling, 19 fencing, 1 rifle. Over 100 are at present taking part in baseball practice.

VERMONT REPRESENTED AT A. C. A. C. W. MEETING

Marion Backus '29 newly elected president of W. A. A. and Lucy Morgan '29 treasurer, attended the Eastern Sectional conference of the A. C. A. C. W. at Mount Holyoke on April 13 and 14 as delegates from Vermont.

The conference opened Friday morning when Miss Woolley president of Mount Holyoke College welcomed the delegates and expressed her idea that the standard of physical and athletic development should be held to the women of the country as the real ideal.

Lured by Aroma of Neighbor's Tobacco

Boston, Mass.,
April 21, 1927

Larus & Bro. Co.,
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

This morning I had a smoking adventure worth recording.

Next to me in the smoking car a gentleman was puffing his pipe contentedly. I was not smoking at the moment, and the aroma of his tobacco intrigued me exceedingly. For twelve years I had smoked Edgeworth without being tempted by any other brand, but the fragrance emanating from the pipe of the gentleman beside me was so agreeable that I could not resist the temptation to speak of it.

"That is wonderfully fragrant tobacco you have there," I remarked. "Would you mind telling me the name of it?"

"It is Edgeworth," he answered.

We then congratulated each other upon our mutual good taste, and I decided that I would continue to use his brand and mine.

Sincerely yours,

FOUNDER'S DAY ISSUE

CATAMOUNTS OPEN HOME SEASON TODAY AGAINST ST. MICHAEL'S OUTFIT

Schoppe and Murphy Favored for Mound Duty in Opener—Conway Back at Shortstop After Lay-off

[illegible] the Catamounts' [illegible] afternoon at Centen[illegible] Field Vermont is a top heavy [illegible] a result of the fact that the [illegible] has made a pretty fair record in the early season trips with victories over Army, Navy, St. John's, [illegible] and Springfield. Vermont had a substantial lead over Tufts when [illegible] and also gave Holy [illegible] its hardest game to date. The St. Michael's pitcher will have plenty to worry about with the Vermont bats [illegible] up as they have been. It is [illegible] that Larry Murphy, a rookie, [illegible] sent to the mound for St. Mi[illegible] by Coach Stoddard. In the [illegible] the Cats are stronger than ever. [illegible] Conway developed a bad [illegible] the Springfield contest but after [illegible] day lay-off he will be seen at [illegible] berth this afternoon.

The Green and Gold squad has not had a chance to practice outside since the Massachusetts trip. Coach Dres[illegible] sees the need of a sure-fire substitute shortstop but is well fortified with [illegible] fielder. The veteran gardeners have been pressed hard by the new [illegible] and must display some smooth [illegible] and hitting to hold down their [illegible].

The probable line-up will be as follows: Smith, 2b.; Prentice, 1b.; Congress Cogswell, 3b.; Macomber, cf.; [illegible] Dunnman, rf.; Howard, lf.; [illegible] Schoppe, Moriarty, and [illegible], p.

POWELL AND BILLINGS TO PUBLISH 1930 ARIEL

Henry Powell, of Burlington, was elected as the Editor-in-Chief of the [illegible] at a Sophomore Class meeting held Monday afternoon at four o'clock in the large lecture hall of the Physics Science building. At the same meeting Robert P. Billings, of New Haven, Conn., was elected to [illegible] as business manager. It was decided to have the editor appoint the [illegible] rather than elect that [illegible] as has been the custom in the [illegible].

[illegible] is a sergeant in the R. O. [illegible] corps, a member of Eta Sigma [illegible] Psi and has been very active in class activities. Billings is a member of Gold Key Society, Sigma [illegible] and has served on several class [illegible].

The staff appointments will be announced some time in the near future. [illegible] no contracts have been awarded for the printing and engraving of the book.

Editor Pritchard, of the 1929 Ariel, announced that this year's Ariel will [illegible] on May 17, the day after the [illegible] Banquet.

WOMEN HAVE TENNIS SINGLES TOURNAMENT

There is in the future an opportunity [illegible] for those interested to [illegible] in the spring singles tournament. This year, the woman winning [illegible] will have her name engraved on the tennis cup which so far [illegible] has been won by but three girls: Bertha [illegible] in 1915, Ruby Howe [illegible] and Ruth Hubbell in 1921.

The [illegible] should be of much interest as the matches well worth [illegible] with such experienced players [illegible] as Della Martin '28, Ka[illegible] '28, Beatrice Hoskins [illegible], Goldwin '29, Margaret Cor[illegible], Mary Everest '29, Doris Kib[illegible], Grace Wilder '30, Dorothy [illegible], Frances Hazen '30, Helen [illegible], Dorothy Nash '31, Eleanor [illegible] and Elizabeth Westin '31.

Miss A Dodge '29 of Johnson, Vt., was [illegible] into Kappa Phi Kappa [illegible] at their meeting on April 24. [illegible] a member of Sigma Alpha [illegible].

PHI SIGMA DELTA, NEW FRATERNITY, OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED ON CAMPUS

National Jewish Organization Brings Total of Fraternities up to Thirteen—Formerly Known as the Pi Club

A new men's fraternity was added to those already on the hill when the Phi chapter of Phi Sigma Delta was installed in a two-day affair at the Hotel Vermont Saturday and Sunday, April 21 and 22. This new Jewish men's organization was formerly the Pi Club.

The installation opened with a formal dance on the roof garden on Saturday evening. Music was furnished by Mack Bergman's Orchestra. The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Carpenter and Captain and Mrs. Rattan.

The ritual was performed Sunday when eleven undergraduates were initiated. They were Myron Samuelson and Jack Rosenthal of Burlington, and I. E. Davis of Revere, Mass., of '29; Solomon Freedman of Roxbury, Mass., Hyman B. Levine of Burlington, and Harold Burstein of Bridgeport, Conn., of the class of '30; Harold Dinnman of New Haven, Conn., Solam Segel of Gardner, Mass., Julius Perelman of Burlington, Leonard Berry of Plainville, Conn., and Charles Stroh of West Hartford, Conn., all of the class of '31.

A banquet on the roof garden of the Hotel Vermont closed the exercises on Sunday evening. Dean Elijah Swift, Professor Frederick Tupper, and Doctor A. K. Aldinger were the guests of honor. The address of welcome to the new fraternity on behalf of the University was delivered by Dean Swift and Professor Tupper and Dr. Aldinger made remarks on the value of a fraternity in molding the character of students.

Practically every chapter in the fraternity was represented at the installation. The fraternity was founded at Columbia in 1909, and since then chapters have been added at Cornell, Rensselaer, N. Y. U., Union, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Colorado, Denver, Ohio State, Texas, Ohio, Chicago, B. U., M. I. T., Wisconsin, Johns Hopkins, Lehigh, Penn State, W. Virginia, and Vermont.

The new group is well represented in extra-curricular activities. Two are varsity football players, two are varsity baseball men, one on the wrestling team, one freshman basketball man, one track man and one member in the glee club.

Phi Sigma Delta at present has rooms at 94 Church Street, but expects to have a home in time for the opening of school next September.

Tickets for the Newman Club Minstrels, which will be presented in the Cathedral High School Auditorium April 30 and May 1 at 8 o'clock, may be obtained at P. F. Roddy's, Brown and Finnegan's, Hayes and Carney's, and the University Store.

University Celebrates 137th Anniversary of Founding

HONORARY SOCIETIES ANNOUNCE ELECTIONS

Following a custom established in 1894 by Professor Goodnow, an alumnus and member of the faculty for thirty-two years, the annual exercises on Founder's Day took place this morning in various parts of the campus. At that time according to the usual program new members of Boulder Society and other honorary societies were announced.

At the conclusion of the formal exercises the thirteenth Annual Musical Contest of the several classes for the Prize Cup given by the late Honorable Elias Lyman, '70, was held on the green near the Ira Allen Statue.

Concerning the significance of Founder's Day, which commemorates the chartering of the University in 1791, Professor Walter H. Crockett has said: "The meaning of Founder's Day [illegible] an annual official recognition by the University of the debt which Vermonters in general and this institution in particular owe Ira Allen. A service held on the anniversary of his birth, that shall keep fresh in our mind the deeds of our founder and that shall enable us formally to pay our tribute of honor and affection to his memory."

OUR HERITAGE

One can hardly have witnessed the ceremonies of this morning, on the beautiful campus in which we as men and women of Vermont, take such just pride, and not have experienced the warm thrills and that inner feeling of good fellowship that make such occasions memorable from year to year. Perhaps it is the bright sunlight filtering through the pines and elm trees, and the smell of fresh grass,—perhaps it is a sense of anticipation as our president called forth those men chosen from our own ranks to high office among us,—perhaps it is a feeling of ownership as we look upon the stately buildings, so full of memories and so rich in tradition,—perhaps it is all of these that make us glad, glad that we are alive, that we are here as members of the University of Vermont, gathered once more to do honor to the memory of our founder, Ira Allen.

One hundred and thirty-seven years ago an idea gestating for some twenty years took definite form. This was the chartering of an institution for higher learning to be known as the University of Vermont. Conceived in the fertile mind of the founder of the state the idea became a reality a few months after the establishment of the state in 1791. The years since that meager and inauspicious beginning bear silent witness to the growth of that idea into a potent force in the shaping of the characters and the determining of the destinies of many forward looking young men and women. The University is a magnificent tribute to the foresight of a great man—a man of action, a man who built for progress, practically, yet on a basis of lofty idealism.

Ira Allen Statue

Standing on a pedestal placed with in the fork of the center campus walk is a bronze statue of a young man. His manner of dress was long ago discarded by the dictum of fashion. His long, oddly cut coat, the knee breeches and homespun stockings and even the large square buckles which adorn his low shoes bespeak the period of our nation's birth.

But the face is that of a man of today. It is keen and virile. In it are left the marks of a great concentration and the outward signs of a strong and highly principled character. The statue is one of Ira Allen. One is tempted in speaking of this man to apply to him all the eulogistic phrases at one's command. And how near right one would be in doing so may be judged from a record of his life. Active in politics when barely twenty he assumed a role of great importance to the struggling settlers of the New Hampshire Grants. Striving tirelessly for security for his people from the Indians on the one hand and for political autonomy from the British on the other, he several times saved the state before he had reached the age of thirty. At forty he was on the way to the realization of his life's ambition with a prospect

Aaron H. Grout, former secretary of the State of Vermont and principal speaker at the Founder's Day exercises in the Ira Allen Chapel, eulogized the diplomacy and statesmanship of the founder of the University of Vermont. His thorough knowledge of state history and first hand experience with its government and administration made his address doubly interesting and vivid.

LIVING MONUMENTS

In a small town in Connecticut there lived a family of adventurous pioneers—the Allens. The eldest son, Ethan, had already left home to blaze new trails through the unexplored lands to the northwest and now, the youngest son, Ira, has been called by the Managing Proprietors of the town of Mansfield to survey and explore the lands they held by virtue of the grants of 1749. Ira Allen was much too young a man many felt to be intrusted with so important a mission. But because this boy—and he was only nineteen years old—had already established for himself a reputation as a practical surveyor he was chosen to brave the wilds of this unexplored land because this boy had even then the foresightedness and the zeal which characterized his endeavors of later years, we today may claim ourselves as sons and daughters of Vermont the State and of Vermont the University.

When Ira Allen plied his way through the waters of Lake Champlain he must have often rested upon his paddle to drink in the marvels the natural beauties of the scenery, the wood lined shores, the many colored hues of the autumn foliage and the towering grandness of the mountains above them. There were no cultured cottages lining the shores then. There were no docks and wharfs lending with the busy life of a commercial town; there were only trees and hills, and the wild life that lurked amid them.

Before leaving his home Ira Allen had conferred with an older brother Heman, and had been admonished to him to look for a location in this new country where a city a center of trade might be established. As he leisurely paddled his canoe along the shores of our lake he must have kept his eyes constantly open and his senses alert for just such a spot. Finally he came to the Bay of Burlington. Here he found just the location he had been seeking for. He landed and struck camp for the night. Standing probably not far from this very spot he looked upon the lovely panorama of unbroken forest framing our incomparable lake and saw with prophetic eye the possibilities of its future. We can imagine him standing there and exclaiming with youthful enthusiasm that phrase which has come to be a part of the history and tradition of Vermont. Oh this is THE spot. This MUST be THE spot. And now, this is the spot which the services of Ira Allen has preserved to us.

The owners of this particular parcel of land were inhabitants of Massachu-

FOUNDER'S DAY

Tomorrow, the University of Vermont, are celebrating the anniversary of our founding, a matter of retrospection. The founder looked forward to a great university where the young men and women of Vermont could obtain a higher education and take their places on an equal footing with those of other states. To those who have labored conscientiously and well at their studies a diploma is awarded in recognition of their work.

College life, is, however, made up of other things too. True men of Vermont are able to participate in more than books, for book knowledge is but a small part of life. To work for one's alma mater with little expectation of material gain is the way many students choose to express their affection for her.

It is proper, then, at this time, to recognize these labors in the spirit of Founder's Day by giving distinction to those students in the form of membership in class honorary societies. To them we must look for our leaders and our most willing workers.

These honorary societies have a great responsibility in keeping with the spirit of the founder and of ever keeping the best interests of our University in view. That their membership is a duty, as well as honor should always be in their minds.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

In Tuesday's issue of the Cynic, '31 replied to my article which appeared in the Cynic recently. At that time I stated that the Chapel situation was impossible, and made a suggestion whereby the attendance would be increased, by a new seating arrangement. '31 does not approve of the plan. He says that "Conditions today are not so bad" and, "Just now let things remain as they are." He also finds the Editor's note to my first article amusing. It is gratifying to know that a member of the Class of '31 has a sense of humor. The Editor in his note suggested placing the Freshmen in the front rows. The question of where to place the Freshmen is incidental and immaterial. Place them first, in the middle, or last, it does not matter. The issue is to increase the attendance, as '31 himself stated only he fell short and did not suggest any method. Probably in his opinion conditions are not so bad, but if you stop to consider the over-crowded condition of the library between ten to ten thirty, the occupied window sills in the various hallways, the lounging and gossiping students in the classrooms during chapel service, and only one hundred ten students at chapel out of nearly fourteen hundred, then conditions are not so good.

If I may be allowed, I will indicate that '31's logic is somewhat fallacious for he emphasizes the attendance of the Freshman Class as a whole and then rejects the idea of dividing the student body into classes. If '31 has any pride for his class he would welcome the opportunity of showing what it can do, as he himself has stated that the chapel would eventually end if the Freshmen were placed in the front rows.

Surely '31 knows that dividing individuals into groups is a very common procedure in all phases of life, and no one would suggest that they are being treated as "just so many cattle."

'31 will admit that competition among the students will be increased as to chapel attendance, and will also agree that a more academic atmosphere will be created, which in itself will mean unity within the student body, and '31 will also confess that he has not proposed any better plan to unite the spirit of the chapel to that of the student.

If '31 has a better plan let us have it, or if anyone else has any suggestion to make let him make it, and if not let us have action on the situation to the extent at least of dividing the student body into classes, however placed.

A VERMONT GRADUATE IN ANOTHER LAND SAYS,

"If you would ask a native youth of Kanene, in the Congo Belge, South Africa, what the term food meant to him he would immediately tell you cassava."

[Ruth Hubbell is writing the letter today. She graduated in 1921. Her record here at Vermont is one that is both pleasing and satisfactory. During the World War she was a volunteer student nurse. Besides being a popular and attractive young woman, she was one who took an active interest in the welfare of fellow students. After leaving college her interests broadened to wider breadths—to include the welfare and uplift of a foreign race and people. She married Mr. Ray Smalley who wrote the letter published in this column last week. Their romance must have originated on the Vermont Campus. Its success and mutual understanding is reflected in the wholeheartedness with which they are both tackling the tasks that are promoting their idealistic aims. In this letter Mrs. Hubbell-Smalley tells us simply and in a fascinating manner a South African native's conception of food, and continues her husband's discussion of the problem of starvation.]

"The cassava plant furnishes their staple food. And so, everything is cassava. This plant is starchy. The roots are used chiefly ground up into a meal and from that form made into a kind of bread. I have discussed with the boys in my class this food question to a great length, and given them suggestions about cultivating other foods along with the cassava; thereby, aiding in the solution of the starvation problem.

"But these native people do not picture the future hunger period very definitely. When they are well fed they are apt to forget about the future. They develop some hazy idea back in their minds that cassava can be bought of someone else. Knowing that many do not have much of any income I asked about the francs. The answer was to the effect that ment and fish would be exchanged for the cassava needed. Fish can be caught in fair quantities with their basket traps.

"Meat is another proposition. It is common to eat everything from certain insects, worms, beetles, rodents, et cetera, up to the animals that civilized peoples are accustomed to. I do not know that our people eat snakes but some others do, and now-a-days they stop just short of humans. Personally I think they have faith—and plenty of it. The trouble is they do not know how to use it.

"Some from other tribes say these local tribes are wasteful in gathering their cassava. These dig up the whole plant at once, as we do potatoes; others dig out one root that is large and put the rest back in place to develop. This method would keep the ground occupied with the same crop from three to five years instead of two or three which is more common here.

"Wild pigs were mentioned as a menace to the crops. Again, I suggested grouping the gardens, and coöperating on the fencing problem in order to guard them. The objection is that the people cannot peacefully settle and abide by boundaries. This does not seem very hard on land owned by the tribe. But, at times, in practice it leads to some serious disputes.

"Corn is much quicker to raise, and could be raised successfully. Yet, they consider it too hard to prepare, i. e., to grind for mush. And they must have that mush in order to be comfortably stuffed! You see, here they pretend to eat only once a day. Consequently, there is little wonder that over-eating is one of their ordinary sins.

"Pineapples thrive in this section very successfully. Last year, I had seen very few in the village so I asked why they did not raise more. It seems that pineapples have been found in the forest for a long time but no one had thought of the desirability of bringing them into a garden where they would be sure of a continual supply. They eat them as they are found and call that sufficient. But now, since my husband and I have told them that they should try to cultivate them, a very few natives have started transplanting them in their own gardens. There seems to be a reluctance to start cultivating anything that has not been taught them by their fathers. Their advancement is hampered by their idea that tradition and the forefather-way of acting is good enough."

[The editor finds Mrs. Hubbell-Smalley's letter too long to be included in one issue. In the closing of the letter she adds, with considerable enthusiasm, "It really seems quite some time since I left the University. That was back in '22, a year after graduation. Some of the old grads went back for a visit. We all met at the fraternity one afternoon, and had a real chat about the past and the future. Then we had tea, and afterwards a dance. Those were happy days."]

[The next issue will complete the correspondence with the Smalleys.]

AT THE DORM

By Converse Hall

TO BARRIETTE

I love the name of Barriette.
It's sweetly musical; and yet
It's sharp, decisive, fair and dear.
We think of fairy bells so clear,
Atinkling out their sweet refrain
As 'round they dance and back again,
In moonlit glen on perfumed night.
Neath piercing stars all still and bright.
The softness, sweetness of the name
Brings to my heart deep sorrow, shame;
That I have been so thoughtless, cruel—
Mind stunted Frosh! O witless fool!
For I confess I've scribbled oft,
While idling in my Converse loft,
A line o' type 'bout Barre fair,
And things that startle natives there.
Those tactics in the past I used;
The heart of Barriette abused.

Fool boor to cause a maiden woe!
Why had I not the sense to know
That Barre is the fairest place
In all Vermont? Could I not trace
The Pearls of Womanhood who came
To Vermont, hearing Barre's name?
With deepest of apologies
Perhaps I can your wrath appease;
Perhaps I can your calm restore,
And bring to Barre evermore
The peace, contentment of the past.
May the Lord grant that it will last
Throughout the ages. Nothing stem
The progress of Vermont's Green Gem.
To Barriette and all her clan,
I say that I'm a changed man;
No more as midnight oil I burn
To Barre topics will I turn:
Nay, rather that my tongue may freeze!
Accept my deep apologies.

Would you call for help if I tried to kiss you?

Do you need help?—Pickup.

CORRECTION

Contrary to a statement made in the Cynic, April 20, the women's debating team won a unanimous victory over a Middlebury College debating team last year.

Y. M. C. A. Chooses Cabinet

Y. M. C. A. of the University of Vermont held its annual installation of officers Thursday night at the home of M. D. Powers of this city, who is the general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at the college.

Philip Elliott of Boston, the New England secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was the chief speaker of the evening. E. S. Ingalls of the University gave a short talk on the general work of other college "Y's."

The retiring president, D. J. Merrill, '28, acted as the installing officer. At this time the new president, G. Bond, '29, appointed his cabinet as follows: discussion group, E. W. Allen, '30; meetings, K. M. Stearns, '31; campus service, Donald Pierce, '31; church relations, B. E. Bond, '31; Christian world education, Merle Duval, '30; boys' work, S. F. McQuestion, '31; council representative, '29. The members in charge of membership and deputation will be appointed later.

R. M. BRAGG ATTENDS OUTING CLUB CONFERENCE

R. M. Bragg, '30, will represent the Outing Club at the Conference of Outing Clubs to be held on Friday and Saturday of the week at Dartmouth College. Dartmouth, which is acting as host at this Conference, has long been prominent in outing club work including both hiking and winter sports, and it is fitting that the Conference should be held here. It is expected that colleges from all over the East will be represented at this Conference, which is called to promote interest in outing club work. While Vermont has done little in the line of starting trails and chains of cabins, it is felt that Bragg will bring back many ideas, especially in winter sports, which will be of great value.

Bragg will leave Friday morning for Hanover, where he will be entertained by the Dartmouth Outing Club on Friday and Saturday. The program includes movies of winter sports on Friday followed by a banquet and speeches. On Saturday there will be group discussions on various subjects, and in the afternoon there will be a hike to one of the cabins [illegible] per there. Opportunity will [illegible] for inspection of the equip[illegible] Dartmouth Outing Club.

PRELIMINARY INSPECTION TO BE CONDUCTED SOON

A formal inspection will be made of the R. O. T. C. Battalion [illegible] cluded) at 7.30, Friday, May 4. The inspecting officer will be Lieutenant Colonel Black. The results of the inspection will be noted and the points awarded entered on record cards which will be used as a basis in determining the semester grades of the individuals concerned. Members of the Battalion absent from the formation [illegible] cused absences will be required to [illegible] a time to be designated at a later date. Excuses will be presented at the formation the absentee attends following the inspection on May 4, 1928.

Absent members of the Battalion who do not present an excuse properly signed will be given a [illegible] which will enter into the semester's grade of the individuals concerned.

This inspection which is to be conducted by Lt.-Col. Black is not to be confused with the Federal Inspection on May 16, 17, 1928.

Points to be inspected and the value of each are as follows: Arms and equipment, (rifle, belts, [illegible] sters, band instruments [illegible] uniforms (to be clean, free [illegible] pressed and in good condition and pair) cap 5%, shirt and [illegible] 10%, trousers 10%; shoes [illegible] ability 7.5%, appearance [illegible] sonal appearance, posture and [illegible] appearance 15%, shave [illegible] 5%, making a total of 100.

CLASS PRIZE SPEAKERS PREPARING FOR TRYOUTS

Tryouts for the Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest will be held May 8 at 4 p.m. in the old chapel. The contestants must have their [illegible] proved before this time. [illegible] many subjects likely to be selected would not be suitable for the contest. The speeches cannot be less than ten minutes in length although longer speeches may be given to meet this requirement. A restriction is that no speech which has been given in a recent contest may be used. The finals will probably be held May 16.

The Kingsley prize speaking contest is held every year, ordinarily with three sophomores and three freshmen participating. Last year, however, only one sophomore contestant was necessary to fill up the ranks of the freshmen. It is hoped that all four classes will be represented by contestants this year.

MORTAR BOARD ELECTS SIX ACTIVE MEMBERS

Announcement of the election of six girls of the Junior class to Mortar Board, Senior women's honorary society was made at Founder's Day exercises as follows: Marion Baldwin of Barton; Katherine Brewster Bassett of Burlington; Marion Wright Backus of West Hartford, Conn.; Charlotte Elizabeth Cleveland of Glendale, Calif.; Margaret Agnes Durick of Fair Haven, and Lucy Elizabeth Morgan of Burlington.

The aim of the national society of Mortar Board is to acknowledge scholarship, leadership and personality in women of the Senior class, and election to it is considered on campuses of American universities the highest honor a Senior woman may receive. Many interests are represented in the choice of Akraia Chapter's new members. Marion Baldwin, whose fraternity is Alpha Chi Omega, has been especially active in choir and Glee Club as well as in athletics. "Kitty" Bassett, president of Student Union, has served her class and college well in numerous fields. Her fraternity is Kappa Alpha Theta.

Backy" was elected president of Women's Athletic Association in March, and is in charge of plans for the Lilac Day festival in May. "Backy" is a member of Pi Beta Phi. Charlotte Cleveland was women's editor of the 1929 Ariel. She belongs to Pi Beta Phi. "Margie" Durick was women's editor of the CYNIC during 1927-1928 and has been re-elected for the coming year. "Margie" is an Alpha Xi Delta. Lucy Morgan is a popular leader in many activities. Her fraternity is Alpha Chi Omega.

The Juniors were welcomed to Mortar Board this morning at a breakfast held in their honor at the Hotel Vermont. Dean Patterson will have the Junior and Senior members as her guests at luncheon, and initiation will take place in the afternoon.

History of Akraia

Akraia was founded in October, 1913 as a Senior honorary society "to work for the highest type of college women, and to further the best interests of the women's department and the University." The constitution, drawn up by a committee consisting of the Misses O'Sullivan, Gifford, Spafford and Shepardson, was read before the seventeen Senior women who had assembled at luncheon at the Van Ness House.

The first reunion of Akraia was held June 13, 1923. Akraia established Lilac Day in memory of Dean Pearl Randall Wasson who was a member of that organization.

Through the efforts of the Senior members in 1924, Akraia Chapter's petition to Mortar Board was accepted and installation was conducted by Miss Eleanor S. Clarke of Swarthmore, Pa., national president, at Redstone, October 15, 1924. Thirty-three active members and honorary members were initiated at this time. Dean Marion Patterson and Miss Eleanor Cummings were made honorary members. Miss Katherine Storms and Miss Alice Blanchard have been made honorary members also. Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board continues to perpetuate Dean Wasson's memory in the annual Lilac Day pageant, as the original society of Akraia formerly did.

CO-ED TEAM WILL MEET DEBATERS OF PEMBROKE

One of the Vermont Women's Debating Teams, consisting of Frances E. Lowry '29, and Janice M. Goodrich, '29, will travel to Providence, R. I., on Saturday, April 28, to meet the debating team of Pembroke College in Brown University. The question for the debate is: "Resolved, that this House approves the United States policy in Nicaragua." The Vermont team will uphold the affirmative. The debate will be in the American style, that is each member of the team will make his own rebuttal, thus speaking twice. The debate will be judged.

JUNIORS FOUNDED KEY AND SERPENT IN 1908

In the Spring of the year 1908, it was decided to form a Junior class honorary society to be known as Key and Serpent. Before commencement of that year, the society was duly organized from members of the class of 1910, then sophomores. The first meeting was held at the Sigma Phi Place on October 14, 1908. The officers who had been chosen the preceding Spring had not returned to college, and as a result of the new elections Arthur K. Rich was the first president and Arthur T. Dailey the first vice-president. The purpose of this society was to promote better college spirit, to further interfraternity relations and good fellowship, and to engender closer bonds of unity among the Freshmen. At the second meeting Prof. Tupper was invited to join the Society as an honorary member, and he has guided the destinies of Key and Serpent since that time. The next fall Prof. Stetson was also elected an honorary member.

The society elects its own members each spring term from the members of the sophomore class, and the elections are announced on Founder's Day. The qualifications for membership are manliness, in deportment as in body, nobility as to spirit, in self-control as to spirit, popularity in class room, on campus, and in society, and achievements intellectually, physically, and morally. The elections are made irrespective of academic courses and on the basis of the candidate's disposition to further college interests. Later in the term, the men who have been elected appear at some specially designated place in full dress suit with top hat, cane, and spats for informal initiation. They are then made to do various stunts such as directing traffic, and otherwise appearing conspicuously in public places.

When this is over, a banquet is held, after which both the old and the new members serenade the girls' dormitories. The membership of the society is limited to twelve, but usually the full quota is not elected, the present membership being only eight.

Key and Serpent is usually a very active force throughout the college year. Meetings are held on the first and third Tuesdays of every month. The members manage at least one smoker during the year and usually two. An informal dance is given for the college every year, and sometimes a formal is held for the society itself. It also manages the interfraternity basketball and baseball series and gives a cup to the winner of each. Another of its functions is to supervise the work of Gold Key in conjunction with the athletic department.

The outgoing members are A. R. Birchard, J. S. Estabrook, B. W. Gustafson, W. S. Hall, A. G. Mackay, F. F. O'Keefe, F. J. O'Neil, and K. S. Price.

Co-ed Athletes Practice

Interest in spring sports is keener than ever this year as shown by the fact that 133 have signed up for archery; 90 for baseball; and 141 for tennis.

A small but enthusiastic class is enjoying horseback riding, under the tutelage of Dorothy Carpenter, '28.

The tennis courts are being prepared by Mr. Tully and meanwhile the classes are practicing strokes in the gymnasium. Special emphasis is being placed on form this year and those coaching the classes in tennis for less experienced players have been given a definite scale by which to grade their pupils and pass them off in the various strokes.

New equipment in the form of extra bows and arrows has been purchased for archery and regular practice is held at Grassmount.

Under the capable tutelage of Florence Farr Hard the baseball classes are meeting regularly and, judging from the dexterity which some are displaying with the mitt and ball, the interclass competition should prove keen.

THREE SORORITIES GIVE FORMAL DANCES

Three women's fraternities, Kappa Alpha Theta, Delta Delta Delta and Sigma Gamma, enjoyed their annual formal dances last evening. The remaining four fraternities will hold their formals May 4.

Kappa Alpha Theta danced at the Country Club where balloon decorations lent a gay and festive atmosphere. Jack Johnson's Orchestra supplied the music. Cigarette boxes of hammered brasses were given the guests in a favor dance. Mr. and Mrs. Leon W. Dean and Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Lane chaperoned.

The formal dance of Delta Delta Delta took place on the roof garden of the Hotel Van Ness with illuminated stars and crescent making a charming decorative effect. The gentlemen were given watch charms crested with the fraternity seal. Syncopation was furnished by the Vermonters. The chaperones were Captain and Mrs. W. V. Rattan and Mr. and Mrs. John Patrick.

The roof garden of Hotel Vermont was the scene of the Sigma Gamma dance. Decorations were in the fraternity colors, purple and gold. Pierson's orchestra furnished music. The favors were silver cigarette cases. Professor and Mrs. E. C. Dopkins, Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Kidder, and Miss Elizabeth Brown, Miss Harriet Howard, Mr. Lawrence Cowles and Mr. B. L. Rideout received the guests.

A Scotchman who owned a store, wished to increase his business. He hung a sign out which read: "Coat hangers and cigar lighters given free." The next day the store was crowded, and each person got a small package containing a nail and a match.

QUIT STRINGING US

A damp, cold, gloomy night—a moonless night. The sky was a dark, limitless void, broken now and then by low, scudding rain clouds. A silent, eerie figure crept to the edge of the ghostly wood. A deathly white face with great staring eyes standing out in the bold relief against the black shadows of the night. A rope was thrown over the lowest limb of the tree and the would-be suicide climbed up to the branch with one end of the rope tied about his neck.

Now came the supreme test. Would he have the courage, the nerve to end it all? Finally, with a set face he paused for the last leap in this world. Suddenly that strange inner voice, his conscience, whispered and said, "You can't do it. You can't do it."

"But why? Oh, why can't I do it?" moaned the frenzied man.

"Because," answered the insidious voice maddeningly, "you are not a college student."

—Louisville Satyr

Shed a tear for a poor little frosh,
Alas, he discovered too late
When he signed up for six eight o'clocks
That each was a class, not a date.

—Wisconsin Octopus.

Voice from Car: It's all right, officer; I'm a chiropractor.
—Ohio State Sun Dial.

"What'll I give Gloria for her birthday?"
"Does she smoke?"
"Yes. Three packs a day."
"Then give her some sheet music."
—Northwestern Purple Parrot.

THE TEST

"Love me, hon?"
"Uh-huh."
"Love me a lot, hon?"
"Uh-huh."
"Love me an awful lot, hon?"
"Uh-huh."
"Then sit up. Your sorority pin's tearing my necktie."

—California Pelican.

Producers on Broadway have taken the attitude that all work and no plagiarism makes jack mighty scarce.

—U. of Wash. Columns.

"I see where a man was arrested for kissing his wife in public."
"Another case of mistaken identity, I suppose."

—Washington Dirge.

"The next time I paint my car I am going to use some of this rubber enamel."
"Why so?"
"So the pedestrians will bounce off more easily."

—Pomona Sagehen.

"Well, ole man, see you in hell."
"Yeah, you social climber."

Elsie was an inveterate and tireless bargain hunter. She often spent hours at a stretch trying to buy a dime for a nickel, and the only thing in the world that was dearer to her than a red-hot fire sale was Thomas, her handsome fiancé.

One night Elsie danced wildly into her house and found Thomas waiting for her in the parlor. Spying him, she burst out:

"Gee, Tom-Toms, lookit! A half dollar handkerchief for only forty-nine cents, and such a—"

She stopped short. The seriousness of the other's expression informed her that he had something important to say.

"Elsie," he began mournfully, "I'm heartbroken. When we became engaged, I told you I had several thousand dollars. That was four months ago. Now I've just had the rottenest luck in business, and I haven't any more than a couple of hundred dollars to my name. I can't offer myself to you in this reduced state; I'm afraid we must part."

But Elsie's long years of training did not desert her for an instant.

"Wow!" she shrieked. "One marvelous husband—reduced from a thousand to a hundred! What a bargain! Tommikins, where's the nearest minister, you darling?"

—C. C. N. Y. Mercury.

THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER

Please, dear Lord, help me to be half as popular as the dog that ran through our estate most this morning.

—Illinois Siren.

"You're the oldesh fren' I've got I'd trush you with my life."
"Tha'sh good. Gimme a drink outa that bottle."
"I shaid my life."

—Lehigh Burr.

You can tell what she thinks of your dancing if, after you pardon yourself for stepping on her toe, she says, "Certainly."

Quarterback: Listen, I've got a little play up my sleeve.
Halfback: That's nothing. I've got a big run in my stocking.

—California Pelican

"Would you take a chance on the modern liquor?"
"Sure how much is a chance?"

—Wabash Caveman

Bolshy: You've got more dirt on you than I've ever seen.
Vicky: Whatcha expect? I'm twice as big as you.

—N. Y. Medley.

AGREED

I never thought that your most precious arms
Would fold and hold me to you with delight;
I never dreamed for me there were such charms,
I never dreamed there were—
And I was right!

—California Pelican

Dean of Women: Young lady this is the third time that I've caught you.
Fair Co-ed: Don't be partial to me; the other girls might not like it.

University Founded

[illegible]

Living Monuments

Now we are celebrating the anniversary of the founding of our University. It is not within the power of any of us to erect actual monuments to the memory of our founder. We cannot all give towering statues or magnificent buildings to perpetuate the name and the honor of the man to whom we owe so much, yet each of us can build a memorial of his own to the ideals and the example set by Ira Allen.

There are today scattered over the four corners of the earth more lasting and more powerful monuments than can ever be cut in stone or in bronze—the good men who are carrying on in the spirit of Ira Allen; there exists in the heart of every true and loyal Vermonter a bit of the spirit and indomitable energy, the dreams and the will to realization of those dreams of Ira Allen. The contagion of the spirit of our founder should make every Vermont man and every Vermont woman a Living Monument, a Living Monument who can show by word and by example those same characteristics which in Ira Allen enabled him to battle against and overcome whatever obstacles stood between him and the realization of his ideals.

Yes the dreams of Ira Allen have come true. His State and his University stand as monuments which make him immortal. The seed which he scattered fell on fertile ground: these buildings about us today tell the story far more convincingly than words ever could. It is a different picture that greets the young man of today as he gets his first glimpse of the Pass of Burlington. The Frenchman, could he would be just about the age that Ira Allen was when he first set foot in this State, steps from his canoe to find a city, the center of the splendor of a prosperous state. And in this city there is a university. As the university the young man is on the point to learn that which will allow him to live his life in a fuller way and to be of greater service to his country and his state and his family. The pioneer spirit of Ira Allen has laid a foundation upon which everyone of his followers can build. We may not all be pioneers—after the Pioneers come the Builders, to develop and to improve.

Ira Allen, the pioneer, and we, as the preceding speaker has shown, the builders of a sacred heritage, [illegible] with the spirit and the courage of our founder,—to Vermont the State, to Vermont the University and to Ira Allen—each of them both, may we all be—Living Monuments.

Love of Humanity

Above specific love of humanity is that [illegible] which [illegible] to new [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] of humanity [illegible] we [illegible] today [illegible] of a great heritage, one born of a spirit so fine and true that it has outlived [illegible] and time itself and is at last recognized by virtue of its own good works.

However, as we wipe the dust from our [illegible] traditions, and the [illegible] and the fundamental [illegible] we [illegible] sight of the [illegible] that it is challenging us to surpass the deeds of our fathers and to create our own histories, our own memories and our own traditions. We are constantly reminded that we, the youth of the nation, are living in an unprecedented period of world development. Events since the Great War, with the menace of apparently [illegible] possibilities warn us to be on [illegible] for the safety of our posterity. The threat of Bolshevism, as well as [illegible] and disruption in the nations, the rumbling unrest of the European States, the political revolution in India, the annihilating civil wars of China, and the sore spots of Central America, to say nothing of the mutual surveillance of the great world's peace to a state of affairs far removed from the prospect of perpetual peace we visualized at the close of [illegible]. Once more we see an attempt at [illegible] world politics masquerading under a fair face of mutual aid and brotherly love. Ten years after the war our fathers and brothers fought to make the world safe for democracy we hear of secret treaties, intervening alliances and big and little entente, each member of which looks very much askance at the others and is not above filching what may be safely filched. Instead of greater unity we find greater division. Instead of good will and honest altruism we find a selfish spirit of aggrandizement as strongly exercised as circumstances will permit.

But we need not go outside the borders of our own country to find disturbing forces at work. Hardly a metropolitan paper is printed without the story of a new murder, a new scandal, each one a little more lurid than the last. For a long time we have been witnessing a Congressional investigation concerning men in high place in whom the people had placed their trust. We can hardly be proud of the sordid details exposed [illegible] of administration of [illegible] of [illegible] of [illegible]

Elsie was an inveterate and tireless bargain hunter. She often spent hours at a stretch trying to buy a dime for a nickel, and the only thing in the world that was dearer to her than a red-hot fire sale was Thomas, her handsome fiancé.

One night Elsie danced wildly into her house and found Thomas waiting for her in the parlor. Spying him, she burst out:

"Gee, Tom-Toms, lookit! A half dollar handkerchief for only forty-nine cents, and such a—"

She stopped short. The seriousness of the other's expression informed her that he had something important to say.

"Elsie," he began mournfully, "I'm heartbroken. When we became engaged, I told you I had several thousand dollars. That was four months ago. FOUNDING OF BOULDER SOCIETY DATES BACK TO THE CLASS OF 1905

Realizing the Significance of the Vermont Boulder, Seniors of '05 Gathered for Purpose of Founding Society

When the Central Vermont Railroad

When the first had uncovered this source of Nature the workmen in appreciation of its worth dumped it in a ditch along with other rocks. Prof. Hitchcock of Dartmouth College examined these rare boulders and selected the most perfect of them with the intention of taking it to Hanover. But Governor Paine, then president of the Central Vermont, claimed it and had it sent to Burlington as a gift to the University. After many rambles about the campus this boulder was finally brought to rest on the front campus opposite the west entrance of the Old Mill where it now stands.

Symbolic as this boulder is of Life man can draw from it many things which are analogous to his own life—many lessons which will aid him in the shaping of his character.

On January 9, 1905, a group of the most prominent members of the senior class met together for the purpose of founding a Senior Class Honorary Society. Realizing the deep significance in the annals of the University of Vermont of the boulder which today rests in front of the Old Mill and feeling that nothing could be more representative of the foremost men of the highest class of this university they chose as a name for their organization the Boulder Society. At this first meeting, a constitution was presented and approved. L. H. Sault was elected president and H. W. Hrath secretary and treasurer. It was decided that the society should be secret. The purpose of the society was to uphold the traditions of the University, and to regulate matters relating to the student body, thereby relieving the administration of considerable trouble.

The system of choosing the officers of Boulder is unique. The only office which lasts throughout the year is that of secretary and treasurer. The other officers are distributed among the members in rotation. The length of the term of office is so fixed that all members hold the office of president at some time during the year. The members of the society choose their successors each spring, and the results are announced on Founder's Day. The requisites for membership are character and leadership, and the slide rule which is applied is the amount of outstanding work that has been done in the various activities of the university, both scholastic and athletic.

The pin of the society is a plain gold V with a representation of the boulder in the crotch. A green hat with a facsimile of the pin in gold on the front is also worn by the members.

Boulder supervises the fountain fight, the water fight, and the cane rush between the two lower classes each fall, being careful to see that everything is done as it should be and determining the winner. It also advises Key and Serpent, and Gold Key, exercising considerable control over the latter. Boulder acts as a final court of appeal in all disputes between the lower classes. A smoker is usually given each fall and spring, and an informal dance for the University each semester. Meetings are held semi-monthly.

The outgoing members of the society are S. C. Abell, H. C. Collins, J. T. Conway, H. D. Crandall, R. T. Holden, L. H. Marvin, H. A. Prentice, W. F. Reagan, J. A. Smith, C. H. Stevens, and G. S. Talcott.

GRASSMOUNT DORMITORY ROOMS ASSIGNED

Saturday noon at one o'clock at Grassmount the process of assigning dormitory rooms will begin when the present Juniors will have first choice. Selections will be made according to privileges in numbers, the usual manner of procedure each year. The Sophomores will draw for rooms Saturday, May 5 at the same hour and place while the Freshmen will meet the following Saturday at one o'clock.

According to the architect's plans, the South dormitory wing is to have twenty-six single rooms will be completed by fall. Those who desire to live there will be allowed to choose their rooms this spring. In case the building is not finished when college opens in September, temporary accommodations will be secured by the director of dormitories.

TRACK MEET BETWEEN CLASSES HELD TODAY

If weather is permitting the team will get its first work-out this afternoon on Centennial field. This year has been so poor that it has not had the time for try-outs as he wished to the ruling that letter men be allowed to compete in the which they made their last year very few runners and "Freddy" Robbins ones that will come under the ban.

Some very close and exciting races will doubtless be run this afternoon. Woodward ought to make the 220 a walk race, and the 440 with Eaton and Graves will be a good one to watch. In the Eaton and Martinetti will be stuff, and in the mile there is keen competition between Davis. O. T. Wood will be in this last race as he is the two-mile. It would be hard to pick the probable winner in the vault but doubtless it will be between Willard and Lyon. There is no outstanding man in the event unless Mackay in the shot throw is up to his usual form. The winner will be hard pressed for second and third place honors.

This meet will give a line on the team for the first intercollegiate varsity meet at Union next week between Vermont, Union and Middlebury.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Through an error the names of Doris Hart, '28, Elizabeth Wood and Edna Shaw, '29, were omitted from the list of those who will receive varsity letters in track.

A moving picture depicting the recent floods in Vermont will be shown for the first time in this city in the Unitarian Church parish house Friday night, May 3. The picture will be shown continually from 7 to 10 o'clock on and admission of 25 cents will be charged. This is being presented under the auspices of the Y. P. R. U. which is composed of college students and younger members of the faculty.

Re-discovers His Favorite Tobacco

Charleston, W. Va.,
March 4, 1927

Larus & Bro. Co.,
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

Recently I stopped in a little village that consisted of about nine houses and a small hotel, which I entered.

A little old man wearing a skull cap was seated in a rocking-chair smoking an enormous pipe. I had come to buy a can of Edgeworth, but when I caught a whiff of the tobacco he was smoking I changed my mind. The aroma of that tobacco was so delightful that I made up my mind right then and there that I wanted some of the same brand, regardless of the cost.

I began with: "I beg your pardon, sir, but I came in to buy a can of tobacco, and I would like the same brand you are smoking if you don't mind telling me." He looked at me for a moment, grasped his pipe with one hand and said: "I'm smoking Edgeworth. Would you like some?"

Of course I did, and I secured a supply from the old fellow. The joke, of course, was on me, but I went on my way rejoicing.

Yours very truly,
Dr. John R. Koch

MOVING PICTURES OF FLOOD TO BE SHOWN

Motion pictures and slides showing scenes in the devastated areas of Vermont and Northern Massachusetts will be shown for the first time on Thursday evening of this week at the Unitarian Church Vestry, beginning at 7 p.m. The picture, "Vermont's Flood" is the only complete story of the flood and although it has been shown in other states, Thursday evening will mark its first public appearance in Vermont. The film is edited by Robert Platka, U. V. M. '29, and includes scenes taken at the Burlington Winooski bridge, pontoon bridge, Cambridge, Bolton, Jonesville, Waterbury, Proctor, Rutland, North Adams Mass., and many other places. At the end of the picture is a complete summary of the flood.

There will also be a large number of slides shown which were taken at the height of the flood around Burlington, Winooski, Richmond, Waterbury, Montpelier, Cambridge and several other towns.

In order to allow those who have tickets to Arthur Dow's Concert, to see the flood pictures, the first showing will be at 7:00 p.m. and will be continuous, the last complete one beginning at 9. The picture is of three reels so college girls living in dormitories may attend the last performance and still reach their rooms without it counting as a "night out." Tickets may be procured from Dorothy Cottrell at the Kappa Alpha Theta House, Mr. Sears at the math office, or at the college Book Store.

YANNIGANS PREPARE FOR HEAVY SPRING SCHEDULE

Vermont's Junior Varsity baseball team is working hard to prepare for the coming season. The aspirants for the nine are on the field every day for a workout under the watchful eye of Coach Jim Collopy, who thinks that he can turn out a good outfit. The progress of the team has been held up somewhat by the persistent cold weather, but as soon as it warms up we can expect some batting practice.

Manager Holden has been working on the schedule and has arranged a game with the Varsity this Wednesday, as well as one with Lakeside, Thursday.

Some of the men who are trying for positions on the team are Sirois, Stroh, Young, Shurman, Kendall, Allen, Bacon, Heaton, Tobin, Lang, Riani and Burr in the infield and Stevens, Durfee and Carrigan in the outfield.

BOSTON COLLEGE NINE AMONG STRONGEST TEAMS

One of the best nines the Green and Gold team meets on the diamond this year is Boston College which will appear at Centennial Field, May 12.

The Maroon made an impressive record on its southern trip, defeating Georgetown 7 to 0 and Catholic U. 15 to 3, and losing to Temple and Villanova by the same score, 5 to 4, although outhitting the winners. Since returning to the Heights the Boston team has been hitting all opposing pitchers without mercy.

In Shea and McNulty the Eagles have two pitchers of the highest caliber. O'Day, Weston and Creedon are the sluggers of the team. O'Day won the Heights trophy last season for the highest batting average on the team and at present is one of the leading stickers in the East. Weston and Creedon are close to the top and between them have driven out five homers this season.

The Catamounts will be forced to their utmost to win from the flashy Bostonians and the fans should see one of the best games of the year.

DYKHUIZEN DISCUSSES MODERN PHILOSOPHY

"Because of philosophy our view of life no longer remains an assemblage of beliefs and ideas picked up at random and put together haphazardly, but it becomes an intellectual edifice, carefully founded on facts, intelligently put together, cherished as philosophers or lovers of wisdom can cherish it." These were the words of Professor George Dykhuizen, of the department of philosophy of the University of Vermont, when he spoke before the members of the Intercollegiate Alumnae Club at its meeting held in this city last week.

Professor Dykhuizen said that there are three steps in man's reaction to the universe: The common sense stage, the philosophical, and the scientific. He said that the philosophical stage was a transitional step between the other two. In the common sense stage, men accept things readily; in the philosophical, man begins to think of things in vague terms; in the scientific, men scrutinize and study things about them carefully. Professor Dykhuizen would not let it be understood, however, that philosophy was neither common sense nor philosophy. "Philosophy," he said, "attempts to give us, by means of systematic reflection, a rational, consistent view of the universe," and such a realistic view, he stated, science could not give.

The prevalent notion that philosophers withdraw into a holy of holies, and undertake to spin a system of thought with no basis of fact and completely divorced from life, is erroneous, he stated. Philosophers work scientifically and make an hypothesis only after carefully collecting and studying data.

Professor Dykhuizen said that the study of philosophy is valuable in that it enables us to answer the questions of life.

EXPERIMENT STATION ACQUIRES NEW BUILDING

Vermont's Agricultural Experiment Station has started the renovation of the house now standing on Williston Road facing the United States Weather Bureau. This century-and-a-quarter old building has been used for the past 20 years as a boarding house for farm hands. When finished this building will house the Department of Agronomy, at present a homeless department. This house which originally stood on the lot where Morrill Hall now stands was built in 1806 by Moses Calton, whose wife was a niece of Ethan and Ira Allen. Mr. Calton sold this property in 1809 and built a house on the hill-top now occupied by the Mary Fletcher Hospital. This house was purchased by John Johnson, great grandfather of Dr. Lyman Allen of this city. Mr. Johnson was surveyor general of Vermont and had charge of the survey of the northeastern boundary between United States and Canada beginning about 1816. It is considered appropriate that the former home of a prominent Vermont official should be used for the furthering of scientific research.

BRATTLEBORO SCENE OF VERMONT-BATES DEBATE

Bates College is tonight's opponent of the University debating team. Brattleboro has been chosen for the honor of entertaining the teams and of being entertained by them, as it is midway between the two colleges and is neutral territory. The team left by car on Monday, expecting to be absent until Wednesday. A small charge will be made for admission to the debate to cover the expenses of transportation. This is to be a no-decision debate. The Oregon style, permitting cross-questioning will be used.

The Vermont team will uphold the negative of the question "Resolved, that democracy is a failure." Eugene F. Moore, a member of Lambda Iota fraternity, of the class of 1928, will be the first speaker, or witness. Louis Lisman, '31, speaks second as the lawyer. Summing up the argument, is Franklin A. Sears, '30, of Sigma Alpha Chi.

The Bates team, upholding the affirmative, is made up of Briggs T. Whitehouse, Maxwell A. H. Wakely, and Arland A. Jenkins, debating in the order given. It is of interest to note that the captain of the strong Bates track team is one of the speakers.

Although Bates stands high in debating circles, having won the inter-collegiate championship more than once and having travelled to England to compete with Oxford and Cambridge, it is felt that Vermont will be able to make an excellent showing against it.

BRANCH OF A. I. E. E. ESTABLISHED HERE

Word has been received that the American Institute of Electrical Engineers has honored the University with their permission to establish a branch.

At the first meeting of the "University of Vermont Branch of the A. I. E. E." held last Tuesday evening, the officers of the temporary organization were authorized to continue in office, and the by-laws ratified.

Prof. L. P. Dickenson, professor of electrical engineering, and a member of the A. I. E. E., was nominated as counsellor for the branch, subject to appointment by the president of the A. I. E. E.

Following the business meeting Prof. Dickenson gave an illustrated lecture on "Electrical Progress in 1926 and 1927," showing pictures of the construction and most recent application of the electric drive and the mercury turbine.

At the next regular meeting, Tuesday evening, April 24, in the Radio Shack, Prof. Williams will speak on "Radio." Visitors are cordially invited, and if interested to submit their name for membership.

Questionnaires have been sent out by the local Y. M. C. A. to University students and others. The object is to determine what the association can do for the students and whether to build a new building or not.

Yale defeated Catholic University 27-0 in a baseball game Thursday, April 26.

CAST OF JUNIOR WEEK PLAY PRACTICING DAILY

Three Act Comedy Promises to Reveal Much Fine Talent—Plot is Outlined

Members of the cast for the comedy "Adam and Eva" to be presented Thursday, the 17th of May during Junior Week are working on the parts daily under the direction of May Andrews and are developing a play that promises to reveal much fine talent and furnish three acts of genuine humor.

The action has for its main setting the home of a wealthy business man in the country's metropolitan city and presents a typical situation in modern life. The wealthy parent with an overtaxed exchequer is dismissed to a foreign country by his independent daughters and sons-in-law through the medium of a plot which they devise.

Although Mr. King discovers the plot before his departure, his plans are carried out and he leaves his business manager, Adam Smith, a man desirous of family life, in charge of his home affairs.

Within a month Adam finds that the sum allotted him for expenditures is much overdrawn and that he too is unable to manage these affairs successfully. At this point he pretends that Mr. King's fortune is lost and each member of the household, including Mr. King's daughters, go to work at various occupations, including the establishment of a "chicken farm" in order to regain their supposed lost positions in life.

Within a short time "pater" King returns, and after finding the state of affairs at home reveals that he is still in the same position financially as he was formerly, and learns that much has been changed in his absence. The romance of Adam and Eva is completed in the final act.

Not only is the entire plot and characterization cleverly carried out, but the stage settings for the various scenes are unusual and include an exterior scene uncommon to the general type of play.

THERON DEAN DESCRIBES GREEN MOUNTAIN TRAIL

Upsilon Tau Alpha, to which all members of the two-year education department belong, was fortunate in procuring for its April lecturer Mr. Theron Dean of Burlington, who gave a talk, illustrated with lantern slides, on the Green Mountain Trail last Thursday evening. Mr. Dean, a prominent insurance broker of the city, has worked on trails and cabins for fourteen years, and has served as secretary and treasurer of the Green Mountain Club.

The main lecture room of Williams Science Hall was filled with an audience of the fraternity members, other University students, faculty and townspeople. The speaker was introduced by Miss Dorothy E. Hudson, president of Upsilon Tau Alpha.

Slides showed the marvelous beauty of the Long Trail from Bennington through to Jay Peak in summer and winter aspect. An excellent example of the art to which photography has attained was the view of Camel's Hump at sunset, and of the twenty miles of mountain ranges southward.

Mr. Dean told the history of the Long Trail. Educators from every part of America contributed money and whenever possible worked in the actual construction. The Green Mountain Club House at Mendon, the gift of Miss Emily Proctor of Proctor, Vt., is one of the most remarkable structures along the way. Generally when man builds a house he takes every boulder and tree from the site. Not so with this Club House. It is constructed around masses of rock and a picturesque part of it is the yellow birch tree which grows through its rooms and reaches the sky through the roof.

Every building on the trail must be built with galvanized material, since the porcupines destroy wood.

Views were shown of the Green Mountain Trout Club of Mansfield. Mr. Dean talked most enthusiastically about the sport of snowshoeing. Throughout the evening, he interspersed many anecdotes of travellers along the trail, and he gave to his audience a heightened appreciation of the strength and wonder of the hills.

IMAGINATION

According to Professor Alfred N. Whitehead, of Harvard, nearly every youth is imaginative and the purpose of college is to restrain and discipline his imagination. "Fools," says Doctor Whitehead, "act on imagination without knowledge, while their opposite, pedants, act on knowledge without imagination." A combination of the two would make the ideal student, he says.

It is a common trait of unthinking people to "jump at conclusions." With an uncontrolled imagination they build up stories on one or two facts that may prove injurious to the subject of their tales. Irvin Cobb tells of a man that left for his first long vacation. Upon his return he is confronted with questions about his health, family and business affairs. "Inconsiderate people reported he had been confined in a home for incurables."

On the other side, it must be a drab existence for the unimaginative. Scientists are often thought of as men with the least imagination, but a good scientist must be able to look ahead and conjecture in order to discover a new process or element. The least imaginative prove to be the least successful.

Christ could look ahead to a great Christian church. Columbus to a new world. Ford to a huge demand for automobiles. The line between great men and fools seems to be in the way they use their imaginations.

University training tends to overrestrict imaginations. Students learn to be more than eager to take another's word as the final verdict. Knowledge made to order seems to be the modern cry, and any knowledge likely past examinations per cent is the student is lucky. With a questioning mind and a more thorough investigation the student by discovering his own conclusions has impressed it deeply on his mind and will find it hard to forget.

Four years ago Lawrence's Day exercises took place in the rain. Is it the younger generation — less studious than their predecessors?

A VERMONT GRADUATE IN ANOTHER LAND SAYS,

Ruth Hubbell Smalley says:

In concluding my letter I wish to sum up our situation more clearly stating the [illegible] as we see them, and our hope of improving them. My husband and I feel that there is still much to learn and understand before we can deal with all of the problems confronting us. Nevertheless, we try to meet the problems with as much understanding as our experience can muster. Whenever seemingly insurmountable difficulties present themselves, somehow we manage to keep going, and in the end we come out better qualified for a harder task.

"This year at the mission we have kept about sixty men and twenty-five boys employed. My husband keeps an eagle-eye on them most of the time. Otherwise they would be reverting to the shiftless ways pursued by the natives living in the village. The men worked over about twenty acres of crops this year, and opened up and planted another ten. We have seven personal workers—those that are most reliable; four care for the vegetable garden; two men and four boys herd our cattle, pigs and goats; four saw a seven-foot plank apiece each day; four work the team of oxen; and three teach school. Their average wage is about five cents a day for the men and one and a half cents for the boys. The boys work only three or four hours and are required to attend school for two and a half hours. This length of school period seems to be at the present time long enough. African youth are different than American youth. They have never been exposed to learning before by our methods, and in order to have ours really make an impression on their ways of living we have to carry on very slowly. The average wage will seem very trivial to Americans, but to the natives it is still a large wage. They wouldn't expect more.

"The reader will please note that man-power in Kanene is far below that in most other parts of the world. It cannot really be compared at all with that developed by Americans. The centerpiece in our industry has become 'efficiency,' and the ordinary man's existence lies in practical knowledge. Will this new influence aid in producing at least a minimum of mass happiness?

Besides having this number of men under the supervision of the mission there are others who work on the roads in and around the village.

"In drawing my letter to a close I might re-state again the causes of hunger and need in this land of plenty, namely, the most important are: ignorance, custom, laziness, and lack of sufficient forethought. No one cause seems to stand out; they all blend together into a great whole that forms the character of the natives. Our great task is to change the man by doing away with his ignorance and breaking down his customs. To accomplish this means to train the body as well as the spirit. It behooves us to try to make our efforts count for something on the right side while we have the chance.

"Materially there are great changes taking place in the country, and they will continue whether we want them or not. And I as a missionary to this people—want my efforts to count in making Kanene a better place in live in for both blacks and whites. Then greater strides may be made in training the pupils who will be leaders in many fields tomorrow."

Sincerely yours,
RUTH HUBBELL SMALLEY, '21.

[Editor's Note: In the next two issues of the CYNIC we shall have a letter from Miss Gladys Ford, '27, and one from Raymundo da Sylva, a Brazilian student, now in this country preparing to enter one of our Universities. Miss Ford only recently graduated from Vermont. She has studied a year in the Sorbonne, Paris. Her letter will be written from an American's point of view. Mr. da Sylva lives in Rio de Janeiro. He came to this country a year ago. After this week the editor of this column will publish only one letter a week from a Vermont Alumnus abroad. It has been necessary to make this change in order to continue the column the next college year. However, there will be two letters run every week. Later announcements will be made concerning the second.]

POST MORTEM OF FOUNDER'S DAY

I have been trying to discover the origin of this holiday or rather half-holiday. I think it is only fair that we know the cause of our holidays and, in fact, even our half-holidays.

The dictionary quotes "founder—one who has found something." Perhaps we are given the vacation, I mean the half-vacation, that we may find something. (I've not given up yet that silver collar button.)

Webster also whimsically remarks, "founder—to go lame." Some one told me it is in honor of Ira Allen and I should think it an insult to his memory to suggest that he was a "lame duck."

Founder also means to fill with water and sink. Anyhow, this last definition explains its date.

SPRING AIR

I love the little breezes
That sigh among the treeses
And blow about the campus,
Exposing little kneeses.

It makes the tripping co-ed
Somewhat a little vexed,
To have the wind take liberties
So fickle and so varied.

The fault is not with zephers,
A breeze could really nefer
Be constant: for the wind blows
Most any way whatefer.

Grey Friars, men's honorary literary society, will meet this Friday evening.

Princeton athletes will take part in 125 contests this spring,—crew races, track events, and baseball.

A new athletic organization, the Women's "M" Club, has been formed at Middlebury College by five co-eds who have won both their letters and sweaters.

On the campus at Connecticut Agricultural College, fraternity pins are so popular with the co-eds that at initiation they have to be recalled to decorate the new "brothers"—a novel way of calling off hasty attachments.

OUR FACULTY

EDMUND CURTISS MOWER

Edmund Curtiss Mower was born in 1869 at Morristown, Vermont. He attended the University of Vermont and received his A.B. in 1893. He next went to the University Law School, New York City and received his Ph.B. from there in 1896. He returned to Vermont and received his A.M. in 1904.

He has practiced law since 1896. He served as state's attorney for Chittenden County from 1900 to 1902. He was a municipal judge of the City of Burlington from 1905 to 1911. He served as a trustee of the University of Vermont from 1907 to 1911. He served as state senator from Chittenden County from 1912 to 1913. He is a trustee of the Fletcher Free Memorial Library.

He specialized in his college work in International and Constitutional Law and he has been a lecturer on International Law at Vermont since 1904.

Professor Mower is now a professor of political science at the University, having had that position for a number of years. He is absent from his duties this year, it being his sabbatical year.

BOOK REVIEW

A PRACTICAL VIEW OF HENRY ADAMS

By GORHAM B. MUNSON

(From the New [illegible])

A USEFUL [illegible]

It is unusual to [illegible] literature to practical [illegible] reason I suppose, is that [illegible] of books have nothing [illegible] one would seriously [illegible] practice. Many [illegible] thought and stir the [illegible] one or another reason [illegible] I think, because they [illegible] really a new experience [illegible] experiencings—they do [illegible] to a state of doing. [illegible] was a very rare type [illegible] studied books for personal [illegible] guidance in self-education [illegible] gave a verdict that so [illegible] can books go. is in accord [illegible] my opening remarks.

"American literature [illegible] wrote in the preface to The Education of Henry Adams, "offers no working model for higher [illegible] When I read that sentence [illegible] though someone had taken [illegible] and led me from the [illegible] crowded smoke-filled room [illegible] dow, had then drawn the curtain, and said: "Look out at that vista. Is it not inspiring?" For the striking words in that sentence [illegible] model" and "high education" [illegible] phrase suggests a novel [illegible] literature and the second [illegible] for living. Furthermore we [illegible] now say that the failure [illegible] letters has been redeemed [illegible] one book.

As he advanced in [illegible] Adams fell to pondering [illegible] of a fairly long and rather [illegible] nary life. These ponderings [illegible] eventually systematized [illegible] took more and more the [illegible] chronological review of [illegible] fact, he wrote out his [illegible] An autobiography is more than [illegible] memories of one's life: it [illegible] of that life for the sake [illegible] ing what significance there [illegible] all.

THE NECESSITY FOR AUTOBIO[illegible]

Here one sees at once [illegible] do, for each one of us has [illegible] biography to compose in [illegible] least if we have not the [illegible] writing it. It is safe to say that actually we are unconsciously [illegible] each present moment with all [illegible] past history, we are known [illegible] the present with only [illegible] former experience. Hence [illegible] of autobiographical habits.

For us there is an [illegible] counting to make in [illegible] with Henry Adams' accounts [illegible] ancestors, of the effects [illegible] Quincy upon his childhood [illegible] lescent heroes such as [illegible] ner, and of his days at [illegible] is even possible that we [illegible] with him in his contempt [illegible] schoolmaster, "a man [illegible] tell lies to little boys," and [illegible] too that "the four years [illegible] lege were, for his purpose [illegible] —though some care should [illegible] to insure an equal validity [illegible] reasons.

Again, in the interest [illegible] pictorial as possible. The [illegible] ty, make the first review [illegible] course, in Adams, but [illegible] it easier to detach from [illegible] one's past behavior than [illegible] main aloof from one's [illegible] and thoughts. And I [illegible] mer which I spent in [illegible] seeing as pictorially as [illegible] my body had done during [illegible] one of the most instructive [illegible] periods of my life. Resolutely [illegible] frained from interpretation [illegible] sought only a clear vision [illegible] behavior—with the result [illegible] sions about myself were [illegible] me at the end solely on [illegible] and verifiable evidence [illegible] my life I had been doing.

"The young man had [illegible] what he was doing. The [illegible] posing for a Gibbon never [illegible] mind. He was a tourist, [illegible] depths of his sub-conscious [illegible] it was well for him that he [illegible] nothing else, for even the [illegible] men cannot sit with dignity [illegible] close of evening, among [illegible] the Capitol,' unless they [illegible] thing quite original to say. [illegible] Tacitus could do it; so could [illegible] Angelo; and so, at a [illegible] Gibbon, though in figure [illegible] roic; but, in sum, none of them could say very much more than [illegible] who went on repeating to [illegible] eternal question:—Why? [illegible] Why!!!—as his neighbor [illegible] beggar, might do, sitting [illegible] the church steps. No one [illegible] answered the question to [illegible] faction of any one else: yet [illegible] who had either head or [illegible] that sooner or later he must [illegible] his mind what answer [illegible] Substitute the word America [illegible]

VASSAR UNDERGRADUATE REBUKES BLACK LISTERS

(By New Student Service)

Hardly a college organization that dares or cares to interest itself in matters other than the purely collegiate has managed to escape the blacklist of the Daughters of American Revolution, recently brought into prominence by the rebellion of a few of the Daughters who object to the list of the damned.

The students concerned have not failed to fight back. To The New Student has come a letter from a Vassar student, Mary Suzannah Beck, '28, whose ancestry should stir the hearts of the D. A. R. Her letter probably will not, for while it has been sent to the Daughters, they have made no public announcement of it. The letter follows:

"As a lineal descendant of Robert Treat Payne who signed the Declaration of Independence and of Benjamin Holcomb, who was an officer in Washington's army and to whom a monument has been erected at Simsbury, Connecticut, I wish to protest against your unjust condemnation of the Youth Movement in the American colleges, and more especially of the Political Association of Vassar College, the president of which, Elizabeth Rogers, is lineally descended from Roger Sherman, a signer of the Declaration.

"The Political Association of Vassar College is a non-partisan organization which prides itself on hearing impartially both sides of any public question, and it seems to us that your sweeping condemnation might suggest that this association is more true than your own to that liberal tradition of which you claim to be so proud.

"As one fully entitled through both lines of descent to belong to the D. A. R., I am proud of my ancestors to fail so far in those principles for which they stood, ever to seek membership in your organization. Indeed I hope and believe that the youth movement in the American colleges of which you have shown yourselves so intolerant and which is today 'summoning all honest men, all patriotic, all forward looking men' (and women) to its side, will prove a more effectual influence in American life than you, who have so abandoned the liberal ideals for which our forbears lived and died. For we, the youth of America, love her too well to see her true standards of government 'corrupted,' and it has been said that without vision the people perish."

The attitude of the D. A. R. to college clubs interested in social and political problems was summarized recently by Edward H. Hunter, speaking in Waltham, Mass., under the auspices of the Daughters. His reference was to the Youth Movement, but that should not be taken too literally. The D. A. R. has so many names on its list that grouping is necessary. Said Mr. Hunter:

"The whole youth movement is one of the most insidiously dangerous in the country. I solemnly warn fathers and mothers who let their sons and daughters become members of the Fellowship of Youth for Peace or kindred movements that they are exposing them to a life of immorality and socialism. It is more disturbing to reflect that the Youth Movement has secured such a strong foothold in our schools and colleges. These people have planted in more than ... of our educational equipment to ... the leaders of tomorrow. These ... are firmly entrenched at ... the University of Colo... Northwestern Univer... College, George Washington ... Bryn Mawr, Wellesley, ... and Smith."

It was in answer to these charges that Miss Beck wrote her letter of protest.

The colleges may merely watch and say nothing, but like the Vassar Miscellany News they may be wondering if "all these ideas about intellectual curiosity and independent thinking are just the result of propaganda planted by the radical interests among the future leaders of civilization."

WOMEN'S COATS TO BE STRAIGHT AND NARROW

Coats this spring and summer are to be straight and narrow. Whether made of woolen fabrics or of silk, advises Mrs. Catherine Grinbel, extension clothing specialist at the college of agriculture, Rutgers University, New Jersey, who is to give a series of demonstrations in Vermont beginning the week of April 30 under the auspices of the Agricultural Extension Service.

"It is interesting to note," continues Mrs. Grinbel, "that furs are not used on spring coats to any extent. The very smartest ones are quite devoid of it. Now and then one sees fur cuffs but almost never a fur collar. The newest models have collar of scarfs in the same fabric as the coat and the majority of these are very small.

"For fabrics one has a wide choice. Light weight wools often accompany a silk frock, the coat lined with the silk of the dress. This may be plain or figured. If silk is preferred, a plain colored silk may be chosen for the coat and you may line it with silk to match the gown, be it plain or figured.

"Such coats may be used equally well with two frocks. If the coat is of black silk, it may be lined with a figured silk having a black ground and worn either with a plain black gown or one of the figured silk. So with beige, or grey or navy blue.

"I saw one black coat lined with figured silk that had a white ground with its pattern in black and deep yellow. With such a coat one might wear, besides a dress of print to match the lining, an all white, an all black or an all yellow gown. For the woman who must be thrifty such suggestions are worth consideration."

Women's Travel Tour Arranged by Open Road

(By The Open Road)

International relations and government problems will be lifted out of the cloistered realm of text books next summer for participants in a tour of Europe for women students of history, government and international relations arranged by the Open Road travel organization for the National Student Federation of America. The student party will travel under the leadership of Mary Noel Arrowsmith.

Rather than an ordinary tour, the program calls for an expedition that for the pleasures of European travel will add opportunity for intimate contact with the functioning of foreign states. International problems will take on immediate perspective, and lessons heard in the class room will gain new meaning.

Ten weeks will be spent abroad in countries where international problems are realities. The party will journey through the occupied territory of the Rhine Valley and will visit Strasbourg, Prague, capital of the new Czecho-Slovakian state, Vienna and Budapest, central cities of two countries completely changed by the war; Italy, where Fascism will be watched at work; Geneva, where the League of Nations may be studied at first hand and where the problems of European international relationships will be examined in their general setting.

In each center there will be informal conferences where the problems of each country will be considered and discussed with the aid of qualified leaders. At [illegible] there will be Euro... student hosts at hand to aid the visitors in their exploration and to extend to them the hospitality that signalizes international cooperation has created.

Besides Europe as a community of states, Europe as the seat of varied cultures, historic interest and scenic beauty will be visited. The itinerary provides for stops along the Rhine at old Nuremberg, at Florence and at Chartres with the journey from Cologne to Bruges and from Vienna to Budapest will be by boat on two famous rivers. The party will sail from New York on June 30. The line of travel is from Bremen to Cologne, thence up the Rhine to Strasbourg to Nuremberg, Prague and Vienna down the Danube to Budapest to Innsbruck, Padua, Florence, Rome, Geneva and then to Paris. The return will be made from Cherbourg and New York will be reached on September 9. There will be no rush to get an airplane view, the ten weeks will be spent so that the varied aspects of each country visited may be thoroughly examined.

The expedition is open to women undergraduates and recent graduates. The group will be limited to ten members interested in current history and international problems.

GOLD KEY YOUNGEST OF CLASS SOCIETIES

Russia and the question becomes

What does it mean? The question is one that applies to everyone who is interested in asking the question that many young men and women, former ones, the question that lies just below the level of consciousness in all youth. It has not secure full expression. Adams in this respect pre-dated it a month and did not need the pangs of anguish to keep the question alive for him. And his book has the real value of an explorer's document. He did not find the goal but he has rendered aid to all who should be, encouraged to profit by his mistakes in the pursuit of the quest.

COMMON SENSE

The young Adams is with us and most of us have very interesting to his newly discovered role. He has been on the trail we are living in a transitional period. The older order for which we have been bred has changed: the eighteenth century is gone and the twentieth has flung us amongst dynamos and Marxian experiments. Apropos, he tells us, he has been disappointed with politics, and as for formal education—that does not seem to meet our needs. Self-education is the thing but American society is unequal to wisdom. Modern science is interesting but here too there appear to be no fixed points. The problem as he sees it is how to learn of life to become a man of the world equipped for any emergency."

Most arresting of all are his comments on religion. The religious instinct had vanished and could not be restored. That the most powerful emotion of man, next to the sexual, should disappear might be a personal defect of his own but that the most intelligent society led by the most intelligent clergy in the most moral conditions he ever knew should have solved all the problems of the universe so thoroughly as to have quite ceased making itself anxious about past or future, and should have persuaded itself that all the problems which had convulsed human thought from earliest recorded time, were not worth discussing, seemed to him the most curious social phenomenon he had to account for."

The record of Henry Adams' search for the purpose of existence and the tests of "the good life" has been published and we may derive what profit we can from it as to method, errors, successes and inspiration. That of Jean Toomer (and let him stand for any young man or woman now intent on the same pursuit) has not yet been written. We are still in darkness, but still it is true for us as for Adams that the first value of living is the struggle to find the light.

Through a "capacity test" candidates for Columbia Law School will be rated in advance. The adoption of this new policy follows seven years of experimentation, the results of which upset the theory that a student's college record is trustworthy as a basis for the selective process.

The Dopefiend

NAHI GLUCAS

Due to the offerings of Old "Jupe" Pluvius in the form of rain and snow over the week-end, the sporting world took an undesired recess. Vermont was unable to open her season at home with St. Michael's because it snowed heavily all Founder's Day morning and then turned to a drenching drizzle. Much to the sorrow of the Mules was the bad weather as they expected to come over here and hand the Cats a surprise. Also that is the only game scheduled between the Purple and the Green and Gold ball-tossers for this season; unless some other date can be set there will be no contest between the two neighboring teams.

Jack Latty's cinder-pathers also had to remain shut in for the day and the interclass track meet cancelled. This makes it rather tough for Jack, as he wanted to look his men over in competition and decide who will make the trip next Saturday to Schenectady for the triangular meet with Rochester and Union Colleges.

Several of our past season's basketball team were honored at the close of the Holy Cross hoop season. These extractions were taken from The Tomahawk, the Purple's paper:

"And now we present Johnny Morris, the Little But-Oh My forward, who will captain next year's quintet. 'I find that Dougherty of Fordham, Estabrook of Vermont and Barbee of Harvard not only curtailed my scoring, but kept me busy preventing them from dropping 'em in.'

"Zeke Connors says, 'Williams of the Aggies caused me so much trouble with his scoring antics that I picked him without hesitation as my first selection. Woods of Fordham was head and shoulders above any of the stationary guards, while Price of Vermont was essentially a scorer, working on the theory that the best defense is a good offense.'

"Amby Brady, Purple guard, utters these words. 'In spite of Bo Adams' big night in Worcester, I found Prentice of Vermont was a harder man to guard.'

Another honor was added when Chuckie Stevens, manager of the Crusaders, nominated C. F. Castle of Vermont for the courtesy and consideration he showed to myself and the boys," as all-opponent manager.

Telephone men are continually scouting along the frontier for better methods

Who will scout this electrical frontier?

WHETHER in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, in the Western Electric workshop, in the various operating companies or in the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, telephone executives are scouts on the frontier of new and better methods.

It is significant that your true telephone man never speaks of having "perfected the art of communication." And this in spite of the fact that America, in fifty years, has telephones everywhere and talks beyond its borders.

Work in the Bell System demands the bold curiosity of pioneers and the infinite pains of pioneers who, like Columbus, Lincoln and Lindbergh, prepared "and when their chance came they were ready."

Educational Diagnosis

(By New Student Service)

"Education suffers in America from confusion of purposes," H. W. Holmes, dean of the Harvard graduate school of education, told a Crimson reporter, in another diagnosis of the country's educational ills. "Justified a hundred fold in our faith in schooling as an instrument of democracy," he said, "we have cared more for the spread of education than for its fitness for specific ends..."The root of the difficulty lies in the relationship between the secondary schools and the colleges. Our students come to college 'prepared,' but with hardly the beginnings of an education. Contrasted with the students in English and Continental secondary schools, they must be rated, age for age, markedly inferior. There is no thoroughness or consistency in our school system. Our schools suffer from that disease that keeps them permanently enfeebled—'creditits,' the itch for credits, points, units, and semester hours. We are in the midst of a generation of students and teachers obsessed with the notion that organization in education means more than anything else. Educationally we are a nation of credit hunters and degree worshippers. Studies are considered mere payments demanded for the fun of being in school and the later privileges of college life. The student knows he can drop the 'stuff' he is studying as soon as he has 'cashed in' at the entrance gates what he is learning in school. With such a system there is no searching inquiry into educational values, and the true worth of study is obscured.

"The commanding problem of liberal education in America is the problem of unifying secondary education and collegiate education without denying the essential characters and modern development of either. To find a remedy for the existing situation is a difficult problem. The system of concentration and distribution, now used here at Harvard, with general examinations at the final stages of progress in the subjects of concentration might be tried in the preparatory schools, and prove the solution to the problem. There must be, however, cooperation with the colleges, and one college must take the lead in starting a new system."

"Is that clock right?" asked a visitor at the lunatic asylum.

"No, of course not," replied a patient, "or it wouldn't be here."—Burr.

COOLIDGE DISAPPOINTS STUDENTS IN INTERVIEW

(By New Student Service)

President Coolidge does not choose to discuss the Nicaraguan situation with college students. That is what a committee of four students, representing a larger committee of thirty from the most prominent colleges of the country, discovered when they went to the White House on April 15 armed with a letter of introduction. The committee got no further than the President's confidential secretary who read them a lecture on what students shouldn't think about. Not even the fact that one of the students was a member of President Coolidge's fraternity at Amherst carried weight with the Coolidge secretary.

Undergraduates have no right to think, to meddle in foreign affairs stormed the secretary. Furthermore to intimate that something might be wrong with the President's foreign policy was no less than an insult. When one of the students produced a letter of protest against Mr. Coolidge's Nicaraguan policy, signed by a group of Mt. Holyoke students there was another outburst. For students at a girl's college to tell the president of the United States how to conduct the foreign policy seemed folly, indeed. They ought to know better than that.

With the senators the students had better luck. Eighteen of them were interviewed by the delegation. Most of them were fatalists when it came to talking about Nicaragua. "We've our hand in Nicaragua, we can't turn back," they said. The student delegation was of another mind, it is needless to say. For on the letter head of their organization, named the Emergency Committee on United States Policy in Nicaragua, are the following objectives: (1) Stop the war in Nicaragua. (2) Immediate withdrawal of marines. (3) Invite the cooperation of Latin-American countries in supervision of Nicaraguan elections by civilians.

The thirty students were from twenty-one universities and colleges including Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Amherst, Union Theological Seminary, Vanderbilt and Boston University.

My Dear—

Have you heard the VERY latest? Imagine sitting leisurely in a chair of NORMA TALMADGE'S luscious lawn set, drinking tea from those adorable square cups of MARY ASTOR'S, extravagantly dressed in that batik ensemble dress and cape of GRETA GARBO'S, with Ruth Taylor's "GENTLMEN PREFER" doll perched jauntily on my knee, and listening to that darling baritone crooning Berlin's latest over CLARA BOW'S radio set.

No darling, I haven't burst into the movies, swum the Channel, or even flown across the Atlantic—I've discovered the most adorable innovation. Some people in Hollywood—the Hollywood Shopping Service is the name—will shop for you in the specialty shops on Hollywood Boulevard and they purchase the VERY DUPLICATES of those scrumptious things you buy. The VERY DUPLICATES of those scrumptious things you buy. Why, last night I saw CONRAD NAGEL in his dressing room. Why, last night I saw CONRAD NAGEL in his dressing room, and he wore the snakiest golf sweater with hose to match, that I've ever come across. I immediately wrote for one. It's Jimmy's birthday. Jimmy just loves to be dapper. And—I ordered a pair of those red heeled slippers of CLARA BOW'S and I just couldn't resist and besides the prices are so REASONABLE.

Well, my sweet, next time you see me you won't be able to tell me from CORRINE GRIFFITH—and when I sport those engraved parchment calling cards like LYA DE PUTTI before your very eyes—well, my dear—

SUZANNE.

AN ADDITION TO CAMEL SMOKE-LORE

WE SUBMIT the sad case of the freshman in zoology, who, when asked to describe a camel, said, "A camel is what you wish you were smoking while you try to think of the right answers." He flunked zoology—but he knew his cigarettes. For in time of trial or time of joy, there's no friend like Camels.

The subtle influences of choice tobaccos upon the smoke-spots of mankind have been carefully studied, identified, and blended smoothly into Camels —the finest of cigarettes. And we'll bet an alkaflitch on this: Camels have just the taste and aroma to pack your smoke-spot with the "fill-fullment" every experienced smoker seeks. Got an alkaflitch you want to lose?

New North Africa Emerges Under Influence of European Nations

[illegible] ago, North Africa was a part of Europe to all intents and purposes. The Sahara and the Mediterranean were the dividing line between [illegible] Roman and Byzantium civilization followed the Phoenicians and the Greek. Even to-day the [illegible] of those periods are to be found [illegible] created, rising staunchly even among the monuments of later times. But then came the Mohammedan wave that swept North Africa away from Europe. From the eighth to the nineteenth centuries the separation continued while Islam had practically full sway.

[illegible] when we land at its nearest [illegible] of Casablanca of people [illegible] of mosques and tall [illegible] secluded gardens and palaces like those of the Arabian Nights and all [illegible] on the shores of the Atlantic, the east within a day's motor trip from the coast. Here is the Moorish architecture [illegible] Spain. Here are the same costumes and in a large degree the same customs as would have been found centuries ago. It is a land of [illegible] and kind of [illegible] that [illegible] of those [illegible] would be [illegible].

[illegible] restful than the [illegible] on the [illegible] perhaps [illegible] of [illegible] tea on the [illegible] of a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] where the [illegible] water of the fountains makes a [illegible] and where across a [illegible] of [illegible] pomeliums and [illegible] the [illegible] of the snowy tops of the high ranges.

Here [illegible] the splendid tombs of the professors at the University of Fez, one of the unique features in the world.

This is the Oriental side of North Africa, a world of unending interest and charm, of beauty and of variety. Some of the most revered places in Islam are here, the sacred tomb of Moulai Idris at Fez which can scarce bear the infidel" glance. Then there is the sacred city of Kairuan itself, the city of the hundred mosques, the ninety marabouts, the myriads of camels fresh from the edge of the great desert, the scorpion-eating dervishes, the [illegible] settlements through which the most wonderful moonlight throws its most entrancing shadows.

Along with this I see the West, that is each of the West as France has been able thus far to introduce. Europeans have had obtained a foothold in the coast cities where they lived in among the Moors. In the interior, however, the European settlement rises outside and at a short distance from the native city. Native life is protected as little as possible. The French have opened schools, but attendance is not compulsory. (The Arab school teaches little besides the Koran.) They have opened hospitals and built roads. They have repaired and preserved buildings of artistic merit which would have fallen into ruin, for the Moslem does not repair. They have made the country safe for the tourist and have opened up a network of automobile routes in Morocco as well as in Algeria and Tunisia which the French occupied much earlier. Besides serving a useful purpose, most of the routes have also scenic beauty. This is especially true of that along the African Riviera which rises and dips along the Mediterranean, now only a narrow ledge cut on the rock wall, now bending inland with marvelous views of broad country and mountains.

Casablanca on the Atlantic coast has become within ten years a port of considerable importance. It is a stopping place for at least one steamship line from New York. And if reports are true, it is on the way to becoming a resort also where the latest creations of Paris modistes may be noted.

Debaters Beat Colby

Saturday evening the policy of armed protection of foreign investments, as advocated by the Vermont debaters against the arguments of the representatives of Colby, was upheld by a 2-1 decision of the judges. Miss Mary E. Pease, the Rev Chauncey C. Adams, and Charles H Darling. The visiting debaters were Wendall Grant, David Kronquist and Albert Palmer, and the Vermont speakers were Lawrence A Hince, John M Leavens and Herrick M Macomber. Leon W. Dean acted as chairman.

FLAMING YOUTH UNREAL COLLEGE LIFE PICTURE

(By New Student Service)

College Humor is no longer to be leader and dictator of American collegiate wit, so far as the Western Association of College Comics is concerned. The editors and managers of these publications, in convention at the University of Washington, voted to break their contracts which gave College Humor sole reprint rights.

"Our reason for breaking the contract," said Albert Salisbury, president of the Association, "is that we feel that College Humor is painting a picture of flaming youth which is not real, and which gives to the average reader a false idea of college life.

"The magazine takes all the gin and sex jokes and plays them as representative college humor, with no mention of any other type. College magazines bury the gin and sex jokes, with a greater proportion of clean humor just as representatives of college life."

The action was unanimous. The Association will make its feeling known to other Associations of college comics in the hope that its action may be the first part of a revolt against distorted pictures of collegiate America.

Oberlin College, which claims to have picked up eight Republican candidates for President since Lincoln's time at Mock National Conventions in advance of the party gatherings, will hold its 1928 Mock on May 14 and 15.

These mock conventions are on the same plan as a real party convention. It has been the custom to have outstanding men of the nation act as chairmen and vice-chairmen of the conventions. In 1904 Warren G. Harding was permanent chairman, and William Howard Taft presided in 1908.

Of nominees picked by the Oberlin convention since its inauguration, seven have won the presidency—namely Lincoln Grant twice, McKinley twice, Roosevelt and Taft.

The outcome of the 1928 convention is eagerly looked forward to.

Aviation will form the motif for this year's Cadet Ball at the University of Washington, which will be held on May 11.

Student Workers

(By New Student Service)

University of Minnesota's best students do not work their entire way through school, or the worker does not by virtue of his dual task, establish himself as the better student. The faculty of this institution was responsible for overturning the current notion about student workers.

So numerous are the working students that faculty members refuse to accept the employment alibi in place of study. This may be due in part to the use of such an excuse as a dodge. Employment bureaus report, says the Minnesota Daily, that fifteen percent of the students who take jobs do so that they may be able to use the familiar "I'm working my way through school."

While the faculty members were willing to pay adequate tribute to the student whose scholastic urkings prompt him to assume a double burden, they are willing to make no concessions. And the fakirs, who are said to be numerous, have helped create this attitude.

Among the many means of earning their tuition two students at the University of Wisconsin are working their way through colleges as professional escorts. That's the fact; some men may be so desirable as escorts that the ladies must pay to enjoy their presence.

Gentlemen:
I've done a lot of pipe smoking. There's hardly a brand or a blend that I haven't tried out at some time or other.
But speaking of smoking tobacco that brings real enjoyment, and never changes, I want to say that there is just one tobacco that gives me real enjoyment in my pipe Edgeworth.
I have used Edgeworth Ready Rubbed and Plug Slice for over five years, in all climates and under all conditions, and I find it always the same. It is always mellow and moist, and its genuine flavor lasts. There is no bite or parch in Edgeworth, and the quality, whether you buy it in small or large quantities, is always perfect.
Thanks to the manufacturers for their wonderful product, and I hope that Edgeworth can always be obtainable by the undersigned.

When Dad was a "Modern Youth"

BICYCLES, stereopticon lectures, and the "gilded" youths with their horses and carts; at night the midnight oil burning in student lamps while the gas lights glared and flickered across the campus—the gay nineties when Dad was in college seem primitive to us to-day.

Now it's sport roadsters, the movies, and radios. At night the MAZDA lamp replaces the midnight oil in dormitory rooms, while modern street lighting sheds its friendly glow over the campus.

Without electricity we would have none of these improvements. To-day's marvel of electrical invention becomes to-morrow's accepted utility. In the coming years, by taking advantage of new uses of electricity you will be able to go so much farther that the "tearing twenties" will seem just as primitive as the "gay nineties".

Scientists in the research laboratories of the General Electric Company keep G.E. a leader in the field of electrical progress. Skilled G-E engineers develop each latest invention. The G-E factories carry out the engineers' designs with high-quality material and expert workmanship.

VERMONT LOSES TO PEMBROKE 2-1

U. V. M. women debaters encountered Pembroke College of Brown University at Providence, Conn., Saturday evening, April 28, on the question Resolved, that the present foreign administration policy is wise.

The sides, evenly matched, gave the judges no little trouble in rendering a decision, which was announced as 2-1 in Brown's favor.

Frances Hawley, '29, and Janice M. Goodrich, '30, were representatives from Vermont, to Providence, while Misses Hazen and Sommers upheld the negative of the question for Brown.

The debate was held at Alumni Hall, on the Brown campus, and was a very informal affair. The dean of women acted as chairman and the judges were chosen from the college faculty.

NEWMAN CLUB PRESENTS "LAUGHING MINSTRELS"

Newman Club Presents Annual Show "The Laughing Minstrels in Creditable Style Last Monday and Tuesday Evenings

"The Laughing Minstrels" was successfully presented by the members of the Newman Club last Monday and Tuesday evenings before large audiences which filled the auditorium of the Cathedral High School of this city, where the "Minstrels" were played.

The cast of characters, which numbered about forty, played all of their individual parts exceptionally well. The big hits of the show were E. R. Mitiguy as Erastus when he "plays his old kazoo." Lorraine Guillet, who captured the audience with her striking personality when she sang "Come Over To Nite I Want You." Claire O'Neill who danced a Persian Dance with a little of the acrobatic, and Doc Bassow who, in a real collegiate manner, danced to the tune of "Is She My Girl Friend?" Miss Irene Marcott showed that a popular tune can be rendered in a most delightful way, and she was called back for an encore after having sung "Among My Souvenirs." Sam Howard and John Pavia, in "No Sense, No How," did a bit of clever dancing. The negro end men were always coming out with something witty, and the chorus showed that it had life. The music which was furnished by the Vermonters Orchestra was good. The director, Edward J. Beaupre, deserves much credit for putting out such an excellent production.

In the first part the setting was a lawn party. All that was missing was the grass, for the trees and the Japanese lanterns were there. And seated at the little tables were all these different people, smart demoiselles and sheiky sheiks among whom we saw Tim Halligan, and they were eating real ice cream which was served to them by the nigger waiters and sweet white misses. The end-men in their red and black suits, with green bows, and brilliant expressions upon their very natural black faces, said one thing or another and forever kept the audience in an uproar. They resembled those two black crows upon the stage.

Asked the middleman, "Why was so-and-so called Electricity?"

Said a witty end-man, "Well, the guy's mother was named Dyna and his father Mo, and what else other than Electricity would a Dyna-Mo make, anyway."

When John R. Pavia sang "The Big Bass Viol," the niggers began to wonder whether there was any bottom to his voice.

The Wonderful Telephone act was a rather clever affair. "Jack" Berry, C. Gooch, and M. K. D'Andrea, took part in this. C. Gooch, and D'Andrea made every effort to convince poor "Jack" that his particular wireless telephone was the best. They tried pretty hard, and it appeared as if "Jack" was not exactly satisfied with what proved to be the best phone since it was through the success of this phone to reach London that "Jack" finally learned that his brother had turned black in the face from readin' so much about the Burke-Beecher affair. "Mindin' My Business," sung by W. J. McNamara, was an appealing little song. "W. J." didn't exactly prove he was mindin' his business. The Bowery Clog proved to be a combination of the gay 90's dance and the Charleston.

TRIANGULAR MEET OPENS VARSITY TRACK SEASON

Union, Rochester and Vermont to Take Part in Meet at Schenectady

Vermont makes her initial debut in this season's track with a triangular meet at Schenectady, N. Y. with Union and Rochester Universities. The Cats have a meet every year with Union but never with Rochester who boasts of a strong cinder path aggregation, and Union always puts out a dangerous outfit.

Coach Latty has had his cohorts outside doing their stuff on Centennial Field every night and the prospects for a flashy team look very bright and much better than last season's group. Due to the interfraternity indoor meet and the elimination of several from the warming class, several of the events will be much stronger than they were before.

With a track meet every week-end this month, the Latty men will have to be in fine condition to stand the strain. All of these meets are with strong competition and the final contest is the inter-state meet which the Green and Gold is out to capture this year, but will have to step the limit to defeat the Boys in Blue from Middlebury, who also boast of a fine bunch of runners and were winners of the state title last year, being far in advance of the Cats and the Cadets.

Providing Pluvius takes a holiday and with their brand new track suits the Cats should make a fine appearance in Schenecady tomorrow. If they can bring home the bacon Coach Latty will be more than pleased with the results and will look forward to winning the state title.

The following men will leave Saturday morning with Coach Latty and Manager Stephens: Morse, Berry, dash men, Woodward, Loudon, Eaton, 440 yard entrants, Martinetti, Eaton, the 880, Arnold for the mile, O. Wood for the two mile; Robbins, Howard and Douglas for the hurdle events, Franceschi in the high jump; Lyman in the Broad jump, Willard and Hastings for the pole vault; Kropper, Parks in the weights, and Manning and N. Wood throwing the javelin.

VERMONT SPEAKERS LOSE DECISION, WIN PRIZES

Vermont took two out of three of the Lawrence Debating Prizes, while Middlebury ran off with a 2-1 decision in the annual debate which came off last Wednesday night in the Old Mill Chapel.

George R. Hinman, Albert D. Leahy and Sam W. Pattee debated for Middlebury, upholding the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, that capital invested in foreign lands by United States citizens should not be protected by force of arms, except after formal declaration of war." Debating for Vermont on the negative were Herrick M. Macomber, John M. Leavens and Lawrence A. Hince. Two sets of judges were used in the debate. Miss Elizabeth Allen, Capt. Homer E. Hunt and Joseph A. McNamara delivering the decision on the merits of the debate while the best individual speakers were selected by Henry B. Caswell, Willis R. Putney and Miss Eleanor B. Stevens. Leon W. Dean presided and furnished a good deal of the entertainment.

Hinman, opening for Middlebury, declared that a policy of armed force was detrimental to the best interests of the United States and that American investors in foreign countries secured enough special benefits to make up for all risks that they might encounter. Armed protection by the United States, he maintained, would provide American investors with a double indemnity on all losses.

Macomber, countering for Vermont, gave specific instances to show that armed protection does not mean imperialism. He argued that non-protection is not a panacea for imperialism or war and that for the United States not to protect its interests abroad by armed force would be detrimental to all concerned.

The Panama Canal affair, Haiti and Nicaragua were invoked by Leahy of Middlebury to show that armed force infringes against the sovereignty of a nation and that intervention means imperialism and war.

Attacking this argument, Leavens then cited one authority after another

ELECTION TO STUDENT SENATE TO BE CHANGED

At a recent meeting of Student Senate the constitution was amended in respect to the election of officers. The rule for nominating and electing representatives to student senate has been taken out of the hands of the class officers. A nominating committee composed of the President of Senate and the four class presidents will choose the representatives and will also nominate men for the offices of Senate. Then, these nominees will be voted upon by the student body on a day set aside for that purpose.

This plan is to go into effect this spring and will be carried out in the near future.

HOME SEASON TO START WITH CLARKSON CONTEST

Baseball Returns to Prominence With Game Saturday Afternoon

Vermont will make its second attempt to start the home season tomorrow at Centennial Field with Clarkson Tech as the opening opponent. If "Jupe" Pluvius can restrain his antics for only one day the fans will get a chance to see the team which has been doing pretty well against the early season opponents.

After a two-weeks rest Coach Dresser's charges are in top form. Captain Jack Conway who was out of the Holy Cross contest on account of an injured leg is fully recovered and will be seen at shortstop again. Schoppe who had a lame arm last week is in condition to toe the rubber if called upon but the pitcher will not be known until the team takes the field.

Vermont will be a decided favorite in tomorrow's game. Clarkson has been defeated by Middlebury and St. Michaels within the past week. In the St. Michael's game Clarkson started off with a bang and scored four runs in the first inning but could not cross the plate again during the remainder of the fray. St. Michael's picked up enough runs to tie at the end of nine innings and won out by a single run in the tenth. Clarkson's team is on a tour of Vermont state so it is hard to tell who will start in the box against Vermont.

The probable lineup:

NEWS IN BRIEF

Contrary to the preliminary schedule of final examinations posted on the official bulletin board, the finals in Military Science and Tactics will be given on Thursday, May 24, and Friday May 25, from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. According to the schedule this examination was to come on the last day of the period but as nearly all the officers expect to be out of town by that time, it seemed best to change it. The majority of students will no doubt be pleased by this action.

Zeta Chi announces the pledging of: G. A. Lynde, '30, of Burlington; M. J. Armstrong, '30, of New Haven; E. J. Bevor, '30, of Whitehall, N. Y.; R. A. De Mond, Jr., '30, of Romford, Me.; E. W. Allen, '30, of Burlington; G. L. Minott, '31, of Gardner, Mass., and G. K. Bicknell, '29, of Jericho Center, Vt.

A state-wide contest for high school orchestras will be held in the new auditorium on May 12.

NOTICE, FRESHMEN!

Due to a general disagreement prevailing among the men of the Freshman Class, regarding the wearing of Frosh Caps, it is ordered that Freshman men do not have to wear head covering. All other Frosh rules are in effect until the end of the college year.

GOLD KEY INITIATION BANQUET INTRODUCES NEW ANNUAL AFFAIRS

Fifteen Freshmen Taken Into the Sophomore Society at Hotel Vermont

An initiation which broke all previous records in regard to enjoyment, originality and smoothness was staged by the incoming Gold Key Society last Wednesday evening at 4:00 o'clock at the Hotel Vermont. Never has such an elaborate initiation been held by the society beforehand.

First of all the fifteen initiates were taken to the roof garden of the hotel where the formal initiation took place. After the formalities were over with the initiates were given small green and gold ribbons to signify their membership in the society. Then the new members held a meeting to elect their officers. The result of the voting was as follows: President, J. R. Brooks of Fitchburg, Mass.; vice-president, R. J. Maynes of Woodstock; secretary, F. S. Smith of Adams, Mass.; and treasurer, R. E. Tobin of Burlington.

Following the election of officers the old and new members reverted to the banquet room where an especially appetizing supper awaited them. The supper was greatly enjoyed on account of the frequency of jokes and witty sayings. After the repast, the new officers were asked to give impromptu speeches and all other members were required to tell a good joke. Many wise and witty stories were told and the society was kept in laughter all the time.

After the pleasant time at the hotel the new members under the leadership of their new president were required to march up Main and Church Streets in squad formation. The small band were asked to sing appropriate songs and give cheers along the way. A short halt was made in front of the Majestic where singing was in order. Then the recruits were told to mark out to some girls' dorm and serenade the girls. However, the retiring members did not pursue them any longer whatever amount of serenading that was done, was all in vain.

The initiation was a much bigger event than it has ever been and it is to be hoped that this year will be a precedent for the coming years for a good time is enjoyed by both the new and old members of the society.

JUNIOR WEEK PLAY TO BE SHOWN IN RUTLAND

Adam and Eva, the Junior Week play which is produced by arrangement with Samuel French & Co., N. Y., is to be shown at Rutland, in the Play House on Tuesday, May 15. It is interesting to note that this is the first time in four years that the Junior of Burlington Week play has been produced outside.

The players are holding practice daily and are working extremely hard to perfect themselves in their parts. Because of their faithful practice the members of the cast have their lines well in hand and Max Andrews, coach, has started to give them individual coaching.

Vouchers for the Junior Week play will be on sale at the University Book Store beginning May 7, they may also be procured from P. R. Otto at the Kappa Sigma House, from F. F. O'Keefe at the Sigma Nu Lodge and from Lyle Collins at the Sigma Alpha Chi House. These vouchers are $1.00 and $2.50 and may be exchanged at the Strong Theater May 15, 16 and 17.

Baseball in Other Colleges

On the cadets' opening trip Norwich defeated Worcester Tech 8 to 4, and Northeastern 9 to 1, but lost to Boston University 8 to 7. In these three games Gray Conn of Brattleboro, new Norwich outfielder collected two home runs, a triple and a pair of doubles. The game scheduled with New Hampshire last Friday was canceled because of snow.

Last week Clarkson Tech, who plays with us tomorrow, lost to Middlebury 9 to 5, and Holy Cross defeated Springfield 7 to 0. Last Tuesday St. Michael's started the baseball season by also winning from Clarkson Tech 5 to 4 in a ten inning game.

"THE MOCK DOCTOR"

For several years it has been the custom for the Glee Club to give a concert. Previous to the coming of Professor Bennett the programs consisted of numbers from classical composers, together with a few humorous and college songs. But Professor Bennett had a vision of something greater, something not before attempted at this institution, something which many people believed impossible. He tried, and he succeeded. We refer to the opera presented last spring by the combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs. Many obstacles arose in the production of "Dido and Aeneas" but they were met and overcome, and the final result was a source of delight to those among us who delight in fine music and the embellishments of art. Professor Bennett was the man responsible for the presentation, and he, with the help of Miss Bennett, plundered the entire score of the music. It was Professor Metcalf who directed the acting and arranged the settings—a feature of the opera—the opera that was to make fame for the two clubs. The costuming was designed entirely under the artistic [illegible] of Miss Patrick, and work was executed in student [illegible]. The lighting effects were done by Professor Buchanan of the Engineering department.

This spring the combined glee clubs are again to attempt the impossible—and all indications point to another success, rivaling if not surpassing that of last year. Indeed in the popular mind "The Mock Doctor" is sure to have an even stronger appeal than last year's production. The art of "Dido and Aeneas" could not be witnessed by any audience without an inward soaring of the emotions. This year the same art will be in evidence, and in addition, there will be the popular appeal that true comedy is sure to present.

Again, we have Professor Bennett supporting the work, and doing more than should be expected of any human being. But, even as persons are devoted to one field of endeavor, and so attain astonishing results, so do we find these people devoted to the work undertaken in the name of the Glee Clubs. Indeed, we wonder if they be not geniuses.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

The warm spring days of vacation gave us time to think. And having thought, we again give voice to our eternal gripe: why don't we have Mountain Day? We suppose the reason is simply that the college has shown itself indifferent. Is this true? Are there only a few of us who want to climb Mansfield?

We heard many murmurs on campus last spring and again last fall about Mountain Day, but although everyone seemed to think it was an outrage not to have it, nobody did anything about it! It will be the same again this spring and the next and the next—in a few years Mountain Day will be forgotten. Is that what we are working for? To have our traditions forgotten and our name unknown? It certainly is not up to the faculty, it is up to us.

If you are interested in Mountain Day, say so in Campus Comment. What are you going to do about Mountain Day?

From a Brazilian Student In This Country

Raymundo da Silva says:

In Brazil a very few of the poor people have an opportunity to [illegible] and almost without exception, only the wealthy people ever go to college. This is due primarily to the way our educational system is organized. The whole system is much like the one in France only not as efficient. Six years are devoted to work in High Schools, all of these years being given over exclusively to Military Science and Tactics. A man is required to take all the courses offered in this institution, as a [illegible] medicine engineering, that he might choose as a profession later on after he starts his college course. I find this feature eliminated in American schools.

Mr. da Silva came to America a year ago, and happened to choose Burlington as a suitable place to learn a speaking knowledge of English before entering one of our Universities. So far his impressions of America and its people have been quite favorable.

Our secondary schools are sponsored by private people. They are private institutions. This accounts for the poor people of my country [illegible]. Oh yes, there are a few exceptions where a poor boy is able to struggle through our educational system and make good, but his chances, compared to the chances offered American youth, are like a shadow compared to the individual causing the shadow.

Nearly all of the schools for girls are sponsored by Americans and the English. This is not true with the boys' schools. A girl from the poorer [illegible] has more of a chance to go to high school than a boy of that same class. The working man thinks it is necessary for his daughter to get an education first, if such an advantage in his family is to be had at all. The two sexes are not mixed in our educational system until college days. And it is only recently that young women have begun to attend our colleges. Most of them seem to go into medicine.

Our largest Brazilian University is in Rio de Janeiro. It is divided into various colleges much the same as in the States, but the different colleges are scattered all over the City; they are not grouped together on one campus.

As a student here in this country, I find that human nature is much the same, be it the nature of an educated South American Indian, or a Brazilian; or the nature of an American who can boast of his Mayflower descent and aristocratic forbears. Each has his culture, his ideas of art; each has his race prejudices. That last is regrettable, and the first is not essential to the development of a fine personality. I have noticed in our Brazilian schools the children of Americans and Englishmen. They have a difficult time. To the Brazilian people they are foreigners, and they have to undergo many hardships and be victims of misunderstanding.

Mr. da Silva in a personal interview further discussed the matter in a refined, pleasant manner. This question of race prejudices seemed to interest him, the way it interests all well-meaning, educated individuals. As for a remedy—well—we came to the conclusion that education, a chance to travel and to come into deeper understanding of other people's character and heart, be he brown, yellow, white, or black, was the most sure remedy. Then the individual may go back to his own country, his own people, and realize that there are other people who think, who invent, who write poetry, and who are interested in industry and progress, as well as his own.

The editor asked Mr. da Silva what Brazil needed most. The answer was simple.

"We need a Lincoln—a man who will sacrifice his life in order to bring the various states of Brazil into a greater and more friendly unity. Our Brazilians after they make a fortune, rush to our large cities, or to foreign cities, and spend their lives in ease. They take the money out of the centers where it is most needed for development. Brazil is rich in natural resources, but our people are ignorant. They are divided by race and lack of education."

FACULTY NEWS

Professor P. Orman Ray of the class of '98 of the University of Vermont was recently appointed chairman of the Department of Political Science of the University of California where he has been teaching for the past ten years.

This particular department has an enrollment of several hundred students and a teaching staff of nine. Professor Ray has been Professor of American Government since becoming a member of the faculty and is working on the revision of "American Government" by Ogg and Ray which is to appear next month.

At the meeting of the University of Vermont Branch of the A. I. E. E. held last Tuesday Professor H. I. Williams gave an interesting talk on "The Use of Vacuum Tubes."

Professor A. D. Butterfield of the Mathematics Department spoke to the members of the Ethan Allen Club last Saturday evening on the subject of aviation.

Through the use of lantern slides Professor Butterfield traced the development of flying in the heavier than air machines from the early days when the Wright brothers took their first flight up to the present with such feats as the polar flights and the trans-oceanic flights. Professor Butterfield spoke from experience as he was in the aviation service during the World War and is interested in its growth.

Harley A. Leland of the class of '20 former County Club Agent and for the past year County Club Agent in Worcester County, Mass., has been recently elected assistant State Club Leader in Massachusetts to succeed H. F. Howe who died several months ago. With headquarters at the Amherst College of Agriculture, Mass., Mr. Leland will commence his new duties in July.

Mr. Leland received his Degree of Bachelor of Science in Agriculture at the University of Vermont and at that time was a very prominent and exceptionally good student.

A list of various varieties of fruit trees for orchards and gardens has been compiled by Prof. M. B. Cummings of the Extension Service of the University of Vermont and State Agriculture College and remarks indicating the suitability of each variety have been added.

Professor Cummings is an authority on the subject and also has listed in order of their preference the various kinds of cherries and berries that are found in the State of Vermont.

ARISTOCRATIC SNOBS

It is true that there are a number of persons who believe themselves to be the measuring stick by which the less fortunate may judge their failings. How gallantly one of these pauses to retrieve a dainty handkerchief dropped by a fair maiden. How easily he fails to see the timid smile of greeting extended him by some classroom companion whose clothing is not of the latest style.

Yes, here is the true snob. Here is the one who has become a common sight in society since the beginning of that time away back in the Middle Ages when Knights and Ladies, Tournaments and Gauntlets were sights of common occurrence. Since the founding of aristocratic institutions he has appeared—the common person affecting superiority.

Perhaps snobbery is of value at a proper time and in a proper place. But in a university founded and supposedly composed of children of people who, in a democratic nation, govern this nation, such pretension has the flavor of distinct bad taste.

Here at the University of Kansas are lessons to be taught. The socially afraid must learn to understand that the mechanism of our society is as dependent on their individual actions as it is on the efforts of those who are so willing to display their pretensions. But, the pretentious also, with their false sense of superiority, must learn that it is the great mass of common persons which is the true foundation of a government that is and ever must be, democratic.—From Kansan Daily.

Indiana U. teachers of freshman composition have substituted current magazines for textbooks in their classes. The main point in favor of these magazines was the low price. Majority of instructors prefer the Atlantic Monthly and Harpers.

Free Placement Bureau for College Graduates

College seniors giving attention to the choice of occupation for the future may find attractive possibilities in a plan of the Bureau for Placements of the American Institute of Accountants a national professional organization which attempts to place approved graduates on the staffs of public accountants without any charge to the students for this service.

The committee of the Institute which is directing the activities of this Bureau consists of practicing accountants who understand the viewpoint of men just graduated from college. They realize that many college graduates find positions which are not suitable for them, and they have formulated definite methods for selecting men for the accountancy profession who are likely to be contented and successful. In the period of two years during which this plan has been in operation, graduates of most of the important colleges in the country have been placed in positions and practically every one of these men is making good.

Men who enter the accountancy profession through this medium occupy a favorable position from the start. In the first place, the requirements as to personality, character and mental ability are high, and if a young man is approved by the Bureau it is an achievement of which he may be proud. Then, after he is placed, the Bureau keeps a careful record of his progress, and since no men are selected who are not expected to rise to the important places in the profession, the committee is anxious to do anything possible to assist these men and to justify its judgment in approving them.

The method of approach used by the accountants is based on the belief that the student should carefully consider all the conditions and then make his own decision as to whether or not he wishes to take up this work. No attempt is made to sign him up by high pressure salesmanship methods. A booklet has been prepared for free distribution which describes the work, opportunities and compensation of the accountant in detail. It is pointed out in this booklet that there are excellent opportunities in accountancy for men who have good education and also have imagination, poise and executive and analytical ability. Copies may be obtained from L. L. Briggs at 21 North Old College in the afternoon from two to four.

The booklet states that the compensation of public accountants compares favorably with that of practitioners of other professions. It is also said that training in accountancy has a unique advantage, in that it is probably the best possible preparation for almost any kind of commercial or industrial executive positions. The practice of accountancy is predicated on knowledge of financial transactions and policies. It deals with every phase of the operations of all kinds of business and therefore is valuable experience even if a man does not eventually elect to make it his life work.

The practice of this profession in America is comparatively new, having attained a position of vital importance in commerce and industry only within the last twenty or twenty-five years. For this reason, it is thought, it is relatively unknown to college men as a possible field for their careers, and is sometimes confused with bookkeeping, which actually has about the same relationship to accountancy as the apothecary has to the physician. Since accountancy is comparatively a new profession it is less crowded with capable practitioners than most of the older professions.

Naturally, those students who have studied economics, bookkeeping, accounting and related technical subjects have an initial advantage over those who have not. The ideal course would consist of such subjects in combination with a number of courses in English, foreign languages, history, higher mathematics and other so-called general cultural subjects.

to show that armed force is justifiable according to government and international law. He admitted that arbitration was desirable if it would work but said intervention necessary as a last resort.

With a speech that took second place Patter closing the constructive argument for Middlebury held that protection of American property abroad by armed force would gain us only the ill will of the nations concerned.

Hince, in his winning speech, showed however that we have legitimate property rights in foreign countries which we must protect and he demanded the retention of armed force as a last resort.

The rebuttal was a free-for-all attack by each team on the arguments of the other. Old arguments went by the board while new arguments popped up to enliven the debate and decide the issue in favor of Middlebury. The first Edwin Winship Lawrence prize of $25 went, however, to Hince. Second prize of $15 went to Patter and third prize of $10 to Leavens.

Joseph V. Daley, veteran state detective of Massachusetts, died recently in Northampton. Mr. Daley had devoted most of his time in the past few years to trying to locate two missing Smith College girls. Miss Alice Corbett disappeared from college on November 13, 1925, and Miss Frances St. John Smith disappeared on January 13. No clue has ever been discovered and he was the only one who might have solved this mystery. It is believed that too much work on these two cases caused the breakdown which resulted in his death.

Chicago R. O. T. C. Guards Polls

Political science students at the University of Chicago played an important part in the recent Congressional elections by manning the polls. From the accounts of these elections in the papers it would seem that the R. O. T. C. students should have had the job.

Man Riled by Rivals' Time Claims

Rutherford, N. J.

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

I sure get some riled when I see where some fellow is crowing over the fact that being older, and having run into Edgeworth sooner than his less fortunate compatriots, he challenges the world as the champion long-time member of the Edgeworth Club.

He doesn't deserve any medals. He got his reward in the enjoyment of his smoking for the added number of years. He was just lucky in starting sooner, that's all.

However, if you care to delve into ancient history, look up when they first started to pull down the old Grand Central Station in New York,* then add at least six months to that, and you will arrive at the approximate time when I first joined the club.

I have smoked at least one pipeful of every other tobacco I have seen advertised, sometimes through necessity, but most of the time to prove to myself that I have been right in sticking to the old blue tin.

Yours truly,
H. M. Wittridge

Vermont Balltossers Intercollege Champions Back In The Gay Nineties

[illegible]

Vermont has been slow to follow the lead of Bates, Maine and other colleges but golf, tennis, rowing and canoeing seem to become a familiar diversion. The Women's Athletic Association has purchased four pairs of skates which may be procured at Gutterson House for the small rental fee of ten cents per hour.

LOWER CLASSMEN OUT FOR KINGSLEY PRIZES

Thirteen freshmen and sophomores spoke in the preliminary tryouts for the Kingsley prize speaking which will take place sometime this week. Of the thirteen the judges Prof. Benjamin B. Wainwright, and Mr. Melvin H. Laatsch, selected three sophomores and four freshmen.

The men who will take part in the declamation contest are Philip G. Andrews, speaking on "The Curse of Regulus;" R. T. Krogh, "What Jefferson Would Do" by Woodrow Wilson; Redmond J. Roche, "The Republic That Never Retreats," by Albert J. Beveridge. Benjamin Baker, "The Miser," by Molière. Ernest M. Codding, "True Greatness," from "Acres of Diamonds," by Russel H. Conwell. Louis Lisman, "True Greatness of Nations," by Charles Sumner. Howard A. Simpson, a part of "Reply to Haynes," by Daniel Webster.

ANNUAL JUNIOR WEEK PEERADE ON THURSDAY

Event Will Take Place as Originally Planned—Sketches of Floats Must be in Hands of Committee May 10

Contradicting all rumors concerning a change in date of the Junior Week Pee-rade, the committee, in charge of F. J. O'Neil, announce that this event will be held on May 17 at 4:00 p.m. Floats will line up on the road in front of the college buildings to await the starting signal. The main purpose of the Pee-rade is to advertise the annual play for Junior Week which this year will be "Adam and Eva." The committee feel sure that the floats this year will be of the usual high standard that has been set in the past. Floats are to be entered by men's fraternities, women's fraternities, and there is a possibility of one from Converse Hall, the freshman dorm. Sketches of the floats must be handed in to the committee on or before May 10. Three cups are to be given out this year as usual. One for the best men's float, one for the best women's float, and one for the individual prize. Cups are donated as usual by Wig and Buskin society. Judges for this event are not yet chosen but are to be picked from members of the faculty. It is the wish of the committee that this event be as good as possible and wish the fraternities and sororities to cooperate with them. Sketches may be handed to the Peerade Committee which consists of the following: F. J. O'Neil, chairman, F. F. O'Keefe, D. Damon, Marion Baldwin, and Mary Freeman.

SHEDD IN CHARGE OF NEW ATHLETIC BUREAU

An athletic information bureau is soon to be added to the news dissembling organizations in the University. This is expected to fill a long-felt need in telling the world what Vermont athletes are doing. Frank G. Shedd, '29, of Burlington, has been placed in charge for the coming year. Shedd has proved his ability for such a post in several positions, as intercollegiate and photographic editor of the Cynic, and photographic editor of the 1929 Ariel. He is a member of Lambda Iota.

Mr. Shedd is planning to get the work going this year in time for the baseball, tennis, and track seasons. Stories on the players and their records will be sent out to the New England papers, and occasionally feature articles.

All freshmen and sophomores with any interest or ability in writing and in athletics are urgently requested to come out for this new activity. A meeting will be held Wednesday, May 9, at 4 p.m., in 3 No. College, at which the scribs who are interested will be assigned work. Mr. Leon W. Dean of the English department, who will act as faculty advisor, will give a short talk on the work that is to be done, and the benefits that both the students and the University will derive from the work. It is expected that the department will be modeled after the eligibility department, with a senior manager, assistant managers from the junior class, and with freshman and sophomore scribs. Dr. Aldinger has tentatively promised a letter to the manager if the work is well carried out.

SPRING DANCES OF FIVE WOMEN'S FRATERNITIES OCCURRED FRIDAY NIGHT

Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Xi Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Delta and Epsilon Sigma Have Formal Dances

With weather conditions ideal, the spring formal dances of five women's fraternities occurred in different parts of the city Friday evening. Pi Beta Phi held its dance at the Ethan Allen Club with the Vermonters Orchestra supplying syncopation. In the receiving line were Captain and Mrs. W. V. Rattan, Lieutenant and Mrs. J. B. Fredericks, Miss Frances Knight, Miss Ruth Lovell, Mr. Stuart Wright, of Middlebury, and Mr. Warren Watters of Springfield.

The Yacht Club, overlooking Lake Champlain, was the scene of the Alpha Xi Delta formal. Blue and gold streamers, balloons, confetti, and amusing novelties gave the dance a carnival air. Jack Johnson's orchestra furnished music. Mr. and Mrs. Leon W. Dean and Prof. and Mrs. George V. Kidder chaperoned. Miss Dorothy Abel and Miss Ruth Simmons were the representatives from the chapter of Alpha Xi Delta at Middlebury College.

The Alpha Chi Omega formal dance took place at the Country Club. Scarlet carnations, the fraternity flower, were the main motif in the decorations. During a favor dance leather bill folds, bearing the fraternity seal, were presented to the gentlemen. The Algonquins furnished the music. Prof. and Mrs. D. B. Carroll, Dr. and Mrs. D. Marvin, Miss Lucy Morgan and Mr. Roy Worrell received the guests. Alumnae attending the dance were Mabel Miles, of Burlington, Marion Prescott, of Proctor, and Lois Burbank, of New York City.

Kappa Delta's danced Friday evening at the Knights of Columbus home on College Street. Music was furnished by Lechnyr's Orchestra. Letter folds of Scotch Grain leather, embossed with the Kappa Delta seal, were presented to the guests during a favor dance. The ballroom presented a picture of gaiety with decorations of green and white balloons and streamers. Prof. and Mrs. Harold C. Williams and Dr. and Mrs. Karl C. McMahon were chaperones.

Multi-colored balloons and a large illuminated plaque of the fraternity emblem suspended from the ceiling created a charming effect on the Roof Garden of the Hotel Vermont, where Epsilon Sigma fraternity members and guests danced on Friday evening to the music of the Catamounts. The dance favors were silver cigarette cases. Two patronesses of the fraternity, Miss Mary Maud Patrick and Miss Nellie S. Alexander, together with Mr. and Mrs. Bennett G. Douglas and W. R. Adams chaperoned.

CATS AND PANTHERS TO CROSS BATS THURSDAY

Middlebury is the Catamount's next opponent on the diamond Thursday afternoon. Middlebury has won several games so far this season and expects to add the Green and Gold to its list of victims.

Last week Middlebury defeated Clarkson Tech 12 to 1, which is a much more decisive margin than Vermont had over the Potsdamites. However comparative scores mean nothing in baseball and the larger score is nil to one who saw the weak Clarkson team in action. Middlebury won its first State conference game last Saturday by defeating St. Michaels at Middlebury 5 to 2.

Vermont looked good in Saturday's game with Clarkson but against a better opponent the Cats will be given a more significant test. Talcott will probably be reserved for Boston College on Saturday so Don Moriarity is expected to twirl for Vermont.

The probable line-up:

Vermont	Middlebury
Smith, 2b.	rf., Hasseltine
Conway, ss.	3b., Anderson
Prentice, 1b.	1b., Collins
Cogswell, 3b.	cf., March
Macomber, cf.	2b., Franzoni
Howard, lf.	lf., Humeston
Price, rf.	ss., Sorenson
Aronson, c.	c., Willis
Moriarity, p.	p., Whittemore

SCABBARD AND BLADE SPONSORS DRILL DOWN

The Scabbard and Blade Society, military honorary society, has offered silver cups to be awarded to the best drilled Sophomore and Freshman in the manual of arms. This contest, inaugurated in 1925 by the Scabbard and Blade created much interest and spirit among the members of the R. O. T. C.

Jack Rothmeyer '29 and John W. Chilson, '30, were the winners of last year's contest. The contest will be held on the back campus at 10:30 a.m. May 17, 1928 that being the last day of the Federal inspection of the R. O. T. C. battalion. Regular army officers from Fort Ethan Allen will act as judges thereby eliminating any claims of partisanship.

UNION WINS TRIANGULAR MEET, VERMONT SECOND

By rolling up a score of 100½ points the Union track team defeated Vermont with 43½ points and Rochester with 10 points, at Schenectady Saturday. V. M. proved weak in the distances and dashes. Robbins won the two hurdles and placed second and third in two field events. The tally:

One hundred and twenty-yard high hurdle—Won by Robbins, Vermont; Rieter, Union, second; Howard, Vermont, third; Jenks, Rochester, fourth. Time—0:16⅘.

One hundred-yard dash. Won by Bowie, Union; Dyke, Union, second; Sadosky, Union, third; Peter, Union, fourth. Time—0:10⅘.

Broad jump—Won by Lehman, Union; Robbins, Vermont, second; Lehman, Vermont, third; Fairbanks, Rochester, fourth. Distance—20 ft. 7¼ in.

Sixteen-pound shot put. Won by Kropper, Vermont; Parks, Vermont, second; Robbins, Vermont and Ried, Union, tied for third. Distance, 38 ft. 9¼ in.

Discus. Won by Parks, Vermont; Wood, Vermont, second; Greenough, Union, third; Kincaid, Rochester, fourth. Distance, 116 ft. 2 in.

Pole vault. Won by Sadosky, Union; Lehman, Union, second; Todd, Union, third.

VERMONT YALE TEAMS DISCUSS CIVILIZATION

Whether or not the United States is yet civilized will be debated Saturday evening by Vermont and Yale both at New Haven and at Burlington. The affirmative teams will speak on the home floor. For Vermont the affirmative team is composed of Lawrence A. Hines and George R. Nelson, and the speakers who will go to Yale are Franklin A. Sears and John M. Leavens. The debates will be conducted on the Oxford plan, and will be judged by two judges and by the audience. The result of the audience vote will be counted with the votes of the judges in determining the decision.

GLEE CLUBS SCORE HIT WITH PRESENTATION OF FRENCH COMIC OPERA

Appreciative Audience Witnesses "The Mock Doctor" in Gymnasium Saturday Evening

(By Arthur B. Marcks)

The Men's and Women's Glee Clubs of the University were again successful in opera presenting last Saturday evening Gounod's delightful comic opera built around one of Molière's most sprightly and sparkling comedies Le Medecin Malgre Lui. The large and enthusiastic audience frequently showed its appreciation and punctuated many of the numbers with generous applause.

The plot of the piece turns on the combination of two old, old themes. Molière satirized in many of his comedies as did also the authors of the medieval farces, the incompetence and ignorance of the doctor who might well have received their degrees as did Sganarelle at the end of two stout cudgels wielded over their shoulders. The second is the attempt to wed frosty January to sunny May, for Lucinda, destined to become the bride of a rich but crabbed gentleman of the neighborhood, pretends to be dumb to prevent the marriage. Sganarelle, a dissolute woodcutter drubbed into confessing himself a physician through a practical joke of his wife Martine, is presented to Lucinda, and cures her at once with a dose of purgative flight and Martinmontem Leander." All is not lost for love however, for Leander learns at the opportune moment that he has inherited all his uncle's fortune. Thus Lucinda is not exiled from the family moneybags, and the returning fugitive couple receive now the blessing and not the curse of money-minded Papa Geronte.

The parts were in the main ably sustained. Especially deserving of praise are Mr. Goddard, in the rôle of Sganarelle, ex-wood-cutter and wife-beater drink-sodden, knavish and witty, and now—thanks to a stick and a robe—a doctor. Mr. Goddard appears to have natural comic genius, for Saturday evening he threw himself into his role with an evident zest and sense of humor that lent additional flavor to the delicious Song of the Bottle, and the long famous scene of the Consultation with its amazing farrago of pretended Latin and Greek and Hebrew and its decidedly novel conceptions of anatomy, and diagnosis. Person and voice were admirably suited to the part. Mr. Goddard sings a full rich baritone which he uses with much correctness and fluency. His tone is full, rotund, and sure, and his firm modelling of phrase was especially pleasing in the solo, "Hail Medicine Divine" and the duet with Jacqueline, "Ah, Charming Nurse." Mr. Goddard has to share the honors both of action and voice with Miss Marian Sargent who sang the rôle of the nurse Jacqueline. All who heard her in Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas" last year were much pleased with the quality of her singing, but even better this year she handled the part of Jacqueline. Miss Sargent's acting like Mr. Goddard's was smooth and deft. The sureness and practical shrewdness and the self-possession of the nurse lost nothing in her interpretation. Her rendition showed no trace of the amateur singer's tendency to wobble, and in general there was no little hint of the professional comic opera stage in her execution.

Mr. Baker was but little less to be commended for his skilful interpretation of Geronte. He seems to have a natural feeling for comedy and ease of movement, eloquent facial expression and gesture interpreted well the curious combination of quick temper and credulity in the character of Lucinda's father. The character might easily fall into the farcical but Mr. Baker kept it always within the bounds of legitimate comedy and never overacted it.

Miss Eleanor Prentice played with shrewish vigor and comic relief the part of Martine, the much abused but merry wife of Sganarelle. She sang very pleasingly the Aria "Now Decked With Smiles." Mr. Shack and Mr. Jenks played with dignity and sincerity the respective rôles of Valere, steward to Géronte and Leander lover of Lucinda. Mr. Shack's basso has a level and fluent tone which carries future promise of deeper and more robust force. Mr. Jenks' light and clear tenor was harmonious and pleas-

SPRING FEVER

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—anything save his studies. Baseball, the national sport, has many adherents; track, golf and tennis attract almost as many and motoring, even though the roads aren't perfect, claim their share. Spring appears to be a time of rejuvenation, but only physically. Balmy spring days are trying for anyone seeking to study.

The period spent in college is generally a short four years, or two thirds of the three score years and ten. Future, with its hopes and dreads, hangs to a great extent on earlier successes. These earlier victories are a foundation on which the structure of life must be built—if the foundation is imperfect, the structure is unsafe.

Those who have studied diligently in the earlier part of the year have little fear of approaching examinations. There are many that fear, for their route has been the easiest one. To both it is necessary, in order to build the perfect layer of foundation, to continue to strive, or to strive harder in their work. The winning team plays the game to the finish; the man coming in first on the track puts in a little extra exertion towards the end.

Another success was added to the already long list of imposing dramatic productions directed by Professor Bennett in the presentation of the "Mock Doctor."

May 13 has been designated by Governor Weeks, in accordance with the date set by other states, as Mother's Day. We, who are lucky enough to have a mother living, should not fail to remember her on that day. Lincoln said, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother." Lincoln was a great man, while the majority of students are only great through the eyes of a mother.

To Converse Hall

The last lines read—a sentence passed
—How could my indignation last?
Thy gushing and thy rambling rhyme
Quite won this childish heart of mine:
Know, thou who wield'st the Converse pen,
Thou hast regained thy place 'midst men.
Thy 'pentance seems to be complete—
Taste then of our forgiveness sweet
The thotless words cut to the core
Unleashed my tongue—I craved the gore
Of he who slandered Harre's name.
I never would have felt the same
If someone had not challenged thee
And as the duty fell to me
I would not turn. Ah! Woe is me
That I have ever doubted thee!
I might have known thy foolishness
Was thrown in mere unthinking jest.
Methinks that Knighthood's back in flow'r
At Converse Hall. Now may thy pow'r
To wield thy pen for good increase
And 'tween we two, may there be peace.

VERMONT ABROAD

Gladys Ford '27 says:

"The courses of University Extension organized at the Sorbonne under the auspices of the Societé des Amis de l'Université de Paris has representatives attending from 54 nations. The United States lead in number and Australia in distance. In our country we have an idea somewhat similar to the French idea of promoting the orientation of foreign students. It is embodied in the purpose of the International College at Springfield, Mass. The courses offered at the Sorbonne are not studies of the language itself, nor are they filled with technical or superfluous details. Their object is to give a general idea of the political, economic, intellectual and moral formation of France.

Miss Ford has studied six months in Paris. Her experiences at the Sorbonne are full of interest and value to the student traveling in foreign countries, or the student desiring a comprehensive basis for further study. This branch of the great Université de Paris that she attended offers to the cultivated traveller a sort of introduction to French life, monuments and celebrated towns. Gaining this first view of what France has to offer through the eyes of a Professor of the Université, it is then easier to enjoy to better advantage further experiences with the foreign genre.

"On my arrival last fall, my first contact with the French people started at the University Women's Club, where Americans often stay in order to be able to speak their own language. I went into the office and inquired about my room reservations. The clerk immediately telephoned up to the second floor and asked in French if Miss Ford was there. Then he called the third floor and made the same inquiry, and received the same answer. (I had spoken to him in English; apparently he did not understand.) By this time I gained his attention and addressed him in French. 'Je suis Mlle. Ford. Elle n'est pas a dix-neuvième. Elle est ici.' He smiled courteously, and said he had not understood my English, which I felt was quite true. I obtained the room, and learned my first lesson that one actually has to speak French while in France in order to be correctly understood by most of the people who see to the needs of the foreigners.

"Several American colleges send over every year, a group of students to take their Junior year abroad. This group is called the Delaware group. The members live with French families, go on organized tours, and try to learn the language and ways through contact with the people. A group of forty students went over last year. It was the largest number of foreign students traveling in one body. The rules of this group are very strict. Each student must live alone with a French family. And a woman student cannot be accompanied around the city by anyone except a Frenchman, unless on an organized tour. This aids in the mastery of the language through actual necessity.

"The courtesy of the French people well deserves a liberal tribute. On all sides the foreigner is greeted with much consideration. Epecially is this noticeable in the shops.

"From my study of the people both in the classroom and through contact I should say that at the present time they have a well-defined and healthy philosophy as a nation. There has been the time in their national history when this statement would not hold true—the time of the French Revolution for instance. But then, we can say that was only a reaction against the old régime that is slowly sweeping the whole world. The divine rights of kings is being done away with for the more democratic way of government.

"From my observation of the different classes of society in France I should venture the opinion that there are greater class distinctions among them than in the United States between our classes. But I do not feel qualified to speak with authority on this point.

Students or travelers in France will benefit by attending some of these lectures offered especially to those desiring further credit or cultural value. And the life of this branch of the Sorbonne is made especially interesting for the foreigner. Plays are frequently put on by the Theatre Club of the University and many invitations to attend social functions, dances, etc., are extended to the people enrolled in the various courses. This branch of the Sorbonne is situated in the heart of the Latin Quarter, where the artists and students of Paris and the world congregate."

CHAPEL AGAIN

To the Editor of the Cynic:

"Only 28" insists on dividing the student body into classes at Chapel services. It is his opinion that such division would increase Chapel attendance. He requests that unless anyone else has a "better" plan, action be taken upon his suggestion; this, of course, is based upon the assumption that this plan is a good plan.

In a previous letter to the Cynic I stated that "the students who attend Chapel form a class by themselves, not classes '28, '29, '30, '31, but a special class of students. It is worthwhile holding Chapel for the students, small as their number may be." But "Only 28" thinks that the Chapel situation is deplorable; this conception is evidently based upon the assumption that all students should attend Chapel.

Taking it for granted, for purposes of illustration, that "Only 28's" plan of dividing the students at Chapel is a good plan—the best plan, say—and not only this, assume, too, that all students should attend Chapel, should be made to attend Chapel somehow, then by all means let us have compulsory Chapel. Compulsory Chapel is the only possible way of making the entire student body attend Chapel services. (I suggest here, however, that if we have compulsory Chapel, that the Cynics be distributed just before the services!) And the division into classes would be convenient.

"Only 28" has the idea that to divide the student body at Chapel means greater attendance through competition between the different classes. Very nice idea, of course! But when the student body does not put itself to the trouble of attending football games, we can hardly expect that they will suddenly rush to Chapel.

"Only 28" has asked for a plan better than the one he has himself suggested. To present a "better" plan may be a very, very difficult thing. We might, for instance, give college credit for attendance. I am pretty certain that if we gave three semester hour credits that Chapel would be pretty full. We might stage a boxing match, or present a play; I am sure these would be great attractions. Or, better yet, we might have a tug-o'-war between the eds and the co-eds. Or we might use this ingenious plan: We might make it a rule that the Frosh will have Frosh parties to which they will invite all those Sophs who failed to be present at Chapel service, and, vice-versa, Sophs would have Soph parties to which they would invite the Frosh. The Juniors and Seniors would, of course, come by themselves. And if the plans just mentioned are unaccepted, or don't work, there's that compulsory Chapel I mentioned above.

Religious spirit can not be forced upon anyone. Those that have religious spirit will follow its calling. Those that haven't simply haven't got it and so can not follow it for they have nothing to follow. I am uncertain whether the student body at Vermont is cold to religion or not. But there is this much to consider, we have Chapel services and they are not widely attended. A pity! and deplorable! I'll admit. But there is not a single way, other than compulsory Chapel, that we can force all the student body to attend, that we can force even a larger number of students to attend than now do.

We might just as well be sensible about this matter. If we do not want compulsory Chapel and we think it is not worthwhile to hold Chapel for those few students who do attend, then I advise putting an end to Chapel altogether.

I do not request that anything be done about Chapel. I'm just hoping that matters will not change from what they are at present. Of course, I would not hate to see the Chapel filled—by no means!—but as long as it is not filled, and we really can do very little about it, then let us not even attempt to change matters.

The only difference that dividing the student body into classes would make would be the scattering of the few students who do attend all over the Chapel. I think, too, that dividing the students into classes would also mean the dividing in half of the number of students who attend Chapel under the present system.

Yale Paper Narrowly Escapes Destruction

The undergraduate publications of Yale University just escaped being put out of business temporarily when a $200,000 fire completely destroyed the printing plant of the Van Dyk Company in New Haven, Conn.

The fire began early in the morning after the edition of the Yale Daily News had been taken from the presses ready for distribution, and was not brought under control for nearly four hours.

An edition of the Yale Daily News was printed late in the afternoon, giving the first details of the fire.

The edition of the Yale Daily News' supplement "On National Affairs," which was ready for distribution, was completely destroyed and the editors were forced to resort to photography to enable them to put it out on time. A few copies of the proofs were left them, and they had photographic prints made of these, from which the edition was printed by the offset process.

Other Yale publications to suffer losses through the fire were the Yale Record, a bi-weekly humorous magazine, the Yale Literary Magazine, the oldest college publication in America, and numerous programs published by various college organizations.

CO-ED TENNIS TOURNEY GETS WELL UNDER WAY

The women's singles tournament started Monday, May 7, and the second round will commence next week. As a result of drawing lots, the first matches will be played off as follows: Seniors, Della Martin bye; Muriel Cleveland vs. Katherine Griffith; Juniors, Marion Everest vs. Margaret Corbin; Beatrice Hoskins vs. Alice Belmore; Bertha Klein vs. Lenore Aldinger; Kladys Kone, bye. Sophomores, Edith Fishman vs. Hester Brooks; Genevieve Martel vs. Doris Boardman; Madeline Orvis vs. Eunice Wilder; Dorothy Dailey vs. Doris Kibbe; Anna Gray Tracy vs. Joyce Richardson; Inez Belmore vs. Dorothy Gurney; Freshmen, Major Westin vs. Mary Raymond; Dorothy Nash vs. Elizabeth Pindar, Helen Buck vs. Caroline Brandle, and Eleanor Koenig, bye.

The runners up will meet for the final match on the day of the rally late in May, after which the winner will have her name engraved on a silver loving cup, which was secured a few years ago as the trophy for the singles contest.

Everyone Well Represented

Four foreign countries, 30 states and 71 counties of Oklahoma sent students to the University of Oklahoma this year to make an enrollment of nearly 5,000, the largest in the history of the institution, according to a recent check. Foreign countries which have students in the university include Mexico, Canada, Germany and the Philippines.

One of "Big Ten"

The University of Washington now ranks as one of the "Big Ten" in the United States, having an enrollment of 10,169 during the year.

Many American Students Turn To Europe As Summer Approaches

Student Tours! Europe! Europe! The real romance speaks through the mail in fascinating booklets from Student Tours Club, the Amerop Travel Service and from the Temple Tours. He invades the dormitories urging us "to concentrate on the most beautiful and most interesting," "to steep our spirit in the crystal air of Switzerland" to make our "itinerary cover all of the high spots." Well, we are willing!

We read our other mail. Our fraternity is organizing a cruise which will ransack all countries bordering on the Mediterranean! "Sixty-six days!" "Low prices!" "Send for booklet!"

We meet Alice and walk to class. Alice is going to Europe! She is sorry that she can't take a Student Tour, but her family is going over, and she wants to study for a while at Grenoble in the French Alps. We arrive at class, and the professor questions us:

"N'avez-vous jamais voyager en Europe, mademoiselle?"

"Non, monsieur."

"Pendez-vous — aller en Europe, mademoiselle? Phrase complete s'il vous plait."

Oui, monsieur, je vais voyager [illegible] en Europe.

The spirit of romance has us. He has met us on every hand. Our mail, our friends, our professors all point the way to Europe. Letters go home. We can write so fluently. It's the chance of a lifetime, this prospective voyage to Europe. It's the time to go, when the spirit is in the air, when all of our friends are going. Besides being a vogue, it is a duty for us to go, with a kindly sympathetic spirit, to show Europe that we are not the material unfeeling race they think us. The fact is that Europe needs to know us better and we certainly need to know Europe, because, as all the great travelers teach us, it is only by knowing other nations that we really come to know our own.

We would like to take the student tour offered by College Humor and the Arts Crafts Guild, lasting twenty-six days, which would give us a month at home, and which is also quite reasonable, we add. "From Montreal the party goes to Liverpool, then on through Shakespeare country, visiting Leamington, Warwick, Stratford on Avon, Shottery and Stokes Poges." We would visit Eton and Oxford, attend a Fourth of July party at the First Avenue Hotel at London. From there we would go to Ostend, famous seashore resort, and to Bruges, Brussels, and finally to Paris where we will spend five whole days crammed with sight seeing. Then back to America on the S. S. Australia.

The words fly. Our letter home is beginning to lengthen into reams. Europe looms up gigantically before us. We are about to step off the gang plank onto the ocean liner. We can fairly see the towers of the old world. Europe! Europe! It seems that spring gives people a desire to see "how the rest of the world lives."

Letters come back to us from home. We tear them open, breathless. Alas! We see our friends, Alice and the fraternity sisters, going up the gang plank, and we are left behind. Europe fades into a speck years and years in the future, that Europe which has seemed so near to us. We must wait until the scientists have dissolved more boundaries, and have brought the continents still nearer together. We must wait until America begins spending its week-ends abroad. Europe! Europe!

But why be grumpy about it? Others have been disappointed. The family of William Dean Howells, upon hearing of their financial losses, went merrily in swimming. "To steep our spirit in the crystal air of Switzerland!" At least we live in what travellers call the "Switzerland in America."

But the great god romance is a persistent spirit! Europe! Europe!

Students Cheer as Gym Burns

Students at Colby College jeered the firemen, but good-naturedly, when their 50-year-old gymnasium was burning down last Friday. And while willing enough to save considerable apparatus and equipment the students declined to aid the firemen in any way, to drag lines or otherwise facilitate the work of extinguishing the blaze.

An investigation will be made to discover whether the blaze was of incendiary origin. Fire officials said it was "suspicious." It is claimed that the students were not reluctant to see a new building take the place of the old structure.

Students Learn To Be "Snooty"

The Wisconsin Daily Cardinal describes the supposed conversation of a group of modern university graduates being entertained by a newly married pair of alumni, and adds:

"These members of society, typical of their class, have been exposed to four years of culture and learning. Yet they have no cultural inclinations, or else hide them very well for fear of being thought 'snooty.' They are entirely concerned with the trivial, evanescent things of life. Their amusements and thoughts are cheap and tawdry.

School of Government to Open in Fall

Preparations for the opening of the George Washington University School of Government next autumn are going forward.

The establishment of the school was made possible by the gift of $1,000,000 by the Supreme Council Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Masons of the Southern Jurisdiction as a memorial to George Washington.

The requirements for admission will be the same as to any university and a degree will be conferred upon the completion of a four year prescribed course designed to give students a good idea of government administration federal, state or local, and to inculcate in them a broader conception of the duties and obligations of citizenship.

A statement issued by the Scottish Rite News Bureau here says:

"There is a real need for competent young men and women trained in the theory and science of government, persons that can deal intelligently with the many problems that arise in this progressive age. Every one especially in this, a republican form of government, owes a duty to his country in peace time as well as war, and surely there is no higher vocation than fulfilling this duty by training oneself to serve the nation either as a public official or private citizen.

"George Washington University is an ideal location for such training. The proximity of the government departments offers a large field for research and study which is made available to the students.

"In making possible a School of Government at that University, the Supreme Council has opened up a new field, one rich in resources and little cultivated. The initial step taken by the Supreme Council is but a beginning and it is much desired that other organizations and individuals will do all in their power, give their moral and financial support to this project that it might quickly attain its destined place of unsurpassed value to our country."—Brown and White.

COLUMBIA HAS FREEDOM IN CLASS ATTENDANCE

The new curriculum of Columbia College brings freedom in class attendance but it also provides for less latitude in choice of studies. The former measure wins the approval of The Columbia Spectator but the latter is not so welcome to the student paper. For the new curriculum demands "two full year courses, one from each of two of the following groups: I. Mathematics. II. Chemistry. III. Botany, Zoology; Geology." This, says Spectator, is a step away from the "modern tendency" of permitting student to choose the curriculum best suited to his personal needs and future plans."

The Spectator is mistaken on this point. We have been moving further and further away from the idea that one subject is as good as another. The tendency is toward more and more freedom in the method of study and less freedom in the content of the liberal education. The Spectator cites Professor Meiklejohn as one of the advance guards but Professor Meiklejohn's system is pointed in the direction of less freedom in choosing the content of study. "I am quite sure that as to the course of study we have got to discard the elective system if we are going to have a community of learning and have a definite course of study," Dr. Meiklejohn wrote for The New Student last year. "We must have all the members of the community engaged in the same intellectual enterprise." The Experimental college at Wisconsin allows for much less freedom than the new Columbia curriculum.

Mathematics and the physical sciences are excellent sciences, concedes The Spectator but why require them for more than "two full years." Is there no consideration for the essential differences between the pre-journalist and pre-engineers?" This question is beside the point for the purpose of the liberal education is cultural and if two years of science are necessary for a cultural education then the college should require them regardless of the wishes of pre-journalists or pre-engineers. The question we should like to see discussed in The Spectator is whether science ought to be required two years for a liberal education.

The Boy: "Have you read the new book of bedtime stories?"

The Girl: "No, but I know what's under the covers." Pup.

ing in the Serenade "In Dee Stream" Mr Ingalls has done consistent work as the pirate servant of Lucinda of which he made much

Miss Ladd playing Lucinda was entrancing in her very mutenous. A charming grace and a sweet voice in the last act thanks to Sganarelle's pure bass Leander rounds the rest of the cast in minor rôles, worthily sustained parts, which though much smaller presented difficulties. Women accustomed the chorus but the quality of the voices though light, was sweet. The tenors and basses, albeit few in number, sustained the burdon in brilliant relief against the tone of feminine voices. An excellent orchestra rendered parts of the score. The entr'acte dance was charmingly redolent of the atmosphere of the seventeenth century.

The gay and lively music of Gounod has with all its melody something of the firmness and sureness which were to distinguish Charpy after his time. The score is decidedly modern with the exception of the occasional and obvious imitation of seventeenth century airs and motives.

This fine production shows the result of admirable cooperation. No better testimony to the care and direction of Professor Bennett's direction would be sought than the applause that greeted the chorus and ensemble numbers. The highest praise is due Professor Metcalf, whose wise and expert direction was outstanding in the acting. The excellent diction of the principals, and the well-balanced stage groupings, elicited much favorable comment. Miss Patrick has more than once been complimented on the highly artistic character of the costumes which she has designed for previous productions. In former pieces the color tones were lighter and more in accord with the simplicity of tragic themes. In the "Mock Doctor" the riot of vigorous color seemed well in accord with the robustiousness of its humor. Lucinda and Leander might well have stepped out of the pages of Paul Lacroix's admirable volume on the art of the seventeenth century. Much also of the credit for this unusual performance must be accorded Mrs. Bradish for the fine vocal training given her charges. Had she had also the training of Miss Sargent and Miss Goddard her part in the production would have been amply justified. Miss Baldwin also merits felicitations on the graceful and entirely entr'acte dance of six couples. Professor Buchanan achieved his usual success with the illumination of the stage.

Leacock Speaks on Cathedral of Learning

(By News Student Service)

Stephen Leacock, better known as a humorist than as professor of economics at McGill University, was hardly finding words to express his feelings when he told University of Pittsburgh students that their Cathedral of Learning, or "high-up" building, as he calls it, is all wrong.

"I cannot picture the dream life and calm trees of the old college campus to anything the Cathedral of Learning might offer," he said. "Your campus will be rubber trees on the fiftieth floor and the shaded lanes will be elevated jets.

"I have realized that the world has changed since my youth. When I first heard of the proposed design for the Cathedral of Learning I could hardly believe that so extraordinary a building would be put into actual effect. Now I begin to think that my ideals and those of the older generation will go the same path as prejudices and hates.

"But even up there on the fiftieth floor," Mr Leacock admitted, "you will be doing characteristic work. We can, like the White Knight in Alice in Wonderland, learn to think upside down if we only know how."

ED'S STYLE HINTS

(By Fairchild News Service)

Latest observations of university styles by experts of Men's Wear and the Daily News Record, authoritative style publications, indicate hats worn by American undergraduates this spring will have the high, tapered crown and narrow brim.

A more formal soft hat, which will replace the derby during the warm months is the Homburg, which has a bound edge and a pronounced curl fore and aft in the brim, which is narrow. The less formal hats which have been approved by university students have much the same lines and the classic Homburg, but may be worn with the brim turned down, particularly if the brim has a raw edge.

Hat colors will be shades of light brown, with darker bands, and shades of gray ranging from a medium tint to a light pearl. Olive or grayish green will be worn by a few bold spirits and may gain considerable ground when it is introduced.

The oxford gray Chesterfield overcoat, with a velvet collar and fly front has been so popular during the winter that many university students will order for spring wear a garment of the same cut but made in a lighter shade of gray and without the velvet collar.

Rising in the field of fashion, the natural shade camel's hair polo coat, a loose double-breasted garment, has been observed in increasing numbers by Fairchild style reporters visiting the different colleges and universities in various parts of the country. In the East particularly this type of coat has made a strong impression as a between-season garment. Fashion authorities look for an even greater demand for this type of coat in the coming early fall, as it is suitable for wear at preliminary football games before the weather becomes extremely cold, and in the event of a mild autumn such as was experienced in the Eastern part of the country this year, can be worn right through to the final matches.

Other style tendencies noted in the most recent surveys include a swing on the part of Eastern students away from the pigskin glove in the direction of dark brown capeskin. Hitherto the pigskin had been the university man's

DAILY NEWS CRITICISM TENDERED BY HERALD

Apropos of the U. V. M. edition of the Burlington Daily News the Rutland Herald has this to say.

"Except that it looks and reads a little better than usual, the Monday issue of the Burlington News, written and edited by the students of the journalism class of the University of Vermont, is not such a lot different from regular issues.

"This is due, not only to a pretty fair batch of local news, but to a lot of signed articles on various subjects.

"Apparently all students want to write editorials or special articles, as there are a dozen or more signed articles in addition to the news stories and the routine stuff.

"Actually, I suppose the help of the studes and Chief Crockett gave the regulars a chance to specialize a little on the routine. So far as one hears by air, no one resigned from the News staff on the ground of cruel and unusual punishment and the special articles read very well, indeed.

"If all the local news was written by the class, there are certainly some newspaper men and women coming along in Crockett's class."

Columbia Adopts New Curriculum Plan

Described as "another important advance in the educational policy of Columbia University," a new program of undergraduate study has been announced by President Butler. The new system, which has some of the features of the junior college idea, will go into effect with the entering class next Fall.

Breadth of outlook will be stressed in the first two years of the four year undergraduate course, and an effort will be made to give to the student a synthesized idea of the fields of knowledge which might interest him. The last two years will permit more individuality in the choice of systems of study, and will be devoted to genuine university work, preparatory to graduate or professional study or to life outside college.

"The new program of Columbia College aims to introduce the student into a new and larger intellectual life immediately on his admission to college. It aims to discover and to encourage his intellectual interests. After the freshman and sophomore years of orientation and discovery have been passed the junior and senior years are planned for work of genuine university character in preparation either for the professional or graduate schools of the university, or a preparation for the yet more serious business of living a useful and high-minded life.

"The new undergraduate program involves two other interesting experiments, which have not yet been tried in precisely the form in which they will not be undertaken. The first experiment involves the offering of lecture courses, for which no prerequisite or examination is required.

"Another and most interesting experiment will be the institution of reading courses, to be offered in cooperation by two or three instructors in departments of study which while different are somewhat allied."—New York Times.

Ohio Abolishes Captains

Practically every college of Ohio has decided to abolish the position of captaincy of athletic teams. Oberlin and Miami colleges are the latest to fall in line. Acting captains will be appointed for every contest and at the end of the season an honorary captain will be elected by the team.

Two Students Granted German Scholarships

The University of Nebraska has two students elected by the German American student exchange to receive scholarship for the coming year. Miss Pollard will study at the University of Hildegarde R. Strauss will study for a year at the University of Heidelberg in Germany. These fellowships include living and housing expenses.

College Girls After Husbands

Our fair sisters do not seem to be augmented by the opinion of the majority which is prevalent among the undergraduates at Lowell Textile School that their inimitable phrase is "Oh, you kid" that "it's swell for the girls but hard for the boys." They claim that a girl in her college years is a prey both physically and mentally and that her chief concern is to find a husband. The campus is her market and the number of college romances bear out this fact.

Hunts 2 Years for the Right Tobacco

Gentlemen:

The worst thing in the world to try to find is a good pipe tobacco that is well within the reach of everybody and at the same time does not taste like it had just come out of the cabbage patch.

I have been smoking a pipe for two years and have just this month started to smoke a real smoke. Edgeworth. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again. Believe me, I tried for two years, but finally success is more than mine.

I have just been looking around, and have found to my delight that I can get Edgeworth practically anywhere. I even found it out at the lake near Dallas where I go fishing. Oh boy, what a combination—a perfect day, a can of good tobacco, and your pipe.

I always thought these ad letters were the bunk, but this time I know somebody is wrong and that is me.

Here's to old Edgeworth.

COLUMBUS—UNDERGRADUATE
by
John A. Benn

"It was in the late Summer of 1922 that Mr. Benn, an English lad just out of Harrow, set out a younger but no less eager Columbus bent on discovering as much of America as he could in a year at Princeton and then returned to complete his collegiate training at his own Cambridge. But, although it was only a year, his little book shows that it was a very wide-awake two months and he lost no opportunity of observing conditions, manners and customs, not only at Princeton but on vacation trips to New York, Boston, Harvard, Washington and New England towns, and on such occasions as Thanksgiving, Christmas and big intercollegiate football games. The author's astute observation and impartial discussion made an interesting little book well worth the attention"—of fellow students.

OUTING CLUB ELECTS SEMESTER'S OFFICERS

A meeting of the Outing Club was held at four o'clock last Wednesday afternoon in room three North College at which it was decided to reorganize the club so that the club may function better and to stimulate greater interest in winter sports, canoeing, hiking and the like, among the students at the University. The need for a strong and efficient Outing Club is felt and so the organization is an attempt to meet this need.

Under the reorganization plan a council of seven men will have complete charge of all of the club's functions except as far as new committees may be added in the future. Whatever new committees are added will also have an active part in the administrative functions of the organization.

The Club under its reorganization plan is now similar to clubs of a nature at Dartmouth and the other large universities of the country. R V Bragg, who was the representative for the Vermont Outing Club at a conference of Outing Club representatives held at Dartmouth recently, brought the suggestion of reorganization before the members of the club at the meeting.

There was election of officers at the meeting. R V Bragg, '30, was elected president for the next year. L. Cowles, '29, was elected vice-president. Phelon Hall, secretary, and Maynes, '31, basketball team manager. These, together with the following three who were elected, Buxton '31, Edson Germain, '31, form the council. When vacancies occur in the council they are to be filled by council appointment. It is hoped that the Club will be self-perpetuating.

It is believed that the Club will become more prominent and active in its functions in the future.

MUSEUM RECIPIENT OF SHAKESPEAREAN SCENE

A very unique and interesting picture has recently been loaned to the University Museum by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen G. Barnes. This picture is a scene from Shakespeare's Play "Cymbeline," in which the king and queen are just entering a hallway from a balcony and they see their daughter bearing love to a courtier and their disapproval of this episode is plainly seen on their faces.

An unusual feature about this picture is that with the exception of the hands and faces of the characters everything else is done in exquisite embroidery bringing out to the best possible advantage the dress of the court followers of Shakespeare's time.

The picture is over one hundred years old, the embroidery being the work of Mrs. Gershome Hyde of Bath, Me., and the painting of the hands and faces the work of our American artist, Gilbert Stuart.

The University Student Senate held a banquet Wednesday evening at 7:00 o'clock at the Hotel Vermont. A short business meeting followed the banquet.

SIXTY PIECE R. O. T. C. BAND PLAYS AT ROTARY BANQUET AT CLAREMONT

Crack Unit Transported in Two Pullman Cars—Receive a Royal Welcome

Again Vermont's crack R. O. T. C. band proved its ability and upheld its name on its trip to Claremont, N. H., last Tuesday, where it journeyed as the official musical unit for the Thirty-seventh District Spring Conference of Rotary International.

The band of sixty pieces, under the leadership of Joe Lechnyr, left Burlington Monday night at 9:50 in two special Pullman sleepers, and arrived at Claremont Tuesday morning at 8:30.

Through gayly decorated streets lined with cheering welcomers, the band marched from the station to its headquarters at the city hall. Here the boys were given the morning off until noon when they played a short concert, and then were assigned eating places in the various churches.

The band was not formed again until five in the afternoon at which time it gave an hour concert in the city bandstand to an enthusiastic audience. Immediately after this the boys returned to the city hall where a bounteous banquet was served. With about three hundred Rotarians, amid colorful bunting, streamers, and decorations, the band enjoyed one of the most bountiful and finest dinners it has yet tasted. The big feature of this part of the program was the special R. O. T. C. dance orchestra, with Joe Lechnyr leading, which played popular music during the banquet. The saxophone sextette, which was an added attraction, received many encores. At the end of the banquet the toastmaster, in behalf of the Rotarians, offered a vote of appreciation to the band for the part it had played in the day's affair.

Leaving Claremont at 9:30 the boys arrived at Burlington in time for their classes Wednesday morning.

This is the only trip the band has taken during this college year. A journey to Springfield was planned last Fall but it had to be cancelled on account of the flood. If there is enough time left in the remaining weeks it is possible that there will be a trip to New York or Boston. However, no definite plans have yet been made.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

At a business meeting of the University Branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers held last Tuesday the following officers were elected to serve during the coming year: Chairman, Franz L. Sulloway, '29, vice-chairman, K. H. Macway, '29; secretary-treasurer, L. G. Gibbon, '29; Cowles, '29.

Professor Dickenson and Mr. Sulloway will attend a Student A. I. E. E. Convention to be held at New Haven, Conn. next Friday and Saturday.

Delegates from seventeen technical colleges in this district will be represented at this meeting which is being held in conjunction with a Regional Meeting of the A. I. E. E., and offers many features of interest to the young engineers.

The local branch had a large attendance at their open meeting on Thursday night. A movie entitled Power Transformers and one of popular interest is to be shown and Prof. R. O. Buchanan will also speak.

The Branch offers many advantages and features of unusual interest to its members. Any engineers are invited to attend its meetings and to join if interested in the work.

VERMONT FACES BOSTON COLLEGE TOMORROW

Eagles Boast of Six Men Batting Over .300—One of East's Strongest Teams

Six men on the Boston College team which opposes Vermont tomorrow afternoon at Centennial Field, are hitting .300 or over and three of these six have averages over .400. Hank O'Day, the flashy hebbing hot corner guardian, has hurt more pitchers' feelings than any other Eagle this season. Weston, who led the eastern collegiate hitters two years ago, is right at Hank's heels and has six home runs and several triples to his credit. Creedon, Gibson, O'Day and Monczewicz are the others who will give the Vermont twirler plenty to worry about. Among the teams that have fallen before the bats of the Maroon are Dartmouth, Syracuse, Springfield, Georgetown, Catholic U., and Boston U. Shea, one of the Eagle's pitchers, is expected to start in the box with Murphy and Mantle on hand for relief duty.

Talcott will undoubtedly get the mound assignment for the Green and Gold. Dinniman, who did such splendid work in the Clarkson game, will probably be in left field in place of Howard who has left school. Winchenbach has recovered from his hand injury and may play left field if his services are not needed behind the bat.

The lineups:

Vermont		Boston
Smith, 2b		2b., Creedon
Conway, ss		rf., Morris
Prentice, 1b		1b., Weston
Cogswell, 3b		lf., Gibson
Macomber, cf		3b., O'Day
Dinnimman, lf		cf., Stolzinger
Winchenbach, lf		c., McMenimen

NEWS IN BRIEF

Gold Key held a meeting Wednesday evening, May 9, at the Sigma Phi Place. The new committees were appointed and arrangements were made for ushering at the baseball games and track meets this spring. There was also some discussion of a trip to Hanover for a conference with the Dartmouth Green Key.

Key and Serpent held a short meeting last Friday evening for the purpose of appointing the various members to duty in the supervision of the interfraternity baseball series.

No committees have yet been appointed by this society, but it is expected that this matter will soon be attended to.

Professor Burns left Tuesday noon for Syracuse, N. Y., where he spoke Wednesday at a meeting of the New York School of Forestry on problems of forestry research.

With the advent of good weather the students [illegible] have taken to [illegible] with a greater degree of [illegible] and the scores are rapidly increasing. Of the twenty-four [illegible] scores up to May 7 nine are held by freshmen, eight by sophomores, five by juniors, and two by seniors. Laura Rivers stands high for the class of '31 with a total of 184; Edmonds Clarke tops the list for '30 with [illegible]; Irene Wilson for '29 stands high with 78, while Eleanor Taft leads the seniors with 58.

JUNIOR PROM

Plans for Vermont's annual Junior Prom are all complete announces C. C. Lyman, chairman of the dance committee. The University's biggest social event of the year will be held in the new Memorial Auditorium on Friday evening, May 18. Ernie Andrews and his Troubadours, an orchestra well known, and well liked in and about Burlington, has been secured to furnish syncopation. Contrary to public opinion this appearance will be the only one in this vicinity this year by the famous orchestra. They will not play at Rawsonville. With a large attendance expected, an excellent floor, numerous novelties and favors, and one of the best orchestras in the East one of the finest proms in the history of the University is promised.

A new idea and form when it was decided to utilize the balcony space for those people who only wish to listen to the music and watch the dancers. A fee of 50 cents per person will be charged for this service.

Another novelty will be the distribution of a few tables on the main floor in inconspicuous corners of the hall but which will give a view upon the dancers. Refreshments will be served at these tables. Admission will be 50 cents per couple. Reservations for the table may be made to B. W. Gustafson, C. C. Lyman, or J. P. Hyland.

Admission tickets to the Prom price $6.00 may be obtained from any of the above mentioned juniors.

STUDENT SENATE

In a recent issue of the Cynic there appeared a news item relating to the new method of electing representatives, to be nominated by a committee consisting of the four class presidents and the president of the Senate.

This procedure seems to be totally against the principles on which the student government was chartered in this institution.

Originally there was a Student Union for all men in the University. This Union functioned until three years ago, when it relinquished most of its powers to a representative body elected yearly by the men students, i. e. the Student Senate. It was the understanding at the time that the men students should all come for a mass meeting to consider every legislation passed by the Senate. Furthermore, in regard to highly important policies the men students were to be consulted. In accordance with the latter provision the men students voted on the proposed change of Cynic from a weekly to a semi-weekly paper.

However, in the highly important policy of choosing representatives to the Student Senate the men students were not consulted. It would seem logical that in such an important change in the constitution of the Senate the students should be allowed to express their preferences.

As it stands now the Senate has taken away the sovereign rights of the men students and has made the Senate almost a self-perpetuating body not representative of the men students.

Perhaps this may be a false surmise since it is based on the very meagre information gleaned from the news item in the Cynic. However some officer of the Senate should make known the full details of the change in the constitution and the men students be given an opportunity to approve or disapprove the measure.

HILDA STEVENS

To Doctor John M. Stevens '97 and to Mrs. Stevens nee Grace Noyes '97 the faculty and students of the University extend sincere sympathy upon the death of their daughter. Hilda who would in 1929 have been the third of that family to be graduated from Vermont. Besides her parents she is survived by a brother Noyes Stevens of Boston, Mass.

Hilda was born in Hyde Park June 10 1905. She had barely completed the work of her Sophomore year when she became ill with influenza. She was a member of Delta Delta Delta and a communicant of the Episcopal Church. Her death occurred at her home in Hyde Park on the evening of May 2. The funeral services were conducted on Sunday by the Bishop Samuel B. Booth of Burlington a friend of the Stevens family.

Hilda was a lover of music and was marvelously gifted with musical talent. She had contemplated a year of study at the Sorbonne in Paris. She was a person of infinite grace and gaiety of novel dedance of features of staunch sincerity. The loss of such a friend will be felt by many at the University of Vermont.

OUR FACULTY

EDWARD ROBINSON

Edward Robinson was born in 1865 in New Jersey. He attended school in his native state and then for his college work he came to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He received his B.S. from that college and then travelled a good deal going to Germany, France, England and several other European countries where he studied engineering. He specialized in mechanical engineering while in college and in later life he made this his profession.

He served as an assistant in the Mechanical Engineering Laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1891-92.

He was an assistant superintendent of the Hartford Cycle Company of Hartford, Conn., from 1892 to 1896.

Professor Robinson then went to the Clarkson School of Technology where he served as a professor of mechanical engineering. He came to Vermont in 1905 as a professor of mechanical engineering and is now at the head of that department at the University in the engineering college.

CAESAR IN A BULL SESSION

(Merle A. Durell)

Scene: Cleo, first co-ed of the University of Vermont.

Time: When Lindbergh flies to Mars.

Characters:

Caesar: Editor-in-chief of the Cynic.
Cleopatra: Woman's Intercollegiate Editor.
Teddy Dreiser: News Editor.
George Bernard Shaw: Assistant Ed.

(Cleopatra is busy typewriting her fake copy. Caesar, Editor-in-Chief, is smoking his second pipe full. Teddy Dreiser is writing "good heads" as usual. George Bernard Shaw rushes in three minutes late, the first time it had happened since Shakespeare was a kid.)

George Bernard Shaw: Sorry I'm late, Caesar.

Caesar: (waving his pipe in the air) Three minutes isn't bad.

Teddy Dreiser: (In a bad temper.) Ah, these heads. Does anyone want some? (Pointing to Cynic copy.)

Shaw: Sure. Pass them over. (Takes proffered Cynic copy and finds a place to write.)

Cleopatra: (stopping her typewriting.) Oh Teddy! Who is H. G. Wells?

Teddy: One of the beef-steak Englishmen who waged the War of the Worlds with efficiency puppets. Why?

Cleo: He arrived in New York last night by television. Tonight he is giving an address in the gymnasium on religion.

Teddy: Religion? Oh yes, I remember he went nuts over it after the war because all of his efficiency pups up and died. Religion consoles him.

Caesar: What did you say he was talking on?

Cleo: The value of Northfield Conference in a student's life.

Caesar: (thinking of his Gallic Wars.) What is he a recruiting agent?

Cleo: He says he is a student of social systems. He says the Northfield Conference is religious only in the sense of progress and the improvement of society.

Shaw: The old gun is right too.

Caesar: What? Are you agreeing with somebody?

Teddy: George Bernard Shaw? You must be sick.

Shaw: I know all about this Conference. I attended it twice; went up with the Harvard delegation before old John Harvard kicked me out.

Teddy: I can't see how they expect students to go to such a dumb affair.

Shaw: See here, Teddy. Do you consider yourself a student?

Teddy: Yes sir.

Shaw: Then tell me this, how do you expect to raise chickens without the proper incubation?

Caesar: (cutting in.) Who goes to this conference anyway?

Shaw: The really interesting class of students from every college campus in New England.

Teddy: Who is the interesting class, pet me ask.

Shaw: If I should tell you, you might have reason to feel flattered.

Cleo: And Shaw never flatters anybody but himself, you know.

Shaw: I'm disappointed in you Cleopatra. You yourself attended the joint-conference last winter. Can't you stick up for your admirers?

Cleo: Oh Shaw, I dislike men telling everything they know. (Caesar doesn't (Lifting her eyebrows.) And Caesar cares little for Northfield Conferences.

Shaw: Go hang, Caesar!

Caesar: But surely, I'm interested in this Conference if it is H. G. Wells that is helping to support it. Who are some of the speakers?

Shaw: Oh, Harry Emerson Fosdick, Reinie Niebuhr, Arthur Rogh, Sherwood Eddy, Norman Thomas, Stitt Wilson. Several others too. The big guns can be obtained because they are the ones who realize how important these conferences are.

Caesar: How long does the Conference last? (Interested.)

Shaw: Five days.

Teddy: But don't you get fed up with five days of such high-powered birds?

Cleo: Oh Teddy Dreiser, we are not all authors of great American tragedies. We do not get bored so easily. Furthermore, let me tell you little Theodore, that there is lots of time set for rest, sports, and informal talks with interesting men. (Her eyes rest on Caesar.)

Caesar: Who is this Norman Thomas? Isn't he running for president on the Socialist ticket?

Cleo: Yes. (Affected.) Such an interesting man. He reminds me of Mark Antony. Poor Mark! (A sigh.) And then there is Reinie Niebuhr. A really new star in the universe. And a bright one.

Teddy: Say, wasn't it this Thomas-bird who got into a famous debate with Rear Admiral Plunkett?

Shaw: He's the man. Plunkett blustered around a bit, blew a few bubbles, and ended by saying nothing Solomon's fools would even record in their personal diaries. Afterwards they both shook hands as though nothing had ever happened.

Teddy: But I'm not so sure yet, Shaw: I fear this conference is too religious for me.

Shaw: Knowing your character better than I do Napoleon's, I'll say Teddy, that you may not find it religious enough. Students are discussed. National and world issues are considered: the Coal Strike, Mexico, War Debts, Politics (campus and international), Philosophical and Theological Problems, Interracial Relations, Education, Sex.

Teddy: Did you say sex?

Shaw: Yes sir.

Teddy: Both Sherwood Anderson and I are interested in it.

Shaw: (looking at Cleopatra and at Caesar): We all are.

Caesar: If there is any religion in this conference it must be intellectually and socially enlightened.

Cleo: You are a wise man, Caesar.

Caesar: You speak just as though I didn't know it, Cleo.

Cleo: Oh Caesar, you are a clever man.

Caesar: Anything else?

Cleo: Yes, isn't there? (Her face is turned toward his.)

Caesar: You adorable little Nile savage! I love you. (He kisses her. Shaw and Teddy appear very busy and do not notice anything out of the ordinary.)

Teddy: Now how much is it going to cost to get to Northfield?

Shaw: You are just like an American! You never forget the money part. I imagine if you pick up your friend with his Ford-can it will cost you next to nothing. There will be cars of fellars going. I can get you a ride. Leave it to an Englishman.

Caesar: What are the dates of the Conference?

Shaw: June 15 and 20 inclusive. Very convenient time.

Caesar: May I take an army?

Shaw: Yes sir.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

This spring the Interfraternity baseball schedule is getting under way with a lot of enthusiasm and pep, the teams are well matched and good sportsmanship is evident.

There is however an element of unfairness that comes up each year. I refer to the practice of some of the fraternities of pledging up members of the Independents ball team each spring after the Interfraternity series has started. This of course prevents such men from playing further on the Independents club.

The Independents work under a definite handicap for it is difficult to get the ball players interested in the team, and it is also difficult to get them together because they live all over the city.

Of course it is all right to pledge anyone up before the series starts. But once the games begin the only fair way to work the thing out is for the fraternities to refrain from pledging up the ball players until after the series closes.

If the fraternities refuse to accept this suggestion it will be an evidence of poor sportsmanship on their part and also an admission of guilt.

Sincerely,
C. P. Bortolli
Pres. of Independents

To the Editor of the Cynic:

A little story is written below, the inspiration for which was an incident occurring a few days ago. It is known to only a few Vermont students.

Dedicated to Mr. S—

Prof is strolling
Along the walk,
What does he see
But a piece of chalk

Sail by his head
Just miss his chapeau:
Says he to himself
"I bet that I know.

It's some of those boys
Up to their tricks,
Away up there
In forty-six."

As he looks up
Heads are pulled in Lest the instructor
Should see who did sin

So there he comes,
Running upstairs
Bursts into the room,
And loudly declares:

"Who threw that chalk
A moment ago?"
Everyone answers,
"Be hanged if I know!"

Prof is calm
Says only a word:
"You beat everyone
Cept those at Harvard."

Working Termed a Fad

Students who were [illegible] or partially through [illegible] Minnesota consider [illegible] tyrs according to [illegible] institution. Working [illegible] fad and the students [illegible] grades in their courses [illegible] sent the excuse "I [illegible] way through school" [illegible] have been made and in [illegible] of cases the student['s] [illegible] earned money for [illegible] added luxuries.

And so it remains
Just as before
Always a mystery.
From now evermore.

A piece of advice
Might well be received
From one of the students
Who committed that deed:

Take care in the future
Please wear an iron hat
Lest accidentally fake
Some chalk or brick at.

This is only advice
Please accept it as such.
For to spoil a good tete
Would be doing too much.

BIG MILK SCANDAL

Cow-Ed Suspended from University

Daisy Holstein has been expelled from the university per order of the council. Miss Holstein has up to the present time, been a rather recalcitrant individual, having kicked the janitor of her dormitory in the middle of last week, and upon being questioned by Dean Hills, stepped solidly on his left foot. Dean Hills was much intrigued and puzzled at Daisy's lack of respect and tried to reason with her but to no avail. She shows none of the finer qualities. It hardly seems possible that such a daughter of Vermont could be so obtuse.

When Daisy was informed of her indefinite suspension by all the faculty of the Agriculture College, she mooed. "Ah, ha!" said one of the faculty, "you see, she is in a bad mood." Daisy said nothing to this disparaging remark but began chewing right in front of all. "What" querried Dean Patterson, "one of my cow-eds chews?" She fainted.

Daisy has left us. She is suspended. Whether or no the suspension was just, I will leave you to judge. Daisy has been placed in exile and seclusion. She has gone to Middlebury.

And I love her. Damn the same old story.

Entrance Exams Banned at Dartmouth

Announcement has been made by the President of Dartmouth College that, beginning with 1928, there will be no more fall entrance examinations to the college.

The action was taken, it was declared, because the average high school graduate is fully prepared for college entrance. If he is not, he will be given the necessary deficiencies to work off while in college. Hereafter, entrance to Dartmouth will be gained by certificate or the regular college board examinations.

WOMEN STUDENTS HEAR TALK ON 1928 STYLES

A large number of coeds took advantage of the opportunity Tuesday afternoon of hearing Mrs. Katherine Griebel, clothing specialist for the State of New Jersey, who conducted a style show for the women of Chittenden County at the Memorial Auditorium. The afternoon session began with an exhibition of materials from leading silk and cotton houses of the country. Prints, Mrs. Griebel said are particularly popular this spring, but should be selected very carefully. Large and rather giddy prints may be used for negligees, while small all-over patterns are correct for any woman's wardrobe.

Cottons have been an interesting story in late years and may be obtained today in many beautiful designs. Printed dimities, piques, linens and lawns are the most important of the cottons.

Sport clothes are more in vogue than ever and are of two types. There are those used for active sports wear and those worn by spectators.

Chiffon prints were advised for afternoon, evening and dinner wear. There seems to be a choice of prints for formal evening dress, which is a new note this season.

Following the exhibition, Mrs. Griebel gave a general view of the trend of fashion for 1928. The silhouette is distinctly feminine yet quite plain. The skirts are 14, 14½ or 15 inches from the floor for older women. The young girl may wear her skirts 18 inches from the floor. Mrs. Griebel said. Skirts cover the knees and that's about all." Sleeves are either long or there is none at all, the sleeveless dress being worn for evening and sports wear. There is a large variety of neck lines from which to choose, but the majority of dresses are without collars.

Costume jewelry is very important and should harmonize with the costume.

Beige shades of hose are the only fashionable ones. White hose are never worn even with white dresses. Both black and white shoes are good. Hats are small and felt is still the leading material, with soft straw as a close second. Artificial boutonnaires are no longer worn by the well-dressed woman. The best colors for the season are black, navy blue, beige and gray.

The style show was closed by modeling a group of dresses suitable for many different occasions. Mrs. Griebel carefully explained to the audience how each dress was made, the amount of material required and the occasion where such a costume would be suitable.

HERBERT HOOVER WINS STANFORD STRAW VOTE

(By New Student)

Despite President Wilbur's discourses on our "definite responsibility" in Nicaragua, Stanford University students voted against the present American policy of intervention, in a questionnaire submitted by the Daily. Numerous other matters, political and social, were voted upon. As was to be expected, Hoover's alma mater overwhelmingly chose him for the presidency. Asked for opinions on specific matters connected with the elections, the majority of students said the candidates' stands on prohibition would not influence them, nor would religion. They considered the League of Nations successful and favored American membership in that body.

The students were strongly opposed to any form of trial marriage and as strongly in favor of a single standard of morality. Most of the voters think they are getting their "money's worth" from college and prefer the Phi Beta Kappa key to a block "S." Asked if college had affected their views on religion 371 answered in the affirmative and 423 in the negative. Seventy-eight had been moved toward greater faith but 314 had become more skeptical of religion. Only 125 are active church members, 332 are occasional church goers, 165 are indifferent, 171 are agnostics and 41 are atheists.

Asked to choose between living under Fascism or Bolshevism, 547 chose the former and 290 the latter, however by a vote of 484 to 308 the students favored American recognition of Soviet Russia.

Most of the voters were in favor of modifying the prohibition law, but reported no changes in college drinking conditions during the past few years.

Laws and Hypocrisy

The student paper at Dartmouth contains some rather pungent and sarcastic comments on the decency of that section of the country as a result of which the editors of the Jack-o-Lantern, humor magazine of Dartmouth College, have been forced to resign. After having three of their stories banned because the laws of the state by which they are governed differ as to what is considered vulgar and filthy, the editors finally accepted defeat. The aforesaid article refers to attempts condemning the action of the law enforcers that the "morality of New England which censors this kind print the accidental examples of smut is a parasitic symptom of suppression." All of which is flowery high sounding phraseology of nothing else.

"LEFTY" SCHOPPE

Star pitcher who allowed hard-hitting Eagle team but six hits Saturday

EAGLES TRIUMPH IN PITCHERS' DUEL

Strong Boston College Nine Blank Catamounts With Two Runs in Heart-breaking Seventh Inning

SCHOPPE ALLOWS BUT SIX BASE HITS

In what was probably the best ball game to be witnessed here for some time Boston College nosed out Vermont 2-0. It was a pitcher's battle between Schoppe of Vermont and Shea of Boston College, both men being south paws. However, Schoppe had the better of the duel and deserved a much better fate. Due to the poor offensive work of his teammates and a couple of bad breaks he had to be chalked up as the losing pitcher. It was more of a football day than baseball and the crowd was shivering in the stands.

Schoppe fanned nine men and allowed six scattered hits, two of which were very questionable, both resulting in the scores that won the game. The first one came in the seventh inning when Moncervicz hit one at Cogswell who was caught off balance, allowing Gibson to score. The second break came in this inning also and it was much worse than the first. As the result of this first break Moncervicz was on second when O'Brien hit a high ball which went outside the foul line by at least six feet and the umpire called it fair thus allowing Moncervicz to bring in the second tally.

Shea also pitched a fine game fanning 7 men allowing three hits. However Vermont was weak with the stick and should have gained more hits than they did. In the first, second and fourth innings they had chances to score, but the men were left stranded on the bases

Weston, the heavy hitter of the Maroon and Gold, had his batting average take a big drop in this contest when the best he could do was a tripple in four times at bat. He was caught at the plate, however, when he tried to stretch it. Schoppe fanned him twice.

The game

FIRST INNING

Schoppe struck out Creedon; Morris grounded out to Prentice; Weston hit a triple to right field, but caught at the plate trying to stretch it

Shea walked Smith; Prentice bunted but Smith caught at second. Prentice goes second on a wild pitch. Conway safe at first when pitcher dropped a throw from the first baseman. Prentice going third; Conway stole second; Cogswell fanned. Macomber flied out to Gibson.

SECOND INNING

Gibson fanned; O'Day struck out. Moncervicz grounded out to Smith

Winchenbach walked. Dinniman sacrificed. Aronson grounded out to second "Wink" Gary third; Schoppe struck out

THIRD INNING

Smith fumbled Stakinger's grounder; O'Brien walked; Shea bunted to Schoppe who threw to Cogswell to get Stakinger; Creedon hit to Schoppe who threw him out at first while

Class Banquet Will Start Junior Week

NEW GOLD KEY SOCIETY HOLDS FIRST MEETING

Gold Key held its first meeting since the elections Wednesday evening, at 7:30, at the Sigma Phi Place. The secretary read the constitution, by way of informing the members of their duties. Discussion then turned to the proposal of a conference to be held at Dartmouth. The president read a letter from the Green Key Society in which the proposal was set forth.

Green Key is writing to Key societies at some 50 colleges in the East, inviting them to attend an informal meeting to be held May 25-26 in Hanover. It is desired to have at least two delegates from each college. While in Hanover they will be the guests of Green Key, who will furnish rooms, meals and entertainment. The whole idea of the meeting is to see what can be done towards uniform organization of the societies throughout the East.

It was voted to send two delegates, with all expenses paid. These two men will be chosen by the Executive Committee, and their names will be presented to the society as a whole for approval at the next meeting, which is to be held next Wednesday evening, place to be announced later.

JUNIOR WEEK PEERADE WILL BE HELD THUSRDAY STARTING FROM CAMPUS

All Floats Must Be in Line at 3:45 in Order to Make Prompt Start at 4:00 P. M.—Line of March is Announced

Final arrangements have been made for the annual Junior Week Peerade which will take place this Thursday, May 17, at 3:45 p.m. All floats entered in this event will line up in front of the college buildings in order to start promptly at 4:00 p.m. Stunts have been entered by practically all men's fraternities and most of the women's dorms. Converse Hall, contrary to all rumors, will not enter a float in the Peerade.

A new feature brought forth by the committee is a change in the style of cups donated by Wig and Buskin. The cups are all alike in size and have a different shape than have been given before. The cups are on display in Hayes and Carney. A great many individual stunts have been entered in competition for the individual cup. These stunts are entered presumably by the Independents. Cups were won last year by Kappa Sigma, Grassmount, women's dorm, and Zeta Chi Judges for this event will be announced later in the week and will consist of three men from the faculty of the University. In order to acquaint people outside the college as to the purpose of this parade, the event is to advertise the Junior Week play, Adam and Eva, which is given at The Strong Theatre Thursday evening.

The committee in charge of this annual event is composed of F. J. O'Neil, chairman, F. F. O'Keefe, Dan Damon, Marion Baldwin and Mary Freeman The committee wishes the earnest cooperation of all stunts entered in order that everything shall be carried off in A-1 style. The line of march will be from the campus down Main Street to Church, up Church to Pearl, down Pearl to St. Paul, down St. Paul to College and up College Street to the Campus. Judges will judge the entries as they pass the New Sherwood on their way up Church Street.

TWO FEDERAL OFFICERS TO INSPECT UNIVERSITY BATTALION THIS WEEK

Vermont's R. O. T. C. is Putting Forth the Maximum Effort to Retain Distinguished Rating Class

This week Wednesday and Thursday, May 16 and 17, the annual Federal inspection of the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Battalion will be held. This inspection is made by a board of two officers, who this year will be Lieutenant Colonel Walton Goodwin, Jr., (Cav.) G.S.C. and Major Robert H. Barrett, Inf., (D.O.L.). These men are stationed at the first corps area headquarters in Boston. Just before they come to Vermont they will be at Norwich to inspect the unit at that college. Massachusetts Agricultural College is the only other one assigned to this board, although as members of the other boards the same men go elsewhere and they will be there on the 25th and 26th of May. Major Barrett is on practically every board in this area. The inspection this year is about a week later than last for then they visited Vermont on the 9th and 10th of May

The battalion is working very hard in preparation. The inspection covers the work of the whole year, but since Easter vacation the training has been especially intensive. Until the weather was good enough to get outside, the companies met separately in the cage and gymnasium three times a week, while for the last few weeks the whole battalion has been outside on the back campus meeting four times a week. Extended order drill has been emphasized particularly in this last training period in an effort to iron out some of the faults which, although humorous to the spectators, are likely to be disastrous to Vermont's rating.

Vermont, in being inspected, is in competition with the other R. O. T. C. colleges of the first corps area, for a certain percentage of this area are placed in the distinguished class Last year, Vermont, Rhode Island, and Norwich out of the 12 colleges inspected received this honor. Only 11 are to be inspected this year. The same system is used in the other corps areas throughout the United States. Since 1915 when this system was inaugurated, Vermont has had a very enviable record, failing to make the distinguished class only in 1919, 1920, 1923, and 1926. Making this class entitles the battalion members to wear a blue star on the right sleeve of the jacket for a year Inasmuch as Vermont received the honor last year, all of this year's unit are now wearing the star, and it is earnestly hoped that they will not have to take it off.

Most of the inspection work is extremely interesting, and in past years, a large crowd has always watched the battalion in action.

In the Drill Competition, the sophomore class will be tested first They will be lined up in double rank facing each other with the inspector at one end and between ranks. The commands will be by the numbers. Eliminations will be made for wrong, improper or inaccurate execution of manual, failing to stand at attention, moving the head, or not dressing rifles properly at order arms. From time to time men will close in to right at rest. This will not count in inspection. The competition will be resumed at the command "Attention." The last man in ranks will be the winner The freshman competition will follow and will be conducted in a similar manner.

Olympic Trials at Iowa

Athletes from nine states who hold aspirations for membership on the American Olympic track and field team will compete at Iowa City, Iowa, in Midwestern sectional tryouts June 23 under the auspices of the University of Iowa.

1929 Ariels To Be Distributed At Repast Wednesday Night

JUNIOR PROM MARKS CLIMAX OF GALA WEEK

With an outlook for clear weather throughout the week, the Junior class anticipates a very successful week, starting with the Junior banquet and ending with the open door fraternity dances Saturday night The climax is anticipated in the form of the Junior Prom, the height of the year's social events

The Junior Class Banquet will be held on the roof garden at the Hotel Vermont, Wednesday night at seven o'clock. At this time Manager Bir chard promises to deliver the first 100 copies of the new 1929 Ariel to members of the class. Chairman K. L. Price has secured the Catamount Collegians to play during the meal, and the President, J. S. Estabrook will act as toastmaster. Professor S. E. Bassett, F. F. O'Keefe and B. W. Gustafson will also speak.

Tickets are obtainable from any member of the committee which includes, K. L. Price, chairman, Marion Backus, Helen Prentice, Paul Hopson, G. B. Van Name and E. G. Fiske, for $1.75 per plate.

With favors, decorations, and programs secret up to the last minute, plenty of surprise features will be in store for the dancers at the annual Junior Prom next Friday night Wandering away a year ago from the University gym, the Prom, the biggest social event on the Hill, finally located at the Burlington High School gymnasium. With the new Memorial Hall completed, however, this year's committee has chosen the big auditorium for the dance. It is understood that the Prom Committee has been having a difficult time decorating the hall, but the extra time and effort put into the job assures an excellently decorated auditorium. Interwoven trellises of crepe paper have been necessary in past years to conceal the effect of a gymnasium which was always inevitable both in the college and the high school gyms Although the decorations for the hall this year will not be known until Friday night, the condition of the floor the excellence of the orchestra and the splendid novelties that have been devised by the Junior Week committees assure that this important feature of the evening, as well as the favors and programs, will be decidedly unique and will have every advantage over those of previous years.

Among the novelties that have already been announced are a device for admitting onlookers to the balcony for a nominal fee and a limited number of tables to be placed along the walls and in inconspicuous corners of the main floor. For those who merely wish to watch the dancers and observe the various features that go to make a Junior Prom the balconies will be reserved and a fee of fifty cents per couple will secure these seats.

Around three sides of the hall will be a sort of promenade At these tables refreshments will be served during the dance in cabaret style The number of tables will be limited to fifty and their seating capacity is not expected to be greater than two hundred To secure this service, a fee of fifty cents per couple will be charged and, due to the limited number of seats available, it is suggested that those who expect to secure tables place their orders immediately.

Another delightful feature of this year's Prom will be the size of the hall The Memorial Auditorium is much larger than the High School gym and is much better suited for dancing than the college gym which has been used for well-nigh every conceivable purpose. There will be no crowding on this floor and the dance committee will have it in fine dancing condition by Friday night. The orchestra for the Prom will be Ernie Andrews' Troubadors As has been previously announced, this is the last time that the Troubadors will ap

JUNIOR WEEK

One week of the college year has been set aside for the class that will be seniors next year. It is a time of gladness for them as it means that the major portion of their work as undergraduates is over. The youngsters who have labored at tasks, both in and out of the classroom, may look back at their exertions satisfied or with a knowledge of failure that will help in avoiding future misfortune.

This week, as Junior Week, is the result of many hours of careful planning on the part of those members of the class of 1929 on the various committees. They have worked with the ideal making this the best Junior Week in the history of the University, and it wouldn't be far from wrong, to judge by advance announcements to say that they are going to be successful.

A necessary requisite is the entering into the spirit of the week by the students. With this spirit and the fulfillment of the program there is no reason why the week will not be long remembered.

HONORARY SOCIETY?

The reply in regards to our query about revision of election to Student Senate in an adjacent column merely repeats what is already common knowledge. It would appear that the Student Senate was trying to "put one over" on the male student body. The right to change the election to membership to that organization should not lie in itself but with the men students, from whom they are delegated to represent. Student Senate is not an honorary society as one is led to believe by the banquet they partook of at the expense of the rest of the students, but a group that should attempt to carry out the wishes and best interests of the college as a whole.

As for doing away with fraternity politics, can the author of that letter tell us how a group elected by fraternity politics (for he admits there is such a thing) can act in nominating their successors?

We want 1. Right of the male students to vote on revison of election to Student Senate.

2. Right to nominate from the floor in class meeting if selection appears unwise.

Several cuts, which were to make up a pictorial supplement to the Junior Week issue failed to arrive from the engravers on time, but will be featured in the next issue, on Friday.

Communications

Vermont Cynic,
University of Vermont

Gentlemen:

It was very gratifying to have the attendance of the members of the Scabbard and Blade in uniform at the Patriotic Mass Meeting in the Memorial Auditorium on May 8, which meeting was in the interest of military training, and held under the auspices of the Vermont Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, an organization composed of the commissioned officers of the United States armies (Union) in the Civil War of 1861-1865, and now including the sons and grandsons of the Original Companions as Hereditary Companions, the eligibility of the latter being by direct descent from an original Companion either through paternal or maternal lines.

All patriotic societies coöperated generously in this work inaugurated by the Loyal Legion through public exercises for some patriotic purpose.

We deeply appreciated the assistance of the Burlington Post of the American Legion which furnished music by their new drum and bugle corps, forming an escort for the distinguished guests, Rear Admiral F. C Billard of Washington, D. C., and Col. Henry Breckenridge of New York.

Very truly yours,
H. S. Howard,
Recorder.

VERMONT ABROAD

Dean Howe, '98, Says:

"I have your letter of April 24 with reference to making some contribution to the Vermont Cynic. It gives me pleasure to give the students of Vermont some idea of my work of training young men in the forestry profession."

Dr. C. D. Howe is dean of the Faculty of Forestry at the University of Toronto. His knowledge of forestry, in practically all its branches is encyclopaedic—not only remarkably comprehensive, but also remarkably exact. His heart, too, as anyone can readily tell, is in his work—and it is a singularly "understanding heart." The University of Toronto is fortunate in having such a man dean of their Faculty of Forestry.

"A forester, like a poet, 'is born, not made.' There are five qualities that I regard as essential in a man going into this profession. They are chiefly inherent qualities. Experience and training only bring them out to be used for the good of society.

"First, to succeed, the young man must be possessed of a real affection for outdoor life. That fondness for outdoor life is either born in a man or is not.

"Second, he must be possessed of the capacity for living his daily life without contact with congenial companions. That, seeing that man is notoriously a 'gregarious animal,' is not a common quality.

"Third, he must have the feeling in his work (if it is for a private concern) that he is serving an apprenticeship, and that the permanence of his position depends on the way in which he discharges his apprenticeship.

"Fourth, he needs great tact, discretion, and judgment in his contact with other men. The young, university-trained forester nearly always finds that there is a critical element to be overcome in the attitude of the practical woodsman toward himself. The young forester must be able to put himself in the place of the practical woodsman, and to take the latter's point of view. In this direction, there have been some wonderful changes of late. Our young foresters make friends with the practical woodsmen, and some of these become just as keen on forestry, just as interested in the principles underlying it, as the university graduate.

"Lastly, and most important of all, he must be thorough and honest in his day's work. Because of this last quality many of our graduates have had their services bought by the pulp and paper companies. These companies find superior professional estimators in our university-trained foresters.

"The Government of Canada used to think that the so-called practical man from the North could handle fire protection better than any other. Today they demand trained men in forestry for fire protection work.

"A third of the living graduates turned out by the Faculty of Forestry are serving private industries. It may be stated here, there are only three other universities in Canada that include forestry in their curriculum; these are the University of New Brunswick, the University of British Columbia and Laval University."

[EDITOR'S NOTE: The VERMONT ABROAD editor is congratulating himself on having been fortunate enough to be able to keep the letters printed in this column of such a wide variety of interests. He hopes self-congratulations are permissible in this respect. From what part of the world will the next letter be? Guess!]

Campus Comment

STUDENT SENATE REPLIES

To the Editor of the Cynic:

In the last issue of the Cynic there appeared an editorial on the Student Senate. It would seem to the writer that the editor should look into the matter a little more before taking the attitude that the editorial conveyed the readers of this paper.

This new system was passed mainly to do away with fraternity politics and to get the best men on the campus to represent the students in this organization. The Student Senate does not wish or intend to take away any of the sovereign rights of the men students. After the nominations are in, the student body of each class votes on these nominations and therefore have, as much say in the picking of their representatives to this body as before.

The most important part of this change was either missed or left out intentionally from the editorial. The rest of the amendment is that this nominating committee shall also select men from among their group to run for president and that these nominations shall be voted on by the entire student body. In this way the students have not lost any of their sovereign rights but instead have gained a point.

Dear Sirs:

I am a prodigal son.

I began pipe-smoking with Edgeworth. But after a while I began to wander, trying other tobaccos, experimenting to see if there were any better tobacco for the pipe.

I have tried most of the best known brands and a number of the more obscure, both imported and domestic, but they didn't suit.

So now I have returned—I am using Edgeworth again, satisfied that no better tobacco is made.

"And the prodigal son partook of the fatted calf"; I bought a new pipe when I returned to Edgeworth.

With many thanks for my cool, mellow, sweet smokes, I am,

"Rusty" Yarnall Coach at Lowell Textile

The athletic association of Lowell Textile school, through Director Lester H. Cushing, today announced the appointment of W. W. Yarnall, as coach of baseball for the coming season. This completes the cycle of Textile sporting organizations for the youthful coach, his success with the football squad having given him charge of basketball, and the manner in which he has developed that team securing for him the baseball appointment.

"Rusty" Yarnall is a native of Swarthmore, Pa., where he attended high school. He started his college course at Dartmouth from which he transferred to the University of Vermont. Here he was an outstanding athlete from the autumn of 1922 until his graduation with the class of 1926. At Vermont he was under the tutelage of Coach Tom Keady, present mentor of the Quantico Marines, and made a splendid record with the baseball, football and basketball teams.

A bulwark of the Green and Gold backfield for four years, high scorer of the basketball squad and one of the pitching aces of the Vermonters during his course, the Textile coach has a splendid background of experience for his work. Coupled with his collegiate training in sports is his professional work in all three sports since his graduation, the Pere Marquette football team, St. Alphonsus basketball quintet and the Portland club of the New England baseball league being among those whose colors he has carried.

Since coming to Lowell Textile last fall, Yarnall has given a decided stimulation to sports there. His football team, largely made up of freshmen who had never been up against collegiate competition, developed through early season defeats to emerge victorious in the two final contests of the season. Bates and Worcester Tech were subdued on successive Saturdays, the latter, Textile's traditional rival, being made to taste defeat for the first time in several years.

Yarnall's basketball team has been the most successful that has been produced at the local college for many years. With the season well under way, the team has won five and lost four contests, the latter group all being close games against teams from much larger colleges. Looking forward to baseball, prospects are very bright, as the young coach has several veterans around which to build his squad.

In addition to his work with varsity teams, he is very popular with the student body and news of his appointment as baseball mentor was enthusiastically received. Burlington Free Press.

NORTHEASTERN MEETS VERMONT FRIDAY

After playing with Norwich today the next game for the Catamounts will be on Centennial Field with Northeastern. With the brand of ball Vermont has been showing lately this contest ought to mean another win.

The Huskies thus far this season have won only three games, while losing five with four called off because of rain.

In two of the games Northeastern has lost, their pitcher, Crowley, allowed only six hits in each, but lost both 2-0. He will doubtless be the one on the mound facing the Catamounts Friday.

California Students Sued For Theft

Fines of $60.25 each and jail sentences of from 30 to 90 days were the penalties imposed by state authorities on four former students of the University of California at Los Angeles on a charge of stealing books.

Their prison sentences were suspended on good behavior but all connections with the university have been severed.

FAIR WEATHER MARKS INTER-FRAT BASEBALL

'Neath cloudless skies the second week of the Key and Serpent interfraternity baseball league showed nothing contrary to the dopester's forces. The back campus saw both well-fought contests and ringfests.

PHI MU DELTA 8, SIGMA NU 6

Sigma Nu bowed to Phi Mu Delta in an interesting and well played game. Had the Sigma Nu possessed an offensive batting order the story would have been different. Several times they had men on every base and none out. But still they failed to score. Shurman went the entire distance for the Phi Mu's while Paul and Huey shared the burden for Sigma Nu.

Score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7—R
Phi Mu Delta	0	0	2	3	2	1	0—8
Sigma Nu	0	0	2	0	4	0	0—6

Batteries: Sigma Nu—Huey, Paul and Young. Phi Mu Delta—Shurman and Kendall.

KAPPA SIGMA 22, DELTA PHI 1

Kappa Sigma's merry men pounded out a listless victory over Delta Psi. Bigelow allowed only two hits, both going to secure the Delt's lone tally. Tellier and Oatley's doubles brought in the one run with Tellier scoring. Bigelow was effective largely because of the Delt's inability to hit anyway. Kappa Sig hit, stole bases and scored profusely without the Delt's exerting themselves to the contrary. Nilsen starred in the field and at bat for the Sigs.

Score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6—R
Kappa Sig	4	6	3	4	3	2—22
Delta Psi	0	1	0	0	0	0—1

Batteries: Kappa Sigma—Bigelow and Chadwick. Delta Psi—Bradish and DeWitt.

SIGMA DELTA 6, ALPHA TAU OMEGA 4

Under a veritable storm of witticisms from the lips of Gooch who twirled from the mound for A. T. O. the Sigma Delts defeated the last mentioned team.

The score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6—R
Sig. Delt	2	0	1	0	3	0—6
A. T. O.	0	2	0	1	0	1—4

Batteries: Sigma Delta—Alpha Tau Omega—Gooch and Mills.

ZETA CHI 9, TAU EPSILON PHI 0

When enough of the Teps hadn't showed up, the game was forfeited to the Zeta Chi nine.

PHI DELTA THETA 8, SIGMA ALPHA CHI 7

In a closely watched and closely won contest, the Phi Delts slipped in the wining run to beat out the Sigma Alpha Chi sluggers.

Score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	—R
Phi Delta Theta	0	2	0	0	4	2	8
Sig. Alpha Chi	1	2	0	2	2	0	7

Batteries: Phi Delta Theta—Terrill and Knight. Sigma Alpha Chi—Kent and Bailey.

B. U. Tennis Team Defeats Vermont

Last Saturday afternoon on the back campus courts the Green and Gold tennis team was defeated by Boston University by the score 5-1. The weather was unfavorable for good tennis playing and may account for Vermont's somewhat poor showing. However, B. U. has a crack team this season and recently defeated Middlebury by the score of 6-0.

In match number one Martin (B. U.) defeated Captain Baldwin (V.) 6-1, 6-0. Graves the only Vermont man to win turned back Rycroft (B.U.) in the first set 6-3, but was overcome in the second 6-0. He won the third set 6-1. Perhaps the feature of the entire game was the doubles between Baldwin and Graves (V.) and Martin and Edison (B. U.) B. U. captured the first set 7-5 but Vermont won the second 6-4. The third provided the thrills and was a heart breaker. B. U. finally scrambled ahead and won 18-16.

VERMONT WINS FIRST HOME TRACK MEET 74-61

Vermont won its first home track meet Saturday when Latty's stars defeated St. Lawrence by the score of 74-61. Vermont expected to win by a larger score, but it was too cold a day for a track meet, and nearly all of the events were slowed up. Several of the Vermont men won their letter in this meet, among them Kropper, Wood and Park in the weights; Lyman, Franceschi, Berry, Robbins, Wood and Davis in the running and field events.

Following is a list of men who placed in the events:

Shot Put—1st, Kropper; 2nd, Park; 3rd, Capello: 38 ft. 2 in.

Javelin—1st, Paige; 2nd, Latham; 3rd, Johnson: 147 ft. 9 in.

High Vault—1st, Lyman; 2nd, Willard P. Brown: 10 ft. 6 in.

High Jump—1st, Franceschi; 2nd, Van Dyke, Coughlin: 5 ft. 8 in.

Discus—1st, N. Wood; 2nd, Park; 3rd, Kropper: 110 ft. 7 in.

Hammer—1st, Mackay; 2nd, Capello; 3rd, Mace: 120 ft. 11 in.

Broad Jump—1st, Percy; 2nd, Robbins; 3rd, Lyman: 20 ft. 1½ in.

100-Yard Dash—1st, Percy; 2nd, Berry; 3rd, Keller: 10⅘ sec.

1-Mile Run—1st, Joyce; 2nd, Davis; 3rd, Arnold: 4 min. 49.9 sec.

Low High Hurdles—1st, Robbins; 2nd, Hoyt; 3rd, Howard: 1 sec.

440-Yard Dash—1st, Keller; 2nd, Woodward; 3rd, Calafate: 53.9 sec.

2-Mile Run—1st, Wood; 2nd, Davis; 3rd, Rowe: 10 min. 23.3 sec.

880-Yard Dash—1st, Maranaro; 2nd, Eaton; 3rd, Martinetti: 2 min. 5.3 sec.

220 Low Hurdles—1st, Hoyt; 2nd, Robbins; 3rd, Donahue: 27.5 sec.

220-Yard Dash—1st, Percy; 2nd, Berry; 3rd, Donahue: 23.1 sec.

STATE TENNIS TEAMS PLAY HERE THIS WEEK

After playing a match with Norwich at Northfield today, Vermont's tennis team will return to play Middlebury tomorrow afternoon on the back campus courts and Norwich again Thursday. Last year the Catamounts lost a match to the Middlebury netmen by the score 4-2, but were able to pin a 6-0 defeat on the Norwich University team.

Nearly all the players this season are veterans who won their insignias last year. Shedd, Graves and Borkland have all seen former service for the Green and Gold as well as Captain Baldwin and Taylor, and they are just beginning to hit their stride for another successful season. This week if the weather is favorable they will have plenty of chance to show you what they can do.

CO-ED TENNIS MATCHES GET WELL UNDER WAY

Spring singles tournament started officially Monday, May 7, when Caroline Brandle '31 was eliminated by Helen Buck '31 6-2, 6-1. The contest refereed by Beatrice Hoseine was much more interesting than the score would indicate and both players displayed excellent form.

The same afternoon Dorothy Nash '31 defeated Elizabeth Pindar '31 6-1, 6-3. The match was refereed by Constans Holden. Both players showed good form and played a steady even game. Dot's backhand is worth particular mention while Betty's specialty was a long drive.

Eunice Wilder defeated Magdalene Orvis in a rather one-sided match by a score of 6-2, 6-2. Mary Raymond refereed. Lucy excelled in service and backhand strokes.

Lenore Aldinger '29 defeated Bertha Klein '29 by a score of 6-4, 6-2. Lenore's high drives were noteworthy and the skillful and accurate serves of both players added to the interest of the game. The referee was Dorothy Nash '30.

The following list of official referees has been posted: Eunice Wilder, Dorothy Nash, Evelyn Anderson, Marion Baldwin, Elizabeth Wooster, Eleanor Koenig, Madeline Orvis, Edith Waterman, Dorothy Carpenter, Constans Holden, Katherine Griffith, Bertha Klein, Deborah Johnson, Gladys Kone, Marion Everest, and Margaret Corbin.

CATAMOUNTS WIN OVER MIDDLEBURY BALL TEAM

Captain Conway Socks the Ball for a Three Bagger With Bases Loaded in the Sixth to Put the Game on Ice

Facing a strong Middlebury team on their own territory Vermont came out victorious in a closely contested game, 7-6. Thrills galore were furnished the gala Middlebury Junior Week crowd of students who planned on seeing their previously undefeated Panthers take the fighting Catamounts into camp. Conway, fast shortstop for U. V. M., gave the crowd their biggest thrill by crashing out a triple with three men on bases and Middlebury's chance at the State Championship appeared to fade away in the horizon of the rainy spring day.

Starting on the mound for the Green and Gold Talcott pitched fair ball but the hard hitting Blue and White team found his offerings for several runs and he retired in favor of the veteran Moriarity, who finished the game, and held the contest well in hand.

Vermont's big inning was the sixth when they obtained five runs by way of two passes and free hits, one of which was a triple. The return contest in Burlington May 25 should be a tooth and claw affair and the Catamounts should not rest too easily on this victory.

STATE TITLE CONTEST AT NORWICH TODAY

Fresh from their recent victory over Middlebury towards the title of the State, the Catamounts are to play the Cadets at Northfield, today. Some real baseball is assured as the Norwich crowd suffered little from graduation last year and have formed in many ways to date this season.

Coach Johnnie Burns has an abundance of pitchers. In Lefty Williams a southpaw who handed Vermont a real beating two years ago, but who was unable to play last year because of illness the Cats have much to fear. Doc Waining who took the local boys into camp last year is pitching better ball than usual and "Joe" Tansey, a right hander, could inspire distrust in the heart of a big leaguer.

The infield is practically intact and the outfield of the Norwich aggregation is claimed to be a no-error, hard hitting crew. Vermont will have to do some heavy playing to clinch this game.

MORTAR BOARD INITIATES NEW JUNIOR MEMBERS

Alcoda Chapter of Mortar Board initiated six junior women Thursday, May 17, at 7:30 in the parlor at Redstone. The initiates were: Marion W. Bascom of West Hartford, Conn.; Marion Baldwin of Barton; Catharine B. Bennett of Burlington; Charlotte E. Cleveland of Glendale, Calif.; Margaret A. Durick of Fair Haven; and Lucy E. Morgan of Burlington.

The initiation was followed by a banquet in the small banquet room of the Hotel Vermont. Table decorations were of daffodils and the toast favors were reduplications of the Mortar Board pins, joined by a gold cord to the place cards, which were designed after the old Alcoda pins, donating the Alcoda Chapter of Mortar Board. Mrs. Florence Parr Hard, '27, as toastmistress called upon Della E. Martin for Welcome; Lucy Morgan for Response; Dean Marian Patterson for Mortar Board; and Eleanor Lockwood for Fare Thee Well.

Besides the initiates the following guests and Senior members attended the initiation and banquet: Dean Patterson, Miss Katherine Stokes, Miss Eleanor Cunningham, Mrs. Hard, the Misses Alma Smith, Alice Cramer, Alma Patton, Dorothy Hall, Eleanor Lockwood, Della Martin, and Helen Stevens.

New Jersey Women Befriend Cats and Dogs

It is no curiosity to see tramp dogs and cats befriended by S. J. C. girls. In fact not a day goes by that some animal does not receive a meal from a kind hearted student who has animal appeal. Dogs whose lack of conscientious grooming or good looks does not detract from their irresistibility are petted, cared for, and eventually lost. Cats are also helped to traverse the path of their precarious lives. In fact the S. P. C. A. is daily done out of business by solicitous students.

PLANS FOR TRADITIONAL LILAC DAY UNDER WAY

Pageant Will Not Be Given This Year—Mortar Board Makes It Every Other Year

Lilac Day, the beautiful tradition of Vermont women, will be celebrated this year on Wednesday, May 23, or, if the weather then proves inclement, on Thursday, May 24.

Lilac Day was originated by Vermont's first Dean of Women, Pearl Randall Wasson, who wished to enhance the beauty of Redstone by a hedge of lilacs, which were to be planted each year on this day of festival. Only the first one was carried out under her guiuance, and since then the day has been kept by the women of the student body as a memorial to Dean Wasson.

This year the pageant which formerly has been a feature of this day, will not be given. Mortar Board, which fosters Lilac Day, has decided that next year, and thereafter, on every other year, a more elaborate celebration of this day will take place. It is hoped that on these years something entirely fitting to recall the ideals and spirit of the founder of this festival may result. Each year, however, the planting of the lilac tree and the Lantern Walk will take place.

Lilac Day this year is to be combined with the annual Spring Field Day, when the baseball and tennis finals will be played off and the archery tournament will be held. After a buffet supper, served on the lawn of Redstone, the lilac tree will be planted. Then, when the sun has set across Lake Champlain, and the moon has risen over Mansfield, the girls, bearing lanterns and singing Vermont songs, will participate in the Lantern Walk, winding in and out among the trees.

Class Banquet Will Start Junior Week

pear anywhere near Burlington during this season. The syncopation of Ernie Andrews' jazzy artists is said to rival and even surpass that of last year's much-touted Club Worthy Hills Orchestra of Hartford, Conn., which appeared at the High School gym for the annual affair a year ago.

Corbin C. Lyman is in charge of this year's Prom activities. Associated with him as chairmen of the other Prom committees are Catherine B. Bassett of the decorations committee, W. S. Hall who is handling the programs and favors, and J. S. Estabrook of the refreshments committee. E. W. Knapp, F. S. Sulloway, R. E. Young, Miriam J. Idleman, Margaret E. Mahoney, Margaret E. Miller, Lucy E. Morgan, Francis A. Scott and Mildred E. Whitney are working with Miss Bassett on the decorations. R. M. Averill, F. E. Robbins, A. Elzada Fiske, Dorothy Cottrell and Charlotte E. Cleveland complete the list of the committee on programs and favors. On the Prom refreshments committee are W. F. Rogers, G. H. Poole, Hertha A. Hazen and Marion A. Everest. Chairman A. R. Birchard, G. H. James and A. A. Luciana will handle the publicity for the Prom, as well as for all other Junior Week activities. Tickets for the Prom, for tables and for balcony seats may be secured either from J. R. Hyland, chairman of Junior Week from H. W. Gustafson, financial chairman, or from C. C. Lyman of the Prom committee.

This is the first year in the history of the Junior Prom that as satisfactory a hall as the Memorial Auditorium has been secured for the occasion. The expenses involved are, of course, much larger this year and it is hoped that a sufficiently large number of students will turn out to make a success of the project. If the dance this year is as great a success as the Prom Committee anticipates, it is certain that the beautiful Memorial Auditorium will be the scene of the Junior Prom for many more years to come.

If seeing is believing, no wonder we believe in the Modern girl.

SENIOR NOTICE

The order for graduation invitations and announcements has been sent in as per contract. However, in order that individuals who failed to place their order, or who find they need more than at first estimated, may be cared for, the Committee has ordered an extra number of both invitations and announcements. These may be ordered, as long as the number holds out, from the Book Store.

The Committee sincerely thanks the members of the Senior Class for the promptness with which nearly all have placed their orders.

FOR GRADUATING SENIORS
An Opportunity for College Graduates in the "Best Paid Hard Work in the World"

WHAT are you going to do after graduation? If you have not decided—or if you have made a snap decision—just read over the rest of this. It presents the case for life insurance as a career. It is worth thinking about. The choice of a career is important. Life insurance is most desirable and satisfactory as a permanent calling.

And why?

Money

Reports of college graduates who have entered business indicate that life insurance holds first place as a source of income. One John Hancock agent describes his work as "the best-paid hard work in the world." He is a college graduate and in five years has put himself at the very top of his business.

Advancement

In the second place, advancement depends entirely on your own effort and ability. This is no fairy-tale of success. It is the sober and proved fact. The Vice-President of a great life insurance company who began his career as an agent has this to say to seniors who are about to graduate from college:

"If you love work and desire to pursue an honorable, useful and lucrative mission in life, this is the business for you to take up. Life insurance salesmanship offers a fine field for the energies of the splendid young men in our colleges.

"That this is true is demonstrated by those college men who have taken up life insurance, for they have shown that the college man is fit for this kind of a job and that the job also is fit for the college man.

"The work of the life insurance salesman is distinguished by independence and opportunity for directing his own activities. It gives all possible opportunity for individual initiative and a chance to make an ample income at an age when most fellows are struggling on a wage pittance."

REASONS WHY
• Life insurance is founded on high ideals.
• It is capable of yielding a good income and the satisfaction of accomplishment.
• It offers opportunities for real leadership.
• It brings you in close association with business and business men.
• It requires you to become familiar with business methods, law and finance.
• It is a field for workers, not shirkers.
• It is an alluring and practical calling for men of dynamic energy.

That is the story of one who began at the bottom and reached the top without the help of a college education. The advantages are with you who graduate from college.

Future

And there is so much room for ability and energy. Life insurance, in volume of business, is one of the three leading businesses in this country, and yet it is only in its youth because the possible application of insurance is expanding all the time.

Satisfaction

But all the pay and all the advancement possible are not going to wholly satisfy the intelligent college graduate. Life insurance offers further satisfaction. It is one of the great factors in the modern world making for security, peace of mind, increase of confidence, and the building up of credit for individuals, businesses and institutions.

The life insurance agent is indispensable to the conduct of modern affairs, and in a particularly satisfactory way. He is an active force in increasing the sum of human happiness, prosperity and security.

Your Company

Now is the time to consider what you are going to do after graduation. If you are ambitious, willing to work hard, and are interested to know about a life insurance career, you owe it to yourself to examine the opportunities afforded by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company. It is a national institution with a country-wide service, of great financial strength,—one of the large companies of the world.

Ask your questions of us before making final decision.

HISTORY OF JUNIOR WEEK INTERESTING IN ADDING NEW ANNUAL FEATURES

Baseball Game, Prom, Cotillion Dance, and Glee Club Concert Made Up Schedule of Junior Week Events in 1904

[illegible] Junior Week had been one of the [illegible] of the college year. In fact there was a special committee made up of the Junior Prom, a senior committee and the Junior Week committee. This committee was composed of Wood, Carlton, Burrows, Hicks and Bunker and Cutting, with Wood as chairman. Chairman Wood set forth the plans and work and asked the hearty cooperation of all students that Junior Week might become an annual affair. It was heralded and lauded. Plaudits burned in praise and print. [illegible] year it was a great success and attracted the most prominent men and the students which it has held ever since.

The past year brought forth events the same events except that a class supper was added and an interclass track meet which in [illegible] a Junior Week banquet being given. The following year brought the Junior Week into its being along with the Pierrade in alternate [illegible]

From the first the Heathenites Club had striven to secure one act plays and farces for Junior Week audiences but it was not until 1903 that a real play was put on. In that year Wig and Buskin produced "William Wat[illegible]" a farce-comedy in three acts by Roger G. Amadell, then a senior in the University. The action was [illegible] the feature being a [illegible] of humorous situations and the [illegible]

The [illegible] of the plot was ingenious [illegible] as the Cynic report put it. The cast was greatly appreciated. It is said that there was not a weak spot in the cast which included G. S. Harris, E. W. Chaffee, G. P. Tuttle, F. W. Hopper, H. A. Gregg, R. G. Ransdell, C. F. Macrae, W. White, Rose Lyman and G. E. Scott.

A Pierrade had been held the previous year to advertise the college play but in that year it was made a feature of Junior Week. Signs were posted on the Campus and notices were inserted in the Cynic urging everyone to turn out. The Pierrade was a most [illegible] affair, with a very large proportion of the student body taking part and wearing highly original costumes. It made its way down Pearl to Church Street, down Church to Main, and back to college. In 1914 Wig and Buskin offered a small cup for individuals, a large cup for the most elaborate float and another small cup for the most original float.

The Junior Hontride was added in 1911 being held Saturday evening, on the steamer Ticonderoga. The following year activities of the Week were opened with a flag-raising on Wednesday afternoon at 4:15.

Since then Junior Week has remained much the same each year except for the two during which the World War was the principal object of attention when the entire Week was omitted for obvious reasons.

PURPLE TENNIS TEAM LOSE TO VERMONT 6-0

Prof. Carpenter's Catamounts shut out St. Michael's in a net match on the back campus courts Thursday afternoon. Vermont took all the matches in straight sets except one, the final score being 6 to 0.

The best match of the afternoon was the one between Graves (Vt.) and Brodeur (St. M.). Brodeur took the first set 8-6 and lost the next 6-8. In the final set Graves had things his own way and won 6-1. Both men displayed some flashy tennis, smashing drives and services, and made several difficult shots. Captain Baldwin (Vt.) had a little trouble defeating Captain Daly (St. M.) in their first set, the score being tied at 2-2 and 4-4, but it was all Baldwin after that, and the final scores were 6-4, 6-2. Roberts (St. M.) and Caron (St. M.) were no matches for Shedd (Vt.) and Taylor (Vt.) respectively and their sets were listless as were both doubles games.

The summary:

Captain Baldwin (Vt.) defeated Captain Daly (St. M.) 6-4, 6-2.

Graves (Vt.) defeated Brodeur (St. M.) 6-8, 8-6, 6-1.

Shedd (Vt.) defeated Roberts (St. M.) 6-0, 6-2.

Taylor (Vt.) defeated Caron (St. M.) 6-3, 6-2.

Graves and Baldwin (Vt.) defeated Brodeur and Daly (St. M.) 6-2, 6-1.

Shedd and Borkland (Vt.) defeated Roberts and Caron (St. M.) 6-2, 6-3.

RALEIGH'S definition of courtesy was apparently to care for the needs of the other person. Today the same practice is observed by the telephone business; but we call it service.

To men in telephone work, service is a matter of looking ahead and preparing ahead—and when a need arises, to be ready. This point of view inspires the research engineer, the supervisor of production, the director of personnel and the executive responsible for all these activities and more.

With the increasing telephone requirements of the nation, this is a work of increasing complexity.

Through years to come Bell System men will find an even greater opportunity of service.

STATE TITLE NEARER AS CATAMOUNTS TRIM NORWICH BALL TOSSERS

Horsemen's Six Errors Make Things Easy for Vermont—Final Score 6-1

Vermont's Catamount baseball nine took another big step towards the State title at Northfield Tuesday. The final count was 6 to 1. "Don" Moriarty did nice work on the mound for the Cats. He was opposed by "Doc" Waining who forced the U. V. M. sluggers of last year to go down in defeat.

Waining pitched well but the errors of his mates contributed largely to their defeat, there being six checked against the horsemen. "Don" Moriarty allowed one more hit than did Waining but tightened in the pinches.

Captain Cusson of Norwich hit a single in the first which sent Sherman in and which was the only score the cadets were able to produce.

Vermont's onslaught came in the fifth when "Chick" Conway hit one of his famous triples sending in Aronson and Prentice ahead of him. Waining struck out 12 of the Cats, but Moriarty struck out the horsemen's heavy hitters and was much more effective in pinches.

Vermont has not lost a state title contest yet and the prospects of getting it this year seem good.

JUNIOR WEEK PLAY IS WELL ATTENDED

Playing to a large and enthusiastic audience at the Strong Theatre last night, the University Players scored a distinct success in their Junior Week presentation, Adam and Eva. Gregory Edson as Adam, Jeanette Beecher as Eva, Harvey Butterfield as Clinton Dewitt, and Dorothy Cottrell as Aunt Abby Rocker starred in their respective rôles. Herrick Macomber interpreting the past of Joiner King and Thor Krogh as Lord Andrew Gordon presented their usual excellent performances. The other members of the cast did very well indeed.

The cast of characters is as follows: Adam, Gregory Edson; Eva, Jeanette Beecher; Julie Dewitt, Muriel Cleveland; Clinton Dewitt, Harvey Butterfield; Aunt Abby Rocker, Dorothy Cottrell; Horace Pilgrim, Lloyd Turner Delameter, Eugene Knapp; Lord Andrew Gordon, Thor Krogh; Joiner King, Herrick Macomber; Corinthia, Janice Goodrich.

DEBATERS WIN HERE, LOSE AT NEW HAVEN

Vermont's debaters broke even with Yale in a simultaneous return engagement on May 12. Debating on the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, that the United States is not yet civilized," Lawrence A. Hince and George R. Nelson of Vermont won by a judge and audience decision from Yale. At the same time, John Leavens and Franklin A. Sears lost by one audience vote to Yale in New Haven.

Hince and Nelson, speaking in Burlington, easily proved their case by sheer force of argument and illustration. Debating on the Oxford plan and adhering strictly to most of the technicalities of proof employed in formal debate, the Vermont debaters easily had the debate on technical grounds, if on no other. The judges, in their decision, split one to one, while the audience delivered an overwhelming majority for the local debaters by a 59-27 vote.

The Yale debaters, both in Burlington and in New Haven, spoke in a manner entirely different from that of Vermont. There was virtually nothing at all serious in the Yale debates, everything not humorous being barred from their speeches. This comic method of debate, which displayed much cleverness and ingenuity on the part of the Yale men and kept the audience laughing most of the time, won for the Connecticut debaters votes from both judges and audience.

At New Haven, Sears and Leavens debating on the negative of the same question that the Yale debaters used in Burlington, virtually secured a drawn debate. They split the judges one to one and drew 37 votes from the audience while Yale got 38 of the ballots.

Professor Frederick Tupper presided at the Burlington debate, with the Rev. H. Sumner Mitchell and Justice Sherman R. Moulton acting as judges. In addition to the two judges' votes, a third vote was delivered by the audience which went to the team securing a majority of its ballots. In each case it was the audience decision which finally decided the debate.

TRACK ARTISTS MEET CANADIANS SATURDAY

This Saturday at Centennial Field "Jack" Latty's track and field team will meet the strong Montreal A. A. A. team. This has come to be an annual event since interest in track has been stimulated through the untiring efforts of Coach Latty.

Vermont is not expected to get many points in this meet with the possible exception of the hammer throw in which the Canadians are always weak.

This year being Olympic year the Canadians have been drilling incessantly for the big events in Brussels this summer. Men on their team who will represent Canada in the Olympics are Carruthers, MacKechenney, Montabone and several others who excel in their events. Also new men have been added who are equally as proficient.

Vermont's win over St. Lawrence will instill some confidence in them. However, there is no doubt as to the outcome.

SOPHOMORE WINS, FROSH SECOND AND THIRD IN DECLAMATION CONTEST

R. T. Krogh, L. Lisman, and B. Baker Take Kingsley Prizes—Music of Band Adds to Program

R. Thor Krogh, '30, Louis Lisman, '31, and Benjamin Baker, '31, emerged victorious last Tuesday night in the annual Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest, dividing among themselves fifty dollars in prizes from the Darwin P. Kingsley, '81, declamation contest fund.

Krogh, who took first prize of twenty-five dollars, delivered an oration, "What Jefferson Would Do," one of the finest of Woodrow Wilson's political speeches, in a very effective manner. Lisman's speech, which took the fifteen dollar prize, was entitled "The True Grandeur of Nations." It is a politico-idealistic peace by Charles W. Sumner and is one of the best anti-war speeches ever delivered. Baker gave Molière's "The Miser," a highly dramatic selection, which he delivered in true rhetorical fashion and which won for him the ten dollar award.

Besides the prize winners, two other freshmen and two Sophomores spoke. Ernest Codding, '31, delivered a selection from Conwell's "Acres of Diamonds" speech, entitled "True Greatness." Redmond Roche, '30, gave Albert Beveridge's "The Republic That Never Retreats." Philip Andrews, '30, delivered the highly dramatic "Regulus to the Carthaginians," and Howard Simpson, '31, gave Webster's famous "Reply to Hayne."

The judges of the contest were the Rev. Chester J. Oxley, Mr. Harold W. Slocum, and Mr. Levi P. Smith. Leon W. Dean presided as chairman.

In connection with the oratorical contest the R. O. T. C. Band played five excellent selections. Joseph Lechnyr led the band as it opened the concert with "Sombre et Meuse" and the overture to "Joan of Arc." Benjamin Clark, '29, rendered a saxophone solo which met with such applause as to necessitate two encores. The band closed with the "Coronation March" from "La Prophète," the "Stars and Stripes Forever," and "Champlain."

WOMEN STUDENTS GET ROOM ASSIGNMENTS

The annual redistribution of rooms in the women's dormitories ended on Saturday noon, when the Sophomores-to-be had an opportunity to draw for rooms. According to a report given out by Mrs. Mary B. Stetson, director of dormitories, nine seniors are to live in Redstone, seven Juniors and four Sophomores. Robinson Hall will house six Seniors, five Juniors and two Sophomores. Twelve Sophomores have chosen rooms in Rand house. All rooms in Slade Cottage have been assigned except the thirteen reserved for Freshmen. Campus House and Grassmount will be occupied entirely by upperclass girls.

RECORD ATTENDANCE PLANNED FOR PROM

Social events of the year are to reach their climax tonight with the 22nd annual Junior Promenade at the new Memorial Auditorium, starting at 9 o'clock. The week, which has included Federal Inspection, Junior Prom rade and Play and a wide variety of sporting events will be terminated Saturday night with the traditional open door fraternity dances.

Delta Psi will hold its dance at the chapter house, from 8 to 12. Mr and Mrs. Biggar and Dr and Mrs. Marvin will act as chaperones, and Carroll's orchestra of Montpelier will furnish the music. Kappa Sigma has Prof and Mrs. Kidder and Mr and Mrs. Wesley Abel for chaperones, with music by the Black Panthers of Middlebury. Captain and Mrs. Rattan will be at the Sigma Phi Place, entertained by Lechnyr's Vermonters. At the Sigma Nu Lodge the older set will be represented by Prof. and Mrs. Dopkins, together with Mr. and Mrs. S. J. O'Neil. Johnson's orchestra will furnish the syncopation.

Phi Mu Delta has engaged the Catamount Collegians and Prof. and Mrs. D. B. Carroll and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Bailey. Alpha Tau Omega is to enjoy itself with the aid of Mr and Mrs. Hovey Jordan and the Canadian Revalers. The Algonquin Night Club orchestra is playing at the Sigma Alpha Chi house. Dr. and Mrs. Dalton and Mr. and Mrs. Adams are the chaperones. Sigma Delta's dance will be looked after by Prof. and Mrs. Puffer and Mr. and Mrs. Pennypacker, with Eldredge's Hot Syncopators jassing it up. Lambda Iota has invited Dr. K. C. MacMahon and his wife to act in the capacity of chaperones, while one of Joe Lechnyr's orchestras will furnish music for the dancing. Kenyon's orchestra is the aggregation which Zeta Chi has hired. Prof. and Mrs. Millington will represent the faculty. Phi Delta Theta will dance with Prof and Mrs. Wallace as chaperones and Boteley's orchestra of St. Albans furnishing the harmony.

These dances are all either formal or semi-formal. Every house is employing decorations of some kind, and they are sure to be very attractive. The various chairmen state that they have been keeping busy in attempting to make these the best dances of the year, and from all appearances they have been successful.

JUNIOR WEEK OPTIMISM

Although unable to hold the annual Junior Banquet, the class of 1929 appears to be having a rather successful week. Little more could be asked for weather, with a warm May sun and cloudless blue skies. Cooperation seems to be the thing to do in committees, also. The decorations for the Promenade produce a very pleasing atmosphere and the floor appears well-nigh perfect. It was very fortunate that the committee could obtain the hall, and extremely unfortunate that we haven't a suitable place on the campus to hold such functions.

The Editor and Manager of the 1929 Ariel must be praised for the fine appearance of the new book. Different is a word that suits it for it is quite unique in almost every way. The opening section is very pleasingly done in two colors, with our lake and its history as a theme. The dedication to Dean Perkins proved very fitting, for it would be hard to find a more suitable object. In dark green ink and pebbled background, our campus looks more beautiful than ever, in the section devoted to it.

Through the remainder of the book one cannot but help notice the simple but appropriate border, the clearness of the cuts, the panelling in the Junior section and the many other innovations which make the book more appealing. Members of the class of 1929 are fortunate in obtaining a year book of such high quality.

We are sorry that, due to a misunderstanding, the cuts received from the engraver did not include one of "Jack" Hyland, chairman of Junior Week. We wish to thank the 1929 Ariel staff for the use of the Junior cuts in this issue.

It takes a lot of men to make a world; it takes a lot of men to make a "U." We find all types and characters abound—deserving, modest ones, and others too. Since worthy souls have ever gone unsung; since virtue sings its praises far and wide, it but remains for us to praise a bit and view the fellow on the other side. We loath the fool whom chance has helped along, and who imagines that he is supreme; who gazes down upon his fellow-men with "high hat," selfish, self-triumphant gleam; who thinks that future life will furnish "pull," and disregard his merits or their lack; who feels that when his work at school is done his former mates his lack of sense will back. No, the success that always life presents, after school's apron strings have been untied, goes to the modest, the deserving man, the other finds success in foolish pride

Nathaniel J. Sinnott, Representative in Congress from Oregon who has been nominated by President Coolidge to be a member of the Court of Claims, was a famous athlete in his undergraduate years at Notre Dame University, where he graduated in 1897. He won several medals for his prowess on the cinder path, diamond in the swimming pool, and was valedictorian of his class, having also been quite active as an orator.

An eighteenth century printshop has been set up at Yale University, in which a course of the methods of book production before 1800 is being presented by Carl P. Rollins, printer of the university. Each student is expected to set up in type and bind a pamphlet according to the practice in English printing before the introduction of the power press. The outfit in the office came from England.

JUNIOR WEEK

Roses are red, violets are blue.
Spring is here and Junior Week too

Yes, spring has come at last, bringing with it balmy sunshine, military inspection, hour tests and Junior Week. Moreover, contrary to the general impression, this is a most violent season. Are not the flowers bursting into bloom, the birds bursting into song, and students bursting into class rooms twenty minutes late? Are not hearts bursting with love, lungs bursting with acclamation as Schoppe mows 'em down right and left, and the Chapel bursting with its usual heavy attendance?

Yes, verily, the poet who first declared that the Vermont springtime opened with a bang sure knew his cassava. And the big bang just now is Junior Week.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

In the May 8 issue of the Cynic '31 in opposing the plan suggested of dividing the classes at Chapel makes assumptions for illustrative purposes. One assumption is, "that all students should be made to attend Chapel, somehow, then by all means have compulsory Chapel." He makes the assumption irrelevantly, and conveniently argues against the assumption. No one suggested that all students should attend Chapel, and the idea of compulsory Chapel is absurd and a sheer insult to the intelligence of college students. Religion is everyone's own business. Is that so you will ask, then why don't you mind your own business? This is the reason. the University of Vermont has been fortunate enough to receive through the generosity of a lover of the University a beautiful building to be used for the expressing of appreciation for the love of God.

This edifice enhances the attractiveness of the most picturesque campus in the country; and again meeting at Chapel on Wednesday morning provides an opportunity for students to be united for at least once a week in a body under harmonious influences; further we will show our appreciation to the donor by using the Chapel in large numbers.

We have many traditions on the campus which have no value or very little value, why not create a tradition that all students go to Chapel on Wednesday morning? There will result a unity of spirit, a consciousness of purpose and eventually a perceptible influence in the realization that every student is a part of the whole.

I have given '31's plans serious consideration but I cannot accept one of them as any better than my own, for instance, we could not put on a boxing match for the stage at the Chapel is not quite large enough, it is not like the armory, and then a Chapel is a place where the instinct of love is supposed to predominate and not the one of pugnacity. As for the tug of war the same difficulty arises, the lack of space and besides the Chapel is not a gymnasium but a place where one may perchance get an inkling of the existence of a divine being, and as for the Frosh and Soph parties one must recall that the days of the Spanish Inquisition are past and finally as for giving college credits for attending Chapel '31 does not know or forgets that the University of Vermont does not give college credits to individuals of such a perverted mind who would go to Chapel only for the sake of three college credits.

Very true indeed that those who have a religious spirit will follow its calling, but certainly one cannot hear the call of religion sitting on a window sill, or in classrooms, or in an over-crowded library. The call would have to be given by Mars, the God of War, with a large megaphone.

Dividing the students will not scatter them as '31 maintains, because the classes could sit at close proximity to each other.

Once more '31 has failed to give us anything better, so I again repeat that by dividing the classes will increase our interest in Chapel services, show our appreciation to the donor, many more students will attend, and strengthen the unity of the students to the wholesome influence of the Chapel.

Ariel Editor And Business Manager Visit White's Photographic Studio

At the invitation of White Studio, the editor and business manager of the 1930 Ariel went to New York last week Monday and Tuesday. The studio did everything in their power to make the trip pleasant as well as profitable. The two men were shown all over the plant which is surprisingly large for a photographic establishment. Special departments, all very complete, for commercial work (i.e., advertising pictures, etc.) theatrical work and college annuals make such a large plant necessary. A general idea of the process of printing and developing was gained by the men as they went through. Their conductor even went so far as to put a special picture into the fluid so that they could watch it develop. The theatrical studios were of course fitted up with great originality and cleverness, so that it was surprising to learn that the decorative work was done by the photographers themselves in their spare time.

The office devoted to college annual work contains a complete library of all the books for which White has done the photography. The editor was allowed to go through this library at his leisure and, assisted by [illegible] son the head of this [illegible] was fortunate enough [illegible] good ideas.

Having seen the [illegible] of the studio and experienced the helpful spirit in which they [illegible] the editor and business manager placed the contract for photography with White, it is expected that they will [illegible] even better work next year than in the past because they have moved their laboratories to a new location. The new location has more room and a better light, although it is difficult to understand how they need more.

White is sending a man [illegible] a week to take all pictures of baseball, track and tennis which will come up in the future when the foliage is in better condition to take the campus views. The usual pictures will be taken as usual. The operator will devote a week to the baseball pictures of the baseball team, meets, federal inspection, etc. being taken by a student.

FRATERNITY BASEBALL

Independents 10—Phi Delta Theta 4

The Independents showed the baseball form that is keeping them amongst the strong contenders for the pennant, in their game with Phi Delta Theta. Regardless of the fact that they lost the game, the Phi Delts certainly showed some good baseball when Jackson caught a liner barehanded and snapped the sphere to Grant to complete the prettiest double-play of the interfraternity season. Grant and Baldwin, Phi Delt, each pounded out three-baggers, while Beaupre, Independent, good three hits in three times at bat.

The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R
Indepen's ..	1	3	0	1	0	2	3	10
Phi D. T. ..	0	1	2	0	1	0	0	4

Batteries: Independents, Boright, Baldwin and Dorey; Phi Delta Theta, Towne and Knight.

Lambda Iota 5—Sigma Phi 1

The Owls defeated Sigma Phi in a poorly contested game last Monday night. The pill came in for a lot of juggling and miss-throws which were not scheduled. Sigma Phi had an off-day and had a hard time connecting for hits. Tarleton came near making a tally in the fifth frame, but was layed low by Ashcraft when a passed ball was recovered and put on him at home.

The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R
Lambda Iota	2	1	1	0	1	0	0	5
Sigma Phi ..	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	1

Batteries: Owls, Morton and Lang, Taylor; Sigma Phi, Heaton, Hall, and Ashcraft.

BOOK REVIEW

WE ARRIVE AT OURSELVES

(By New Student)

The hardest thing [illegible] to be always [illegible] oneself. Our Depression-[illegible] critics have been reminding us [illegible] quarter century, of many insuperable reasons why America cannot arrive at her own ego. We are a hybrid race. We have all the detritus of European culture deposited with us; hence we are feebly imitative. We have no cultural capitol which also wields political power—and indeed the divorce between state-craft and letters is painfully apparent. We labor under the cultural handicap of three hundred and fifty billion dollars of material wealth: how can the arts be supported? We teach [illegible] in lieu of musical thought and feeling, drawing exercises in place of art, long-winded courses in the short-story, pragmatism anstatt Philosophy, and are only too content to do a Durant through any and all [illegible] social fabric is in a jumble, with no one sure of his place [illegible] structure, primitive, [illegible] profits, not by use and service but the vaunting of the word. As for politics,—well, we understand Mr. Coolidge has instructed the chefs to serve no oil with the salads at White House dinners. The [illegible] own. And the Administration [illegible] giving oil away—any more.

But haul up short. That last was a departure from the [illegible] tone. The point I would make by this recital, lugubrious without the [illegible] that the Depressionists have omitted to take account of the American sense of humor. Whether they fail to find it when they look within themselves I must leave to those who know them to judge. I haven't a doubt that Messrs. Van Wyck Brooks, Waldo Frank and company are very good company too, in private life. But their public manner I'm [illegible] They persist in viewing the [illegible] American Comedy, and the comedians who celebrate it,—Mark Twain and the rest,—under the canons of serious art.

This I think the most alarming [illegible] in current criticism. Since the [illegible] has its own ways, distinct from those of the aesthetic. The [illegible] has less need of form and ritual [illegible] the surfaces to reveal strange depths however; and I am not sure that [illegible] comic ventures are closer to the genuinely American temper.

Add a dash of broad comedy to the melancholy catalogue I [illegible] above, and the real America begins to emerge: a good deal more [illegible] eupeptic, and more colorful than the black and white sketches of the critics. And by contrast the Depressionists appear suddenly [illegible] as joyless, and as grim as the [illegible] they decry. They [illegible] the colossal, Aristophanic [illegible] of them a little obvious [illegible] the American scene.

Interclass baseball games [illegible] co-ed teams will probably [illegible] the twenty-first and twenty-second this month, so that the [illegible] may be decided at the Spring Day, either May 23 or 24.

VARSITY PLAYS PURPLE IN BASEBALL SATURDAY

St. Michael's and Vermont to Play Postponed Game at Centennial Field Tomorrow

St. Michael's will invade the Cata[illegible] baseball diamond on Saturday afternoon in an attempt to repeat the first state defeat on the Cat's tail. This contest was formerly scheduled for April 28 but the clouds had a holiday that Saturday and so the fray was postponed to this date.

The Purple boasts of a fair team and [illegible] They have some heavy hitters, especially this Kline who has a habit of cracking out [illegible] far the Mike's have had [illegible] affairs to Middlebury, but each game [illegible] the Reds in their league [illegible] the Green and Gold ball tossers will have [illegible] They were defeated [illegible] Connelly allowing [illegible]

[illegible] Standard however has a [illegible] team to that which [illegible] Centennial Field last year and the Green and Gold ball tossers will have [illegible] walkaway.

Either Cross or Connelly will probably [illegible] for the Wilmmaki College men with Kern on the receiving end. The hurler will have a lot of support behind him so that the Dressmen will have to get clean hits to come through and edge one step nearer to the state honors.

Vermont will probably line up the same as usual with Howard the Frosh [illegible] back at his old position in the field.

The Dopefiend

NAWI GLUCAS

Vermont's baseball nine has been blazing a hot trail toward the state title. They have already defeated Middlebury and Norwich and should come through Saturday with Schoppe on the mound.

Schoppe has been the outstanding hurler lately and if the umpire had not played Santa Claus to Boston College the score might have been much different. Lefty outshone Shea who is supposed to be the Eagles' best deliverer. He deserved a better break.

He ought to receive the assignment against Dartmouth here May 30 if he keeps up the pace he has been going. Dartmouth defeated B. C. by one run the other day so that the Memorial Day affair should be nip and tuck.

The Cats are rather weak with the willow and fail to give their pitchers the offensive support that they should. On the defense they are almost flawless, but they fail to hit.

If Waining had had a little support in the Norwich contest the story might have been a little different. Moriarty hurled a good game but the batting was weak.

Conway has come through twice now in the pinches with a triple. It was this triple in the Black Panther game that saved the affair.

The tennis team is going right along also, winning two matches in the last week. With a host of veterans Coach Carpenter has one of the smoothest groups of netmen that Vermont has seen for some time.

880 Yards in 1-51-4

Lloyd Hahn, peerless American miler and half-miler, stepped the greatest 880 in track history Saturday night when he sprinted in a special race to a new world's indoor and outdoor mark of 1 minute 51.4 seconds. Dr. Otto Peltzer, former holder of the two yard record in two-tenths of a second slower time looked on while Hahn sped around the boarded oval.

Varsity Seconds Take On Lakeside Saturday

Saturday afternoon the junior varsity [illegible] the Queen City Cotton Company's [illegible] on the Lakeside diamond. Thus far this season the Queen City team has been showing good work and the Jayvees may have to hustle to bring home the bunting.

Jim Collopy has a variety of material from which to pick his team and will, as soon as [illegible] a very formidable nine. Doubtless "Nellie" Wood or Manzoire will be on the mound with Stroh catching. Frankie O'Keefe will probably get the initial sack assignment with Chadwick, Heston and Al Shurman comprising the rest of the infield. Kendall and H. Shurman will probably be seen in the outfield.

Lambert, Lakeside pitcher, twirled to defeat Company D of Fort Ethan Allen and may be called upon to face the Vermont batters with Pender on the receiving end.

JUNIOR VARSITY TAKES SOLDIERS INTO CAMP

Tuesday afternoon Jim Collopy's junior varsity started its season at the Centennial Field with a bang by swamping B Troop of Fort Ethan Allen to the tune of 11-1. Pollard, the soldiers' twirler, was unable to withstand the fierce attack of the Jayvees and retired in the second inning in favor of Stack who managed to put a check on the assault.

After the second inning the game was over as far as anyone was concerned for in this frame through a series of hits, errors and two walks the junior varsity gathered nine runs. In the fifth the soldiers combined their efforts to score their one run and thus prevented a whitewash. The Jayvees were hitting hard and often and collected three triples, a double and seven singles. Wood, Chadwick and Stroh each got a triple; Kendall, a double and a single; and Young hit a pair of singles. "Nellie" Wood was on the mound for the Vermonters and allowed only four scattered hits and struck out a dozen men.

The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R
Ft. Ethan A.	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	1
J. V.	0	9	0	0	0	2	*	11

Batteries: Wood and Stroh. Pollard, Stack and Arsenault.

STEADY PROGRESS IN CO-ED TENNIS TOURNEY

The first round of the women's singles tournament is almost completed and in some cases the second round has commenced. The matches are taking the form of class competitions and the winners in each class will meet to decide the college champion. During the past week Doris Kibbe, '30, defeated Dorothy Dailey, '30, 6-3, 6-3, in an interesting but not at all spectacular match; Doris Boardman, '20, defeated Genevieve Martel, '30 6-1, 6-3, both players showed streaks of brilliant playing but neither excelled in form. Katherine Griffith, '28, defeated Muriel Cleveland, '28, in a three set match by the score 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 one of the most interesting matches and very closely contested. Eleanor Koenig, '31, defeated Helen Buck in a second round match by the score of 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, both players displaying good form and a keen ability in accurate placing. Anna Gray Tracy, '30, defaulted, thus putting Joyce Richardson, '30, in the second round, as did Alice Belmore, '31, which placed Beatrice Hoskins, '29, in the next class. During the present week the play should decide the winners in the various classes.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS AUTHORITY WILL SPEAK

Arthur Rugh, well known exponent on international affairs, and a resident in China for 22 years, is speaking in the Old Mill Chapel, Monday night at 8.15. Mr. Rugh, since his return from the Occident three years ago has lived in New York City. Much of his time has been devoted to addressing student audiences, and audiences interested in the relations between nations. He is especially fitted to talk on this subject because of his years of broad experience.

Students on this campus who have had the opportunity to hear Mr. Rugh, report that he is both an entertaining and impressive speaker.

During this Spring he has been addressing various Eastern and New England colleges on topics of general and international interest.

California Mentor Plans New Baseball

Carl Zamloch, the former big leaguer coaching the University of California baseball team, yesterday startled local baseball circles with the announcement that his team will try a new and entirely different system of play during 1928.

Zamloch's proposed innovation is so startling that few of the Bears' opponents will probably agree to contests on its basis, but one contest to be played under Zamloch's new rules has already been scheduled.

Stated in a few words, Zamloch's idea is this: When the bases are clear, a batter may run to either first or third, depending upon his own judgment. When one man has started around the bases, going to third first, then the rest of the team must follow his lead, and continue to use third as first until the bags are clear.

Zamloch offers many arguments in behalf of this scheme. "It is common knowledge that baseball is losing its science due to the live ball giving infielders less work," he says. "By using third optionally, the infield would be kept on their toes all of the time. This, in turn, would put some of the science back into the game."

Zamloch's second argument is that at the present time the left-handed batter has the best of the bargain when it comes to running to the initial bag. A left-handed hitter is at least two paces closer to the bag than a right-handed slugger and is also in a position to run after he has finished his swing at the ball.

On the other hand, the right-handed batter is off balance and often sees the infield pick up the ball before he gets started on his dash toward first. By using third as first optionally the disadvantage would be offset.

Zamloch admits that it is doubtful if this system will ever be used in league games, but he is going to try it out on his team and when the Bears meet the Oaks of the Pacific Coast league it will be given a trial.

TENNIS TEAM WINS TWO MATCHES DURING WEEK

Vermont has won two tennis matches this week and there is to be another match this Saturday which the Vermont racquet stars are hopeful of winning. Tuesday, the Green and Gold team travelled to Northfield and defeated Norwich 3-0. The match was held on Sabine Field, and as there is only one court on the field the match was limited to three singles, which Coach Carpenter's men took very easily.

Baldwin of Vermont defeated Ellis of Norwich 3 to 6, 8 to 6 and 6 to 4. Graves of Vermont defeated Grandy of Norwich 6 to 2, 6 to 3. Shedd of Vermont defeated Plumley of Norwich 6 to 0, 2 to 6 and 6 to 1.

For the first time since a tennis team has been organized here at Vermont a Green and Gold team has succeeded in defeating a team from Middlebury. The team won by the score 4 to 2. We now have a right to claim the state championship, as we have defeated all three of our rivals, St. Michael's, Norwich and Middlebury.

Following is a summary of the matches:

Baldwin (Vt.) beat Hinds 8-6, 7-5.
Graves (Vt.) beat Henderson 7-5, 6-3.
Shedd (Vt.) beat Young 7-9, 6-3, 8-6.
Woodbury (Midd[illegible] beat [illegible] 9-7.
Hinds, Henderson [illegible] Baldwin, Graves 6-3, 6-[illegible]
Shedd, Borkland beat [illegible] 6-4, 6-1.

JUST AMONG US GIRLS

My Dear

Have you heard the VERY latest? Imagine sitting leisurely in a chair of NORMA TALMADGE'S luscious lawn set, drinking tea from those adorable square cups of MARY ASTOR'S, gorgeously dressed in that batik ensemble dress and cape of GRETA GARBO'S, with Ruth Taylor's "GENTLEMEN PREFER" doll perched jauntily on my knee and listening to that darling baritone crooning Berlin's latest over CLARA BOW'S huge radio set.

No, darling, I haven't burst into the movies, swum the Channel or even flown across the Atlantic—I've just discovered the most adorable innovation. Some people in Hollywood—the HOLLYWOOD SHOPPING SERVICE is the name—will shop for you in those chic specialty shops on Hollywood Boulevard and they purchase the VERY DUPLICATES of those scrumptuous things the stars use. Why, last night I saw CONRAD NAGEL in his latest picture, and he wore the snakiest golf sweater with hose to match I've ever come across. I immediately wrote for one for Jimmy's birthday. Jimmy just loves to be dapper. And—I ordered a pair of those red heeled slippers of CLARA BOW'S for myself. I just couldn't resist and besides the prices are so REASONABLE.

Well, my sweet, next time you see me you won't be able to tell me from CORRINE GRIFFITH—and when I sport those cunning engraved parchment calling cards like LYA DE PUTTE'S before your very eyes—well, my dear—

SOPHOMORES TO ELECT OFFICERS THURSDAY

Next year's officers for the class of 1930 will be elected Thursday afternoon at four o'clock, at a meeting to be held in the large lecture hall on the second floor of Williams Science Hall. The nominating committee announces that the following have been selected to run for office: for president, Borkland and Lawrence; for vice-president, Dorothy Gurney, Janice Goodrich, and Mabel Freeman; for treasurer, Elliot and Steele; for secretary, Pauline Willis and Nan Owsley.

Candidates for Student Senate will be announced after the regular election.

JUNIOR WEEK PEERADE CUP WON BY DELTA PSI

Robinson Hall Entry Judged Superior in Women's Division —Curtis Wins Individual Cup

Apples, gardens and Adam and "Eva" in various guises figured prominently in the Peerade of the twenty-second Junior Week which, led by the R. O. T. C. Band, followed the traditional line of march last Thursday from the College downtown. Eighteen floats, advertising the Junior Week play, followed the band down Main Street, along Church Street, Pearl to St. Paul and back to the College. Nine fraternities were represented, six women's dormitories were entered, and three stunts competed for the individual award.

The cups presented by Wig and Buskin, went to Delta Psi, to Robinson Hall and to Richard H. Curtis, '29. Delta Psi's stunt was the Port Douglas ferry boat, a clever device of a ferry towing a row boat in which sat two very elderly-looking passengers whose chief occupation was bailing out water from their craft. The long green serpent, easily the longest float in the line, from under which showed the feet of numerous co-eds, won the cup for women's dormitories. "The Height of Entertainment," which was none other than Richard Curtis on very high stilts, took the individual award. Curtis could not join the Peerade until it had descended the Main Street hill, and from that point on he attracted unusual attention.

A strong similarity of feature marked most of the other floats. Sigma Nu followed the band with a float depicting Adam and Eva in the City, and Adam and Eva in the Country. Phi Delta Theta presented in three scenes the "Evolution of Adam and Eva" from the lowest stages of barbarity to the highest. Zeta Chi followed with an individual stunt—Adam wheeling a baby carriage. "In Our Vermont Paradise," featuring Ira Allen, was Lambda Iota's entry. Phi Mu Delta presented a float in two scenes: Adam and Eva 10000 B. C. and Adam and Eva 1928 A. D. Kappa Sigma's float featured the expulsion of Adam and Eva from the Garden of Eden. The Rand House gave a scene from the play in which appeared a number of its characters, entitled "Eva didn't give Adam an Apple." Another play scene appeared in Grassmount's float, "See King Get His Money's Worth."

Twelfth in the line of march was Sigma Phi's picture of a modern farm scene which bore the title "How Adam Got His Start." Sigma Alpha Chi presented a scene from an old Miracle play. Kappa Sigma, in addition to its regular stunt, had an individual stunt as well showing Adam and Eva in barrels, labeled "Censored by Dean Patterson." Zeta Chi, too, had two entries, the fraternity stunt showing Adam and Eva in the Garden of Eden. Kappa Alpha Theta's was a double float of two auto loads of co-eds. The first was labeled "Although you can't see Adam and Eva today." The second completed the legend, "You can see them tonight." Campus House had a gaily-decorated roadster of pretty co-eds, "Adam's Eves." Another Garden scene—a modern Eve in a garden eating an apple—was entered by Redstone and bore the placard, "Yield to Temptation."

The judges of the Peerade were Professor J. T. Metcalf, Leon W. Dean, and E. H. Thornton of the Chittendon County Trust Company, who observed the Peerade as it passed the Sherwood Hotel.

400 COUPLES ATTEND JUNIOR PROMENADE

Colorful Dance Marking High Point in Social Events More Than Fulfills Expectations

Vermont's twenty-second annual Junior Promenade which was held last Friday night at the new Memorial Auditorium was a decided success and fittingly climaxed the many events of Junior Week. About four hundred couples attended the brilliant affair, and in the galleries were some two hundred and fifty spectators. The decorations were artistically arranged and had a touch of the Spanish, the lighting effects were good, the little tables along the sides of the hall were pretty with their tall candles, and the music furnished by Ernie Andrews' Troubadours, jazz masters, was smart and brilliant. The memories of the Junior Prom will in the future be the memories of Junior Week.

The place had the atmosphere and look of a Vienna carnival, with the differently colored lights—red, purple, yellow, orange, green, and the moving crowd, and music in the air. It had the look of a Parisienne street café, with the little tables along the sides and the throng lazily, cheerily drinking their light beverages and partaking of a little refreshment. But there was much, very much, of the Spanish to the place. For one thing, the decorations were for the most part Spanish. The daring toreador, and his bright red cloth, and the bull, so red with rage, and the Spanish maidens and their shawls. Included among the decorations too were very haughty parrots who appeared restless in their cloth forms and especially desirous of taking part in the dancing; their legs were already strutting, probably they were imitating the toreador who seemed about ready to jump from the cloth to dodge and tease the bull at the other end of the hall. These Spanish decorations were all suspended along the gallery sides, and the colored lights in great long strings were stretched from one side of the large hall to the other, crossing one another many times.

Ernie Andrews and his Troubadours, radio artists, and well-known musicians in this vicinity, made good their first appearance in Burlington this year. The saxophones played their little tunes, catchy and appealing; and the constant purr of the banjo could always be distinguished from out of that merry syncopation.

And the crowd danced! While the spectators in the galleries could not very well dance up where they were, they at least felt very much like doing so! The students danced! Here a faint semblance of the Charleston! There something like the tango! Now a waltz! Now something flashy and snappy! Students dancing! The college year approaching its end! The last big social event of the entire year! Gayety! Pomp! Youth!

Such was the Junior Prom!

NEWS IN BRIEF

A meeting of the University of Vermont Alumnae Club was held Monday evening, May 14, at the Bittersweet Tea House. After supper was served the business meeting took place. The following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Miss Mary Bates; vice-president, Mrs. Merle B Crane; recording secretary, Mrs. Marjorie Way; corresponding secretary Miss Martha O'Neil; treasurer, Mrs E. J. Seaman; chairman of the program committee, Miss Beatrice Herberg; chairman of the college relations committee, Miss Laura Parker A. A. U. W. representative, Miss Sarah Martin. After plans for the coming year were discussed, the meeting was adjourned.

The Women's Rifle Team of the University of Vermont have completed their season with a record of but two matches lost out of a total of fifteen starts. The record of those scores not hitherto announced follows: Vermont 980, University of Cincinnati 970; Vermont 494, University of Indiana 491; Vermont 494, University of Nebraska 492; Vermont 488, University of Missouri 485; Vermont 500, Depaw Institute 496; Vermont 500, University of Michigan 487.

GOLD KEY SENDS TOBIN AND SMITH TO HANOVER

Gold Key, at a meeting held Wednesday evening at the Sigma Nu Lodge, decided to send Stanley Smith and Bob Tobin as its representatives to the conference to be held in Hanover May 25-26. Chairman Smith of the committee on hats reported that he had investigated the situation and that if orders were in by today the hats could be obtained before college closes. President Brooks asked that all members be at Centennial Field Friday, May 18, and Saturday, May 19, to act as ushers at the Northeastern game and the Montreal track meet.

VERMONT SCORES WIN OVER CANADIAN CLUB IN CLOSE TRACK MEET

Marks First Time Catamounts Ever Defeated Montreal A. A. A. in Track—Final Result 71-64

Contrary to the predictions of certain sport dopesters, Vermont won its annual track meet with the strong Montreal A. A. A. outfit by the close score of 74-61 last Saturday at the Centennial Field. The Catamounts were not conceded a chance by some followers of the cinder path sport. Montreal brought down its usual aggregation of stellar performers and secured the majority of firsts in the track events, but were woefully weak in the field events getting but one first place.

The track was very soft from the steady rains of Friday night and Saturday morning, but some fast time was recorded for both teams. As it was, O. T. Wood, captain, lowered his own two-mile record from 10 minutes 15½ seconds to 10 minutes 10 seconds. Had there been a drier track it is quite probable that more records would have fallen for Coach Latty's men have proved themselves to be more than an average college track team.

Montreal's Olympic aspirants, Montabono, King, Carruthers, McKechenneay, Frankton and Docherty all secured first places in their events except Montabone in the low hurdles as was expected. Robbins reached the tape ahead of Montabone in the 220-yard low hurdles.

Robbins was high point man for Vermont and one point behind the Canadian, Carruthers, who had 11 points for high scorer of the meet.

Results of the meet are as follows:

100-yard dash—1st, McKechenneay; 2nd, Cameron; 3rd, Berry. Time—9⅘ sec.

One-mile run—1st, Docherty; 2nd, Arnold; 3rd, Davis. Time— 4 min 28⅘ sec.

Shot put—1st, Kropper; 2nd, Parks; 3rd, Mace. Distance—37 ft. 11⅝ in.

440-yard dash—1st, Wilson; 2nd, Woodward; 3rd, Tilley. Time—50⅘ sec.

High hurdles—1st, Carruthers; 2nd, Robbins; 3rd, Montabone. Time—16⅘ sec.

Pole vault—1st, Willard; 2nd, Hyman; 3rd, Robinson. Height—10 ft.

Discus throw—1st, Carruthers; 2nd, Parks; 3rd, Wood. Distance—120 ft.

Two-mile run—1st, Frankton; 2nd, Wood; 3rd, Wilkins. Time 10 min. 1⅘ sec.

880-yard dash—1st, G. Crites; 2nd, Eaton; 3rd, Woodward. Time—2 min. 3 sec.

Javelin—1st, Peterson; 2nd, Parks; 3rd, Mackay. Distance 156 ft. 10 in.

High jump—1st, King; 2nd, Franceschi; 3rd, Howard. Height—5 ft. 8⅘ in.

Hammer throw—1st, Mackay; 2nd, Mace; 3rd, Parks. Distance—143 ft.

220-yard dash—1st, McKechenneay; 2nd, Diplok; 3rd, Bain. Time—23 sec.

Broad jump—1st, Lyman; 2nd, Mace; 3rd, Robbins. Distance—20 ft. 5 in.

220-yard low hurdles—1st, Robbins; 2nd, Montabone; 3rd, Carruthers. Time 26⅘ sec.

Course in Spelling

A class for students who are deficient in their spelling will be offered during the spring quarter at the University of Colorado, under the supervision of the psychology department. The faults of the poor spellers will be diagnosed separately, and an attempt will be made to remedy the troubles of each individual.

WOMEN HONOR MEMORY OF DEAN WASSON IN LILAC DAY FESTIVAL

Program Includes Athletic Contests, Lantern Walk and Pageant "The Seeker"

Wednesday, May 23, or, in case of cold or rainy weather, Thursday, May 24, the fifth Lilac Day festival in memory of the first Dean of Women, Pearl Randall Wasson, will take place at Redstone with Marion Backus as chairman of the committee in charge. The celebration will begin with the spring field day at Grassmount at four o'clock. Here, under the direction of Marion Baldwin, the finals in tennis and baseball will be played off, and the archery tournament will take place. At six o'clock a picnic supper for all Vermont women will be served on the lawn of Redstone.

After the supper, another lilac tree will be added to the hedge which Dean Wasson herself planned in the last year of her life, as a visible symbol of beauty and of the growth of Vermont. Delia Martin, retiring president of Akrata Chapter of Mortar Board, will make the speech of dedication.

A new custom, conceived a year ago the Lantern Walk will be the novel feature of the 1928 festival. The committee, with Lucy Morgan in charge, has planned that the Lantern Walk procession will form in back of Redstone, and, with every other girl carrying a lantern, will wind in and out among the trees.

A pageant, "The Seeker" by Florence A. Smith, '27, with all its colorful attendant spirits of song and dance and its symbolic conclusion in the finding of the Lilac Flower of Womanhood, was presented last year in the gymnasium, and was the most successful in all the five years of the Lilac Day Memorial. Belle G. Randall was chosen by popular vote to take the part of the "Seeker."

Lilac Day in Other Years

The second Lilac Day—the first in memory of Dean Wasson—was centered around a pageant written by members of the Literary Club. The scene presented the court of the King and Queen of Redstone, saddened by the lack of flowers in the kingdom. A reward, the hand of the beautiful princess and a pot of gold, is offered to the one presenting the loveliest flower. Peasants come bearing poppies, daisies, gentians, jonquils, and lilacs. The lilac is received and planted with great joy; all the others are rejected. The happy peasant receives his reward, and all are welcomed to the court by the Queen's song.

Following the pageant, the second lilac tree was planted in the hedge between Redstone and Robinson by Helen McKelvey, '23, who made the speech of dedication, and by the vice-president of each class.

The pageant of the Spring of 1927 was delightfully repeated the following year. Edith Ladd, '24, president of Student Union, traced the origin of Lilac Day, dedicated after the first year to the memory of Pearl Randall Wasson. Before the planting of the lilac bush, she read the "Vermont Creed," which was written by Dean Wasson. A loving cup was established this year by an alumnae in honor of Dean Wasson, and it has been awarded annually at Lilac Day with the exception of last year to the Junior who has been self-supporting and who has a high scholastic standing.

In 1925, another pageant, "The Dreamers," was presented at Redstone. Miss Dorothy Gilbert, '25, of Dorset, the retiring president of Women's Student Union, gave the Lilac Day address, and the fourth lilac bush was planted by her, assisted by the vice-president of each class, Beatrice Herberg, '26, Belle Randall, '27, and Frances Knight, '28. Later step singing was held on the front steps of Redstone facing the lake, the Seniors in caps and gowns sang first, giving their place to the Juniors as they walked away.

Extensive plans were made for the 1926 event, but due to rainy weather on every scheduled day, the Lilac Day pageant and festival did not occur that year.

The idea of Lilac Day is so young that no permanent form has been accepted, and innovations are introduced

ANOTHER LILAC DAY

Lilac Day, lovely enough to be the creation of a poet soul, as it was, will be six years old in this year of 1928. In the last Spring she was to enjoy, Pearl Randall Wasson suggested to the girls of Vermont the planting of a Lilac Hedge at Redstone, with unbroken continuity through the years, for its own beauty's sake and as a symbol of the growth of the women's share in the University.

By far the majority of the students in college now did not have the good fortune of knowing Mrs. Wasson. Yet there are reasons why this festival in memory of her can be richly replete with meaning for us who were children when she entered upon her duties as the first Dean of Women at Vermont. The fruits of her deanship are everywhere apparent. Mostly through her efforts the Buell estate was recreated into Redstone. A finer spirit of friendliness arose between men and women students, women became real cogs in the wheels of campus activities, and more and more women students were attracted here. These foundations with firm hands Pearl Randall Wasson laid.

Her picture alone, with which every Vermont woman is familiar, make us love and revere her memory. Surely there is an appeal, a sweet understanding, a depth to the eyes of that silent speaking face that would prompt us, who were unknown by her, to do her humble honor. She was staunchly a friend of youth, she defended the idealism of youth with seeing eyes. Deans of three women's colleges, Deans Eva Johnston, Florence Purinton, and F. Louise Nardin, said of her that she was a person in whom "goodness was lovely and by whom youth could see its loveliness."

Since only four lilac trees are planted in the college days of each individual and since four Springs are all too little room, every girl in the University should make an effort to be at Redstone tomorrow evening, that we may pay homage to the joyous spirit of her who presided over the first Lilac Day.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

Vermont is not the only institution of higher learning where the Chapel problem is a vexing one. There are other universities in the country where the cry is "Students, why don't you go to Chapel?" At Columbia University where Chapel services are held at noon daily, I understand the students crowd the lunch counters during Chapel time, and but a handful of them go to Chapel, and there are over [illegible] students in Columbia College, and [illegible],000 students in the entire University. I also understand that at other institutions where compulsory Chapel is in force the students are very unsympathetic to the cause and either fall asleep during the sermon or read their college newspaper.

"Only 25" says "dividing the classes will increase our interest in Chapel services, show our appreciation to the donor, many more students will attend and strengthen the unity of the students to the wholesome influence of the Chapel." I insist that this is not the way to get students to fill up Chapel. Dividing the student body into classes can do nothing more than to divide them, it will not increase the number of students attending Chapel.

Compulsory Chapel is the only way by which student attendance at Chapel may be increased. "Only 25" says "compulsory Chapel is absurd and a sheer insult to the intelligence of college students." Perhaps it is! At the same time, it is the only way to make the students attend Chapel.

It is not difficult to see that the student body at Vermont cares very little for Chapel. It is very true. Oh, yes! Every one agrees on that! But why go to Chapel when one can do this or that instead?—I do not see how we can view the matter otherwise.

Debate In Spanish

A debate in Spanish has been arranged at Yale University between the Porto Rican university debating team and a representative team of the Yale Spanish Club on the subject Resolved, that the United States cease to protect with armed force American investments in the Carribean without prior declaration of war. The Porto Rican team has already gained a victory from the Yale varsity debating team on the same subject.

ATWATER KENT AWARDS PRIZES TO SONGSTERS

Awards totalling $17,500 cash and free music conservatory scholarships have been offered to college students throughout the United States along with other singers who win in the Atwater Kent Foundation's Second National Radio Audition.

The contest this year, as last, is open to all amateur singers between 18 and 25 inclusive. Many college men and women excelled in the 1927 Audition. Ted Roy, Oregon Agricultural College Junior, surpassed all but one of the 25,000 men contestants and won the second national award of $2,000 in cash and a year's scholarship at any American conservatory he prefers.

In the State and District Auditions, voices will be heard over the radio, and will be judged by the votes of radio listeners, which will count 60 percent and opinions of competent judges, which will weigh 40 per cent. In the finals, which will be sung in New York next December over a national radio network, Sunday evening during one of the Atwater Kent Radio Hours, the winners will be determined solely by a board of nationally known judges.

Ten finalists will compete in New York City when the following awards in five groups will be divided among five boys and five girls, with identical gifts to a boy and a girl in each group: First, $5,000, two years' musical tuition and a gold decoration; Second $2,000, and one year's tuition; Third, $1,000 and one year's musical tuition; Fourth, $500; Fifth, $250. Expenses of all contestants will be paid to the district and final auditions. Winners of state auditions will receive silver medals and winners of district auditions will receive gold medals.

Students desiring to enter the 1928 Audition may address National Radio Audition Headquarters, Albee Building, Washington, D. C.

Tennis Tournament

The women's singles tournament got under way again last Wednesday afternoon when Dorothy Gurney, '30 defeated Inez Belmore, '30, by a score of 6-2, 6-1. Genevieve Martel refereed the match, which was characterized by swift playing and brilliant service.

The next afternoon, Hester Brooks '30 won from Doris Boardman, '30 7-5, 6-0. In the first set both players were very evenly matched but the winner's endurance stood her in good stead, so that she came through in great style in the second set. Eunice Wilder acted as official.

C. O.: "You failed to glance into the chamber."

Victim: "I tried it once when the shades were up and got my face slapped the next day, sir."

C. O.: "Why did you hang on to the gun when I reached for it?"

Victim: "I hated to part with it sir."

C. O.: "Humph. What's all this?"

Victim: "Dust, dirt and oil, sir."

C. O.: "Did you clean your rifle?"

Victim: "Yes, sir. Twice."

C. O.: "You say you cleaned it twice yesterday?"

Victim: "No, sir. I meant twice this term."

C. O.: "Why didn't you take the trouble to clean it yesterday?"

Victim: "I've discovered that it only dirties again very quickly, sir."

C. O.: "Can you tell me what make this piece is?"

Victim: "Yes, sir. U. S. Saturday Evening Post Theft—model 1803."

C. O.: "What?"

Victim: "U. S. magazine rifle—model 1903."

C. O.: "That's better. What's the caliber?"

Victim: "Fifty-fifty, sir."

C. O.: "Explain."

Victim: "It's a fifty-fifty chance the blame thing would explode in your hands if you shot it."

C. O.: "What's the bore of a rifle?"

Victim: "I really can't be bored with such matters, sir."

C. O.: "Indeed? Very well. Order arms!"

Victim: "Two clips of brass noses please, sir."

NINE PLAYS DARTMOUTH AT HANOVER TODAY

Coach Dresser and his Cats journey to Hanover today to meet the Big Green nine. This is the first clash of the two teams this season and there is one more scheduled here on Memorial Day. Last year Dartmouth defeated Vermont on their home grounds, but Vermont turned the tables on the Hanoverites when they paid their respects to Burlington.

Dartmouth boasts of a fairly strong group and after a rather poor start has come now to winning most of its contests. Just recently they set down Boston College with an 8-7 defeat, this being one of the few that the Eagles have lost.

The Dartmouth team has a bunch of hard hitters headed by Walsh, the shortstop, who is hanging the apple for .404 while Lane, who holds down right field, is not so far behind with .362.

Who will get the pitching assignment it is hard to say, but it will probably be Moriarty as Schoppe pitched Saturday and Talcott's arm is still a little lame. It should be a hot contest and if Vermont can only benefit by the batting practice they had against the Mike's and wallop out the old pill the Cats should return with the Dartmouth Indian's scalps in their claws.

Vermont has a tough schedule to follow now clashing with Dartmouth twice, Springfield, M. A. C. and Middlebury inside of a week.

One: Did you fill your date last night?

More: I hope so. She ate everything in sight.—Tawney Kat.

U. V. M. AGAIN DEFEATS NORWICH AT TENNIS

As a result of the tennis match between Vermont and Norwich, last Thursday the University of Vermont tennis team is one notch nearer the state title.

Middlebury and St. Michael's now stand between the Catamounts and their first state title, however considering that both have already lost once to Vermont the chance for success seems very bright.

In Thursday's match Graves and Baldwin continued to win. Graves has won every singles match and Baldwin all but one. Borkland played number four in place of Taylor in his first singles match of the year, but lost to Calderwood after a hard scrap. Shedd seemed unable to decipher Plumley's game and dropped his match.

Both doubles were won easily by Vermont.

Summary of matches:

Baldwin (Vt.) beat Ellis 6-1, 6-0.
Graves (Vt.) beat Grandey 6-3, 6-2
Plumley (Nor.) beat Shedd 6-4, 3-6, 6-2
Calderwood (Nor.) beat Borkland 6-2, 2-6, 6-3

Doubles

Baldwin, Graves (Vt.) beat Ellis, Grandey 6-3, 6-2
Shedd, Taylor (Vt.) beat Plumley, Calderwood 6-2, 6-4

The tennis match between St. Stephens and Vermont scheduled for Saturday was canceled because of wet courts.

"How far off from the answer to the first problem were you?"

"About four seats."

No Politics Involved

Fraternity politics certainly did not play any part in this election. Carthage College football men gathered the other day to elect a football captain for fall, and two men were tied for the position. A special committee was appointed to investigate the comparative qualifications of the two men. The committee not being able to make a selection of one of the two, the candidates met in the office of President Wickey, who flipped a coin to decide the issue.

After this test, Mr. Flagg wrote:

"Most of us smoke names and think we are smoking cigarettes! The blindfold test proved that to me. It proved also that it is difficult to tell one cigarette from another . . . except in the case of OLD GOLD . . . I spotted that . . . it suited me best even blindfolded. How Test Was Made

Subject was blindfolded, and, in the presence of two responsible witnesses, was given one each of the four leading cigarettes to smoke. To clear the taste, coffee was served before each cigarette ...Mr. Flagg was entirely unaware of the identity of these cigarettes during test. After smoking the four cigarettes, Mr. Flagg was asked to designate by number his choice. He promptly replied, "Number 2," which was OLD GOLD.

The game was very much [illegible] and Agent [illegible] but was good [illegible] exception of three or four [illegible] and but a few Saturday [illegible] [illegible] the game would have to be good [illegible] for the entire contest.

Vermont was able to score [illegible] in the first inning St. Michael's [illegible] a run on two hits and walk, but the Catamounts came back and pushed [illegible] across the plate. In the second inning Vermont scored six more runs and took them on [illegible] in the seventh inning [illegible] a home run to deep [illegible] for the Purple's only other [illegible]. It was a two-run hit which [illegible] Aronson via Connaughton [illegible] at the plate but the run was allowed on account of interference by Cogswell at third. The hit was made off Wood [illegible] was put in the box in the sixth inning and who otherwise pitched good ball. It was his first game of the year. Coach Dressen also gave Sargent a chance on first base and he passed the test like a veteran. Howard, Macomber and O'Keefe [illegible] the gardens in the closing innings.

In the first inning Smith, Prentice, and Cogswell walked, Cogswell [illegible] second in center who dropped the ball, leaving only Cogswell on the bases. Macomber struck out. Winchenbach walked. Connolly made a bad throw on Price's bunt and Cogswell and Winchenbach tallied. Aronson singled and Price scored. Schoppe beat out an infield grounder and Smith fanned for the third out. Prentice started the second with a hit to right. Conway sacrificed, Prentice scoring and Conway stopped at third on a wild pitch. Cogswell drew a pass. Macomber popped to Connolly. Winchenbach's bunt went for a hit and Conway squeezed home. Price singled and Cogswell and Winchenbach scored. Aronson singled, putting Price on third. Schoppe walked. Smith singled to left with the bases loaded and Price and Aronson scored. Prentice struck out and Conway grounded out, Klein to Murphy.

Connally and Murphy were helpless before the heavy Catamount bats. The Green and Gold startled St. Michael's by batting almost invariably with men on second and third. Schoppe and Wood pitched very good ball, striking out nine and issuing two bases on balls while the Purple pitchers fanned eight and passed ten. Smith played a good game for Vermont on the defense. Aronson, Winchenbach, and Price were the big stickers. For St. Michael's Shea and Gorman starred.

ELECTIONS CONCLUDE RIFLE TEAM'S SEASON

At a meeting of the letter men of the rifle team held recently P. C. Barr of the class of 1930 was elected captain and A. L. Wardwell, also of the class of 1930 manager for the ensuing year by a unanimous vote of the team. C. P. Brown this year's captain is graduating and C. L. Morse this year's manager was ineligible of course of that one year manager rule. Letters were awarded to the following men: C. P. Brown '30, P. C. Barr '30, A. L. Wardwell '30, R. E. McGee '30, J. O. Farnsworth '31, J. B. Vander '31, P. G. Rowland '31, M. L. Justin '31, C. J. Ryan '31 and Manager C. L. Morse '30.

This has been the most successful season that the Green and Gold rifle team has ever had. In the Corps Area matches they placed second, while they took third in the New England League of the National Rifle Association. The results of the National Collegiate matches have not yet been made known, nor have those for the Hearst Trophy.

Captain Lauer, who has been acting as coach of the team is hoping that all the men who made their letters this year will turn out again this next year, as there is excellent material in both the sophomore and the freshman classes. Several very good men were lost to the team this season through ineligibility, and it will be a great help to the team next year if these men can get out from under warning. It should be remembered that there is as much honor in winning a rifle letter as in winning any other. Shooting is nerve-wracking work which requires constant training and long hours of practice. A new rule has been made, effective next year, eliminating the sling in standing shots and the bulls-eye has been reduced to .15 inch. Many colleges have also adopted the three year rule which now applies to all other sports, thus making it a strictly varsity sport.

Next year shoulder to shoulder matches will be fired with Norwich, both here and at Northfield. As an added reward for their hard and faithful work, Captain Lauer hopes to be able to get funds next year for a trip to Boston, where shoulder to shoulder matches will be fired with M. I. T., and others. A comparison of the scores made by the Catamount team with those made by the teams in Boston and vicinity in their shoulder to shoulder matches would indicate that the Vermonters will clean up if this trip is taken.

STUDENTS OF MUSIC PRESENT EXCELLENT PROGRAM IN RECITAL

Pupils of Miss Marston and Mme. Bradish Exhibit Skillful Technique in Spring Musicale

The students of the University music department presented Tuesday evening in the Music House a delightful program of piano and vocal selections. The piano pupils have been under the direction of Miss Miriam Marston and the singers have been coached by Mme. Elizabeth Bradish. The music critic of the Burlington Free Press commenting on the concert as follows: The program was of great interest and revealed to the students careful study and talent and much promise. The repertoire presented ranged from the classic and romantic to the very modern all of such worth as to stimulate study and evoke thoughtful interest in the auditors.

Miss Marston presented four students of piano and all were enjoyable. Miss Esther Nelson played with definiteness and sincerity, revealing accuracy and mastering of touch. Miss Anita Grimm gives forth music that within showing much interpretative ability. Her touch is authoritative and sympathetic. Dainty and delicate was the playing of Miss Irene Smith whose mastery of technical difficulties is unusual. Miss Evelyn DeBrune shows spontaneity and clarity which made her playing very enjoyable. All the pianists played from memory, which in itself is an achievement.

Mme Bradish presented eight pupils each offering points of excellence to make up a pleasing program. Miss Elizabeth Brown sang with accuracy of pitch and excellent enunciation. Miss Susan Howard showed a flexible voice of pleasing quality, and achieved success with the Rossini Aria which she essayed. Miss Eleanor Koenig has a clear voice of considerable range and possibility. Of colorful quality was Miss Della Martin's voice, especially pleasing in the low register. Miss Dorothy Fowler shows marked dramatic feeling and the Russian numbers she sang were especially good for her. Miss Marian Sargent is well known to Vermonians, and her singing was not another fine revelation of her rich mezzo voice.

Miss Marion Cleveland has a soprano voice of fluency and mellow tone and she sings with great ease. Miss Judith Moody sang one group in French and one in French, each exquisitely done as to diction. Her voice is clear, and of wide range.

For all the singers Mme. Bradish played sympathetic accompaniments of real musical merit.

The entire performance showed careful effort on the part of the pupils and teaching of a high order on the instructors' part. It was an accomplishment of the music department of the University.

The program was as follows:

Prelude, A F Minor — Chopin
Berceuse — Nevin
Esther Nelson

Nina — Pergolesi
Gavotte, Minuet — Besly
Elizabeth Brown

NEWMAN CLUB BANQUET FINDS FIFTY PRESENT

With approximately fifty members present, the Newman Club held their annual banquet at Sally's Restaurant. A great deal in the line of entertainment was offered by members present. Songs were sung, a large majority being those of the Minstrel Show, and bits of the "patter" were presented, forming a résumé of the high spots of the entertainment. Miss Mabel Donahue, the competent pianist who had worked hard all during the show, accompanied the chorus on the piano last evening, and further music between the courses was furnished by the Orthophonic victrola.

Jack Berry acted as toastmaster of the evening, and he called upon Edward J. Beaupre, the director of the Minstrel Show, for a speech. Mr. Beaupre was followed by Walter Denning, the new president. Art Covne, the past chairman of the entertainment committee, Paul Lawrence, the new chairman of the same committee, Miss Florence Jordan, the new treasurer, and "Red" Mitiguy, who incorporated in his speech the clever and funny antics that had made a hit on former occasions. "Bill" McNamara also added to the merriment of the occasion by one of his comic speeches, which met with great favor.

The decorations carried out the idea of a spring scene, and the beauty of the ferns, twined leaves and tiny blossoms was enhanced in the candlelight, forming a fitting setting for the gay charm of the girls' dresses and the dark suits of the men.

CONFERENCE MEET AT MIDDLEBURY TOMORROW

Until last Saturday Coach Latty's Catamounts were not conceded a chance to come through in the Green Mountain Conference meet to be held tomorrow afternoon at Middlebury. However, due to the victory over the Montreal A. A. A. last week, despite the excellent times made by Montreal in all the dashes and runs, the Green and Gold team has hopes of at least running a close second to Middlebury which is expected to win the meet. The cadets are usually weak on the track and will undoubtedly trail their rivals.

Last year Middlebury ran away with the meet, scoring 63 points to Vermont's 37 and Norwich's 35. It should be a little different story this year as far as the distribution of the points is concerned. Freddie Robbins has been coming along fine in all his events and is rapidly replacing Sonny Simpson as an outstanding performer and scorer. He has already amassed a total of 37 points in three meets against stiff competition.

At Northfield last year Middlebury cleaned up in the dashes. Smith is expected to make a sweep of the 100 and 220 again for the Panthers. Gaffney, Burrows, and Donald should add some more points in the 440, with the latter also scoring a first in the 880. Woodward and Eaton will press Donald hard in the quarter and half. The mile should be easy for Capt. Arnold of Middlebury and our own Capt. O. T. Wood is first choice for the two mile. Huss of Norwich captured first in both hurdle events last year but Robbins should take first in the low hurdles this year and second in the high. Norwich looks good in the broad jump. Bagley of Middlebury holds the state high jump record and is ready to shatter his mark again. Williams of Middlebury will have to work hard to beat the Vermont entries in the pole vault. Guarnaccia is throwing the discus and shot like a winner. The hammer is Vermont's event and the javelin should go to Middlebury.

Vermont's entries are as follows: 100 yard dash, Berry, Wallace. 220 yard dash, Berry, Wallace. 440 yard dash, Woodward, Eaton. 880 yard run, Woodward, Eaton, and Martinetti. one mile, Martinetti, Arnold, and Maynes. two mile, O. T. Wood, Rowe. low hurdles, Robbins, Hopson. high hurdles, Robbins, Howard. high jump, Franceschi, Howard. pole vault, Lyman, Hastings, and Willard. broad jump, Lyman, Mace, and Robbins. discus, Parks, N. Wood. javelin, N. Wood, Mackay, and Parks. shot put, Kropper, Parks, Mace, and Mackay; hammer, Mackay, Mace, and Parks.

The last Chapel Service of the year was held Wednesday when the Rev. Robert H. Ball of Fair Haven conducted the service.

LARGEST ENROLLMENT IN HISTORY EXPECTED AT SUMMER SESSION

Vermont Summer School Will Last From June 5 to August 11—Eighteen Courses Offered by Prominent Instructors

Indications are that the attendance at the Summer School, which opens on July 5 and closes on August 11, will bring to Burlington the largest number of students which has ever attended a summer session here. The advance enrollment is the heaviest in the history of the Summer School. Last year the enrollment was 870, representing 20 states, and, if the present rate of registration keeps up, there will be very nearly, if not quite, 1,000 students enrolled this year.

The Department of Education of the University, which has general direction of the Summer School, announces a series of 18 courses covering a wide range of subjects. Superintendents of schools, high and elementary school principles, and teachers in rural, town and city schools will find courses adapted to their needs. In connection with several of the courses, students may arrange to do work for credit toward a graduate degree.

Superintendent Zenos Scott of the Springfield, Mass., schools will offer a course in school administration and one in the supervision of instruction. Mr. Scott has a reputation as a very capable school administrator and his courses provide an opportunity of professional improvement for superintendents, principals and supervisors.

Dr. Don C. Bliss, principal of the Trenton, N. J., State Normal School, returns this summer to give two courses in Educational Measurements. The first course will be elementary, designed for those who have had little or no experience in the use of the standard tests. The second course is more technical and is designed for graduate students or those particularly qualified to take the course.

Teachers particularly interested in methods will find courses in primary and upper grade methods, methods in secondary education, secretarial methods and methods of teaching secretarial subjects. These courses will be offered by Professor Catherine F. Nulty, Professor B. Holmes Wallace and Miss Clara Wheeler of the University faculty and Miss Sullivan of the Castleton Normal Training School.

Professor Bennett C. Douglass, head of the Department of Education at the University, will give a course in the philosophy of education and will direct a research course in educational problems for students preparing to do original work.

Two courses in rural education, one on teaching and its problems, the other on the teacher and the community, will be given by Professor F. B. Jenks of the University.

U. V. M. RESEARCH MAN RECEIVES FELLOWSHIP

Altha Robert Gans, assistant agricultural economist for the experiment station of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, has been awarded an agricultural fellowship by the committee on agricultural economics, Mr. Gans expects to go Social Service Research Council. The fellowship is awarded for the purpose of promoting further research work in the subject of agricultural economics. Mr. Gans expects to go to Cornell University next fall to work for a year under this fellowship.

This is the first year that these fellowships have been awarded. Applications for them were considered and each applicant was investigated as to previous work and ability after which the awards were made by a committee consisting of Dr. E. G. Nourse of the Institute of Economics, Washington, D. C., chairman; C. J. Gatlin, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington; W. J. Stillman, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington; Henry A. Wallace of Wallace's Farmer, former United States Commissioner of Agriculture; J. S. Davis of the Food Research Institute, Washington; and Frank A. Fetter of Princeton.

Professor Dean spoke at the University of Vermont Alumni Association in Boston on Saturday.

TENNIS TOURNAMENTS MAKE STEADY PROGRESS

Dorothy Nash won the Freshmen class championship in the women's singles tournament by defeating Eleanor Koenig 7-5, 7-5. The referees were Eunice Wilder '30, Constance Holden '29, and Elizabeth Pindar '31. The games were long, the speciality of the players being emphasized by the number of deuce games. Eleanor played in better form but Dot's steady returning and more accurate drives won the set.

Katherine Griffith is conceded the Senior champion since Della Martin was unable to play the match.

The Junior tournament has made steady progress. Wednesday afternoon Lenore Aldinger defeated Gladys Kent 6-3, 6-4, with Dorothy Dailey '30 as official. Both players displayed their usual good form and a remarkable accuracy in backhand drives. By virtue of her victory she will meet Margaret Corbin to decide the class championship.

The Sophomores are a little behind in their matches. Monday Doris Kibbe defeated Eunice Wilder 1-6, 9-7, 6-3. Eleanor Koenig, '31, refereed. Hester Brooks will meet Doris in the near future and the winner of this match will play the winner of the match between Joyce Richardson and Dorothy Gurney.

The college champion will probably be announced next week.

CATAMOUNTS TO PLAY SPRINGFIELD AND M. A. C.

"Hank" Dresser's winning Catamount baseball club has two more tough assignments this week namely Springfield and Massachusetts Agricultural College. The Springfield game is to mark the annual Chamber of Commerce Day which is put on by the Burlington Chamber of Commerce also the Merchants' Bureau in company with the University of Vermont Athletic Association.

In order to stimulate interest in this day the merchants will declare a half holiday to celebrate. A baseball battery in the form of Mayor Beecher pitching and Max Levine, president of the Merchants' Bureau, catching. Max L. Powell will do the first stick work of the afternoon.

"Hal" Mayforth has issued strip tickets at a reduction to create further interest also. The Boulder Key and Serpent and Gold Key societies together with the baseball scrubs and assistants are making a thorough canvass of Church Street with this offer.

"Hank" Dresser's choice for the mound duty has yet to be decided. However, "Lefty" Schoppe will probably get the assignment for the Springfield game and "Don" Moriarty for the M. A. C. game. Big George Talcott's pitching arm is still ailing or he would undoubtedly get one of the assignments.

The fact that "Don" Moriarty shut out the Big Green sluggers is not to go unnoticed. Old Jeff Tesreau will sit up and take notice of the Catamount or "little Green team." Captain Von Riper will smart under that defeat for some time to come. The Big Green should come up here Memorial Day with a curb on their confidence of a runaway victory.

Mass. Aggies have a fair baseball club and should give the Cats something to worry about tomorrow.

SOCIAL CALENDAR FOR '28-'29 TO BE ARRANGED

A meeting will be held in the Dean's office Wednesday, May 23, 1928 at 4:00 P.M. to arrange a Social Calendar for the coming year. Representatives of the organizations who have given public entertainments this year will be invited to attend.

The success of the Social Calendar in the past two years has been decided and organizations giving public dances are much better satisfied with the present arrangement than with the former one whereby public dances were given at almost any time with many conflicts and resulting deficits.

The Social Calendar for the coming year will probably not differ materially from the one for the present year which has seemed to be a satisfactory one.

Western Branch Michigan State College claims the only woman on a varsity fencing team. She is Audry Glenn, who has won two out of three bouts with men.

MORIARTY BLANKS BIG GREEN WHILE MATES GARNER SEVEN RUNS

Dartmouth Proves Easy for Catamounts Who Hit Captain Van Riper at Will

Don Moriarty handed the Dartmouth baseball team a row of ciphers at Hanover Tuesday afternoon and Vermont won handily from the Big Green 7-0. This is one of the few defeats that Vermont has handed Dartmouth in a number of years. The Hanoverites defeated the Cats over there last season 9-1 but lost to us here 4-2 which was rather a surprise. Fogg allowed only four hits in that game and it was the first win over the Green in ten contests.

However, the feat was duplicated again this year and more decisively than the last one. And what is better still Vermont has a chance to trounce Jeff Tesreau's men again when they visit here for the annual Memorial Day battle.

In Tuesday's fray Moriarty was never in real danger only two Green runners getting beyond the initial sack one of these being a double by Hollstrom the Green's relief pitcher. In spite of three errors by Vermont the Burlingtonians played "heads up" baseball scoring many grounders that looked like hits. Captain Conway made several fine exhibitions in the infield besides turning in the best batting average of the day when he collected three hits in five trips to the plate.

The Green and Gold sluggers sent Capt. Lamson Van Riper from the mound in the 4th inning. Vermont started the first inning and scored one and then in the fourth the Dartmouth team blew up. With hits by Conway, Cogswell and Macumber with a walk, a hit batsman and a passed ball accounted for four runs and the Big Green captain was forced to take to the showers. Gunnar Hollstrom who relieved Van Riper held the Dressermen pretty well for the remainder of the game except that in the fifth hits by Aronson and Moriarty helped to account for another tally and to make it sure the Cats put an other one across in the eighth.

Al Fusonie lanky Green initial sacker was the only man to collect two hits off the deliverings of the mighty Moriarty and played best for the Indians. Coach Jeff Tesreau had juggled his team all around in hopes of getting a stronger hitting outfit but the best they could gather was six scattered hits. There were only two solid blows that the Green really got and these were by Harris and Hollstrom. Besides this Moriarty fanned six of the men to face him and did not issue one free pass during the whole nine innings showing the perfect control that he had.

HAPPY DAYS!

[illegible]eems to have come into her own again as a factor in [illegible]orld. Since the southern trip the baseball nine has [illegible]umber more wins than defeats, culminating in that [illegible]ory over our old rival, Dartmouth. The games lost [illegible]such narrow margins that they cannot be called dis[illegible]ng with baseball our track team has made a very credit[illegible]g this season. It is seldom that we have a team strong [illegible]gainst Montreal A. A. A. and the prospects for a championship [illegible]ason are good. Who knows, maybe we are having an athletic [illegible]office

We must thank the President of the Student Senate for his reply to our query about the new system of nomination to Student Senate. It is possible the founders would have liked to see capable old members reelected but it is questionable if they wished to have members of that organization select their successors. It isn't a question of being capable to select, it is a question of obtaining a democratic representation. There are many worthy of membership. It is common knowledge that a voter would prefer to vote for a man, who has his name printed on a ballot rather than write it in. This inertia practically assures favored nominees election to office. Is it customary for the United States Senate or State Senate to nominate their successors?

In choosing their own members, practically unhampered by any check other than an almost impossible one-third student petition, we have a governing body that appears quite dissimilar to a democratic institution.

We fear the President will suffer a further shock when he learns that two ranking members of the CYNIC staff attend Student Senate meetings, as members, and should be as capable as scrubs in reporting the news that appears there.

Intercollegiate News

Princeton, in the interests of the academic, has ruled that the library be kept open from eight in the morning until midnight. Probably no other college in the country keeps its library open so late.

There is something about college gyms that when they become old and no longer fit for service they suddenly disappear in a cloud of smoke. Such was the fate of the ancient gymnasium at Colby a few weeks ago and the papers came out with the startling headlines "Students Jeer as Old Colby Gym Burns" and "Firemen Turn Hose on Happy Group." Reading further we find that plans were already in order for a new building; that the cause of the conflagration was either crossed wires or a cigarette; and while the students were not over-zealous in saving the building itself, most of the equipment and antiques were carefully preserved.

Seven colleges have formed what is to be called the Football Association of New England Colleges in what is the first large scale athletic organization attempt east of the Hudson River. The original members are Amherst, Connecticut Aggies, Massachusetts Agricultural College, Springfield, Trinity, Williams and Wesleyan. The new group thus takes in the "Little Big Three" consisting of Amherst, Wesleyan and Williams.

Eleven other colleges are to be invited to join the group. They are Vermont, Norwich, Middlebury, New Hampshire, Rhode Island State, Holy Cross, Providence, Boston College, Coast Guard Academy, Lowell Textile and Worcester Tech.

The athletic association of the University of Minnesota derived a comfortable income from a unique source during the past winter. Early in the year this body purchased a dozen toboggans and fifty pairs of skiis which were subsequently rented out during the winter sports season at moderate rates, and, we understand, with quite some success.

PRESIDENT STEVENS EXPLAINS

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

[illegible] the [illegible] of official re[illegible] it appears to be my [illegible] duty to reply to the recent edi[illegible]torial and attempt to explain the action of the Student Senate.

As a member of the Senate has stated in your columns, the editorials seem to show ignorance of the facts and purely a weak endeavor to excite the student body into action against its governmental organization.

During the last week I suffered a severe mental shock in that there were actually two CYNIC scrubs sent to get Senate notes. May I add, that this is the first time this year such a thing has occurred and may by some chance show neglect of student notices on the part of our especially well-informed editor.

May I briefly review the history of the Student Senate which I believe was started during the spring preceding the entrance of our noble editor into the halls of U. V. M. At that time it was stressed by the founders that the men in Senate should hold their seats as many years as possible so that there would be continuity of policy and at the same time there would be what our editor would like to call a self perpetuating deliberative body. This idea we have attempted to realize in the new method of electing members.

Again the founders stated and so decreed in the constitution that if any student of the University had a question to be settled he should attend a meeting of the Senate and have the matter discussed at that time. During the past year, representatives of Cap and Skull and the President of the Outing Club have appeared before the Senate.

Further the constitution of the Student Senate allows for amendment by a two-thirds vote of the members. This prerogative was exercised two years ago when the number of members necessary to constitute a quorum was changed.

During the year 1925-1926 mass meetings were held about once a month at which time free discussion was possible on any question of student interest. With the coming of chapel exercises and the consequent omission of the old Student Union hour from 10-10:30 on Saturday, it has became increasingly difficult to get the students together, in fact it is a matter of some concern to find an appropriate time to have a Senate meeting. The smoker put on by the Senate before the Southern trip was termed a mass meeting in order to get the men students together, unfortunately, there were only a handful present and the affair was not a decided success.

After reviewing some of the salient points of history I will endeavor to explain the new method of electing members and show how it increases rather than decreases the "soverign rights" of the men students.

In the first place, what could be a more representative group than the popularly-elected presidents of the four classes and henceforth the President of the Senate? Certainly the students have shown their approval of and confidence in the men they elect to this committee.

Secondly, the ballot drawn up by this committee will contain the names of the old members of Senate and such new men as the committee feels will rightly represent the students. The ballot will further present a number of blank spaces in which the student when voting may write in the name of any man he desires. It would seem clearly evident that this is just as democratic as the privilege of nominating a candidate from the floor during class meeting. I sincerely hope that this answers question number 2 of the editorial.

Finally, in reply to question number 1, I refer to Article 8, Section 1 of the Constitution of the Men's Student Senate which states: "Should action by the Senate be unsatisfactory, it shall upon petition by one-third of the men's student body throw the matter before the men's student body in mass meeting and then settled by a plurality vote."

If this explanation of the action of Student Senate is not satisfactory, I will be pleased to abide by the Constitution in regard to the necessary petition, and if such is not forthcoming, the committee, as selected, will meet and nominate men for next year's Senate.

The days set aside for voting on the list are Monday and Tuesday, May 28 and 29.

C. H. STEVENS,
President Student Senate.

POPULAR SONG NUMBER

Tune: Ramona

Carbona, you took the spots out of my pants,
Carbona, I wore those trousers to a dance.
How gleaming their streaming white bell bottoms skimmed the glassy floor.
The dancing entrancing—yet what embarrassment I had in store.
Carbona, those Jazzhounds through the music tore;
Carbona, I heard a rip and then some more'
What could I do with you, Carbona, eating through?
So calmly I lit a Murad.....

Tune: Old Man River

Military is over. Very
Sadly wander all day and ponder
We bygone soldiers who now know not what to do.
No more rising at dawn. Despising
The sound sev'n-thirty; our rifles dirty
Are laid in the gun rack.
We now can breathe life anew
No more squads with belted pods.
No more pounding dusty sods.
Had our fill of rifle drill—
No more hours on campus chill
But they're starting, before we're parting.
Two new exams which mean we'll be carting
The same old gun and the same old drill on and on.

Tune: Chloe

(Dedicated to Pete Howderwow)

As the end draws near I'm counting the days to go;
Through each homesick tear I wait for the hours slow.
I've hardly felt so downcast since I left that autumn day.
Yes, now that the home stretch's here, I have to fight to stay.
Just a few weeks more and packing my trunk with Joy
I'll be heading home—Oh Boy! Oh Joy!
I can hardly wait for Five, ten, fifteen days more—
I'll be on my way.
My way to that Home, Sweet Home!

Tune: My Ohio Home

No vale por nada.
And if I but had the patience
And the knowledge of these tongues,
I should shout their doubtful praises
At the top of my lungs.
I say—I await my year as Junior,
I mean a really, truly Junior,
Oh no, I didn't say a Jr.
For then shall I be free.

FROSH SWAMP JUNIORS IN CO-ED BALL LEAGUE

Monday afternoon the Freshman women swamped the Juniors in a wildly played baseball game by the score of 41-1. The Freshmen showed good teamwork and an uncanny ability to take advantage of the breaks while the Juniors gave conclusive proof of what lack of practice brings about. The Freshman squad is composed of Edith Abbott, first base; Jean Belden, pitcher, Helen Buck, substitute; Vera Chadburn, shortstop, Natalie Hawley, second base; Georgina Hubert, center fielder, Harriet Johnstone, third base; Christine McLeod, catcher, Matila Putnam, left fielder; Justine Rogers, substitute, Bertha Safford, right fielder; and Brandle and Wood, substitutes, all of whom have appeared in other sports either last fall or last winter.

Tuesday the Sophomores were scheduled to meet the Seniors but the latter failed to put in an appearance so the class of 1930 claimed the game. Those who were to represent the Seniors follow: Dorothy Carpenter, Lillian Marsh, Della Martin, Elizabeth Pingree, Helen Stevens, Eleanor Taft, Elizabeth Westin, Juanita Witters, Rachel Skinner, Eileen Goodwin, Elizabeth Burke, and Elizabeth White.

The Sophomore line-up: Rosina Allen, substitute; Alice Dean, third base; Frances Hazen, center fielder; Ruth Houghton, right fielder; Beverly Householder, left fielder; Doris Kibbe, catcher; Genevieve Martel, first base; Barbara Pease, substitute; Lois Taylor, substitute; Marion Tift, shortstop, Elsie Watters, second base; and Eunice Wilder, pitcher.

The deciding game was scheduled for Thursday afternoon as part of the Field Day exercises. The Freshmen enter the game with due confidence after their decisive victory of Monday last, while the Sophomores, having made a splendid showing last year, do not intend to make any poorer appearance this year. A detailed account of this game will appear in the Tuesday CYNIC along with the names of those chosen for the mythical Varsity squad.

UNIVERSITY FARM USES ELECTRICAL APPARATUS

Electricity is being utilized more and more on the farm. A recent development is the electric refrigerated milk cooler which is beginning to make an appeal to dairy farmers who are attempting to produce a high quality milk for which several plants in Vermont are paying premiums. Equipment of this type has recently been installed on the University Farm at Burlington. It is just another instance of how the Dairy Department of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station is developing this farm as a testing and demonstrating plant so that it may render greater service to both agricultural students and practical milk producers.

Professor H. B. Ellenberger, head of the department, states that electric refrigeration as applied to the cooling of milk is in many ways a great improvement over the old way. With it the ice house and the labor of storing ice may be eliminated as well as the daily chore of digging out and washing the ice and icing the tanks. The milk may be cooled more rapidly and the operation of the refrigerating unit is entirely automatic.

The Dairy Department plans to study the efficiency and comparative cost of this type of milk cooling equipment under practical farm conditions on the University Farm where it is in constant use and may be observed by any interested dairyman. The herd is now producing from 1,500 to 1,600 pounds of milk daily.

WISCONSIN CO-ED TURNS DOWN SCHOLARSHIP KEY

Because I am opposed to any formal honor bestowed on the basis of high grades, which I do not consider a genuine criterion of true scholarship and intellectual achievement, and which I believe is often conferred upon the unworthy as well as the worthy, constantly excluding a large proportion of those worthy who do not happen to excel in grades, I beg to decline election to the Phi Beta Kappa society.

The Cardinal besides disagreeing with Miss Robinows objections, dislikes the publicity that accompanies Phi Beta Kappa refusals. It believes that "refusal or acceptance to any honorary organization is purely a personal matter. It need not be disclosed to everybody to be carried before the eyes of the world. This merely starts gossip and guesses regarding possible motives which may have prompted the declination even though these assumptions come nowhere near the truth. The story was news, but could not help the party concerned."

DR. RUGH, SECRETARY OF ALL CHINESE Y. M. C. A.'S SPEAKS IN OLD CHAPEL

Dr. Rugh Spoke Brilliantly to Students, Professors, and Townspeople Last Monday Evening in Old Mill Chapel

[illegible] considerable time in that coun[illegible] and [illegible] old [illegible] to the [illegible] and the present [illegible] China. the war was being waged by the Southern forces against the Northern, against [illegible] was being waged by the [illegible] Nationalists of Southern China against [illegible] of the Chinese people are [illegible] Nationalistic movement, he said. When questioned as to whether the Chinese soldiers were mercenaries [illegible] Rugh explained that the natives are found in both the forces of the Northern warlords. The soldiers of the South are fighting for their greater China alone, he said, while the Southern forces were fighting for an ideal, a greater China.

Touching upon Russia's part in this affair, Dr. Rugh made it clear that the reason why China leaned to Russia for aid is because China could look for assistance from no other world power. And Russia did help China and was not put out of the country as she went too far; but China had at that time wanted all the aid from Russia that she desired. Russia trained cadets to lead the armies of the Nationalistic forces, sent propagandists to further their cause and to weaken the morale of the Northern forces.

China is bewildered by the stand of the United States in this dispute. American gunboats, American marines are leading the forces of the foreign invaders. In the past explained Dr. Rugh the Americans did not interfere with the Chinese internal affairs and the Chinese are now questioning America's intentions in sending soldiers and warships to her shores. Dr. Rugh said that America could just as well send transports to China if her only motive, as it is said it is, is her only motive, were to remove American citizens from China. Because the United States is spending some $16,000,000 a year to protect some $70,000,000 worth of property in that country, he said, property which is not endangered by the outcome of the struggle.

When China sees Christians acting the way they are, she is not tempted to look favorably upon Christianity, he said, and that is why she is looking forward to Russia and her godlessness, because in Russia, a non-Christian country, she finds an ally. Russia is not through with China, declared Dr. Rugh.

The action of Japan in China, said Dr. Rugh, is entirely uncalled for. It might be that if China breaks up, the various nations of the world will then seize their chance to swallow up Chinese land. And Japan has incurred the displeasure of the Chinese people, through Chinese trade, Japan can not [illegible] to say.

This is a wonderful chance for America to withdraw her troops from China, he said. Were America to do [illegible] Dr. Rugh said he was certain Chinese trade would come to America.

Dr. Rugh has much faith in the Chinese people and believes that with the victory of the Nationalistics China would progress rapidly. This fighting the warlords is the first part of the Nationalist plan of reconstruction, the warlords must be put down first. The second period, of 15 years duration, which would follow the victory of the Nationalist cause, would be a period of education. The third period would be China as they hope to make it, a republic with a president and all. There are at present one million students in the Chinese educational institutions and they are all behind the Nationalistic cause. There is great hope for China if the Nationalists are victorious, Dr. Rugh believes.

Dr. Rugh read off the following figures compiled from answers to a questionnaire made by the students in the senior class at the Higher Commercial College in Peking, China.

Is Russia China's best friend? Yes, 10; no, 28. Will communism solve the economic problems of the world? Yes, 30; no, 11. Is communism more effective in conquering selfishness and injustice than is religion? Yes, 22; no, 16.

Do the Anglo-Saxons have more race prejudice than other races? Yes, 26; no, 12. Will the foreign powers give up their unfair treaties only by force? Yes, 33; no, 5. Do you believe in inter-racial marriages? Yes, 18; no, 20.

Do you believe that the missionaries are the tools of imperialistic Powers? Yes, 27; no, 11. Do you believe the Confurian teachings are the highest yet produced by men? Yes, 31, no, 7. Are the Chinese people more intelligent than the other races? Yes, 31, no, 10.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Professor Thomas attended the State Congregational Convention at Barre as a delegate from Burlington.

Professor George Y. Kidder addressed the members of the Burlington Lions Club Monday noon describing his experiences and observations while a Rhodes Scholar in England. In his talk, which he entitled "An American goes to Oxford," he set forth the differences between English and American educational systems. Professor Kidder declared that the Oxford student must show more initiative than the college man in this country.

In response to a request from the merchants' bureau of the Burlington Chamber of Commerce, the athletic council has made a reduction on the price of tickets to the baseball games, selling a strip of eight for the remaining games on this year's schedule for $4. Members of the university honorary societies are to make a canvass of the city to dispose of as many of these strip tickets as possible.

The sophomores met yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the Science Hall to elect officers for next year. The nominees for the several offices were as follows: for president, H. K. Borkland and R. A. Lawrence; for vice president, Mabel L. Freeman, Dorothy H. Gurney, and Janice M. Goodrich; for secretary, Natalie W. Owsley and Pauline C. Willis; for treasurer, C. A. Steele and J. A. Elliot.

NO MORE MILITARY FOR VERMONT'S DOUGHBOYS

Vermont's Military Unit was ready for the inspecting officers at 9 o'clock last Wednesday morning when Major R. H. Barrett, Infantry and Lt.-Col. Walton Goodwin, Cavalry, appeared on the back campus. As soon as a few greetings had been exchanged among the officers the entire battalion consisting of the three companies of freshmen and sophomores, a unit of juniors and one of seniors and, the band passed in review.

Following the review, the inspectors examined the rifles, belts, shoes, suits and general appearance of every individual member of the battalion besides asking various questions to some of the men.

Immediately after the inspection, the battalion performed some calisthenics under the direction of a cadet officer, Howard Prentice. Then certain companies were given close order drill.

When the inspectors had witnessed the drill, they quizzed the various classes in their respective courses: the freshmen in Rifle Marksmanship and Military Hygiene, the sophomores in Scout and Patrolling, Musketry and the Automatic Rifle, the juniors in Military Sketching, Machine Guns and Field Engineering and the seniors in 37 m/m gun and 3 inch French Mortar.

At 2 o'clock that afternoon the sham battle took place. Three war strength platoons were used for the tactical exercise which took place about a mile southwest of the University. The advance required about an hour during which time the officers were given the opportunity to show the method of advancing upon an enemy in open warfare.

Thursday morning at 8 o'clock the battalion had a parade, following which the various classes were given theoretical tests in the large lecture room in the science hall. In the case of freshmen and sophomores only representative sections were taken to be inspected.

The drill competition in the Manual of Arms to determine who should win the Scabbard and Blade came next. E. C. Ball of Barre won the sophomore cup and B. B. Jastremski of Brooklyn, N. Y. won the freshman cup.

The inspection ended with an inspection of the grounds, buildings, ranges, store rooms and various records. Everyone is waiting to see if the battalion will be allowed to wear the little star on the right sleeve next year in recognition of a high standing among the R. O. T. C. units of New England Corps Area and as members of the distinguished class.

A certain professor of psychology at Northwestern University has rather aptly remarked that it does not pay for the modern American undergraduate to think. He believes that the success of a student in college depends upon his ability to memorize and recite. The doctor appears to have pretty nearly hit the nail on the head.

NOTABLE SPEAKERS FOR NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE

From June 15 to 23 the Student Conference at Northfield is being held. Among the notable speakers and leaders there will be included Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation; Reinhold Neibuhr, popular student speaker; Henry Sloane Coffin, President, Union Seminary; Charles S. Campbell, business, New Haven Conn.; Morgan P. Noyes, Brooklyn; Henry H. Tweedy, professor, Yale Divinity School; and many others from the intellectual and scientific world.

Northfield is a fellowship of college men who are searching for high things. It is one of many student summer conferences throughout this country and the world, which are helping to shed light on perplexing problems, to point the way to power for weak lives, to join in fine friendship thousands of students who are in earnest about finding an adequate ideal for themselves. The personality of the conference is large enough and broad enough to give all types of students something they are seeking.

College training gives man better command of grammar, perhaps, but it hasn't helped much to lift the veil on the meaning of life, or helped men find their place in the world's work. Men need time to regain perspective. They need the help of men of experience and conviction. They need to talk with other college men who are in the same state of mental and spiritual transition. The Northfield Conference clears up much of the confusion in the student mind, and it leads to sound convictions on the part of the thinking individual.

Several Vermont students have already signed up to attend the Conference. More literature and particulars may be obtained from Merrill D. Powers, in the Y-office, South College, or Merle Duval, head of the Foreign Educational program.

The University Athletic Council at its last meeting went on record as opposed to the motion made by the Intercollegiate Athletic Association that freshmen be barred from competition in the annual Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association Track Meet. Since this meet is held usually about Easter time, this action is in keeping with the University's policy of barring freshmen from participating in varsity sports only during the first semester.

The Burlington merchants have been requested to close their stores this afternoon in observation of "Chamber of Commerce Day" at Centennial Field, when Vermont takes on the potent Springfield nine. Mayor C. H. Beecher has been asked to throw the first ball.

ERSKINE BELIEVES HE IMPROVED ERRING HELEN

(By New Student Correspondent)

John Erskine, professor at Columbia University, whose literary [illegible] need no mention, believes that he really improved the reputation of Helen of Troy. He wrote his famous book, he told a reporter for the State Lantern, not for dramatic purposes. He said:

"There are legends of Helen having returned from Troy and remaining with her husband but there has been little or nothing written about it. Something must have happened after her return. I wondered what was and the book was my answer to it. I think I was as fair to Helen as anyone else. Besides Helen was supposed to have been very beautiful but not much of anything else. Anyway I do believe I improved her reputation."

The University of Oregon has revised the courses of study for more than two years, excluding underclassmen from the professional schools.

Switches Back to Favorite Tobacco

Messrs. Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.
Dear Sirs:

Just a confession and an appreciation. A number of years ago I was a user of your Edgeworth smoking tobacco. But like some others, perhaps, I was led by alluring advertisements to change.

A few days ago I went into a country store to get some tobacco, and on the case was the familiar can of Edgeworth. I bought it and since then I have enjoyed old-time comfort.

So my confession is that I made a mistake in changing to other tobaccos and my appreciation is such that Edgeworth will be my Smoke Pal while it lasts, which may not be long, as I have passed my "three score years and ten."

Very truly yours,

Sell Your Books On Consignment

The

will take any book which has been used during the present college year and sell it on a consignment basis—paying for the book when it is sold. The consignor is to set the price to paid by the store.

This will save the bother of getting books home and back again for resale or the possibility of loss in storage during the summer. This is also an unusual opportunity for seniors who wish a responsible sales agent for the books they do not wish to keep.

Bring your books in any time and we will give you a receipt for them and take all responsibility for the return of the book or its cash value.

HUSKIES WIN EASTERN INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET

Northeastern's undefeated track team won the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship at Worcester. The Huskies scored 52½ points. Rhode Island State was second with 41½ and Springfield College third with 34½. Other colleges finished as follows: Worcester Tech 21, Tufts 10, Norwich 3, Conn. Aggies 1, Mass. Aggies ½, Trinity 0.

Martin, Northeastern, and Cook, Rhode Island, broke the pole vault record for the meet when they tied at 11 feet 8⅝ inches. Talbot, Rhode Island, broad jumped 22 feet 9¼ inches for a new meet record, and Bruce, Rhode Island, threw the hammer 150 feet 2 inches for another high mark.

SPRINGFIELD PITCHERS LET CATAMOUNTS BOOST BATTING PERCENTAGES

Green and Gold Sluggers Collect 12 Bingles from Three Servers to Win 10-4

Vermont took another scalp from one of her strongest rivals last Friday to the merry tune of 10 to 4. The Cats jumped on three Springfield pitchers for a total of 12 hits. The first part of the game was played in installments due to the steady drizzle which persisted. After the third inning Old Jupe decided to lay off. The disconnected events of the first three innings slowed up the ball game also.

Chamber of Commerce Day got off to a bad start due to the inclement weather. Nevertheless "Doc" Beecher heaved over a pretty hook to the first Springfield batter to cause him to take a wicked slice at the old atmosphere.

Gilstrap, the first Springfield pitcher, was welcomed by a combination which resulted in two runs for Vermont and the showers for himself.

Then came Springfield's début. Old Don slipped for a while, allowing three successive triples which resulted in three runs and a narrow lead for the Springfield men. Hopper was the Cats' next victim. He hopped to the extent of six more runs, whereupon he also retired. From then on Varney took up the problem. He held the opposing bats a little better.

The game was uneventful until the last inning when each team garnered another run apiece.

Prentice, Conway and Aronson fattened their batting averages as a result of this game. The result of the slugfest follows:

TRACK CHAMPIONSHIP WON BY MIDDLEBURY

Green Mountain Conference Meet Proves Blue and White Team Superior to Vermont and Norwich

Again Middlebury is conceded the state track championship by virtue of its victory in the Green Mountain Conference Meet, held Saturday on the victor's own track. Middlebury scored 67½ points, 4½ points more than last year, and Vermont was 7½ points higher than a year ago, with 44½. Norwich's total of 23⅛ was 11⅜ points lower.

Middlebury made a fine showing on the track, while Vermont led in the field events. Captain Wood seemed to have an off day in his two mile and was unable to place. Freddie Robbins came in first in the high hurdles and third in the low, although his finishes in other meets have been vice versa. He was high scorer of the meet, another first and third giving him a total of twelve points. Middlebury took eight firsts, Vermont took four and Norwich captured three.

Bagley of Middlebury was the only record-breaker with a high jump of 5 ft 10⅝ in., which breaks the former state mark of 5 ft 9⅛ in. established by him last year.

NEWS IN BRIEF

At a meeting at the Delta Psi House Friday evening, Vermont chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary debating society, initiated Mabel Freemann, '30, Janice M. Goodrich, '30, Lawrence A. Hince, '28, and Edith M. Thomas, '31. Mr. Leon W. Dean and Mr. L. A. Woodward, faculty members of the fraternity, attended the meeting.

Following are the results of the hockey elections as announced by the Athletic Association: captain, Harry C. Schurman; manager, W. S. Hall; assistant managers, A. Gloria and F. H. Woodward. Schurman is a freshman medic and a member of Phi Mu Delta fraternity. Hall is a member of Sigma Phi and Key and Serpent.

W. A. A. Spring Field Day which should have taken place last Thursday was postponed on account of inclement weather. This afternoon the interclass contests will be played off as previously scheduled. These will include the Freshmen-Sophomore baseball game, the finals in tennis, and the first teams' competition in archery, all of which will take place at Grassmount at four o'clock.

LILAC DAY CANCELLED; TO BE BIENNIAL AFFAIR

Inclement skies first on Wednesday, May 23, the original day set for Lilac Day, and on the following day prompted the committee to cancel further plans for a fête this spring. It is understood that the pageant written by Florence Bennett Smith '29, of Suffield, Conn., marvelously produced last year in the gymnasium, will be repeated next year and every other year thereafter, thus making the chief feature of Lilac Day a biennial event.

VICTORY OVER M. A. C. SATURDAY MAKES SIXTH STRAIGHT FOR VERMONT

Two Winning Runs Scored by Squeeze Play in the Fourth Inning—Talcott Holds Aggies to Seven Hits

Vermont came through with her sixth straight victory Saturday when the Green and Gold defeated M. A. C. 2-1. George Talcott returned to the mound and made a good showing, holding the Aggies to seven hits, most of which were scattered and useless.

The Catamounts really won by a double squeeze play. This is one of the prettiest plays in Vermont's repertoire and it is worth the price of admission to see them work it. The double squeeze came in the fourth inning, when Cogswell sent a hot grounder through Moriarty for a single. He went to second on a balk. Macomber singled, advancing Cogs well to third, while he stole second on the first ball pitched. As the pitcher started his windup, they both started for home, and Price laid down a neat grounder along the first base line.

Talcott lost some of his control in the eighth inning and the Aggies nearly caught up with the Vermonters. The inning started with Kneeland lifting a fly to Macomber. Thompson leaned on the next one and drove it into center field for three bases. Moriarty hit to Conway, who fumbled, letting him gain his base. Talcott passed the next man and a single by Milwiewicz brought in the invaders' single run.

The game was decidedly a pitcher's duel, with neither side gaining a decided advantage. The line-up and summary:

A group of Mortar Board girls went to Middlebury Saturday to assist at the installation of a second chapter in Vermont, the Banshee Chapter of Mortar Board. The local senior honorary society was organized there several years ago.

ANNOUNCE TENTATIVE CALENDAR FOR SOCIAL EVENTS OF NEXT YEAR

College Reopens September 18—First of Five Open House Nights Scheduled for October 10

A tentative arrangement of next year's Social Calendar was drawn up last Wednesday by Dean Swift in conference with about twelve members of the faculty. As now arranged the events are to occur in the same order as last year and changes have been made only where dates demanded and where it seemed wise to change dates.

LOWER CLASSES HOLD RESPECTIVE ELECTIONS

Last Thursday afternoon at four o'clock, the members of the freshman class met in the Old Mill Chapel, and the members of the sophomore class met in lecture room in the Williams Science Hall, to elect the officers of their respective classes for the coming year.

R. A. Lawrence of Clinton, Mass., was elected president of the class of 1930. Mabel L. Freeman of Norristown, Pa., vice president; Natalie W. Owsley of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., secretary, and C. A. Steele, Jr. of Gloucester, Mass., treasurer. Those who were selected to represent the class in the Faculty-Student Council next year are: R. H. Arnold of Hartford, R. P. Billings of New Haven, Conn., J. A. Eliot of Manchester, Marjorie Hoyles of Leicester Junction and Harriet E. Puffer of St. Johnsbury.

In the freshman class, the officers who were elected are as follows: president, C. W. Walker of Belmont, Mass., vice-president, Jean Wappler of Ruth erford, N. J., secretary, Harriet E. Wright of Essex Junction, treasurer, G. R. Brush, Jr., of Arlington; members of the Faculty-Student Council are R. W. Allerton of South Orange, N. J., and W. R. Sargeant of Morrisville.

HUSKIES WIN EASTERN INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET

Northeastern's undefeated track team won the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship at Worcester. The Huskies scored points. Rhode Island State was second with 41½ and Springfield College third with 34½. Other colleges finished as follows: Worcester Tech 21, Tufts 10, Norwich 7, Conn Aggies 1 Mass Aggies 1, Trinity 0

Martin, Northeastern, and Cook, Rhode Island, broke the pole vault record for the meet when they tied at 11 feet 8⅝ inches. Talbot, Rhode Island, broad jumped 22 feet 9¼ inches for a new meet record, and Bruce, Rhode Island, threw the hammer 150 feet 2 inches for another high mark.

SPRINGFIELD PITCHERS LET CATAMOUNTS BOOST BATTING PERCENTAGES

Green and Gold Sluggers Collect 12 Bingles from Three Servers to Win 10-4

Vermont took another scalp from one of her strongest rivals last Friday to the merry tune of 10 to 4. The Cats jumped on three Springfield pitchers for a total of 12 hits. The first part of the game was played in installments due to the steady drizzle which persisted. After the third inning Old Jupe decided to lay off. The disconnected events of the first three innings slowed up the ball game also.

Chamber of Commerce Day got off to a bad start due to the inclement weather. Nevertheless "Doc" Beecher heaved over a pretty hook to the first Springfield batter to cause him to take a wicked slice at the old atmosphere.

Gilstrap, the first Springfield pitcher, was welcomed by a combination which resulted in two runs for Vermont and the showers for himself.

Then came Springfield's début. Old Dom slipped for a while, allowing three successive triples which resulted in three runs and a narrow lead for the Springfield men. Hopper was the Cats' next victim. He hopped to the extent of six more runs, whereupon he also retired. From then on Varney took up the problem. He held the opposing bats a little better.

The game was uneventful until the last inning when each team garnered another run apiece.

Prentice, Conway and Aronson fattened their batting averages as a result of this game. The result of the slugfest follows:

TRACK CHAMPIONSHIP WON BY MIDDLEBURY

Green Mountain Conference Meet Proves Blue and White Team Superior to Vermont and Norwich

Again Middlebury has conceded the state track championship by virtue of its victory in the Green Mountain Conference Meet, held Saturday on the victor's own track. Middlebury scored 67½ points 4 points more than last year and Vermont was 7½ points higher than a year ago, with 44½. Norwich's total of 23½ was 11⅝ points lower.

Middlebury made a fine showing on the track, while Vermont led in the field events. Captain Wood seemed to have an off day in his two mile and was unable to place. Freddie Robbins came in first in the high hurdles and third in the low, although his finishes in other meets have been otherwise. He was high scorer of the meet, another first and third giving him a total of twelve points. Middlebury took eight firsts. Vermont took four and Norwich captured three.

Bagley of Middlebury was the only record-breaker with a high jump of 5 ft 10⅝ in. which breaks the former state mark of 5 ft 9⅛ in established by him last year.

VICTORY OVER M. A. C. SATURDAY MAKES SIXTH STRAIGHT FOR VERMONT

Two Winning Runs Scored by Squeeze Play in the Fourth Inning—Talcott Holds Aggies to Seven Hits

Vermont came through with her sixth straight victory Saturday when the Green and Gold defeated M A C 2-1. George Talcott returned to the mound and made a good showing holding the Aggies to seven hits most of which were scattered and useless.

The Catamounts really won by a double squeeze play. This is one of the prettiest plays in Vermont's repertoire and it is worth the price of admission to see them work it. The double squeeze came in the fourth inning, when Cogswell sent a hot grounder through Moriarty for a single. He went to second on a buck. Macomber sacked advancing Cogswell to third while he stole second on the first ball pitched. As the pitcher started his windup, they both started for home and Price laid down a neat grounder along the first base line.

Talcott lost some of his control in the eighth inning and the Aggies nearly caught up with the Vermonters. The inning started with Kneeland hitting a fly to Macomber. Thompson leaned on the next one and drove it into center field for three bases. Moriarty hit to Conway, who fumbled letting him gain his base. Talcott passed the next man and a single by Milwiewicz brought in the invaders' single run.

The game was decidedly a pitcher's duel with neither side gaining a decided advantage. The line-up and summary:

EDITORIAL

Commencement and our college year is over. We [illegible] a year or more look forward to Commencement with a sentiment almost of regret. We know that it means the departure of many of our best friends, who have helped to make college life more than a place to accumulate knowledge from books and lectures.

Undergraduates are all striving for the position members of 1928 [illegible] are about to attain, and we are glad to know they are to graduate. They should be richer for the years spent at Vermont.

Tomorrow is Memorial Day, set aside in remembrance of the men who have fought our battles, made possible our freedom, education and society, and have passed on. Upon our shoulders rests the consecration of the ideals for which they fought.

[illegible] campus starts to look more like heaven than a portion of the [illegible] school closes.

An Answer to President Stevens

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

The discussion on the recent action of the Student Senate in passing an amendment to its constitution, has already reached the point where there is much misunderstanding. To avoid further arguing over the inception, the purpose and precedents of Student Senate this impartial statement has been secured from a disinterested party.

1. In April 1925, D. A. Gannon, '25 conceived the plan of the present Student Senate. He saw that the Student Union in which all male students participated was not successful, therefore he considered that a representative form of government would be more adapted to student government. On April 29, 1925, he presented the Student Senate plan which was adopted on the same day by the Student Union.

2. Shortly after the adoption of the Student Senate plan the Constitution and By-Laws of the organization were printed. There is some doubt whether these pamphlets had wide distribution or whether they were given to the members of the Senate alone.

3. The purpose of this organization according to the Constitution is "to unite the student body, exercise control over all student affairs insofar as permitted by the University regulations, and promote true college spirit."

4. Article 5 of the Constitution refers to the election of officers and the meeting of members. Section 3 specifically states: The new members shall be elected the first week in May by a majority vote. Section 4 instructs the president in regard to the first meeting of the year.

5. Article 6 gives the representation on the Senate. Article 7 refers to hearings for students and faculty members.

6. Section 3 of the Article 7 states: "Reports of the meetings will be published in the CYNIC."

7. Article 8 of the Constitution refers to the petition for meetings to consider legislation passed by the Senate. Section 2 of the Article refers to election of delegates, by plurality vote. Section 3 states "in all other matters the Senate shall govern in the same manner as Student Union. Article 9 calls for a mass meeting to be held in May, 1926 to determine whether the plan shall be continued.

8. There is no clause, article, section or paragraph in the Constitution relating to the amendment of the Constitution.

9. Following the Constitution of Student Senate are printed the By-Laws. After the Arabic numeral five (5) in the By-Laws appears the following statement: "This Constitution may be amended by a two-thirds vote of those present at any regular meeting of Student Senate provided said amendment was proposed at the previous meeting."

10. The first Student Senate recommended that all members of the Senate, who were not graduating or otherwise ineligible should be passed on the basis of their respective classes at the meetings to elect new members. The custom has been followed.

11. In the spring of 1926 the Student Senate held a poll for men students to get the sentiment of the men in regard to the proposed semi-weekly CYNIC. Another poll on the same proposition was held November 27 and 30, 1926.

12. Reports of Student Senate meetings have been printed infrequently in the CYNIC although intimate relations with all the officers since the inception of Student Senate has shown that none were adverse to printing reports of Senate activities.

The above are facts, which can easily be confirmed by reading the Constitution and the By-Laws of the Senate, and CYNIC reports of April 25, 1925, May 2, 1925, November 23, 1926 and certain parts of the letter in the issue of May 25, 1928 (those paragraphs which are not in conflict with primary sources of information).

Now to get down to the argument. As we see it the Student Senate did not have the right to pass the organic amendment which appeared in the CYNIC of May 4, 1928. The reasons for holding this ground are three-fold:

1. The men students still hold the sovereignty granted men under the charter of the Student Union. True the men students have given the Student Senate certain definite powers. The men students have established a definite organization of the Senate. It is a custom in the field of government that the person or organization creating an organization has the sole right to change that organization. Thus take for example, the Constitution of the Dominion of Canada cannot be changed without the consent of the British Crown, who granted it. Another example is nearer at home. The Constitution of the State of Vermont cannot be amended without the consent of the sovereign people. Closer still, the charter of the University of Vermont cannot be amended without the consent of the State of Vermont.

2. There is no amending clause to the Constitution of the Student Senate. The amending processes, which is mentioned by the president of the Senate, is really a part of the By-Laws of the Senate. The fact that an error has been made in the Section 5 of the By-Laws in calling the By-Laws the Constitution is no ground for construing that the Constitution is affected by this section. Since there is no amending clause in the Constitution, this further emphasizes that the organic law or the Constitution can only be amended by the men students in accordance with the provision for amendment provided in the constitution of the old Student Union.

3. On the high ground of reason the Student Senate was unjustified in its action. Supposedly the Senate was trying to do away with fraternity politics, or bug bear used at Vermont by shrewd electioneers and poor losers. Actually the Senate is setting up a nominating committee, four members of which are known to be elected almost regularly by fraternity politicians. Campaign promises, etc., what?

But that is not the best part of the joke. We have attended many class meetings and we find that at these meetings there is a preponderant attendance of women. Presidents of classes are elected mainly by women. The Phi Delts were right in their Kake Walk stunt two years ago, the women students are getting control of affairs. Why if the Student Senate's plan should be adopted the women will have more than a little to say about the membership of that body. This last argument is only to emphasize that the amendment is inherently wrong. The other two points clearly deprives the Senate of any ground to set their case on.

Finally men students' representative government has often been the precursor of autocracy. Even in the United States of America, there are some who seem to lean heavily towards dictatorship and oligarchy. The recent action of the Student Senate is an example. The amendment closely resembles the Constitution, which was recently crammed down the throats of the passive inhabitants of the "Boot of the Mediterranean" by Il Duce himself. According to the senatus consultum issued at Burlington, the incapable and boss-ridden men students at the University of Vermont will have the opportunity to vote on a list of selected men drawn up by a nominating committee composed of four class presidents chosen by the women students plus a few men, and the President of the Student Senate, who recently wrote a letter to the CYNIC in a delightful vein. The Joke would be good, if so many basic principles and rights were not at stake.

Seven questions were used during the season, no team employing the same question more than twice. The policy of the Coolidge administration in Nicaragua and the protection through armed force by the United States of its citizens' property in foreign nations were the questions used in all of the women's debates and were popular enough with the men's teams to be used twice by them. Censorship of stage and press was the question most often used by the men, who also debated the qualifications of Al Smith for the presidency and immediate independence for the Philippines. Respected that democracy is a failure and Roosevelt that the United States is not yet civilized were the topics for debate against Bates and Yale.

The Oxford style of debate combining rebuttal with constructive argument, the American plan in which rebuttal follows construction and the Oregon type of debate notable for its cross-examination feature were all employed during the year while such other features as audience vote on the question were used by the women in the West Virginia debate. Audience and judges vote combined at both Yale debates; no decision of any kind marked a number of teams including Dartmouth, and Bates; open forums on four different occasions and off campus debates with a women's team from Maine at Rutland, and with Bates at Brattleboro.

The season opened with the coed debate against West Virginia in which Vermont took an audience decision on the merits of the debate and was followed by a no-decision debate with Dartmouth. A Massachusetts trip resulted in an Oregon debate which Vermont dropped to Springfield, and no-decision contests with Clark and M. A. C. The women got into action again when they debated Middlebury for no decision and then went to Rutland to meet Maine and take a decision from them. A men's team, meanwhile, lost to St. Michael's and then beat Colby, and on the same night the women lost at Brown. The season closed when the men took two out of three of the Lawrence prizes and dropped a decision in the annual Middlebury debate, met Bates in a no-decision affair at Brattleboro, and split a series of two debates with Yale.

The Dix Plan of Reunions now in use at the University, is a plan whereby classes which were in college together reune during the same years and at the end of a cycle of 19 years a class will have held a reunion with each one of the six classes contemporary with it in college. This plan takes the place of the old plan of holding 5th, 10th, 15th, etc., reunions of classes. The 25th reunion of each class is still observed, however, under

The majority of the officers of these classes have completed plans for their reunions and enthusiasm is running high to see which class will be able to get the Reunion Trophy Cup, presented each year to the class registering the largest percentage of its living members. Many of the classes are planning to wear costumes during the reunion. A silver loving cup, the gift of the class of 1889 goes each year to the class displaying the most effective costume.

Reunion Headquarters this year will be in the Gymnasium, the same as in former years. Alumni should register here and obtain their badge as soon as they arrive. Information concerning rooming places, alumni back as well as tickets for the various functions (alumni luncheon, boat rides, baseball games), can be obtained at these headquarters. Reuning classes will have headquarters in tents on the campus in front of the gymnasium

Varsity Seconds Lose at Jeffersonville

Regardless of a steady drizzle the game between Junior Varsity and Jeffersonville was played. Duba, an ex-pitcher of the U. V. M. baseball team of a few years ago, played winter baseball for Jeff when he hit consistently and fielded anything from third base to the outfield. The rest of the team under Duba's influence played better ball than they know how and by bunching their hits ran up the score of 12 against the J. V.'s 3. Sargent pitched for the J. V.'s and worked hard, but it was his first game and he had poor support when the fielders slipped on the wet field and the infield passed at [illegible] in the pinches. Charley Stroh banged out a circuit smash with Kendall camped on the second bag. Three singles in the 7th inning brought Bacon in with the only other score.

Score by innings:

Jeffersonville	2	1	0	0	5	0	2	2	*	12

will take any book which has been used during the present college year and sell it on a consignment basis—paying for the book when it is sold. The consignor is to set the price to be paid by the store.

This will save the bother of getting books home and back again for resale or the possibility of loss in storage during the summer. This is also an unusual opportunity for seniors who wish a responsible sales agent for the books they do not wish to keep.

Bring your books in any time and we will give you a receipt for them and take all responsibility for the return of the book or its cash value.

Vermont's defeat by Middlebury Saturday in track was no surprise but as an upset in what the Blue and White is superior. However they are losing some of their best material and it won't be quite as easy to defeat us next year. Captain O I Wood made his final appearance for the Green and Gold and failed to score in the meet. Davis showed up well in the meet taking a second in the mile and a third in the two mile.

Dartmouth will be after blood Wednesday when the Big Green invades the Catamount's lair. They are still smarting under the crushing defeat that was handed them last Tuesday, and will probably do their best to make for it.

The probable line up will be:

In advancing the art of telephony, there are still plenty of doors to open, plenty of new steps to take.

What apparatus will meet some newly-arisen condition in serving the subscriber? What are the machines and methods to make it?

How can the value of long distance telephony be best presented to industry, and the great potentialities of this service developed?

BUSY WEEK-END FOR FRATERNITY MEMBERS

Entertain Friday Afternoon With Receptions and Hold Annual Reunions Saturday Evening

The various fraternity houses were scenes during the commencement week-end. Friday afternoon from four to six the societies opened their doors to the public for the usual commencement week receptions and teas. A large number of townspeople and commencement guests visited the houses which were beautifully decorated with bouquets of wild and cultivated flowers. Saturday night from nine o'clock on many of the fraternities held their annual reunions.

Fraternity Receptions

At the Lambda Iota House, Dr. and Mrs. K. C. McMahon, Dr. Daniel L. Quaife and Mrs. F. H. Crandall all of Burlington, and Col. C. J. Wright of Boston received, and Mrs. Alice Hayes poured.

At the Sigma Phi place Dr. John J. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Allen, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Simonds of Detroit, Mich., and Kenneth R. Stephens of the graduating class received. Mrs. B. D. Ames, Mrs. R. E. Bingham, Mrs. J. R. Wheeler and Mrs. E. G. Benedict presided at the tables in the dining room and refreshments were served by a number of Sig sisters.

The Delta Psi house was the scene of another reception and tea. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dunn, and Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Smith, of Burlington, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Stevens of Maplewood, N. J., Capt. and Mrs. C. S. Ferrin of Fort Ethan Allen, C. Greene, Miss Elizabeth Cory, J. Baldwin and Miss Mollie Newton. Miss E. Mabel Brownell, Mrs. J. A. Dunn, Mrs. D. C. Hawley, and Mrs. H. F. Perkins poured, and the Misses Ruth Bracken, Agnes Wheeler, Eleanor Hubert, and Marjorie Tewksbury assisted.

Prof. and Mrs. G. P. Burns, K. H. Dewey, Miss Pauline Perkins, N. B. Jones and Miss Harriet Gray received at the Phi Delta Theta reception. Mrs. W. I. Reed and Mrs. T. W. Gurney poured.

In the receiving line at the Sigma Phi lodge were Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hunt of Palisades, N. J., Mrs. E. S. Lamb of Essex Junction, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley S. Jackson of Burlington, and Prof. and Mrs. W. E. Aiken of Burlington. The Misses Margery Brown, Eileen Goodwin, Ruth Miller and Katherine Thomas assisted.

At the Kappa Sigma House, Prof. and Mrs. G. V. Kidder, Lewis G. Leary and Miss Anne McLaughlin received. Mrs. Wesley T. Abell of Burlington poured.

The members of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, entertained a large number of alumnae at a reception and tea held at the house at 215 South Prospect Street. In the receiving line were Professor and Mrs. E. C. Dean and Miss Mildred Dean, Mrs. Gray, Professor and Mrs. John W. Dean, Mrs. Walter Hard and Miss Sarah Martin poured.

Fraternity Reunions

Among the fifty members of the Phi Delta fraternity who met for the following from out of town were: J. Wright, '86, of Williston; Beavitt, '93, of Montpelier; Bingham, '94, of Waterbury; Hendrick, '99, of Newton; Alvin M. Taylor, '99, of N. J.; Harry P. Hudson, of Schenectady, N. Y.; George F. JACK SMITH ELECTED PERMANENT PRESIDENT

John A. Smith of Dedham, Mass. was elected permanent president of the class of 1928. Della E. Martin of North Ferrisburg was chosen vice-president, Clarence F. Castle of Springfield, Mass., treasurer, and Eileen F. Goodwin of Burlington and George S. Talcott of Williston won the elections for secretaries. Lawrence H. Marvin of Essex Junction was chosen alumni representative.

SENIOR BALLOT BRINGS ENLIGHTENING RESULTS

Before the seniors departed they were given an opportunity to analyze the characters, pass judgment on the habits, and conjecture on the futures of their classmates. The results are illuminating.

Charlie Stevens and Della Martin were voted the most popular members of the class, and Jack Conway and Miss Martin were paired as the most all-around" seniors. The laurels for pulchritude were awarded to Tyson Hewes and Muriel Cleveland, while the members of the retiring class selected Whitney Doane and Peg Wood as the fashion plates. Bob Holden and Alma Batten are not only the hardest working in the class, but also most likely to succeed. Charlie Stevens scored again as the man with the most pep, while the same quality among the co-eds was attributed to Irene Bates. Ted Rich and Faith Baldwin were credited with the best brains. Jack Smith and Della Martin carried off the athletic honors of the class. The positions of comic ed and comic co-ed were assigned to Dan Johnson and Marjorie Tewksbury, respectively.

In the voting on the most optimistic and the most pessimistic, Kellog Kyle and Irene Bates scored in the first class, and Howard Prentice and Annette Burns in the second. The rôle of class plumber was awarded to John Leavens, to be shared with Annette Burns. Doc Leary and Anne Perkins were alleged to have the most sarcastic tongues, while Merton Robbins and Anne Perkins held themselves in highest esteem. The gift of gab was attributed to Doc Leary and Laura Bliss, who were credited with the "smoothest lines." Aspiring lovers are warned to beware of Mert Robbins and Frances Knight, the two seniors who were alleged to be the most fickle. The most successful followers of Terpsichore were admitted to be Kel Kyle and Muriel Cleveland. Wink Winchenbach and Deb Johnson won the election in the contest for the hardest members of the class, and Al Ashcraft and Caroline Hyde qualified as the dampest. The crabbiest seniors are Howard Prentice and Marjory Purinton. Al Ashcraft and Irene Bates were given positions of honor on the all-senior parlor athletic team. The rôles of Romeo and Juliet were assigned to Paul Willard and Vera Doyle.

The snootiest seniors, the ballet shows, are Mert Robbins and Anne Perkins. George Graves and Caroline Hyde were voted the least apt to succeed. Deb Johnson qualified both as class smokestack and the biggest prohibitionist; the first position he shared with Win Ely, and second with George Graves. The first premium for big feet went to Doc Marvin and Irene Bates, and for big hat to Isaac Levin and Eleanor Taft.

There followed a long list of favorites, among those selected by the class were Evans among professors, mathematics among the subjects, Dresser among the coaches, baseball among the sports, movies among the pastimes, Lucky Strikes among the cigarettes, and Ernie Andrews Trouton doors among the dance orchestras. The class, when asked to state its preference in respect to types of dates, answered in a single voice: "Prom-dary." Money is Vermont's greatest need, the seniors voted. The men assessed that the Mortar Board dances were "tough." There were many answers to the question, "What do you

MACOMBER AND ROGERS WIN IN BASEBALL VOTE

Billings, Bird, Lawrence and Powell Elected Assistant Managers

Carl C. Macomber of Westford was elected captain of the baseball team for the season of 1929, and Watson F. Rogers of Vergennes was chosen manager. Four assistants were chosen, R. P. Billings of New Haven, Conn., F. S. Bird of Bristol, Conn., Robert A. Lawrence of Clinton, Mass.; and E. Henry Powell of Burlington.

The new baseball captain, who has held down the center garden for the past two seasons, is a member of Delta Psi, Alpha Zeta, Boulder, and Student Senate. In his sophomore year he belonged to Gold Key. He plays halfback on the varsity eleven.

Rogers' fraternity is Kappa Sigma. He is a Boulder man, and was an assistant Kake Walk director last year.

Billings, Sigma Phi, was a member of Gold Key, and is business manager of the 1930 Ariel.

Bird is a member of Kappa Sigma. He has been prominent in class activities.

Lawrence belongs to Alpha Tau Omega and Key and Serpent, and is president of his class. He was a member of Gold Key.

Powell is a member of Delta Psi, Eta Sigma Phi and Student Senate. He is editor in chief of the 1930 Ariel.

NEWS IN BRIEF

MANY ALUMNI RETURN FOR CLASS REUNIONS

Cloudless skies graced the commencement of the 127th year of the University of Vermont. The weather, an important element since many of the most interesting features of the program take place on the college green, was ideal, and encouraged a large attendance at all of the exercises. About 70 alumni registered during commencement, a hundred more than last year.

The first event scheduled was the class pilgrimage, the gowning of the statues of Lafayette and Ira Allen, and the class walk, in which the seniors participated attired in caps and gowns. The address to Ira Allen was given by John M. Leavens, and that to Lafayette by Lawrence A. Hince. Both of these speeches are printed in full on an inside page. Following the ceremony of gowning the statues, the seniors visited the homes of several of the professors, among them Deans Perkins and Hills, and Professors Thomas, Tupper, Dean, and Grout.

At two in the afternoon the seniors matched to their platform on the campus, led by the marshal, Harold C. Collins, where the class day exercises took place. The program was as follows:

Music	Lechnyr's Orchestra
President's Address	Sabin C. Abell
Class History	Eleanor Lockwood
Campus Oration	Eve A. Lucchina
Boulder Oration	Howard A. Prentice
Music	Lechnyr's Orchestra
Pipe Oration	Walter F. Reagan
Class Poem	Laura P. Bliss
Address to Undergraduates	John T. Conway
Ivy Oration	Della Martin

Champlain

One of the most important features of Saturday's program was the alumni luncheon, served to about 725, including alumni and their families, in the baseball cage. It was an enthusiastic gathering with lively speeches and loud cheering.

The Ira Allen Chapel was filled to capacity Sunday afternoon for the Baccalaureate Service. The academic procession formed on University Row, and marched into the chapel. The sermon, which is printed in full on an inside page, was by Bishop John T. Dallas of Concord, N. H., and the chaplain of the day was the Rev. Joseph Reynolds of Winooski. The college choir, under the direction of Professor H. G. Bennett, with Miss Miriam N. Marston at the organ, assisted in the singing.

Monday morning at ten o'clock, while the orchestra played the processional, the faculty, trustees, alumni and seniors marched into the crowded hemicycle for the commencement exercises. The address of the morning, "Two Sons of Vermont," was given by Alba B. Johnson of Philadelphia, Pa., and is printed on an inner page. The program was as follows:

Address by Alba Boardman Johnson.

Music, The American Anthem.

Awarding of Commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps and administering of oath.

Awarding of diplomas in teacher training course by the State Board of Education.

Conferring of degrees and awarding of prizes and honors.

Music, Champlain.

Benediction.

There were 300 degrees in course conferred at this time, eight advanced degrees and four degrees honoris causa. Six seniors took special honors, two in English, two in Latin, one in mathematics, and one in zoology.

LOYALTY

A college is the place where the youth of the land is exposed to four years of advice, some of which is good and some of which is taken. We should feel guilty of not living up to the collegiate tradition if we did not drop some few pearls of wisdom in the path of the departing seniors.

The subject of our adverse dissertation is loyalty to the University. Vermont has cherished and flourished because of the devotion of her faculty and of the great body of alumni whom the class of 1928 have so recently joined. "Look ye that ye be worthy of those who have gone before."

We maintain that the best way to preserve the affection which we all as students have for our Alma Mater is to keep up our interest in her, to look back, write back, come back often to Vermont. Every Commencement ought to find there at least one undergraduate, in whom the interest in the University is kept alive. In this student of the present let the student of the past eternally relive his college days. Let him see to it that this contact is never broken. Contact once lost is with difficulty regained.

We shall not admit that we are so selfish that we are sorry to see the seniors leave us and enter upon the Great Adventure. But we sincerely hope, for the best interests of all, that their present affection soon brings them back to their college and that their friends may be kept alive by frequent visits.

PROFESSOR THOMAS

It is with profound regret that all connected with the University, students, alumni, faculty, witness the departure of Professor Evan Thomas who has so faithfully and efficiently served this institution for thirty-six years. All who have come in contact with him recognize in him both a mathematician of high merit and a strong Christian gentleman. How real an affection has been borne for him was shown at the annual banquet of the alumni of the college of engineering and this year was in the form of a testimonial dinner to Professor Thomas.

The CYNIC today appears in new attire. We are indebted to Miss Louise Aldinger '29 who designed and drew the new first page head.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

Does anyone see the article in just a resolution of "No." He merely claims that it would work and does not give any specific reason why it would work. We had the presidents of students at chapel in the beginning of the year but a strict observance of the arrangement was all required. And I feel that the impression that I claim the plan produced is the case now. It is not the case of the previous has still not been touched. He however admits that compulsory chapel is unbearable.

I guess we Columbia to compare with Vermont. The said Columbia is not located in the open city. The college students are located all over New York City. And Chapel at noon time is very inconvenient for many. That is the time when we eat food for the body and not for the soul. Although Columbia may have its Chapel, services whenever it wishes.

The fundamental reason why Chapel is not attended more here is the fact that the Faculty only [illegible] and not enough [illegible] to be understood as putting them, and demands etc. This University is a non-sectarian one. And as for Chapel the service is entirely [illegible] of New College or New Jersey or New any thing else of any sort. The method of services and responses the method of prayer, especially the Lord's prayer, the hymns which are in the books at Chapel. The Sunday morning will be [illegible] Protestant Sermons that [illegible] Now that as it is would not be any [illegible] It easily [illegible] and Chapel would be more attractive to a great majority of students. Either make it [illegible] all [illegible] or have it [illegible] Only [illegible]

VERMONT ABROAD

Otis Warren Barrett, B.S., 1896, of San Juan, Porto Rico, SAYS:

The United States is supposed to be, all things considered, the best [illegible] in the world for 'Americans,' but by no means is it the only [illegible] for those are all of the best people to be found therein."

Said Alumnus and the better half" are world travelers, having seen [illegible] a bit of the world in both Hemispheres; lived in about ten [illegible] countries, and spent nearly thirty years in the Tropics." Mr Barrett has been connected with the Porto Rico Insular Department of Agriculture and Labor for the past five years, part of the time as Agricultural Adviser and part as Agricultural Director. From 1901 to 1905 he was connected with the U. S. Agricultural Experiment Station of Porto Rico as Entomologist and Botanist.

He regards 'Tropical America in many ways the most interesting region of the globe for those who prefer to earn their living amid interesting surroundings." He says that "There are several other countries, especially in the Orient, where life would be fully as interesting especially to those who are well supplied with the means for travel; but outside of British and Dutch Malaya there has been and probably long will be too much political unrest to be agreeable to the average American citizen.

He is "firmly convinced that with proper precautions and a sensible regulation of diet and exercise, etc., the much maligned tropical climate is really more temperate than that of the two adjoining zones." The countries which Mr and Mrs. Barrett have found best for comfortable living are "Mozambique, the Philippines, the Canal Zone, and Porto Rico; for interesting environment, India, Japan, and Malaya; for sight-seeing and recreation, Spain, Italy, Belgium and England."

Mr. Barrett firmly believes that institutions like the University of Vermont should stress considerably more than at present the preparation of graduates for tropical work. He sees no reason, he says, to change his attitude as expressed before a body of the Agricultural students of the University of Vermont many years ago. He still urges them "to look Tropicsward for both scientific research and for lucrative technical positions in the various branches of the broadest science of the world." Mr Barrett also wishes to remind the University Alumni that they should appreciate more fully if possible their extraordinary advantages in their Agricultural College, which has been doing such excellent work for the past thirty years.

After more than a quarter of a century in personal experiences with nearly all of the minor and all the major crops of the Tropics, he says that he has felt it incumbent upon him to set down his personal opinions for and against said crops in a book, "The Tropical Crops," which is due to come before the public through the Macmillan publishing house this summer.

In his letter to the Editor, Mr. Barrett said that the above seems a bit dry and cold, and wrote the following which he says is a little more human: "The 'betterhalf' has been building up a rather remarkable stamp collection from 737 different countries, largely by exchange," and his main hobbies at present are tropical pomology, the conservation of tropical farm wastes, shark fishing, marine by-products, and demonstration farms.

NEWS IN BRIEF

At a meeting of the Eastern Intercollegiate Debate League held at Princeton recently, it was voted that contests in the league should be decided by vote of the audience, rather than by vote of three judges. The sixteen representatives of eleven eastern colleges voted unanimously in favor of this change. It was decided also to have the audiences vote on the question of the debate both before and after the debaters had spoken.

Bennett C. Douglass, director of the summer school at the University has announced that an elementary demonstration school will be conducted in one of Burlington's public schools during the summer session this year. The school will include the first six grades, taught by teachers particularly fitted for the work.

Norwich sports lost 20 men this year by graduation, among them four first string football players, two baseball tossers, six track men, three basketeers, and five members of the rifle team.

Hank Dresser, varsity baseball coach, addressed the Burlington Rotarians June 4. In an interesting talk he set forth some of the principles of modern baseball, in particular describing the "squeeze play," which his team used to advantage on several occasions.

Burlington High School debaters won the state championship by defeating the team from Morrisville, and incidentally acquired full scholarships of $275 each to the University. The members of the losing team receive half scholarships according to the rules of this debating league, which is conducted yearly under the auspices of the University of Vermont. The question discussed was, "Resolved, that there should be a federal department of education with a secretary in the President's cabinet," and the judges are three university professors Bennett C. Douglas, Wellington E. Aiken, and John T. Metcalf Lloyd A. Woodward, instructor in [illegible] presided.

Gilbert M. Smith of Sheffield, Mass., high point winner on the Middlebury track team for the past three years, and holder of the college and state records in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, was recently elected to captain the 1929 team.

William N. Loudon, '31, was seriously injured in an automobile accident June 9. He was taken to the Mary Fletcher Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate the left arm at the shoulder.

Norwich won second place in the race for the state baseball crown by defeating St. Michael's 6-2.

Professors J. I. Lindsay and L. W. Dean addressed the Grey Friars at their last meeting of the year.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Kenneth "Doc" Newton of this city to Miss Sally Cloutier of Manchester, N. H. After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Newton will be at home at 428 South Winooski Avenue.

Finds Right Tobacco for the Tropics

October 6, 1926

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va., U. S. A.
Gentlemen:

Most all well-known tobaccos smoke well in a cold or temperate climate but very few in a tropical climate. They are mostly too heavy, don't seem to be blended right—at least that is my opinion gained from practical experience.

However, Edgeworth is the best in any climate. Again that is my opinion gained by practical experience.

I cannot get the same pleasure out of any brand of tobacco that I can out of Edgeworth, and I have tried many—and paid fancy prices, too. It is real money to smoke imported tobacco here; the import duty is very high.

Anyway, we cannot have everything we would like in these countries but we can hold on to all the little pleasures possible. Now you know why I smoke Edgeworth.

Yours respectfully,
R. C. Ring

History is filled with the names of those who have neither sought nor attained wealth. Would it not be a true definition of success to describe it as the development of one's powers to attain and to impart to others that which creates happiness? The foundations of happiness are industry, honesty and loyalty. Industry means willingness to labor with all one's faculties, to know and do everything pertaining to mastery of one's vocation, wasting neither time nor strength upon things which conflict therewith.

Incidentally, other qualities add to the value of industry, such as punctuality, courtesy and capacity to get on harmoniously with others. Honesty necessarily develops sincerity. No one can be honest who is insincere. The two constitute the basis of confidence and friendship. Loyalty, when understood in its full significance, comprises the highest of all qualities; faithfulness, zeal, devotion to a high and worthy purpose, readiness unselfishly to make any sacrifice necessary for its accomplishment. If one cultivates these qualities with respect to "the daily round, the common task," they become essential qualities of character, and tend to lift us to devotion to what is higher than mere material things. Contacts with others who happen in certain respects to be our superiors should serve to stimulate efforts for improvement in standards of deportment, speech, reading, education and acquaintances. Our highest loyalty should be to a high cause. In selecting the purpose or cause outside ourselves worthy of the highest devotion of which we are capable, and appraising the respective values of many differing in merit, we should select the highest and noblest. What can make a higher appeal than the submission of all we possess, body, mind and spirit, to the service of God. Herein is the highest assurance of real and lasting happiness, and in the largest and best sense of success.

Commencement Notes

Thirty-one members, past and present, met at the Ethan Allen Club Saturday morning at 8 o'clock for the Alder Breakfast, which has become a regular feature of the commencement program. The meeting was informal in nature, everyone present speaking briefly as his turn came. Albert T. Holden, '23, was in charge of the breakfast.

Twenty members of the Akraia chapter of the Mortar Board, women's senior honorary society, attended the annual luncheon of the organization which was held at the Hotel Vermont yesterday noon. The luncheon, which is purely of a social nature, is held each year at Commencement time and provides an opportunity for a reunion of the alumnae.

A large number of seniors, alumni, faculty of the University made merry at the annual senior prom which was held in the Billings Library Friday evening. A reception was held by President and Mrs. Guy W. Bailey from 8.30 until 9 o'clock, followed by dancing until 1 o'clock. In the receiving line were President and Mrs. Bailey, Dean G. H. Perkins, Dean Marion Patterson, Dean and Mrs. J. L. Ellis, Dean and Mrs. J. W. Votey, Professor and Mrs. Frederick Tupper, Charles H. Stevens, Dorothy M. Dearing, Sabin C. Abell president of the senior class, and Miss Irene M. Bates. The senior committee in charge of the dance consisted of C. H. Stevens, Dorothy M. Dearing, A. E. Ashcraft, Anna E. Batten, A. A. Valenti and Ernest F. Goodwin. Music for the dancing was furnished by Joseph Weaver and the "New Vermonters." The dance program was made up of fifteen dances with two extras. Of these, five were fox trots and four were waltzes.

The alumnus from the oldest class present was Dr. C. M. Ferrin of Burlington of the class of 1865. Louis Marsh of the class of 1872 was the next oldest.

Randall Norton, '13, of Shanghai probably holds the record this year for distance traveled to attend Commencement. He was here last year also.

The Burlington Military Band, under the direction of Joseph F. Lech, gave an excellent concert on the campus Sunday evening, in accordance with the custom of recent years. It was an ideal night for a concert, the attendance was large and the band played a program of college songs and numbers. The campus was lighted with many colored lights. The tower of the Ira Allen was completely lighted, made a fine picture through the trees.

Nu Sigma Nu held a special meeting Saturday evening to initiate six Delta Mu alumni. Those who were taken into the national society were Drs. Roger N. Blake of River Edge, N. J.; Franklin S. Dwinell of Bradford; Arthur J. Ellis of Newark, N. J.; DeForest C. Jarvis of Barre, Frank Preston of Binghamton, N. Y.; C. L. Smart of Laconia, N. H.; Byron Tillotson of Fort Edward, N. Y., and Edwin A. Tobin of North Bennington.

The Medical Alumni of the University of Vermont held their annual banquet in the roof garden of the Hotel Vermont Saturday evening with 103 present.

The annual banquet of the alumni of the College of Engineering, which took place Saturday evening at the Hotel Van Ness, was in the form of a testimonial dinner to Professor Evan Thomas, who retires from active teaching this year. About 57 alumni and faculty members with their wives were present. A purse of money was presented to Professor Thomas by his former students as a token of their appreciation of his work.

Alumni and faculty of the College of agriculture to the number of 50 gathered in the dining room of the New Sherwood Hotel Saturday evening for the annual banquet.

"During the past year we have received gifts on the annuity plan and also have received notice of bequests and trusts amounting to at least $400,000," President Guy W. Bailey of the University told the alumni at the close of the alumni luncheon in the gymnasium annex Saturday noon. This is about double the amount that was announced last year at the alumni luncheon.

Dean Patterson entertained the Ladies of the Faculty and the Senior Women at a tea held at Redstone June 14. Those assisting were Mrs. Tupper, Mrs. Groat, Miss Terrill and Miss Nulty. Several girls from the Junior and Sophomore classes helped with the serving. The Dean's Tea has come to be one of the features of the commencement week-end and usually takes place on the south lawn between Redstone and Robinson Hall, but this year a sudden shower caused a change in plans and the large living room in Redstone proved an attractive spot for the affair.

About 75 couples went Monday night on the senior boatride to Hotel Champlain, Bluff Point, N. Y., where a banquet was served and dancing enjoyed until the early hours of the morning. The party returned to Burlington during the wee hours of the morning. This was the final event of the Commencement program at the University of Vermont.

The annual reunion of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity was held at the house, with about 35 in attendance. Among those from away were Dan Adams of Great Barrington, Mass.; C. H. Smith of New York City; Rev. Robert C. Wilson of Bethel; William M. Bryant of Springfield, W. T. Whalen of New York City; Raymond C. Brown of Buffalo, N. Y.; Francis L. Herric of Pawlet, John M. Evans of New York City; J. C. Hayford of Johnson; Arthur E. Eaton of Worcester, Mass.; Dr. Charles A. Riley of Boston, Mass.; and John R. Newton of Shanghai, China.

Some 40 alumni attended the meeting at the Kappa Sigma house. Among those from away were W. T. Stewart, '93, of Washington, D. C.; Merton C. Robbins, '93, of Pelham Manor, N. Y., Duane Stewart, '02, of Washington, D. C.; Henry R. Buck, 12, of White River Junction; E. H. Davison, '13, of Glens Falls, N. Y.; Perley Glidden, '15, of Orwell; J. J. Marsett, '22, of Proctor, J. L. Kimball, '27 of New Haven, Conn., George K. Leary, '27, of Morgantown, W. Va., and Donald Rockwell, '27, of New Haven, Conn.

A large number of alumni attended the reunion at the Sigma Nu Lodge. Among those from outside the city were R. T. Edgerton, '98, of Boston, E. E. Miller, '01, of Palisades, N. J., W. Whitcomb, '08, of Rutland; W. F. French '09, of Brattleboro; Irving S. Cobb, '12, of Bennington, Samuel Bartlett, '21, of Essex Junction, Walter Jennings, '21, of New York City; Arthur Berry, '22, of Winooski; H. W. Soule, '22 of White River Junction, Nelson Duba, '23, of Johnson, James Greig, '24, of Johnson; Whitney Parker, '24, of White River Junction; Earl Chevalier, '25, of Springfield, Mass., R. N. Cogswell, '25 of Washington, D. C., Carl Abbott, '26 of Allentown, Pa.; Robert Cox, '26, of New York City; Donald Kimball, '26, of Springfield, Mass.; A. K. Tudhope, '26, of Grand Isle, Lawrence H. Averill, '27, of Hartford, Conn., and Archie Post, '27, of Proctor.

The reunion and dance of the Phi Mu Delta fraternity was held at the Champlain Club, with about 25 members present. Among those from outside of Burlington were H. A. Bailey, '15, of Winooski; Royce Cave, '18, of Boston, Mass.; D. Leo Hayes, '19, of Oneida, N. Y.; H. A. Merrill, '20, of Essex Junction; Glenn W. Merrill, '23, of Norwich; R. D. Aplin, '24, of Middlebury; T. D. Cook, '25, of Rutland; Howard T. Aplin, '27, of Proctor, and H. V. Green, '27, of Proctor.

Belmont Houghton, '23, of Washington, D. C., Guy McCuen, '23, of Montgomery, Mass., Royce Pitkin, '23, of Wallingford, Dr. Brand Soules, '23 of Washington, D. C., Dr. Roland Smith, '25, of North Attleboro, Mass., E. J. Witt, '25, of New York City; Ralph Dawson, '26, of Newark, N. J.; George Ward, '26, of Winooski; B. L. Lawlor, '27, of Bellows Falls and Floyd Sears, '27, of Bellows Falls were among the 20 members of the Zeta Chi fraternity who were present at the reunion.

Sigma Alpha Chi held its fifth reunion banquet at the New Sherwood Hotel. Following the banquet the annual meeting of the alumni organization was held. Among the out of town alumni of the fraternity who were present for the reunion were C. E. Seamans '22 of Rutland, I. M. Colton '25 of Orleans, B. W. Randall '25 of Portland, Me., F. L. Berry '25 of Montpelier, L. G. Carl '26, of St. Albans; E. L. Gilman, '26, of Woodstock; S. B. Heath, '26, of New York City, G. R. Ware, '26 of Newport; S. A. Cox '27 of Woodstock, A. R. Hill, '27 of Lyndonville, H. E. Southworth, '27, of Proctor, E. C. Suctor ex-'28, of Barre; C. H. Wilson, ex-'29 of Long Lake, N. Y.; W. A. Sargent, M. Coe of Brattleboro, J. G. Bruce, '25, of Springfield, Mass., F. I. Taylor, '25, and E. W. Butler, '23, of Chicago, Ill.

Women's Fraternity Reunions

The June Spread of the Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity was held at the town hall in Shelburne followed by a meeting at the fraternity house with Mrs. J. F. Downing as toastmistress who called upon Mildred Whitney, '29, Mrs. Theodore P. Flint, '97, Mrs. Jean Christie Bull, '86, and Dorothy Dearing for short toasts. Among those present from out of town were Mrs. Lorion J. Appleton, Frances Atkinson, Blanche Brigham, Mrs. W. H. Boardman, Mrs. Jean C. Bull, Mrs. Beatrice M. Bergman, Eleanor Chapman, Mrs. Marguerite W. Casey, Mrs. Bessie T. Chandler, Frances Dutton, Harriett Elliott, Mrs. Lucy B. French, Mrs. Homer Flint, Dorothy Gray, Elizabeth Howe, Gertrude Hurst, Mrs. Anna D. Learnard, Mrs. Robert Moore, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Ross, Frances Stone, Helen Stoddard, Muriel Smith, Mrs. Ralph W. Simonds, Mary J. Simpson, Naomi Thorne, Mrs. Mabel W. White, Mrs. May G. Wyman.

The Sherwood Hotel was the scene of the reunion and banquet of 40 members of the Delta Delta Delta fraternity Saturday evening. Among the alumnae present were Barbara Gray, Eunice Cook, Gladys Flint, Mrs. Arnold, B. K. Fayles, Mrs. O. K. Jenny, Mrs. Warner Morrill, Iola Bagley, Loretta Jennings, Margaret Tudhope, Gladys Ford, Mrs. Ford, Cora Schoppe, Marion Winters, Mrs. Seamans, Beatrice Herberg, Margaret Comings, Dorothy Ellis, Doris Griffith, Catherine Lang, Harriett Metcalf, and Mrs. Tinkham. Chocolates were passed announcing the engagements of Doris Griffith, '27, to Carl Simpson, '27; Eunice Cooke '27 to Edward Marshall, '27 and Dorothy Barrows, '26, to Hjalmar Aronson '27.

Vermont Beta of Pi Beta Phi held its annual June Spread at the Yacht Club house Saturday evening with an attendance of 49. During the evening Esther R. Stanley '25 daughter of Dr. E. A. Stanley of Waterbury announced her engagement to Bingham J. Humphrey of Proctor '27. Alumni from out of the city who were present included: Ruth C. Best, '23, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Helen Hyde of New York City, Frances Hyde Johnson, '20 of Rumford, R. I., Miriam Butler Taylor, '26 of Montpelier, Frances Burditt Randall '26, Corinna Somerville Holway '25 and Norma Perkins Parker, '18, all of Waterbury; Caroline Meigs Adams '18 of Great Barrington, Mass., Marion E. Symonds '21 of Woburn, Mass., Esther R. Stanley '27 of Waterbury, Ruth D. Winslow

Bishop Dallas Exhorts Seniors To Be Awake To Their Opportunities

John Thompson Dallas, D.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New Hampshire gave the Baccalaureate Sermon in the Ira Allen Chapel. Taking his text from Matthew 25, 13, "Watch therefore for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh," he delivered a stirring appeal to the seniors to be alive and awake to their chance. He said in part:

Our grandfathers interpreted that verse which I have chosen as my text as a warning and as a command to be prepared for death. During the early years of the Christian church these words were looked upon as an announcement of a reappearance of Jesus in the flesh. How much more like our appreciation of the Master of mankind to take the picture He gives and to apply it to us in the midst of a generation surrounded by the wealth, the power and the opportunity of America.

And so in the name of the church I summon you young men and young women to a watchfulness, an expectantness, a sensitiveness which will allow you of a day to make your very own contribution to your country and to your God. It may be today. It may be half a century from now. To insure your readiness you must take for your standard of life an ideal which will amuse some of you, terrify others of you, but which will thrill a few of you. On the ensign which you must carry ever before you are these words: "Put yourself at God's disposal."

Because of your youth, of your faith, of your training in this great university, of your inheritance, the most of you are conscious that you are setting forth into a fullness of an experience of life. You know that you have been getting ready for something good and great. It does not startle you when you are asked to put yourself at the disposal of God. You catch quickly the significance of the words of the Master of Mankind, "watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

Just because we are Americans and are in the heart of America we are not quite aware of what we have on our hands to accomplish. No generation ever guesses quite the magnitude of its opportunity or responsibility.

And we, the children of this bigness, this wealth, this magnitude, this size, we the offspring of this richness and power, are in a fog. We little sense our position in the world and we barely know we have an awful responsibility.

"Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh," and dare to put yourself at the disposal of God of God Almighty, the Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace, "of the increase of whose government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever."

In any country of the world wherever man is there remain new and wonderful and beautiful things to be discovered and to be done. But the task of being an American is in itself great and new and wonderful and beautiful. Eventually out of what we call our country there must be evolved a mind and emotions to fit all this preeminence. You young men and young women have got to do something about it. Put yourself at the disposal of God. "Watch therefore."

In all the things which men do, what does lie ahead for the courage and endurance and patience of him who has the vision? In engineering, in medicine, in politics, in literature, in art, in music, in business, in theology—the world waits for your contribution. There are questions to be answered only by you and only by those of you who dare to put yourself at God's disposal.

Will there arise an engineer to control the floods which devastate the lands, or an engineer to make transportation in the air the vogue? Will there be a doctor to heal the body and the mind of man? Will there be politicians to lead these more than one hundred millions of people out into a sanity of life where freedom is indeed safe?

What a task in literature: to tell a giant's story or to put into metre the passion of an hundred million souls! Can an artist ever find beauty to measure up to our size? Who of the musicians will catch out of heaven a song which will contain the sweeps and stretches of North America? Will there come in business, executives to carry out even greater lessons of co-operation than ever before? Can there grow men with so fine a sense of God who will write and speak anew the vision of the Eternal which will inspire men and women?

Yes—these things will be if you put yourself at the disposal of your highest vision. Your reward is uncertain save that your satisfaction will be in a sureness that God is in it all. Dare to put all your life with its training at God's disposal, your training here begun.

"Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Sabin C. Abell

Members of the Faculty Classmates and Guests

Today is spoken of as Class Day established by tradition as the occasion on which the class comes together and by their representatives express the thoughts and sentiments which mark the end of their college career. We welcome you who are our guests to this occasion.

Our four years at U. V. M. have been profitable ones due mainly to the untiring efforts of President Hatles and the faculty members with whom we have formed friendships. It is with the deepest regret that we are leaving this institution which our loyal founders provided in order that future generations might partake of its pleasures and benefits and in closing I most heartily hope that the lives of our class may be an honor to their Alma Mater and to that great body of alumni by whic the university is ever proud to be judged.

CLASS HISTORY

Eleanor T. Lockwood

Classmates Members of the Faculty and Friends

To you dear classmates these facts which are about to be retold are an ancient history and so considered old yet there are those unmindful still of our great prowess and even greater skill. So bear with me if you but can, while I unfold the deeds and scan the progress of those who from meager beginnings have become the seniors of today.

'Twas in the fall of '24 that 450 or perhaps more of the greenest freshmen ever seen made their first appearance in the opening scene of the realistic drama more widely known as college life. Since history should report the facts I must get on, but like most historians and not a poet, I feel the urge of time and prose.

Chapter I

In keeping with tradition the sophomores won the cane rush as usual, and to add to this small our men gave them the tug-o-war.

We do not hesitate to take credit for the dramatic ability early displayed by six members of our class who appeared in "Milestones." In athletics as well as in dramatics the masculine complement of '28 (it wouldn't be fair to call it supplement) had the uncanny ability to play more less tire with their opponents.

On December 5 the classes of '27 and '28 declared a truce and forgot for a time their differences in order to unite their efforts in staging the annual football hop which was granted to be the usual typical and successful replica of a meat or fish packing establishment.

The fact revealed that when we were freshmen the faculty was just beginning to discuss the plan and cons of a uniform cut system. Perhaps our predecessors were not inclined to be class cutters. It is interesting to note that as yet only the department of economics has effected a definite cut system.

You have heard so much discussion of late about the student senate that I believe it timely to remind you that it was to our freshman year that this organization had its inception. With our graduation go the last of those who began and who have directed its activities for four years. Through the efforts of this organization and the women's student union the social calendar was first drawn up in the spring of 1925.

As I near the end of this the first year I recall the problem and responsibilities of our class rested on its officers who were Marion Robbins president; Katharine Griffith vice president; Frances Knight secretary, and Tyson Howes, treasurer. With our transition from freshmen to sophomores came the crossword puzzle although I dare say there was no connection between the two.

Chapter II

To direct our affairs as sophomores we elected John Conway president, Eileen Goodwin vice president, Dorothy Hall secretary and William Cogswell treasurer.

'Tis said that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and perhaps it was with this in view that the university opened the coffee corner. The fact is that the coeds would appear to have almost a complete monopoly there. However, when it is a question of telephoning, the coeds have no advantages over the men. Since October, 1925, all have been most solicitous in borrowing nickels from the various members of their respective fraternities or from each other. When nickels are not available more drastic measures are used these, not to be mentioned, have at times proved quite successful.

It was in the fall of 1925 that the Women's Handbook, already an old institution made its reappearance on the campus. The women also reorganized a rifle team. Further than this those inclined toward literature came together in a new society called Bluestockings.

Among the famous artists appearing at the gymnasium were Galli Curci, Paul Whiteman and Carlos Sedano, and the distinguished speaker, John Nevin Sayer.

This college year was touched with sadness by the death of Dean Tinkham of the college of medicine. In memory of the former dean of women, the Wasson Memorial Fund was started by Mortar Board.

As sophomores we won the customary victory over the freshmen in the cane rush, but lost to them in the tug-o-war. Our class was very creditably represented in debating and continued to take an important part in dramatics as well as in athletics, musical clubs and literary activities.

Miss Marion Patterson was appointed dean of women and Hon. James B. Wilbur, whose generosity has meant so much to Vermont, was made a trustee of the university.

The sophomore hop a most successful and gala affair, was the first of the major social activities undertaken by our class. Far from least in the events of this year was the journey of the R. O. T. C. Band to Washington where it took part in the inauguration ceremonies of Vermont's favorite son, Calvin Coolidge.

Chapter III

To guide our class through the activities of the junior year we appointed Charles Stevens president, Dorothy Hall vice-president, Margaret Wallace secretary, and Robert Holden treasurer.

It was in this same college year that a new plan was offered the students by the Cynic board, a plan to give us an issue of the Cynic twice a week instead of the traditional once a week. The semi-weekly issue was an experiment but so successful that the students voted to continue it as such.

The outstanding event of the year was the dedication of the Ira Allen Chapel January 14, 1927 and following it came the announcement of a bequest to the university of $51,000 by the will of the late Mrs. Emma H. Slade of New York City. This fund will make possible a new dormitory for girls, which is to be begun soon and which will be known as Slade Hall. Among other bequests was that of the private library of the late Arthur E. Horton of Lexington, Mass.

A noteworthy step in the promotion of international friendship among students came in November 1926 when the Cosmopolitan Club was formed. The membership was to include all nationalities and its purpose to create international thinking on the campus. In this same month the radio club instituted station WCAX, which has broadcast many worthwhile programs.

This year was filled to overflowing with opportunities to hear and see many great artists. Of the speakers and lecturers the most outstanding are Dr. H. H. Tweedy of the Yale Divinity School, Norman Thomas, now Socialistic candidate for President, Roy Chapman Andrews, Asiatic explorer, Hugh Walpole celebrated novelist and humorous Will Rogers, the one man who can chew gum to the delight of all those around him. Such famous artists as Werrenwrath, Mish Levitski, Mme. Louise Homer, the Russian Symphonic Choir, and John Philip Sousa's Band appeared in the gymnasium during the year.

In the interests of debating Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, '01, of Rutland, established certain prizes.

The chapel choir was organized, and the combined men's and women's glee clubs presented "Dido and Aeneas." Perhaps they truly had something to sing about when the cement walk was laid across the south campus.

Following the example set by the men, the women's student union discontinued weekly mass meetings, substituting in their place six mass meetings for the year and council meetings weekly.

The department of mathematics found much difficulty in keeping up with the extremely rapid multiplication of that rare hybrid of somewhat questionable ancestry—the college car.

The appearance of a most satisfactory and attractive Ariel fittingly marked the activities of Junior Week. We may take pride in being the first class for several years actually to have a junior banquet, which was followed by the Junior Prom, an auspicious occasion.

It was also about this time that a chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, National Education Fraternity, was installed.

Lilac Day was granted to be the most successful ever presented, credit for which should be given the co-eds. However, the men of our class who constituted the Vermont unit at Camp Devens also deserve much praise for they established an enviable record as soldiers, athletes and gentlemen. Thus closes the chapter of our junior year.

Chapter IV

As a result of an outburst of suppressed desires on the part of our literary geniuses, the Literary Magazine appeared immediately upon the opening of our senior year.

Our officers for this year have been Sabin Abell, president, Eleanor Lockwood, vice-president, Elizabeth Billings, secretary, and Harold Collins, treasurer.

Among the most prominent of lecturers during 1927 were Burton Holmes, must traveler and lecturer, and Maud Royden, England's foremost woman minister.

The most outstanding event of the year for many miles around was the great November flood. It is unnecessary to relate any incidents concerning this tragedy, for everyone knows the immensity of the damage done. Our boys of the university, as well as the boys from the other two collegiate institutions of the state, deserve much credit for the notable work done during the flood and in aiding the sufferers. Nearly every university organization gave generously for the relief of the flood victims.

During this our senior year, a very fine production of Greek drama was presented by the members of Eta Sigma Phi assisted by the Glee Clubs. The latter produced "The Mock Doctor," a comic opera, in the spring of 1928.

An accomplishment of the women's student body was that of affiliating student union and Vermonters Club—an accomplishment which promises to be a success.

Our class has shown its ability in striking the high notes, for it has carried away the first prize last year and this year in the Founders' Day song contest.

Several members of our class have shown their abiding faith and absolute trust in each other both for the present and future as evidenced by the multitude of cigars and chocolates passed within the last few weeks.

CAMPUS ORATION

Eno A. Lucchina

Whenever the name Vermont is mentioned our first reaction is to recall our campus or some part of it. This lovely ground has made a deep impress in our memories, and it will be the most vivid impression of our university. When we have forgotten Latin and Greek, when we have forgotten the scores of athletic contests, we shall still have a vivid picture of the campus as it appeared during these college years.

No alumnus can forget this spot. We, too, shall never forget this magnificent vantage point, which opens up broad vistas of the inspiring Green Mountains and Adirondacks, and of one of the finest gems of nature, Lake Champlain. The campus as the last days of summer approach, and the bright hues of autumn begin to change the dull verdure of the trees will forever be a memory. We shall recall the campus under the snow of winter with its dark drab trees and invigorating winds. Reminiscences of this campus clad in the fresh verdure of spring will be cherished in years to come. We shall remember Champlain and the mountains in the distance. As we reflect we realize that the University is fortunate in having such a beautiful spot by which it is remembered by its alumni. Nature could not have been more beneficent in arranging this ground for our University. She left little to be desired in this campus.

But although beneficent nature is at its best here, let us not forget that if to nature alone we were indebted this spot would still be a dense forest, an unthinkable domain. This beautiful campus is not merely a gift of nature, but it is also a gift of men. Our campus is what it is, not because nature alone was beneficent, but because men dreamed and forged their thoughts into reality.

Many who have passed their college days on this ground have taken it for granted. They may even have passed judgment on the campus, little realizing the obstacles and the hardships, which were encountered in making this site the Vermont campus rather than a wilderness. Seldom do we stop to think that the campus with its beauties and blemishes, is the result of over a hundred and twenty-five years of labor by many men and women. True, once a year, the University pays homage to its founder, that truly great man, Ira Allen. But it seldom recalls the names of hundreds of other men who have contributed materially and morally to the steady development of the campus. Many of the names of Vermont's benefactors are known to us. Others are to be found only by the searchers of historical records. Still others, unfortunately, have become irrevocably lost or forgotten.

We must admire and praise these benefactors. Whereas some could have achieved prominence by fostering the growth of universities which because of proximity to centers of population are more in the public eye, these men preferred to devote their efforts to the perpetuation of a university remote from the large centers. They placed their energies, furthermore, at the service of an institution which could have been obliterated and utterly forgotten. There are professors in the annals of the University who could have achieved great fame and fortune at other institutions. They remained at Vermont and contributed to the survival of this campus. There were students who in their undergraduate days upheld Vermont when higher education in the state seemed doomed. There were other students who aided in the development of undergraduate activities. For many decades this campus has not been without steadfast friends. If the roll of known and unknown men and women who were friends of the University could be published, it would be a very long roll indeed.

Most of these benefactors were inspired by the magnificent example of Ira Allen. He accomplished despite little caring whether he were to be honored and remembered. He did not value that on which too many of us are influenced. That is popular acclaim. He took joy in achieving results, little considering to whom the credit for the achievement would be given. Many of his successors have followed this noble example. Another of Ira Allen's great qualities, which every one of his successors in the perpetuation of the campus must have had, was faith in his University. Its founder and benefactors were not ashamed to foster the interests of a struggling university. The result of this love for doing things rather than striving for popularity and acclaim, the result of the faith in a struggling institution, is the University of Vermont and this lovely campus.

Many of the men who strived to make higher education possible in the state because of this campus feel that their names would be forgotten. Yet they worked unselfishly and with faith. Today, our campus is the real memorial to hundreds of men who have made it. Many of their names, their graves, and the details of their deeds have been obliterated. Yet the campus remains as a witness to the fruitful labor of these men. The work they did was laudable, and it was by no means in vain; their traditions of unselfish work and faith are still being kept sacred by a true brand of Vermont men and women.

We, who are graduating, we who have enjoyed the fruits of the labors of the unknown and known benefactors, can become participants in these traditions of unselfish service and faith. Perhaps in our undergraduate days we failed to follow the laudable precedent of our founder. But now when we leave this campus, we can perform unselfish service in many ways for the University. We can pay somewhat the debt we owe our past benefactors, who have made this campus possible. If we cannot serve, we can at least keep faith in this campus and proudly proclaim it as our Alma Mater no matter in what circles of life we may be moving. And in becoming participants of the noble traditions of its benefactors we, too, can join their body. We, too, perpetuate this beautiful campus so that the future generations may spend fruitful years spent on this beautiful corner of the earth, just as past benefactors have made possible our enjoyment of this lovely campus.

FINIS

BOULDER ORATION

Howard A. Prentice

We have on our campus a rare product of nature's handiwork. To many of us who have been connected with the Boulder Society, it possesses peculiar significance of much import. To those of us who are not familiar with its origin and development a brief summary seems appropriate. The early life of the Boulder is shrouded in mystery. During the construction of the Central Vermont Railroad at West Hartford, Vermont, in 1848, a pot hole seventeen feet deep was discovered. In this crevice, side by side, lay two masses of granite, one of them our sacred Boulder. Professor Hitchcock of Dartmouth, appreciating the significance of these rare specimens, attempted to move the larger and more perfect one to Hanover. Governor Paine of Vermont, then president of the road, asserted Vermont's priority to the large piece of granite and had it moved to Burlington and placed on our beautiful campus, where it became a symbol, a tradition, of the fine and sturdy spirit which is Vermont's.

CLASS POEM

"Our times are in his hand,
Who saith, "A whole I planned,
Youth shows but half; trust God, see all, nor be afraid."
Rabbi Ben Ezra....Browning

"See all!" Ben Ezra said, "be not afraid,"
Who doth expect the corn-field in the blade
To bring forth ears. In spring the orchard trees
Do burgeon; but who would dispute
The blossom's worth against the garnered fruit?
"Youth shows but half;" thus did Ben Ezra say.
Would we then have our season always May?
Our fields are sown; the harvest yet to see.
To those who following fill our place, may we Still say, "Farewell, the best is yet to be!"

ADDRESS TO UNDERGRADUATES

John T. Conway

Between the years of 1861 and 1865, our nation was engaged in a great civil war, to see if a nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men were created equal, could long endure. The great battlefield of that war, as we all know, was Gettysburg, and in order for the Union forces to carry the day, a forced march of reenforcements had to be made. Necessity was great and time was short. How did the commander of the relief battalion meet the situation? "Put the Vermonters ahead," he commanded, "and keep the flies closed up," and the march began. The Vermont troops arrived in time, and the decisive battle of the war was fought and won.

Now what does this all mean to us? It means that we as Vermonters have a great responsibility. Feats such as this do not go unchallenged by our fathers, and it is ours to preserve their honor, courage, and traditions. This does not mean simply passive admiration and hero-worship, but rather action; action which leads to progress, broadening of ideas; action permeated with the qualities of virtue of those who have marched on ahead, leading the way.

To you as students this may seem too high a goal to which to aspire. Nor do we as seniors in our parting message to you profess to have attained this goal, but the one thing which we do wish to leave with you is the determination to take advantage of your opportunities for success during the rest of your college years.

No finer inspiration for success could be found than our own university, with its wonderful natural beauty, and the cherished traditions of those who founded it, and through the years have guided its destinies, its administration, its faculty, and its alumni, and well may we who are graduating, through this, one of our most beautiful memories of school days, renew our firmness of purpose established here, and dedicate ourselves anew to the support of our college on the hill.

To you who are to remain here, think of the college in this way and we are sure it will inspire you to progress and in wise and firm ideas of the right. Be true men and women, and live up to the traditions of our honored forefathers and you can not fail and you will not fail in the game of life.

IVY ORATION

Della E Martin

We, still undergraduates of the class of 1928, are gathered here this afternoon to close our Class Day program. Without a doubt, these few remaining days are the last in which we may be privileged to come together as a class. Before leaving these walls of learning and this worthy institution, our Alma Mater, and before entering the world as men and women of the future, we, too, wish to perform our last deed of devotion to our college, by carrying out the symbolic tradition of the planting of the Ivy, that our memories of the past few years may cling more securely to our lives and hearts.

Behind us lies the past, history, and before us the future, a thrilling adventure, history in the making. How many times in the past four years, rich in the comradeships and friendships of fellow-students and instructors, have we, children in experience, stood in questioning wonder upon the acts of our superiors? What is our stand today? Has not this period of preparation taken us beyond the visions of childhood and dreams of youth, making it possible for the feeling of reality to share with sentiment the tributes of this parting hour?

As we go out from here to begin our work in the busy world, we must remember that we, to be builders of the future, must have power; power to know ourselves and understand others; power that means will in application, promptness in action, and thoroughness in execution. This power is the inevitable result of college training for every man who does his duty. Another thought! We, as men and women of the future, must know the meaning of friendship. It must be a part of our very natures. Have we learned its value? Indeed, we have. Coming in as an aggregation, we go out as a unit. The classroom, the campus, and friendly rivalry have brought us together until—"like kindred drops we've mingled into one." The attachments formed here no one can forget; nor can anyone overestimate the worth of such friendship as a preparation for the duties of life.

Our conception of College embodies more than walls of brick and stone, more than contact with professors, invaluable as such association is, more than these very hilltops so often eulogized by orators and poets of the past; all these are only parts in this beautiful University of Nature, where silent voices teach the willing heart the grandeur of God and the nobility of man. Need I speak to you, my classmates, of the unconscious influence of such environment? No, your own lives must tell the story.

The time becomes shorter. Since the Ivy itself signifies and is symbolic of friendship, how very fitting it is that we plant an Ivy shoot today, which we hope will grow ever upward, helping to add beauty to these walls.

FELLOW CLASSMATES:

The Ivy, which we are about to plant, is symbolic of the past, the present, and the future of our class. For the past it is like in kind to that which has been planted before. Nor are we different from the thousands, who have gone through similar phases of development in this College. For the present it humbly takes its place beside that closely woven wreath, which is symbolic of undying love, a wreath whose attachment, increasing with age, serves as protection and ornament to that grand old edifice to which it clings. Its future, like ours, is uncertain but hopeful. Grounded in this hallowed soil, nourished and encouraged by the memories and achievements of the past, may this Ivy be a symbol of development for us and for you, Old College, may its growth be deeper, broader, higher, and may its associations become closer and stronger. So grow, Ivy, the class of 1928 will ever hold you dear.

And now, dear College, we cannot say farewell; our relations with you are not severed. Looking to you as a source of inspiration, we shall, as men and women of the future, embody in our lives friendship, beauty and power in accordance with the Ivy in Nature and with your teachings in the realities of life.

"Fare thee well dear Alma Mater,
Parting's hour is drawing nigh,
And, with loving thoughts we crown thee
As we say our last good-bye.
We would wreathe thy walls with ivy,
Which, when we are parted far,
Still will flourish as an emblem
That thy hope may be our star.

Ah! how short seem now the seasons,
Fruitful years, and blithely sped,
Here within thy loved cloisters,
Bright with dreams that hope has bred.
In the real world we enter
May we guard thy ideals well.
As our ivy be our memory,
Alma Mater, dear, farewell."

ADDRESS TO IRA ALLEN

John M Leavens

Upon this pilgrimage of the senior class to visit for the last time these spots hallowed by tradition, we have come before the statue of Ira Allen. There are few of us assembled here today who truly appreciate the greatness of Ira Allen, we think of him dimly as once connected with this university, but we rarely stop to consider the life of this great man.

The history of the life of Ira Allen reads like a romance. In it we can find the patriot, the hero, the diplomat, the statesman, the philanthropist, the historian, and finally the martyr dying in exile, banned from his own state. It is not my purpose here today to go into a lengthy account of the life of Ira Allen nor to eulogize his accomplishments with high sounding words, but I would like to give a brief résumé of some of his most outstanding achievements. Born in Connecticut in 1851, Ira Allen got his first glimpse of what is now Burlington at the age of nineteen while surveying. Struck by the sheer beauty of the surroundings, he espoused the purpose of purchasing a plot of land for his brother, Heman. It was shortly after this that there arose the trouble over the grants with the land thieves of New York, and Ira Allen was leader in the movement to oppose this interference. This struggle resolved itself into long and drawn-out affair and before it was completely consummated the Revolution had broken upon the colonies with its full force. Ethan Allen quickly organized his Green Mountain Boys, and the youthful Ira accepted a commission as a lieutenant in this organization. He participated in the capture of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and he was with Montgomery at Quebec. When only 25, he called the Dorset Conventions of 1776, wherein Vermont was proclaimed a free and independent state. He was made a member of the council of safety and he became the first treasurer and the first surveyor general of the state. It was while he was the incumbent of the office of treasurer that Ira Allen devised the plan of financing the war expenditures by means of the confiscation of the estates of the Tories and Rebels. He was a member of the commission for the final settlement of all land disputes with New York, and he was also a member of the convention that ratified the Constitution of the United States preliminary to Vermont's admission to the Union.

In 1791 Ira Allen achieved one of his earliest purposes when he succeeded in establishing by act of the legislature and a personal contribution of 4,000 pounds this University of Vermont. At the age of 40 then we see Ira Allen as a wealthy man, major general in the state militia, a leader in state affairs, and a prominent land owner. One would think then that he had fulfilled his early wishes and could rest on his laurels. Ira Allen however, was not one to do this. He was extremely interested in the welfare of the state and realizing a need for arms for the militia he went to France and bought with funds of his own a sufficient supply of arms and ammunition. These funds he had raised by pledging his own lands. Unfortunately, the arms were seized by the British and for seven years during his trial in the admiralty courts of Great Britain he was the victim of legal delays. During this time he was frequently held under suspicion and on several occasions cast in prison.

Upon his return to Vermont Ira Allen found that his lands had been seized for default on his debts and that he was liable under the laws of the state to be cast into debtor's prison. Suffering from the injustice that the people of his own state had cast upon him, Ira Allen fled to Philadelphia, where after a long fruitless struggle to regain his lands, he died an exile and a martyr still clinging to his ideals.

That briefly is the history of the life of Ira Allen a dreamer who by the sheer force of his personality made his dreams come true, an idealist of the highest order, a loyal and true lover of Vermont. All through his life he thought of others and even in exile he did not forego his plan for bettering Vermont.

We, the seniors about to be graduated, have for four years been living under the shadow of the tradition that surrounds Ira Allen. We have spent our days in the pursuit of knowledge in the College on the Hill. We have absorbed much of that sturdy idealism with which our college has from its inception been endowed. Soon, we will have departed from these happy scenes. As we go out into the world, we shall meet with circumstances similar in nature to those with which Ira Allen coped. To some will come the rôle of the patriot, to others that of the statesman or diplomat and still others, players in this game of life. But our paths will not always be clear. Difficulties and doubts will rise to block our progress. When these occasions do arise, we can look back and recall the great lesson that Ira Allen has taught us, steadfast adherence to our ideals, devotion to the cause of common welfare, unselfishness and perseverance, even though we, like Ira Allen, may be unjustly spurned by our own people or driven into exile by the ungrateful. Then we shall gain new strength and courage, new determination to carry on and reach our goal. This is the lesson then that we can learn from the life of Ira Allen, that he can be more than a founder of one university. He can be a symbol of courage, hope, and truth.

ADDRESS TO LAFAYETTE

Laurence A Hince

When Lafayette first came to America he was, in years, younger than anyone in our class. He left a home of luxury in a country where his family name brought him protection and prosperity. He came to a land suffering in war; a land which offered nothing of comfort or of prosperity. He went to Philadelphia a city teaming with adventurers seeking high command in return for alleged experience. The welcome that was accorded him was no warmer than the bare street in which he was received. Finding no appreciative audience, he appeared before the Continental Congress telling the purpose and circumstances of his coming. Before that body of men which formed the military policies of the new republic he said "After the sacrifices that I have made in this cause, I have the right to ask two favors at your hands: the one is to serve without pay at my own expense, and the other, that I be allowed to serve at first as a volunteer." Congress stirred by his fervor, commissioned him Major General.

Through the long war of independence he endured physical injury and craved death. At the age of twenty-one he was offered, and he declined the glory of a coordinate command with General Washington. Here was a courageous and a steadfast adherence to an ideal. Lafayette had a

Last Decade Years Of Prosperous Growth For University of Vermont

[illegible] the Progress Exposition held in the new Memorial Auditorium June 13, 14 and 15, the Free Press carried the following story of the development of the University of Vermont.

In any summary of the progress of Burlington, the University of Vermont must necessarily play a large part. Based on almost any measure of comparison it has grown [illegible] Judged on the basis of the number of students in attendance, the buildings owned by the corporation which it occupies and the [illegible] which it has added to its endowment and to its plant, the growth has been remarkable.

The growth and forward march of the University of Vermont must needs be to the credit of Burlington as a progressive city. It is natural to look first at figures. Judged by these measures alone, as the Free Press has pointed out, the University has made great progress. However, this may well give a wrong impression, due to the fact that during the past ten years the student body at the University of Vermont has more than doubled and that the number of faculty members has nearly doubled.

Back in 1907 the combined faculty of the University numbered 104. The combined faculties for the coming year just closing total 208 people. The University has not materially increased the number of full professorships. There were 55 in 1917-1918 and 61 in 1927-28. But the number of associate and assistant professors has increased from 17 to 61, the instructors have increased from 32 to 75 in the ten year period; the agricultural extension staff has increased from 11 to 41; the library staff from three to six; the summer school staff from 20 to 35. There are of course some duplications in this list because some of the members of the faculty during the regular college year also teach in the summer school.

Student Increase

The students enrolled in regular courses in 1907-08 were 588. During the college year just closing 1,450 were enrolled in the regular courses. The summer school enrollment has jumped from 201 in 1917 to 872 in 1927. In addition there were 142 enrolled in the teacher training department during the college year of 1927-1928. There was no such department in 1917-18.

Development of Resources

But, in spite of this striking growth in numbers, the University has shown a growth even more important during the past ten years and that is in the scope of its service to the State of Vermont. Under the direction of Guy W. Bailey who became acting president in 1919 and president in 1920, the University has spread its influence over the State as never before and there are today few branches of the life of the people of Vermont which it does not touch in some way.

One of the important factors developed during the last decade is the opportunity offered deserving boys and girls in the State to win scholarships at the University to pay for a part of their college course. More than ever before has the scholarship basis been made one of merit. Scholarships have been offered to honor graduates in the high schools of the State, to the winners in high school debating, to the winners in high school oratorical contests, to the editors of the best high school publication in the State.

Medical College

It has long been an established fact that the medical college of the University of Vermont is one of the State's biggest assets. The service rendered to the people of the State through the Medical College has increased from year to year, working through the State Department of Health and in other ways. This service is well illustrated by the work done by medical students following the flood last November. Leaving their classes at the University they went into the stricken areas and gave their services for the work of inoculation against typhoid fever and other diseases and for general health measures to prevent disease from getting started under the adverse conditions prevailing. Their services proved invaluable at that time.

Ira Allen Chapel

One of the most significant signs of progress at the University of Vermont in the past decade is the growth in the spiritual and cultural life of the University. Its beauty is an inspiration and help to the students on the campus who have the opportunity to meet frequently within its walls not only to sing from the pulpit but also to sit there from the city and from other towns and cities of the State who visit it.

As an outgrowth of the larger life of the University stimulated by the Ira Allen chapel with its golden-toned [illegible] there has developed the department of music. When Professor Howard G. Bennett took charge of the music department it began to develop into the important factor in the life of the University and the community which it has since become. Not only has Professor Bennett succeeded in bringing to the student body a more profound respect for music in its best forms but he has given pleasure to large numbers of music lovers in the city who have heard his chorus choir on various occasions and listened to the musical plays which have been produced on the hill.

The bringing to the Ira Allen chapel of well-known clergymen of various faiths and creeds to speak to the students at Sunday afternoon vesper services frequently during the college year is another of the worthwhile features made possible by the generosity of Mr. Wilbur.

Women's Department

With the purchase by the University of the Redstone property in 1921 for a women's dormitory and the remodeling of the barn on that property into Robinson Hall, the development of the women's side of the University life was given a big impetus which is reflected in the greatly increased enrollment of women during recent years. Now the women's dormitories are again crowded and the University is following out the policy outlined at the time the Redstone property was acquired of building up a women's section of the college around that property. Plans for a new dormitory for women are completed. It is to be located a short distance south of Robinson Hall and work will be begun on it in a few days.

In line with both the University's greater service to the State and the enlargement of the women's department was the establishment of the teacher training course in accordance with authority given by the State. This course is attracting large numbers of young women who get their tuition free with the understanding that they will teach for a certain length of time in Vermont. This course was established soon after the Legislature of 1921 passed legislation enabling the State Board of Education to approve it.

Financial Progress

The completion of a million dollar endowment fund during the past decade, under the leadership of President Bailey has been one of the outstanding financial achievements. President Bailey has secured also a number of other substantial gifts which have put the college on a much better financial basis than it was when he came here.

Centennial Field has been developed also in the past decade, the money being raised by a campaign among the alumni to construct grandstands for both baseball and football and to beautify the field.

Military Department

Interest in the military department has increased materially among the upperclassmen so that many of them now stay in the department as officers getting their full four years of training. The military department has had distinguished rating nearly every year. The R. O. T. C. band has gained a reputation as one of the best college bands in the East.

Many columns might be used in speaking of the new courses which have been instituted at the University in recent years, in calling attention to the advances made in the undergraduate activities, particularly the change in the college paper from a weekly to a biweekly, of the prizes won by Vermont students for literary work in the short story, poetry and essays of increased interest in debating, [illegible]

CO-ED ATHLETES HOLD SPRING FIELD EVENTS

Spring Field Day, under the auspices of W. A. A., took place at Grassmount the afternoon of May twenty ninth. At this time the final interclass baseball game was played off in which the Freshmen defeated the Sophomores 25-4. E. Wilder started on the mound for the class of 1930 but later was relieved and went to left field while G. Martel took her place as pitcher. The Freshmen showed the effects of practice together while their rivals lacked teamwork besides being handicapped in that they were not properly clothed for the fray. During the third inning D. Kibbe was temporarily knocked out by a thrown bat and was relieved by Martel while Wilder took her initial position and twirled the rest of the game. The line-ups follow:

FRESHMEN

SOPHOMORES

Genevieve Martel, 1b.; Elsie Watters, 2b.; Alice Dean, 3b.; Marion Tift, ss.; Doris Kibbe, c.; Eunice Wilder, p.; Beverly Householder, lf.; Georgia Bostwick, rf.; Frances Hazen, cf.; subs: Toby Taylor and Elizabeth Miller.

Umpires: Misses Hard and Blanchard.

The second feature of the afternoon was the interclass archery contest. Each team was composed of three girls, each of whom fired six arrows at forty yards and six at thirty yards. The Freshmen emerged victors with a score of 84, the Juniors came in second with 68, the Sophomores followed with 66, and the Seniors trailed with 34.

Those representing the class of 1928 were Eleanor Taft, Irene Bates, and Rachael Skinner. Marion Baldwin, Esther Nelson, and Agnes Shaw competed for 1929. Esther Rogers, Cora Sargent, and Evelyn Norcross shot for the class of 1930 while 1931 was ably represented by Elizabeth Westin, Jean Wappler, and Laura Rivers.

Following the archery tournament Marion Backus announced the various awards and read the names of those selected for membership on varsity teams.

Varsity Archery: Laura Rivers, Jean Wappler, and Agnes Shaw, '29.

Varsity Baseball: p. Jean Belden '31, c. Christine McLeod '31, 1b. Genevieve Martel '30, 2b. Natalie Hawley '31, 3b. Edith Abbott '31, ss. Elizabeth Pingree '29, rf. Laura Smith '29, cf. Alice Miller '30, lf. Eunice Wilder '30.

TRACK AND TENNIS MEN GET VARSITY INSIGNIA

The Vermont Athletic Council in its final meeting of the current season cleaned up all the outstanding business including the awarding of track and tennis insignia, voted the baseball team gold trophies and awarded freshman insignia to assistant managers.

The following members of the track team were awarded sweaters: L. M. Berry, L. E. Davis, A. G. Franceschi, N. G. Mackay, N. P. Parks and P. C. Willard. Other members who were awarded letters were Captain O. T. Wood, Nellie Wood, C. C. Lyman, C. H. Mace, G. E. Robbins, and H. J. Kropper.

The five members of the state championship tennis team were awarded tennis insignia and jackets as follows: Captain Baldwin, Graves, Shedd, Taylor and Barkland.

Freshman numerals were awarded to R. A. Backus, L. L. Jarvis and F. S. Smith as assistant managers of Junior Varsity baseball.

It was voted to award gold baseballs to the letter men of this year's varsity baseball nine in recognition of the victorious season.

The council also approved a two year football agreement with New Hampshire University for 1930 and 1931.

VERMONT WINS TWO, SECOND IN TWO MEETS

The feature of the track season this year was the 71-64 defeat handed to the Montreal A. A. A. This is the first time that the Catamount cinder devotees have come out on the right end of the score against the Canadians. The Vermont aggregation also won its other dual meet, turning in a 74-61 victory over St. Lawrence. The other two events on the track schedule were triangular meets, in both of which the Green and Gold delegates came out second. Union took the contest with Vermont and Rochester without a struggle, rolling up 100½ points against Vermont's 43½ and Rochester's 10. In this meet Robbins of Vermont won the two hurdles and placed second in the broad jump and third in the shot put. Middlebury, with an exceptionally strong team, took the state title in the Green Mountain Conference with 67½, Vermont and Norwich trailing with 44½ and 23⅛ respectively.

Following is the list of total points scored during the season by the members of the team, first place counting five, second three, and third one:

Robbins	45½
Park	22
Lyman	17
Kropper	16
Mackay	16
Berry	13
Davis	11½
Franceschi	11
Wood	11
Mace	9
N. Wood	7
Arnold	6
Woodward	4
Howard	3

TENNIS TEAM CONCLUDES SUCCESSFUL SCHEDULE

The return tennis match with Middlebury had to be cancelled because of a combination of rain and examinations, and the Catamount racquet wielders were left in undisputed possession of the state title. The season has been most successful. Five matches have been called off on account of rain or wet courts, but of the five played the Catamounts show a record of four wins and one defeat. The first contest which was scheduled with Dartmouth on May 8 and also the one with St. Stephens have been definitely cancelled and it is probable that the matches with Worcester Tech and Tufts will also not be played.

St. Michael's, who is a newcomer this year to the tennis ranks, was easily defeated in the first match 6-0 and in the second scored a 4-2 win.

Norwich has been overcome twice by Prof. Carpenter's racquet wielders by the scores of 3-0 and 4-2. Middlebury has fallen once by the count of 4-2.

The only loss so far this season came from the hands of the strong Boston University team. In this game Graves was the only Vermonter who could bring in a win, and the contest went to B. U. 5-1.

Capt. Baldwin and Graves, who both graduate this year, have been especially strong players. The former lost his only singles match of the season against B. U. Taylor, who has been doing good work will also be lost to next year's team through graduation.

The tennis results to date:

Vermont	6	St. Michael's	0
	1	Boston Univ.	5
	3	Norwich	0
	4	Middlebury	2
	4	Norwich	2
	4	St. Michael's	2

Walter H. Crockett, editor of University publications, was given the honorary degree of Master of Arts by Middlebury College.

Dean Perkins Advocates More Brain And Less Leg Exercise For Students

[illegible] Perkins [illegible] has [illegible] been associated with educational work as long as any man in this country and it is [illegible] to compare the educational system of today with that of 50 or more years ago.

The atmosphere of school life 50 years ago and now was discussed. Then it was a school and group where book learning was all important. Now life and emphasis on athletics. Dean Perkins believes that what there is to be found dwelling here as everywhere else and that the young people of [illegible] "have their faults," nevertheless the [illegible] life fits them better for the life of the world than did the old academic one. The education of today he said "is far beyond anything that was available when I went to college."

Dean Perkins is a strong advocate of [illegible] and his appraisal of the system has an even greater weight when one considers that he has watched co-education at the University of Vermont since it began 56 years ago. "Boys and girls must live together all of their lives," he pointed out in his talk, "and suppose them for the four short years that they are in college."

When Dean Perkins came to Burlington there were only a handful at the University of Vermont with which to start the [illegible]. This was [illegible] seven years ago [illegible] there are [illegible] many students today; so many that it is confusing to the student.

In the old days, he said, the boy or girl was fitted to be a scholar. today he is fitted to go out in the world and take his part in its work. The idea of service to humanity, he believes, has entered the conception of the student since the World War. While the young people of today have their faults he believes that there has never before been a time when they had such a laudable desire to serve the world.

There is also too much emphasis on athletics he thinks but at the same time it furnishes an excellent safety valve for the enthusiasm of youth. As an example he stated that for the first 20 years that he was here at the University, the number of arrests that the students would get [illegible] was amazing. To his knowledge for the past five years there has been no serious trouble of this nature here, and he attributes this order to the athletic and social life.

Dean Perkins spoke in closing of the religious attitude of the modern student. He believes that youth today is essentially and practically religious. Using their religion from day to day in the honesty and truthfulness shown in their lives. It is a different sort of religion but one that is preferable and more valuable than that of previous times.

WHIPPLE TO SUCCEED WHEELER AS TRUSTEE

Robert Lee Whipple '06 of Worcester, Mass., has been elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the University to succeed Dr. John Martin Wheeler of New York City, whose term expires. Mr Whipple will serve a term of four years.

Mr. Whipple was born in Adams, Mass., December 30, 1881. He received the degree of bachelor of science in Civil Engineering from the University of Vermont in 1906. In 1906 and 1907, he was assistant engineer of the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio railroad. In 1907 and 1908, he was an engineer in the United States Navy.

From 1909 to 1922, Mr. Whipple was head of the R. L. Whipple Company, general contractors. From 1922 to 1925 he was a member of the Lowell Whipple Company, general contractors.

From 1917 to 1919, Mr. Whipple saw military service as captain, major, lieutenant-colonel and colonel of the 301st Engineers, United States Army.

From 1923 to 1925 Mr. Whipple was a member of the Commission on Administration and Finance (Budget) State of Massachusetts. From 1925 to 1927 he served as president of the Worcester Chamber of Commerce.

Blindfolded . . . in scientific test of leading Cigarettes, Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt selects OLD GOLD

MRS. REGINALD C. VANDERBILT

"'I wonder if one can really tell the difference, when blindfolded,' was my first thought when invited to make this test.

"After smoking the four brands, as they were handed to me one after another, I discovered there was one that was noticeably smoother than the others and richer in taste.

"This proved to be an OLD GOLD. I hope I shall be able to buy them in Paris . . . they are surprisingly free from any trace of throat irritation and have a delightful aroma which to me is very important."

Gloria W Vanderbilt

How Test Was Made

Mrs. Vanderbilt was blindfolded, and, in the presence of two responsible witnesses, was given one each of the four leading cigarettes to smoke . . . To clear the taste, coffee was served before each cigarette . . . Mrs. Vanderbilt was unaware of the identity of these cigarettes during test . . . After smoking the four cigarettes, Mrs. Vanderbilt was asked to designate by number her choice . . . She immediately replied: "Number 3" . . . which was OLD GOLD.

Why can you pick them in the dark? . . . . . Because they're made from . . . heart-leaves of the tobacco [illegible]

CHANGE MADE IN FRESHMAN RULES

All But Traditional Features Have Been Dropped in Attempt to Follow Trend of Other Collegiate Institutions

FOUNTAIN FIGHT AND CANE RUSH REMAIN

Progress in keeping with the general trend of the University towards bringing Vermont up-to-date in all respects will be noted in the abolishment of the more foolish of the freshman rules. After an investigation of conditions at other colleges, conducted by a committee of the faculty under the chairmanship of Professor Arthur B. Myrick of the Romance Language department, it was decided that instead of being modern, the University was several years behind the times.

To remedy this situation, a conference was held, made up of the University Council, one Boulder man, one Key and Serpent man, and five Gold Key men. At this meeting the question of rules was discussed, and the feeling seemed to be that the best thing for all concerned would be to modify the rules to quite a considerable extent.

All but the traditional features have been dropped, leaving the list given below.

1. The green and gold frosh cap must be worn at all times. It should be removed on entering the halls of the University buildings and on meeting members of the faculty.

2. All frosh must sit in the cheering section at intercollegiate contests. They must not escort co-eds or other members of the fair sex to these contests.

3. Frosh must be respectful to upperclassmen. It is the duty of Gold Key to suppress any rebellious frosh.

4. The privilege of wearing a moustache is reserved for the members of the sophomore and upper classes. Any freshman caught with such impedimenta will have it publicly removed.

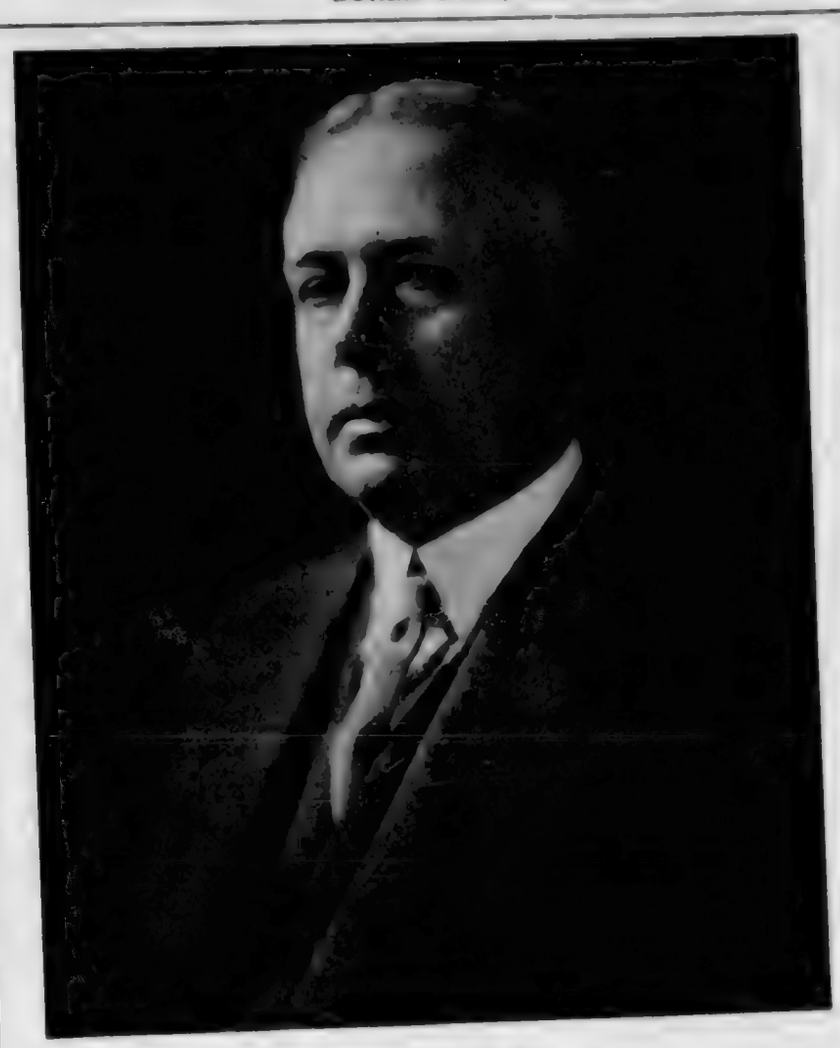
5. It is strictly forbidden for freshmen to walk on the north side of College Street unless accompanied by an upperclass or sophomore man.

6. Frosh will greet any other Vermont man with a cheery "Hello."

7. By the time of the first smoker all frosh must have memorized the Vermont songs and cheers.

8. Attendance of freshmen is required at all intercollegiate contests held in Burlington, smokers, and student meetings.

9. None but black socks are allowed on freshmen feet. Golf socks, bow ties, white flannel trousers, unbuckled galoshes and prep school insignia are taboo.



10. Smoking by frosh on the campus or in University buildings will not be permitted. Matches must be carried at all times for the benefit of upperclassmen and sophomores. Cutting across the campus is forbidden, as is entering Old Mill by the west doors.

It seems that the activities of the frosh are no longer required. The traditions are being upheld in the form of the Fountain Fight and the Cane Rush, the former having been held last Saturday evening and the latter being scheduled for the day of the first home game of the varsity season.

Moreover will the frosh be required to attend the meetings of Gold Key, at which punishment was formerly dealt out in the shape of paddling. Nor will they have to move football bleachers for Basketball and Kake Walk dances. Many complaints had been received by the administration on account of this required labor in former years both from the freshmen themselves and from their parents.

Freshmen

Any member of the freshman class who wishes to scrub for the Cynic should report at the Cynic office at 4 p.m., Tuesday afternoon. The new location of the office is in the north end of the Old Mill on the first floor. Assignments and instructions will be given at this time.

PRESIDENT GUY W. BAILEY

Who spoke on character building in opening the 138th year of the University of Vermont at the Ira Allen Chapel Wednesday.

RATTAN NEW MENTOR OF VARSITY FOOTBALL

Member of Military Staff and Coach of Frosh Eleven for Two Years to Direct Catamount Team

Captain W. V. Rattan of the Military staff, has been signed as varsity football coach for 1928 to succeed W. A. "Bill" McAvoy, who has resigned.

Captain Rattan has a long football record behind him as he takes over the reins at the University of Vermont. In 1912 he played end on the Texas Christian University football team, at that time one of the South's leading grid machines. In '13 and '14 he played halfback for T. C. U. and was also a baseball and track star. During the War Captain Rattan was a member of the 12th Division football team. Pro and college athletes from America's best ranks were in the army during the war period and some of the army teams of those days could defeat the world's best college machines.

After the war, Captain Rattan was transferred to Northern China and while there was a player-coach of the American Legation Guard team from 1919 to 1922. He then coached football and baseball in the second Division until 1924. Again transferred, this time to Fort Benning, Georgia, he was a member of the coaching staff of the Infantry School in 1924 and 1925. In 1926 he was transferred to the University of Vermont and for the past two years was coach of the University of Vermont freshmen. In these two seasons, his team captured the State yearling title and met with but one defeat in two seasons, losing to the strong Dartmouth freshman eleven.

Vermont is also fortunate in having secured George C. "Jack" Tully, Dartmouth '25, to act as line coach, assisting Captain Rattan. Football fans will remember Tully as the famous All-American end and the equally famous receiving end of Dartmouth's highly-touted forward pass combination.

Hailing from South Orange, N. J., he completed his academic course at Dartmouth, dividing his time between dissecting "stiffs" in the lab and dissecting various other stiffs on the grid iron. He could cut through a cadaver or a crowded field with equal dexterity; he knew his medicine and he knew how to take it. Tufts received him as a Freshman medic, but he transferred to Vermont in his Sophomore year.

FRESHMEN ENTERTAINED AT BANQUET MONDAY

A new method of entertainment in the form of a Freshman Banquet took place last Monday night at the Hotel Van Ness at 6.00 o'clock.

The affair was the first of its kind taking the place of the annual Freshman Mixer. The administration felt that since the two weeks' summer camp for Freshmen was not amply taken advantage of by the Frosh, it would be better to discontinue it and use the money to put on a free banquet to all the members of the entering class. The banquet was also intended to get the Freshmen better acquainted with each other. It was put on through the medium of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

About 250 members of the class were present to enjoy the bounteous repast which was spread out before them. After the dishes were cleared away Professor Kidder, who acted as toast master, started the program with a few words. President Bailey gave a very interesting talk as well as Dean Swift and Dean Patterson. Rev. C. J. Oxley's speech was well received. Mr. Powers' address was very much appreciated, especially for his advice to the members of 1923 on such subjects as finances, scholarship and social activities.

The last but leading speaker of the evening was Mr. Dean. His talk was very pleasing to the Freshmen as he talked on the problems of college life and other phases of a student's life which were of interest to the young Catamounts.

During the course of the evening Professor B. H. Wallace led the singing of popular songs and Vermont songs. The affair was very successful and it will doubtless become an annual event.

GLEE CLUB TRY-OUTS

Try-outs for the Men's Glee Club will be held in the music building, 85 S. Prospect St., Tuesday, Sept. 25, 4-5 p.m., and Wednesday, Sept. 26, 7-8 p.m. These try-outs will be held at the same time as those for the men of the University Choir, for the convenience of candidates for both organizations who need try out only once. Try-outs for glee club accompanist and student leader will be held at the same time.

Students and Faculty Form Academic Procession and March into Ira Allen Chapel—President G. W. Bailey Talks on Character

OUTNUMBERED SOPHS GIVE FRESHMEN BATHS

Organized offense and defense on the part of the outnumbered Sophomores proved too much for Vermont's youngest class and many entered the fountain via a forceable shove, Saturday night in the historic fountain fight. Several members of the class of 1931 felt the chill of an undesired ducking but it was generally conceded more Freshmen than Sophomores entered the waters.

The fight lasted ten minutes instead of seven because of the inability of the timer to fire the concluding gun. Good sportsmanship was evident throughout the fight, both classes having refrained from using fisticuffs.

HONORS IN FRATERNITY SCHOLARSHIP CONCEDED TO DELTA DELTA DELTA

High Standing List of Individual Students for Last Semester Also Announced by President Bailey

At the close of the opening exercises of the University of Vermont in the Ira Allen chapel President Guy W. Bailey announced that Delta Delta Delta stood at the top of the fraternity scholarship list for the last six months of the college year 1927-28, and had therefore won possession of the scholarship cup for the first semester of this college year.

The relative order of fraternity scholarship standing during the final six months of the college year, 1927-28, is as follows: Delta Delta Delta, Sigma Delta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Chi Omega, Sigma Alpha Chi, Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Gamma, Alpha Xi Delta, Kappa Delta, Delta Psi, Sigma Nu, Tau Epsilon Phi, Zeta Chi, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Phi, Lambda Iota.

HONOR LIST FOR LAST SEMESTER ANNOUNCED

Brief exercises in the Ira Allen Chapel in the morning marked the formal opening of the 138th year of the University of Vermont. At 9.30 the academic procession, made up of faculty and students, who had formed along University Row, passed into the chapel, where President Guy W. Bailey spoke on "A Tradition of Character Building." Speaking particularly to the Freshman, he said that help in formulating a well-established character was or should be the most important result of four years of undergraduate life. "The most valuable tradition that this University has ever produced is the tradition of character making," he stated.

The order of the exercises was as follows: Processional; Hymn, "America, the Beautiful," scripture lesson and prayer by the chaplain; Hymn, "Come, Thou Almighty King;" president's address, announcements, singing of "Champlain," benediction and recessional. The announcements at the close of the exercises included the scholastic standing of fraternities during the last half of the college year, 1927-28, and the names of students on the high standing list in the freshman and sophomore classes during the latter half of the last college year. On the chapel platform with President Bailey during the exercises were Dean G. H. Perkins of the College of Arts and Sciences, Dean J. W. Votey of the College of Engineering, Dean J. N. Jenne of the College of Medicine, Miss Marian Patterson, dean of women, Professor Evan Thomas, retired, who was chaplain for the exercises, and Professor Howard G. Bennett, head of the music department, who directed the singing of the two hymns and "Champlain."

President Bailey's Address

In his address President Bailey said:

"This brief address is intended primarily for the benefit and attention of those of you who join us this morning for the avowed purpose of furthering your education. Whether your interest is in language, science, mathematics, or some other of the worth while studies pursued at this institution, unless you create a background for your life work that is outstanding because of its qualities of character, we shall consider that you have failed.

We usually think of a University as being composed of colleges, buildings, equipment, endowment, faculties and undergraduates. However there is more to it than physical plant and equipment, than the teaching staff and undergraduates. You may have noticed this morning the beautiful ivy clinging to the walls of the Billings Library and the Old Mill. May we not say that the ivy in a way is symbolic of those unseen factors that contribute so much to collegiate life, those University traditions which are so potent in the shaping of the undergraduate character. Tradition attaches and clings to this and every other university which is venerable with age. We only know that such exists and admire and revere such as have intrinsic worth.

If you should examine the financial balance sheet of the University you would not find her traditions enumerated or evaluated, but we all concede that without them her real worth would be materially lessened. A recent and excellent definition of the word states that collegiate traditions are customs and rules that act as positive agents for the developing of character and not as negative instruments for repressing individuality. In our evaluation of them should we not cling to those which tend to develop character and draw back from those that repress individuality and set up false values?

Our earliest enjoyable impressions of literature are made by legends, folk-lore and traditions. Stories that come to us from the past emphasizing brawny, valor and skill abroad and recreation.

Vermont Rich in Tradition

U. V. M. is rich in tradition not only in substance but in quality as at different periods it has met under different circumstances with the opportunity to gain. The personal traditions, largely those of our days are associated with increasing pride in the pursuit to which they attach. That pursuit of knowledge is more rich in tradition, as it is that there are broad open and fundamental principles of right conduct, the current code of moral action.

A Tradition of Character

Character is defined as what a person is, reputation as what he is supposed to be. Character is injured by [illegible] reputation for square [illegible]. As one studies the careers of [illegible] and men engaged in [illegible] the one realizes that a reputation for honesty of purpose and strong principles is most satisfactory and worthy a tradition of character. Traditions that are based upon such ideals are [illegible]

Tradition in History

A fascinating phase of the study of history has to do with the part that traditions play in the life of a people. Great traditions are commonly interwoven with some national activity, matters of war or of peace, but its effect is to build a stronger and more virile race.

Such traditions usually are rooted in some ethical principle which serves to keep the tradition alive. They continued in the olden days to the upbuilding of heraldry. They were inscribed or emblazoned on coats of arms or were reflected in the family motto.

It should always be a tradition on this campus that a University of Vermont man or woman can be relied upon to live and to uphold the truth. It should always be a tradition that scholarship standards must be high, that the faculty should exhibit a more than ordinary interest in student welfare and progress, that the loyalty of each student to his fellows and to the institution should be unwavering, and that the interest of alumnus and of the University should be mutually reciprocal in desiring the success of each. Such traditions strengthen the institution and everyone connected with it.

The Student and the College

Every student should hold fast to the tradition that the good name of the University is in his keeping and that it may be affected unfavorably by his actions. If unwilling to accept this point of view he should transfer to another institution. He should realize however before doing so that this tradition is universally held throughout the college world.

Few achieve success who do not early in life learn to determine duty and then pursue duty's course regardless of the consequences,- "hewing to the line, let chips fall where they may." Moral character is stabilized by the unswerving insistance upon duty performed.

Not only once but many times will you have to decide in the strife of truth with falsehood. Will your acceptance of the best traditions lead you along the right path or will you break away from the correct ethical standards that underly those traditions and thereby commence the sure process of their demoralization?

Aim of University

If I were asked to state what in my opinion you will or should get out of your years of undergraduate work, cost what it may, above everything else, my answer would be—help in the formulating of a well established character. Unless this is the main outcome of your studies and your activities, we have failed. What a satisfactory life will be lead who has so trained himself that the determination of the right or wrong of every situation involving ethical standards will be prompt unconscious and instinct. No doubts will assail, but judgment be automatic or previous settlement be decisive.

In giving the direction to our own [illegible] University, if it is to live and function as it was designed to do by the founder, [illegible] must continue to direct its energies to the [illegible] and strengthening of a tradition of character building. The family, the state, the nation without traditions soon loose its status in the world of families, states or nations. If these units are to be kept alive their traditions must be kept alive. The most valuable tradition that this University has ever produced or can produce is the tradition of character building. Hence it is for you, for me, but all of us to decide whether we will do our part in its perpetuation.

An undergraduate who violates one of the principles that tends to maintain it not only affects his own character but also affects the tradition. No student who commits an offense contrary to our code of conduct may rest assured that it is no other's affair but his own but he should realize that his own misconduct, while tending to tear down his own moral structure, similarly affects the moral structure of the institution. Its character is only as strong as that of the composite group.

Hence it is that it is not only the duty of each one of us to protect his own character but also to assist so far as possible in safeguarding that of his fellows. Each one of us is his brother's keeper. Errors by one's fellows with respect to the moral code should not pass unnoticed. The traditions of character is at stake and whatever at stake, if you respect your chosen institution, you should realize that after you have completed your college course and entered upon your life's work, whatever it may be, unless it is so conducted as to keep alive a tradition of character, success is at best very problematical.

A man makes a promise. In order to gain some advantage he breaks his promise. At that moment he begins to tear down his tradition of character building. What a price to pay! Is it worth it? Is it a legacy one would wish to leave to posterity? Honor without character. Reputation without honor. What will be your contribution to the maintenance of this tradition of character?

The College Degree

The University diploma and degree means more than that you have completed a prescribed curriculum. The institution thus puts its stamp of approval upon you as one true to its traditions. It means that the institution considers you an exponent of clean living and clean thinking. A violation of any element of the code correspondingly lessens the value of the training. In the business world one who violates the code must withdraw. "We are not in the educational world." How long would business executives associate with one whose sense of appreciation of business ethics was lost? Fewer students if necessary, but all upholding the U. V. M. code of conduct.

Each June when class day exercises are held, we are impressed with the loyalty of the seniors to their Alma Mater. They stress their belief in her and express their gratitude not only to their instructors but also to those traditions that have played an important part in their undergraduate life. We can almost imagine them saying to their younger undergraduates—"To you we pass on the traditions of this University. May you transmit them untarnished to your successors."

Traditions Survive

After graduation and as the years pass, that tradition will seem more and more valuable to you. In your mind's eye will stand out clearly the University, your University, your Alma Mater, not pre-eminent because of this building or that, but revered by you because of one clear cut quality -its tradition of character.

At the beginning of your collegiate career you are confronted with this worth while tradition. When you leave will you have contributed in some way toward its strengthening or will you have weakened it? For human frailities we express our pity and sympathy. For their correction do we do our part? May you and I resolve this morning that we will do our part to strengthen, maintain and perpetuate that tradition.

To some of us is given the privilege of occasionally wandering over trails during the vacation season. A favorite trail may lead from one lake to another and on the day when vacation is at an end and the trail is trod for the last time, as one looks long at an especially pleasing view one wonders whether another year will bring about a similar enjoyment.

We part regretfully from new friends and wonder whether old friendships will be renewed another year. Each year seems to impress us with the fact of the uncertainty of life and the mutability of human relationships and there comes a time for each of us when we pass over the trail for the last time.

So in our U. V. M. world, some of you have travelled a portion of this trail while others are beginning the journey. Will the memory of your four years' journey be a bright one in after life, or the reverse?

May it be said of you in the years to come that you maintained, while here, a personal tradition of character, one that served to perpetuate and to strengthen that most worthy tradition of the University, its oldest and most revered tradition, a tradition of character making.

Diploma in Japanese

For the first time in the history of the school, a University of Oregon diploma has been issued written entirely in Japanese. The student to whom it goes is applying for a position and needs the document to go with his application.

Oldest Frosh Rules

Some ancient frosh regulations of Harvard and Yale of nearly two hundred years ago have lately been uncovered. At Harvard they forbade the yearling to laugh in the face of an upperclassman, to ask impertinent questions, or to give impudent answers. At Yale a different set of rules were in force. Here the frosh were forbidden to swear, play at dice or cards, or to order strong drink at any tavern within two miles of the college. The penalty for any infraction varies from a fine to expulsion.

Student Workers

Styles in work for college men and women have changed since grandfather went to school.

Today, according to James W. Armstrong, dean of men at Northwestern University, a student who wishes to work his way through college does not sling hash or shovel ashes, but is a church organist, leader of an orchestra, a secretary, a stenographer, or a crack salesman.

Students who work their way through college are usually average in their subjects and scarcely ever fail, said Dean Armstrong, who believes that the student who is forced to work part or all his way has a fuller appreciation of education than many who derive all their income from parents.

The new student, according to Dean Armstrong, is a trained person, capable of earning some of his expenses and thoroughly familiar with good grades.

Student Councils Attacked

(By New Student)

A survey of colleges recently completed by the Coe College Cosmos indicates, that paper reports, a strong minority conviction that student councils are purposeless and unsuccessful. Among the skeptics may be mentioned the Harvard Crimson, which urges the student governors to turn their attentions to new fields if they wish to remain alive as an institution. Problems of government, it says, no longer exist, and council activity on the curriculum is always over-ambitious. It recommends to the executive body the study of the educational system in detail, and the gathering of exact information which may be used in any consideration of changes.

Pay As You Enter

(By New Student)

Colleges in which the students pay the entire cost of their education were advocated by Dr. Trevor Arnett, trustee of the University of Chicago, speaking before a group of educators meeting in the interest of Bennington College, a new institution for women which will be opened next fall.

Dr. Arnett, who is an authority on educational finance, believes that Bennington College may point the way to a new system of financing education. Bennington, for which a [illegible] dollar fund is now being raised, expects to pay its way entirely from tuition fees. To aid the students there will be established a system of scholarships and loan funds.

Dares Fate for Favorite Pipe Tobacco

Darby, Pa.,
November 12, 1926.

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

I have a mania for crawling through a number of unexplored caverns between the towns of Woodstock and Mt. Jackson in the Shenandoah Valley. One cave was exceedingly dangerous with its tight passages, etc. I spent three hours in this cavity, groping blindly with a "dead" flashlight and a severed guiding string.

To cut my story short, I was finally rescued by a searching party after a terrible experience. It was a wonderful feeling as I sat at the mouth of the cavern telling my friends that I would not go back in there for love nor money. I meant it—until I reached for my can of Edgeworth. It was gone, and I recalled dropping something during the excitement in the cave.

It is queer what a man will do when his favorite tobacco is concerned. I realized that without my tobacco it would be as bad as being lost in the cavity—so I crawled back.

It was a grand and glorious feeling as my hand came in contact with the Aristocrat of Tobacco.

Yours very truly,
Joseph P. Fink, Jr.

SPEAKING OF KINGS

The class had been asked to write an essay on kings, and this is what one sent in:

"The most powerful king on earth is Wor-king; the laziest, Slur-king; the wittiest, Jo-king; the quietest, Thin-king; the thirstiest, Drink-king; the slyest, Win-king; and the noisiest, Tal-king."

College Genius

Robert Montgomery Brown of Charleston has perfected a system of pressure by means of a series of mechanical devices performing the services of butler and valet in one.

To rouse room for a prince he has built his bed on a platform suspended from the ceiling and reached by a companionway. He has a harpoon with which he can reach any object in the room, without getting out of bed.

Running to old pearl inventor light switches which control all the lights in the room, pressing the solenoid Brown desires. In the morning, a bell-and-alarm clock balanced on one drops down to trip a switch which closes the window, turns on the heat and starts water on an electric stove to boil an egg. An hour later a second clock, with a bell attached awakens the collegiate young man.

His door has the only electric bell in the dormitory. When it rings he can pull a string in any one of various parts of the room and the door swings open. All the mechanism is skillfully concealed

Resent Censorship

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

The Maroon of the University of Chicago is fighting a student council attempt to subordinate the paper to a committee and thereby, according to the protestants, rob the paper of its independence and individuality. The editor argues that the staff can better regulate the daily than inexperienced outsiders, and refuses to bow to more than the censorship now exercised by the publication's adviser.

America Has Greatest College Enrollment

America has 1 million young men and women, who are enrolled in some college while the rest of the world has only 400,000, so the estimates of the bureau of education show.

An article in the Literary Digest revealed the fact that in the United States alone there are more college students than there are in all the other countries combined. These same figures give the total number in their countries as a little of 1 percent as compared with 1 percent for the other countries of the world.

Not only this but America has more than one-fifth of the world's total students in schools of all kinds in the United States there are [illegible] people enrolled.

How About It?

Students at Ohio State University have petitioned the faculty to permit them to summarily leave the classroom if the lecture being given is dull or fails to interest. A few days ago they were answered by a member of the faculty. He announced himself as being decidedly in favor of the proposition provided that the instructor in turn should be allowed to leave the class if the students failed to give the proper response.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS FOR LITERARY MAGAZINE

The Vermont Literary Magazine announced recently the election of two Contributing Editors. Wilmond H. Parker '29, and Virginia A. Goodenough, '31.

Mr. Parker has been prominent in both musical and literary circles. He is a member of the University Choir and the Men's Glee Club, recently his poem "Coasting With Sally," tied for first place in the tri-state literary contest.

Miss Goodenough is a member of Delta Delta Delta fraternity, Eta Sigma Phi and Bluestockings.

Appeal for Fellow Stude

University of Wisconsin students are reported to be raising funds for an appeal for a pardon for David Gordon, 18, holder of a Zonta Club scholarship at the University, who is serving an indeterminate sentence in the New York reformatory for his authorship of a poem which the court has termed "indecent." Gordon's poem, entitled America, which referred in manner uncomplimentary to capitalism, was published in the Daily Worker, communist newspaper. Gordon entered the University of Wisconsin while his case was on appeal. When the court's sentence was upheld he left to enter the reformatory.

Co-eds Don't Know How to Study

Investigations at the University of Minnesota appear to reveal the fact that co-eds do not know how to study. Deficiencies are attributed to late hours, chatting and studying in street cars, and unsystematic habits. Compulsory conferences have been arranged to teach the girls the intricacies of the art of study.

15 Per Cent Raise at Yale

Yale University has increased its tuition fee 15 per cent to meet new demands developing in her education program. Self-supporting students will not be affected by the increased rate.

Made from the heart-leaves of the tobacco plant

How does OLD GOLD do it?

What's the secret of OLD GOLD'S winning charm? The answer is very simple. Three types of leaves grow on the tobacco plant . . . coarse, heavy top leaves, irritating to the throat . . . withered ground-leaves, without taste or aroma . . . and the heart-leaves, rich in cool and fragrant smoking qualities. These golden-ripe heart-leaves give OLD GOLDS their honey-like smoothness. That's why so many people choose them. And that's why you too can pick them . . . even in the dark.

WELCOME 1932!

[illegible] years the University of Vermont has taught young people to better meet the problems of life. Each of these years has seen new [illegible] added to those who call Vermont their alma mater. In respect to those who have gone before, Freshmen must feel it their duty to continue and perpetuate Vermont spirit.

On the site of the original college building, whose corner stone was laved by Lafayette, stands the "Old Mill," the center of Vermont tradition. The pealing of its bell, meaning victory over athletic opponents, gladdened countless hearts long before the present time, and its silence, at times, meant honorable defeat. True Vermonters fight to their utmost and to the end.

This year Freshmen are asked to do little to show they are Freshmen. Freshmen were more rudely treated, and Freshman Week meant something which most upperclassmen remember with not altogether unpleasant thoughts. The few rules imposed on the class of 1932 are traditional, pure and simple, and the way this class carries out the rules demonstrates the attitude towards the university. What few unpleasant[illegible] of the members of 1932 should be done with grace, and not with ill will, for these tasks are done for Vermont. Although not as spectacular as a forward pass on the football field, their performance should show the same spirit.

Vermont is democratic and the "hello" once learned as a Freshman seems to "stick" after reaching an upper class. This "hello" welcomes members of the class of 1932.

[illegible] of the older members of the student body look askance at a [illegible] that will not have to undergo the humiliation of Freshman Week. Dire prophecies are made and loud protests to no avail. Perhaps it is because the venerable ones were not as fortunate. For this horrible [illegible] has been found to be as out of date as a horse and buggy and why [illegible] is one now.

Captain Kattar, although already one of us, is welcomed again in [illegible] capacity as coach of varsity football. His record as freshman [illegible] we look forward with anticipation to a good season. He had Class Caps? This should be able to mold a strong eleven that we [illegible] be proud of.

The Cynic has been moved to new quarters in North College since the University closed last spring. Anyone may reach the office by entering the door on the north side of the "Old Mill" and it's the first room to the right.

Unlimited Cuts

When Mercer handed down the tenth [illegible] he neglected to mention [illegible] as a prescribed possession [illegible] of the graduate we are to take [illegible] the ability of omitting the good [illegible] of the Princeton senior. His faculty has given him unlimited cuts in all his classes and it is believed that wasted effort may so be eliminated from the student's schedule.

If a man cannot distinguish the chaff from the wheat, and is not able to dispose of his time to his best advantage unhampered by a routine schedule after three years in the University he has not acquired the first requirements of an education.

The University that is sending its graduates into a business world where [illegible] initiative, not habit, and where judgment, not rules hold sway, might give its seniors this trifling opportunity to prove their maturity. No miracle can occur at graduation which might change the student into a reasonable being. He must have been that way for some time. Why not treat him as such, and take away rules that are as indefensible as carrying coal to Newcastle.

DISTINGUISHED ALUMNA WELCOMED BY VERMONT

Thursday afternoon, September 20, the University of Vermont welcomed one of its most distinguished graduates, Grace Goodhue Coolidge, first lady of the land. President Bailey represented the University in the reception committee which met the Coolidges at the Union Station and accompanied them on their ride to the Green Mount cemetery. The students in great numbers lined the streets to pay tribute to this alumna who has so honored the university and to her husband, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States. Mrs Coolidge seemed extremely happy to visit the spot where she spent four unforgettable years as an undergraduate, and manifested her pleasure and her appreciation of the reception accorded her by waving and smiling almost continuously as she passed the college buildings. The President too caught some of the spirit of his wife's enjoyment and smiled more than is reputed to be his wont.

Mrs. Coolidge was graduated from the University in 1902. She was always popular at Vermont and was prominent in undergraduate activities. She is a member of the Pi Beta Phi fraternity, which showed its appreciation of its famous member's visit by presenting her with flowers. Since her graduation the first lady has always shown herself interested in her alma mater. That this is so and that the university is duly proud of its graduate is shown by the portrait of Mrs. Coolidge, presented by herself, which is given so much prominence in the Billings Library. Indeed, Vermont has a right to be very proud for having had a part in the fashioning of the character of so fine a lady.

CALL FOR ARIEL SCRUBS

The Ariel Board wants scrubs from the class of 1931 for the editorial, business, and women's departments. Anyone who desires any position whatsoever on either the editorial or business board should hand in his or her name to either Robert P. Billings, Business Manager, at the Sigma Phi House, or E. Henry Powell, Editor, at the Delta Psi House.

The work of scrubbing will not be at all difficult. The editor and business manager of next year's book will be elected from the scrubs by the class, while the remaining scrubs will have the preference for the other positions on the board

MANY CANDIDATES FOR FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

Again the gridiron season has rolled and again comes the call for another Frosh football squad and so it is that Coach Herrick had his plebes out on the field Saturday for the first time. We look with interest upon the record that this team makes during the season and the stars that it unfolds, for many times these men become varsity stars later. The last two years Coach Rattan, who has since been elected varsity coach, has turned out some unbeatable teams. In the two seasons mentioned they lost one lone game to the Dartmouth Frosh in 1926.

This leaves a large burden on Lieut Herrick's shoulders, to turn out such a good team will be a task. About 30 candidates answered his first call and it is expected more will be out later. The first day's drill consisted of instruction in the proper position of a player, charging, falling on the ball, and other preliminary instruction. There will be such light practices as these for about a week and then more strenuous workouts will follow.

Among the candidates are: Bowers, fullback, 190 pounds, Allentown, Pa.; Davis, tackle, 215 pounds, Lyndon Institute, Varricchione, quarterback, 140 pounds, Cathedral High; Tilly, tackle or guard, 186 pounds, Essex Junction; Ehnstrom, halfback, 158 pounds, Gardner High and Montpelier Seminary; Dilliberto, center, 158 pounds, Holyoke, Mass. High School; Tupper, end, 155 pounds, Andover Prep; Brown, center, 185 pounds, Williston Academy; Mehchan, quarterback, 145 pounds, Adams, Mass High School. Pelofsky, guard, 170 pounds, Winthrop High, Scharbutse, end, 160 pounds, James Medical, Brooklyn, N. Y., Cobb, guard, 158 pounds, Bennington High. Hackett, end, 140 pounds, Bridgport High Morse, end, 170 pounds, Deerfield Academy, Smith, fullback, 196 pounds, Clark School, Hanover. Dorian, end, 135 pounds, Rutland High. Leonard, center or tackle 175 pounds, Suffield Academy. Dober, quarterback, 145 pounds, Hartford, Ct., Manning, tackle or backfield, 175 pounds, Commerce High, Worcester, Mass. Bedell, end, 165 pounds, Flushing, L. I., Bessey, tackle or guard, 162 pounds, Bellows Falls, Murad, tackle, 162 pounds, Danbury, Conn., Collins, center or end, 160 pounds, Flushing, L. I.

PROFESSOR BENNETT HEADS RADIO CONTEST

Professor H. G. Bennett, Vermont State Manager of National Radio Audition and also a member of the faculty at the University of Vermont announces the opening of local singing contests for amateurs. Prizes of $17,500 are being offered by the Atwater Kent Foundation who have arranged with Professor Bennett to manage the auditors. The first local contest will be held in Rutland tomorrow under the chairmanship of Miss Berenice Tuttle. Barre will follow with a contest under the management of Mrs. E. J. Batchelder. Burlington will hold their local contest under arrangement with the Athena Club with Mrs. E. G. Wilson as chairman.

Arrangements have been made to have the contests broadcast by the University radio station WCAX. The state contest will be broadcast on October 19. Each local contest will send a boy and a girl singer to this state contest. Hope is held out for other Vermont cities to send candidates to this state contest.

The national finals will be sung in New York on December 16 over radio stations extending over the United States. Contests are open to those between the ages of 18 and 25 inclusive.

University students may enter the Burlington contest, which will be held at the Athena Club, Friday evening September 28. Candidates should get in touch immediately with Mrs. E. G. Wilson, 54 Clarke Street, telephone 2501.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT LAST SUMMER SCHOOL

Professor Bennett C. Douglass, Director of the University Summer School, when asked how the season of 1928 compared with that of 1927, replied that it was "bigger and better."

The enrollment of the Summer School this summer was 913 compared with 875 in 1927, which shows a favorable increase. Since 1923 the attendance at the Summer School has practically doubled. The enrollment list shows that 26 states were represented and that there were also students from England and China.

One of the new features of this Summer Session this year was the daily publication of the Summer Session Campus, a student paper giving the campus news, notices and other information. So far as known no other summer school issues such a paper.

There were many ways in which the summer school students could amuse themselves on Saturdays and Sundays but the most popular way seemed to be the taking of the various and numerous excursions offered by the Summer School. Other events of interest during the session were the annual Summer Session reception the tennis tournament, the baseball team, and lectures by various members of the Summer School faculty.

How Accommodating

Wesleyan University finds it necessary to turn the lights out in chapel to prevent the students from reading during the exercises. It is interesting to remember, however, that darkness makes it easier to sleep.

MEN'S GLEE CLUB OPENS SEASON WITH TRYOUTS

After a very successful season last year, the Men's Glee Club again opens its activities with the tryouts, notice of which may be found elsewhere in this issue. Members of the student body are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to enter into this important college activity. Many interesting trips to various parts of the state are being planned this season with the possibility of again entering the New England Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest at Boston in which the club made a very creditable showing last year.

Among the various activities of the Glee Club in the past season, the climax of which was the Boston trip, may be listed a home concert, an enjoyable concert at St Albans, and in conjunction with the Women's Glee Club, the presentation of the successful comic opera "The Mock Doctor."

Under the efficient and expert guidance of Professor Bennett the Men's Glee Club plans more and greater accomplishments this year and all indications point to a very successful season. To all who are interested and can sing the club offers the chance to obtain valuable and enjoyable instruction along with the chance to travel with this organization.

University Choir

Tryouts for the University Choir will be held in the music building, 85 S. Prospect Street on the following dates. Men Tuesday September 25 4-5 p.m. and Wednesday September 26, 7-8 p.m. Women Wednesday September 26 4-5 p.m. and Thursday September 27, 4-5 p.m. In general preference will be shown to candidates who also try out for the Men's or Women's Glee Club. Members of the choir who are also members of the glee clubs will be required to attend but one glee club rehearsal a week except shortly before a concert or trip.

The University Choir is limited to 30 voices. Its function is not only religious but also artistic and educational. The choir sings at the Wednesday morning chapel services every week, and at the Sunday afternoon services once a month. It also presents a Christmas carol concert and a Lenten Easter concert shortly before the Christmas and Easter recess. Rehearsals are held Tuesday and Friday from 7 to 8 p.m. every week and before the monthly Sunday afternoon service. This year the honorarium paid to each member has been increased to 75 cents for each service and rehearsal.

Fred Robbins Helps Vermont Gain Track Championship at Devens

[illegible] University of Vermont [illegible] students members of the Advanced Engineer Reserve Officers Training Corps attended summer training camps for a period of six weeks during the past summer.

Camp Devens, Mass., [illegible] out of [illegible] claimed the [illegible] of the first [illegible] officers attending the Medical Corps camp and twenty-two the infantry camp at that place.

The Vermont students [illegible] the past ranked a high standing in the unit, and competitive [illegible] the time of one that expects to receive for the six weeks of training at an R. O. T. C. camp.

The [illegible] as hard fought as often seen in inter-collegiate circles, was won by Vermont by a margin of three points over the Yale Engineering unit. Fred E. Robbins, U. V. M. '29, in addition to contributing eighteen points toward the winning of the team cup, won the individual cup, awarded to the high point man of the meet. Robbins finished first in the high hurdles, second, after slipping and falling at the start, in the low hurdles, first in the broad jump, second, to Kropper, U. V. M. '29, in the shot put, and tied for second place in the high jump. The versatile Robbins was also awarded the gold medal, as the most efficient student in the first platoon of the Infantry Company and as a diversion, to idle away spare moments, won the cup awarded to the high scorer in rifle marksmanship, his final qualification being "Sharpshooter." Rex Stewart, H. J. Kropper, W. A. Dodge, L. F. Peterson and R. M. Averill, U. V. M. '29, qualified as marksmen in the service rifle.

Phelon and Donnelly, of Vermont, by the scant margin of one point, missed qualification with the rifle.

In pistol marksmanship the following Vermont students qualified:

L. C. Morgan, as sharpshooter, and R. M. Averill, F. E. Robbins, A. W. Phelon, K. G. Hooker, J. E. Donnelly, L. H. Robinson, J. F. Mitchell, H. J. Kropper, and G. S. Land as marksmen.

Lose to New Hampshire 1-0

With Chief Fogg in the firing line in baseball Vermont swept through all opponents after losing a 1 to 0 no hit game to New Hampshire State in the first game of the camp series. This game was played on a dark, damp afternoon, making the catching of Fogg's speed balls difficult. An infield error, a walk and a short passed ball gave the Granite State boys the only run of the game and in the end that lone run stood between Vermont and the camp pennant. A two day hike, an overnight camp in pup tents, various encounters with invading Reds from north of the Nashua River occupied the last week of camp activities. The last day was given over to the awarding of the various cups and medals to winning units and individuals and delivering by Reserve Commission to those students that had completed this four years of R. O. T. C. work. These ceremonies were followed by a turkey dinner in the mess hall, entertainment being furnished by student talent and the music by the 14th Infantry Band.

Four Vermont students of the Engineering course, H. E. Barter, L. Cartwright, Arnold Johnson and K. H. McCarthy, elected to attend the Signal Corps Camp at Fort Monmouth, N. J., where they pursued a course in communication, engineering, codes and ciphers, radio work and other funds mental work required of officers serving in the Signal Corps. They were also taken on inspection trips to various industrial centers in New York and New Jersey.

P. D. Hammond, U. V. M. '29, elected to attend the Chemical Warfare Service Camp at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. At Edgewood Hammond was given an opportunity to delve into the mysteries of meteorology, plant technology and operation, the use of gas works, and other phases of Chemical Warfare Service.

Eighteen at Medic Camp

The Medical Camp, at Camp Devens, Mass., was attended by eighteen Vermont students of the Medical College. J. N. Knox, U. V. M. '29, was awarded the gold medal given to the most efficient student of the medical platoon.

Major O. H. Stanley, Medical Corps, U. S. A., Professor of Medical Military Science at the University of Vermont, was a senior instructor at the Medical Camp.

Lt. Col. F. F. Black, R. M. S. T. at the University of Vermont, was executive officer at Camp Devens. Captains Rattan and Lauer, and Lieut. Frederick of the University staff were also on duty at Camp Devens. In addition to the names mentioned above the following University of Vermont students attended training camps during the past summer.

Attending the Infantry Camp, Camp Devens, Mass., were R. H. Curtiss, C. J. Douglas, B. W. Gustafson, J. P. Hyland, A. A. Luciani, E. F. Muzzy, F. F. O'Keefe, F. R. Otto, L. F. Peterson, G. S. Rand and M. J. Samuelson.

Attending the Medical Camp, Camp Devens, Mass., were A. A. Allen, E. D. Asselin, F. E. Cormia, R. A. Costine, A. A. Coyne, P. B. Daniels, F. E. Flagg, A. H. Fogg, A. M. Gnassi, A. Goldbaum, G. A. Holland, T. E. Harsfield, E. S. Kinloch, J. N. Knox, C. A. Ottley, A. Schneller, C. E. Stafford and R. A. Whitney.

Favor "Bull-Sessions"

The Daily of Northwestern University recently published an editorial lauding the "bull-session" as one of the most educational features of American college life. Probably this is a first stroke for a movement which will put the time-honored sport on level with college lectures. For years there has been a constant plea for "individuality," "independence of thought" "originality" and many other desirable qualities in the college man, and an ever-accompanying wagging of heads over the failure of such admirable virtues to appear. Yet what chancellor or president, dean of men, or women, for that matter, would do aught but claim the bull-session as "born in vice and bred in iniquity."

The fact remains, that in the humble, the out-cast bull-session, is the lordly "seminar" in full action. Where is there found a greater, an equal frankness? Where is there liberty of expression, with repression, in equal degree?

We know of no college class where the rapid exchange of enthusiasm, of facts and ideas goes on with the pace of such a grouping, say at two o'clock in the morning.

The man who dashed into the police station at 2.30 in the morning, looked as if he had been having a nightmare.

BISHOP BOOTH URGES SYNTHESIS IN RELIGION

Synthesis, urged the Rev. Samuel B Booth, bishop coadjutor of the Episcopal diocese of Vermont, who spoke to 500 students at chapel Wednesday morning, is what college students need in the present religious situation in order to get a well rounded form of religion which would be satisfactory to everyone and to themselves.

Bishop Booth stated that at the present time there are three distinct ways to look at Christianity. One side is that upheld by Catholicism, another by Protestantism, and the third by what he termed Modernism. Since students insist upon authority on religion, he said, as authority is insisted upon in science, it is possible for them to have authority only if they will view Christianity from all three angles. To combine all three sides to form their own particular views is a problem which should and must, if at all, be worked out by each individual

PAN-HELLENIC HAS NEW REGULATION REGARDING FRATERNITY PLEDGING

Frosh Co-ed Must Have Scholastic Average of 75 to be Eligible for Pledging in February

There is one new rule in the Women's Handbook which deserves special attention, since it will affect the majority of women students directly or indirectly. This rule is Rule 2 under "Facts About Fraternity" on page 68 of the handbook, and reads as follows:

"A total scholastic average of 75 for an entire semester must be attained for a girl to be eligible for fraternity pledging."

Previously any girl could be pledged, if the individual fraternity laws allowed it, regardless of her marks, and there was no general Pan Hellenic rule about scholastic standing of pledgees. The uniform average was discussed last fall, but it was decided to leave the rules as they were for the rushing season of 1928. The rule was, however, inserted in the constitution of Pan-Hellenic last May, with the purpose of increasing the fraternities' contribution to the scholastic standing of the University and affording the Freshman girls an incentive to study.

The uniform rule means also that unless a girl is pledged at rushing time, or is at least eligible for pledging then, that she cannot be pledged until the next fall, and then, only if her average for the second semester has been 75 or above. A list of eligible Freshmen and transfers will be made as soon after mid-years as possible so that the fraternities may know which girls can be rushed and which cannot. It is the responsibility of each girl to get her marks for this semester above the 75 average, so that in February her eligibility will be certain.

The requirement of a fixed scholastic standing is not peculiar to Vermont, but is in practice in a majority of colleges where there are chapters of women's fraternities.

ISABELLE WHITING TO ASSIST DEAN OF WOMEN

Miss Isabelle Whiting of Pepperell, Mass., has come to Vermont to fill a new office created in the administration this year, that of assistant to the Dean of Women. Miss Whiting was graduated from Wellesley in 1918. She holds also a master's degree from Columbia University.

A personality of charm that will endear her to those with whom she comes in contact insures success for her in her new duties. Miss Whiting will endeavor to establish a closer bond than has existed previously between the girls living in town and the college.

A large number of students interested in the tennis tournament have already signified their intention to take part in the contest by signing up on the Old Mill bulletin boards.

BOULDER MIXER AT GYMNASIUM TONIGHT

Freshman Mixer of Previous Years Gives Way to Dance by Boulder Society—Also Big Send-off to Football Team

FOOTBALL TEAM LEAVES FOR COLUMBIA TONIGHT

Boulder Society has stepped into the breach this year and will hold a college mixer Friday night, September 28. This is the same as the Frosh mixer as has been held in previous years. The object of this mixer is twofold. It not only gives the first year men and women a chance to become acquainted with each other and the rest of the upperclassmen but it also gives the student body a chance to show their loyalty in a rip roaring send-off of the football team for their annual game with Columbia.

Dancing will be in order between the hours of 8 and 12 under the syncopation of Joe Lehnert and his orchestra. The R O T C Band will also be on hand to render various selections. Cheering and speeches will be in order during the evening. Chaperones will as usual be selected from members of the faculty but as yet none have been chosen. Dancing will be free.

This is the first time that Boulder Society has held a mixer and since it is a dance as well as a send off for the Catamount eleven, it should be well worth the while of every student to attend. This college mixer takes the place of the Frosh mixer usually held under the auspices of the college Y M C A. The Y M C A. held a banquet in place of the mixer.

GOLD KEY PLANS FOR FIRST SOCIAL FUNCTION

Gold Key, the Sophomore men's honorary society, recently made enthusiastic plans for its first social function of the year, a dance to be held at the University Gymnasium on the evening of October 6. Special attention was given to plans for interesting the freshmen in this dance. The sentiment of the meeting, held on Tuesday evening at the Sigma Nu Lodge, was unanimously in favor of doing all possible to assist the Freshman class in becoming acquainted with on another and with other members of the student body as soon as possible.

Roderick Maynes, who is serving as president of Gold Key for the first half year, stated he was highly in favor of the new Freshman rules which have gone into effect this year. 'The old custom of riding' the Freshmen has been dropped at many schools. It always appeared foolish to me when carried to an extreme. Here at Vermont the student body should be a solid, close-knit organization. The custom of having each man greet members of the University student body with a cordial 'hello' helps to make acquaintance easy. It is this same spirit which we wish to promote throughout the year and which we want to feature especially at our first dance of the year," he said.

Gold Key as an organization heartily concurred in the sentiment expressed by Mr Maynes.

Smith, Walker and McBride will have charge of all dance arrangements. They promise a detailed statement of plans at a later date and extend an especially cordial invitation to all members of the class of 1932.

The U S Army band will give a concert in Burlington next Monday afternoon and evening.

Eligibility Department

Members of the Sophomore Class are wanted to scrub for positions of assistant managers of the Eligibility Department. A meeting of those interested will be held Saturday morning at 12.30 in Room 1, North College. At that time assignments will be given out.

PRACTICE HOUSE IS SCENE OF RECEPTION

The Practice House on Summit street opened its spacious halls Sunday evening to welcome the Freshmen enrolled in the Home Economics course, when twenty girls were entertained at a buffet supper by the faculty of that department. The hostesses were assisted in serving by the Misses Laura Peacham and Lorraine Owens.

After supper, within a lovely atmosphere of firelight, autumn flowers and amber candlelight, Miss Bertha M. Terrill Dean of Home Economics acquainted the guests with the history and rapid development of the science of Home Economics in Vermont. Later there was a fine lesson in the singing of Vermont songs.

YEARLING FOOTBALL MATERIAL PROMISING

Daily Workouts Under Coach Herrick Show Much Material Available for Good Frosh Team

Coach Herrick now has his gridiron stars going strong and there are all the indications of a very successful season ahead. The team hasn't been out for a long enough time to show how it will finally shape up, but several of the men are showing fine form for such an early moment in the season.

The coach is especially encouraged by the spirit shown by the Kittens. All of the men are out there to play hard, and they are working like a bunch of beavers. The team itself is light for a Freshman. The average weight of the team is about one hundred and sixty pounds. The Kittens seem to be especially weak in the guards, but they have some especially strong tackles.

Powell, of Burlington High, will probably be one of the mainstays of the team, as he has shown himself to be a fast backfield man and a powerful kicker. Another good man is to be found in Smith, a graduate of Clark School, at Hanover, N H. Manning will probably find a place in the line up as he was All-Star tackle of four Worcester high schools.

As yet there has been no scrimmages so there has been no attempt made to line up a first team. But after Saturday, advance should be more rapid. They open up their season with a game with Clark School.

The Frosh team will have to work hard if they want to come up to the standard set by the teams of last year and the year before, as the Freshmen have met with one defeat in the last two years.

MAJORITY OF WOMEN SPORT ENTHUSIASTS

Fall sports have already enlisted the enthusiasm of practically two-thirds of the women's student body, and teams are being formed under the supervision of the Department of Physical Education and the Women's Athletic Association.

As usual, tennis claims the greatest number of enthusiasts, including 71 from the Freshman class and 40 Sophomores besides a small group of advanced players. Hockey ranks next in popular favor with a total of 109 followers while 67 have signed up for volley ball.

Every year at the spring rally W A A announces the class which has the greatest number of points and is therefore entitled to have its numerals engraved on the large silver loving cup awarded by W A A. Points for this purpose accrue from the ranking of the interclass teams and from the indoor meet held in the spring at which time the classes compete in posture marching, and apparatus work.

Opportunity is given for girls to win class numerals, class emblem, the much coveted white sweater and the greatest honor of all the 'V'. These awards are made by acquiring a certain number of points yearly which are awarded for membership on class first and second teams and the mythical all Vermont team and for outdoor exercise, coaching and keeping health cards.

CATAMOUNTS PLAY COLUMBIA SATURDAY

Team Leaves Tonight for First Game of Season With Strong New York Eleven

ELEVEN IN FINE SHAPE FOR OPENING CONTEST

At the Freshman mixer tonight the Catamount gridsters will be given the first send-off of the year. The team will then leave for New York to open the season against Columbia on Baker Field tomorrow.

The Green and Gold team is in excellent physical condition and is prepared to go through a strenuous battle. The backfield with Tim Scutaken as the only veteran looks a bit weak, but the line should be the team's strong point. Mace, who saw service last year will start at fullback and will be seen to good advantage on the line. Both Robbins at quarter and Dorey or DeRose in the other halfback position. The line is built around "Bump" Levine at center. Parks, a rangy sophomore will pair up with Meagor Burstein at guard. Kropper and Damon last year's regulars will start again in the tackle berths and Captain Palmer and Robinson will be on the wings. The most prominent reserves are Werner and Streb on the line, both letter men of last year, and Lyman and Heaton in the backfield.

Columbia has been practicing mornings and afternoons for the past two weeks. There are only two letter men on the team, Captain Adler a guard, and 'Hank' Kumpf a halfback. The rest of the backfield is made up of sophomores who starred on the crack freshman team of last year. 'Joe' Stanczyk the fleet footed fullback, has shown marked ability at hitting the line and in practice has been tearing off gains ranging from 5 to 25 yards.

The line-up:

Vermont		Columbia
Palmer, Capt	le	Glenn
Kropper	lt	Bleecker
Burstein	lg	Ashman
Levine	c	Campbell
Parks	rg	Adler, Capt
Damon	rt	Tys
Robinson	re	Davenport

NEWS IN BRIEF

During the summer vacation quite extensive changes have been made in the Medical College. In the room formerly occupied by the Medical Book Store a part has been partitioned off for an office for Dean Jenne. The book store has been moved into the basement and a lunch counter has been established in connection with it.

Mr. W. H. Crockett and Mr. E. L. Ingalls have recently returned from Springfield where they attended the Eastern States Exposition.

Prof. and Mrs. Tupper have left for Europe where Prof. Tupper will spend his sabbatical year in study and travel.

Professor Carpenter is to take this year to go on his sabbatical leave which he will spend in study and travel.

Professor E. C. Mower of the Political Science Department has returned from a year's absence in Europe.

A woman's mass meeting will be held on the evening of October 5 at the gymnasium. All women of the University are cordially invited to attend for it is an excellent opportunity to make new acquaintances. The first part of the evening will be devoted to a short business meeting, and then will follow a social hour.

The new hockey field for the coeds has been completed and is in condition for playing. It is located near the tennis courts next to the Weather Bureau. It is the regulation size and on level ground so that it is a great improvement over the former one next to the Gym.

To remedy ... tlet pipes must be installed and the river banks rebuilt about them.

Nearly equal to the question of water supply, was the question of what to do about the water-soaked food supply. Many farmers with the winter's supply of potatoes in the cellar when the flood waters intruded did not know whether to use the potatoes or to throw what was left of them away. In the same position were the store keepers who had perishable supplies on hand. The canned goods were not hurt, the labels only having been washed away. In several creameries were supplies of butter in 50 pound tub sizes which were hit by the water. Upon official investigation it was discovered that this butter was not touched badly, the water having penetrated only to the extent of about one-sixteenth of an inch. It was then the duty of the Department of Agriculture to supervise the scraping of the tub butter which after the operation was complete, was entirely usable only about two pounds having been spoiled.

Animals, Professor Votey said, were entirely at the disposal of the owners. The Rendering company could dispose of all the animals they could reach but on account of the bridges being out, only a small portion of the dead animals in the state were accessible. The farmers left to dispose of their own stock, had a difficult problem on their hands for considerable digging was necessary to bury cows and horses. When the University of Vermont students arrived they were put to work digging trenches to dispose of the dead animals thereby removing the danger of their being able to contaminate the water supplies or form breeding places for diseases.

BANQUET TO BE GIVEN AT R. O. T. C. CONVENTION

Approximately 100 persons are expected to be present at the sixth annual convention of the Vermont Department of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States that is to be held Saturday evening October 13, in the main dining room of the Hotel Van Ness with Capt D B Carroll, president of the Vermont Department, presiding.

Previous to the meeting proper will be a chicken dinner where Col. F. G. Knabenshue, chief of staff of the 97th Division will deliver a talk for which each reserve officer in attendance will receive one hour of credit. Officials of the organization feel that the colonel should be given the loyal support of all reserve officers and they are requested to be present at this address without fail.

As it is necessary to know in advance how many are planning to attend the dinner those who are going are requested to inform Captain Frederick Dexter at 212 College Street this city.

Those who are not members of the Reserve Officers' Association are cordially invited to attend this convention.

The guests of honor will be Col. F. G. Knabenshue, chief of staff of the 97th Division, Col. Frank E. Hopkins commander of Fort Ethan Allen; Lieut. Col. F. F. Black, P. M. S. T., at the University of Vermont; Lieut. Col. W. S. Grant, Commander of the First Squadron of the Third Cavalry; Lieut. Maj. P. U. Kieffern, commander First Battalion of the Seventh Field Artillery; Maj. G. W. Maddox, commander Third Battalion, 13th Infantry; Capt. C. F. Ferrin, Post Adjutant Fort Ethan Allen; Capt. E. G. McMillen, executive officer of the 388th Reserves.

UNIVERSITY DEPRIVED OF LATTY'S SERVICES

Vermont will lose the services of E R (Jack) Latty, who has announced that he will desert the class rooms and track of the University of Vermont to begin the study of law at Michigan next fall. In addition to his work as instructor in French and Spanish Latty literally put Vermont on the track map through his work as mentor of the field and cinder artists.

Vermont's track success in past years had been very slim until Latty took over the reins. He came here from Bowdoin in 1925 and in his first year proceeded to uncover some freshman phenoms. Then Vermont surprised the fans by placing fourth in the Eastern Intercollegiates and by winning the State conference for the first time within memory. Jack started out with a group of yearlings who soon became stars. O. T. Wood, this year's captain and State two mile champion; Sandy Crouter, a sprinter, Olney Hill and Sonny Simpson, weight men; "Baldy" Whitten, pole vaulter, Hall, a hurdler; Bunny Prentice, a jumper, and a number of other lesser luminaries were among the collection.

The following year with Sonny Simpson as leader, the Catamounts also won the Green Mountain Conference with the greatest scoring records in years and placed second in the Easterns while Simpson won a brace of medals in the New Englands at Bowdoin, Jack's alma mater.

Last year the Vermonters took second in the Green Mountain conference and repeated this year. This year, however, the Green and Gold had a really fine track team and lost only to Middlebury with the Panther's great ... best track outfit in the institution's history. During the last season Vermont also defeated Montreal A. A. A. in a dual meet something that never happened before in Vermont's track annals.

TWO NEW DEPARTMENTS IN LITERARY MAGAZINE

A meeting of the board of the Vermont Literary Monthly was held on Tuesday afternoon at which time it was voted to add two new departments to the magazine. Who's Who, containing brief accounts of those who contributions are printed in the current number and a Book Review.

At this time also it was voted to have manuscripts sent directly to the editor in whose department they would be classified. Essays to Dorothy Cottrell at Kappa Alpha Theta House, short stories to Catherine Bassett, 26 South Prospect St., and poetry to Lois M. Goodrich, 42 Buell Place.

Due to the absence of Clifford Morse on leave as a vacancy in the editorial board which will be filled at a later date by someone selected on the basis of their manuscripts.

The first number of the magazine for the scholastic year will appear on the campus about the middle of November.

WISCONSIN CO-ED SPURNS FAMOUS KEY OF GOLD

(By Special Student Service)

Phi Beta Kappa has been spurned again, this time by a woman student at the University of Wisconsin. Miss Olga Rubinow, of Philadelphia, senior in the college of letters and science, objected to the society's standards. Her note of refusal follows:

"Because I am opposed to any formal honor bestowed on the basis of high grades. Which I do not consider a genuine criterion of true scholarship and intellectual achievement, and which I believe is often conferred upon the unworthy as well as the worthy, constantly excluding a large proportion of those worthy who do not happen to excel in grades—I beg to decline election to the Phi Beta Kappa society."

The Cardinal, besides disagreeing with Miss Rubinow's objections, dislikes the publicity that accompanies Phi Beta Kappa refusals.

STUDENTS CHOOSE NEW MEMBERS OF SENATE

In accordance of an amendment to the constitution, the new members of the Student Senate were chosen in an election open to all male students, voting upon the nominations made by the retiring members of the senate. Heretofore each class has selected its representatives at a class meeting, nominations being made at the meeting. The men who were chosen to fill up the names of the senators for next year are as follows: From the class of 1929, A. R. Birchard, J. S. Estabrook, B. W. Gustafson, C. C. Lyman, C. C. Macomber, F. F. O'Keefe, and F. E. Robbins; for the class of 1930, W. H. Burr, R. G. Hawley, H. M. Macomber, E. H. Powell, J. C. Puffer, and A. G. Sirois; for the class of 1931, F. A. McBride, W. M. Sargent and R. E. Tobin. The presidents of the respective classes J. P. Hyland, R. E. Lawrence and C. W. Walker, are members, ex officio. By the same ballot, J. S. Estabrook was elected president, R. G. Hawley vice-president and H. M. Macomber secretary-treasurer.

COLLEGE NIGHT AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

In accordance with former years, a service of special interest to university students will be held next Sunday evening at the Baptist Church. For the second time, Hildreth Martin, U. V. M. '22 of New York City will be the guest soloist. Mr. Martin has been studying under eminent teachers ever since graduation and has established fine connections in the musical life of the metropolis. He is well remembered in Burlington for his promising voice during student days.

Among a few of his services in New York are those rendered as a member of the Cathedral Choir at St. Patrick's, vesper soloist at St. Paul's Chapel, member of Symphonic Singers, and the Madrigal Choir. As a member of a quartet, he has been heard over WJZ during the past two years. During summers, he sings with the Green Mountain Quartet of Barre. Sunday night, he will sing "In a Monastery Garden" by Ketelbey with violin obligato by Mrs. P. A. Moody, and "O Lord, Most Holy" by Hoffman. Mr. Oxley speaks upon "The Secret of Leadership" and students and friends are warmly invited. The service concludes with "Champlain," Mr. Martin leading.

Pipe Convert Ends Agonizing Tobacco Hunt

New York, N. Y.
June 30, 1926

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond Va.
Gentlemen:

I started smoking on cigarettes, but after meeting a young lady for whom men who smoked pipes had a greater charm, I promptly switched to one.

Then my agony began. I tried one brand of tobacco after another, always working on the theory that the more you paid for tobacco, the better it would be.

I tried imported special mixtures. I paid as much as fifty cents an ounce. All to no avail.

Then came the day I tried Edgeworth. It was at a ball game. I had run short of the certain brand I was smoking, and a casual acquaintance offered me a pipeful from his pouch.

Imagine my delight when after the first few puffs I did not feel the old familiar bite. I puffed on, inhaling the delightful aroma, and oh, boy! It was sweet right down to the bottom.

Nothing has separated me from my pipe, or my pipe from Edgeworth, since then.

Yours very truly,
(signed) David Freedman, Jr.

OLD GOLD bats 1000% as Hornsby takes the Blindfold cigarette test

ROGERS HORNSBY . . . capable manager of the Boston Braves . . . captain of the 1927 New York Giants . . . manager of the 1926 St. Louis Cardinals, who won the World's Series.

MR. HORNSBY was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands, clearing his taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked . . . "Which one do you like best?"

"They say 'there's not a cough in a carload' of OLD GOLDS.

"But I can tell you there's a home-run hit in every cool mouthful.

"For no other cigarette, of the four leading brands in the blindfold test, could compare with OLD GOLDS for pure pleasure to taste, tongue and throat."

Rogers Hornsby

What gives OLD GOLD this winning charm?

Here is the answer, in three words...heart-leaf tobacco. No coarse, heavy top-leaves of the tobacco plant...for they irritate the throat. No withered ground-leaves...for they are lacking in aroma. Only the cool and fragrant heart-leaves . . . golden ripe . . . can give OLD GOLDS their honey-like smoothness. That's why you can tell them in the dark.

CHANGES IN MEDICAL FACULTY ARE ANNOUNCED

Due to his many engagements as assistant medical director of a national committee, the university is sorry to announce the resignation of Dr Pratt, a member of its medical staff.

To take his place, the university welcomes back a former graduate of the College of Medicine, Clarence A. Bonner, M.D., of the class of 1913.

Dr. Bonner was formerly the superintendent of the State Hospital at Hathorne, Mass. He will continue consultation work with the students conducted in previous years by Doctors Pratt and Thorn.

POWERS NEW COACH OF DEBATE SEEKS MATERIAL

Merrill D. Powers, Vermont Y. M. C. A. secretary and instructor in argumentation, succeeds Lawton Moore as coach of debate and, with four varsity men remaining, will have as his first task, the formation of an almost entirely new squad and the organization of a new program of debate.

Last year, with a large squad with which to work, Coach Moore was able to concentrate his attention not on the producing of a winning team but on the providing of an extensive schedule of debates in which he found plenty of opportunity for experimentation with almost every type of debate and in which open forums and audience discussions largely took the place of judges' decisions

Of last year's varsity there remain Herrick Macomber, Franklin Sears, Louis Lisman, and George Nelson. What material there still is in the upper classes is problematical but that there is some is certain. In the Freshman class, as a result of the high school debating league and the National Oratorical Contest, to the winners in both of which in this state the University has awarded scholarships, there should be plenty of good material available which the Freshman Sophomore debate ought to show up

With last year's veterans forming the nucleus of the team and such expectations to begin with, Vermont should be in line to duplicate its feat of two years ago when it won every debate but one on its schedule.

Vermont goes to Middlebury this year to avenge last year's defeat, while St. Michael's, to which Vermont has lost consistently in recent years and which comes to Vermont this season, should meet its Waterloo at last. The rest of the schedule is as yet unplanned but in almost every instance Vermont will probably resort to the standard Oxford or American type of debate and decisions will be rendered by officially-appointed judges.

Application for Rhodes Scholarships

Word comes from President Guy W. Bailey that applications for the Rhodes scholarships for 1928 are due October 20. This scholarship, worth about $2,000, annually is open to all male students, citizens of the United States, between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five, unmarried, and who have completed at least their sophomore year at college.

Appointments will be made, without examinations, on the basis of the candidates' records at schools and colleges. Some of the qualities that are stressed are literary and scholastic abilities and attainments, superior manhood, courage, devotion to duty, leadership, fellowship and physical vigor

Those selected will begin their studies at Oxford University in October, 1929, and may pursue any course or curriculum.

Students from about thirty states will compete for these scholarships here is an opportunity, therefore, for Vermont men to show their colors

For further information apply to President Guy W. Bailey, Hon. John Shreburne, Randolph, Vt who is secretary of the committee of selections of this state, or President Frank Aydelotte of Swarthmore College, American secretary to the Rhodes Trustees Swarthmore, Pa.

Kex and Serpent will hold its first meeting at 7.15 Tuesday evening, October 2, at the Phi Delta Theta House

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT COLLEGE MIXER

Capacity Crowd Attends First Social Function of the Year and Cheer New York Bound Football Team

UNIVERSITY SPIRIT RISES TO NEW HEIGHT

Over seven hundred students were present at the college mixer Friday evening in the gymnasium, when the football team was given a rousing send-off and the Freshmen were given a chance to become acquainted with the three older classes.

John Hyland, prominent Boulderman and president of the senior class, acted as master of ceremonies, introducing the speakers. Cheerleader Boles, a sophomore, led the entire body in cheering and singing, the like of which is seldom heard. The 55-piece R. O. T. C. Band assisted in the singing as well as furnishing a few popular selections

Frank Otto, manager of football and tennis, was the first orator of the evening. His speech praised the spirit of the many men trying for the squad and his prophecy painted a rosy picture for the Catamounts. His speech was greeted by cheers and huzzahs from the assemblage. Following Manager Otto, Dr. A. K. Aldinger, dean of athletics at Vermont, spoke a few words. He stated that although the Catamount backfield might be strong, the line was better than usual and should aid, considerably, in defensive plays The Doctor also emphasized the backing the team was receiving from the faculty, this season

Loud cheers greeted the appearance of Coach Rattan, the next speaker on the program. The Captain remarked about the fine material present this season and insisted the hardest games would be the two for the state title.

Captain Loren Palmer concluded the speaking program with a few words about the fighting spirit of the players. He promised they would show up well against the larger university. Boles again led cheering, this time for each member of the team, and the "gym" resounded as never before, with "The Old Vermont." Champlain was sung and the freshmen cleared the floor for dancing

"The Vermonters," a ten-piece orchestra, under the direction of the popular "Joe" Lechnyr, furnished music for dancing, which lasted from eight-thirty until midnight. The floor, newly repaired, was in a little better condition

GOLD KEY HOLDS FIRST MEETING OF SEMESTER

Gold Key held its first meeting of the year last Tuesday evening at the Sigma Nu Lodge After the roll call it was found that three members, J. R. Brooks of the Independents, H. W Baker of Sigma Delta, and T. H. Tellier of Delta Psi, had failed to return to college. Brooks was the president elected last spring to serve for the first semester, so R. J. Maynes of Sigma Nu, who was vice-president, automatically assumed the higher office It was decided to postpone the selection of the new members until the fraternities concerned had been consulted

The question of the Gold Key dance, scheduled for the evening of October 6, was brought up Macbride was appointed chairman of the committee to be in charge with Walker and Smith as his assistants, the society as a whole to back them up

A special meeting was called for Thursday evening at the Lambda Iota House At this meeting the following men were selected to fill the vacant places in the society, Adams of Delta Psi, Soutaires of Sigma Delta, and Romanos of the Independents It was voted that the new members be initiated at the next meeting to be held Tuesday evening, October 7 at the Phi Delta Theta House

Further discussion of the dance decided that it could be an informal affair and held in the University gymnasium The various members were given special duties for the preparations and gave a short talk by Bischard representing Boulder on the enforcement of freshman rules the meeting was adjourned

BENNETT NAMES MEN AND WOMEN IN CHOIR

The following candidates for the University Choir have been accepted

Women: Marion Baldwin, Catherine Bassett, Marion Capron, Margaret Corbin Mary Davis Barbara Douglass, Dorothy Fowler, Alice Gay Eleanor Isaacs, Katharine Josselyn, Eleanor Koenig, Hazel Ladd, Marian Murray, Mailla Putnam, Anna Wilder

Men: E. W. Davis, F. Forth, Jr., H E. Goddard, D. Hazen, M. Jenks, R. S Jenks, H. Mattison, W. E. Morgan, Jr., W. W. Parker, H. M. Sheffield, C. H Thompson, L. S. Walker, Jr

The first meeting of the choir will be at the Wednesday chapel service, October 3 Choir members will assemble in the basement of the chapel promptly at 9.55 a.m. If possible gowns should be borrowed from the Medical Book Store before that time The first rehearsal will be held in the chapel, Friday, October 5 at 7 p.m

There are still three vacancies for men in the choir Candidates should apply immediately to Prof. Bennett, phone 2628 or 291-R.

ARIEL EDITORIAL STAFF MEETS ON WEDNESDAY

There will be a meeting of the men's editorial board of the 1930 Ariel at the Delta Psi House, Wednesday evening at seven o'clock. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss plans for the year's work, and to give each member of the board as definite an idea as possible what his particular duties will be It is extremely important that every member of the board be present, as work on the book must be started immediately. The copy for the first 64 pages of the Ariel should be in the printer's hands by about the middle of February, and the whole book should be completed by the last of March.

The members of the board are: managing editor, R L. Stewart, assistant managing editors, R A Lawrence and C A Steele; associate editor, H M Macomber, athletic editor R G Hawley, art editor, C H Macfeature editor, F E Beckley, grind editor, H. K. Borkland; assistant grind editors, M. B. Jenks, P. S. Robbins, and D. J. Vignone; humor editor, B. J. Bullock; photographic editor, I. H. Stanhope; editorial staff, A. W Clain, A Gloria, N. B Gray, M E Mills, J C Puffer and A D Stearns This is substantially the same board as that announced last spring, with, however, a few changes due to the failure of some of the members to return to college

J W Eaton, an assistant business manager, did not return to college, and C W Capron will take his place

George Brush, Louis Lisman, Hugh Mattison, George Nelson, and Donald Oatley have signified their intention of scrubbing the editorial board Lena Cochran and Luella Ross are to scrub the women's board

The campus views have already been taken by White Studio from New York City. The football pictures are to be taken this week and the class pictures soon after. The board sincerely hopes that more members of the respective classes will come out for the pictures than has been the case in the past The inadequacy of the class pictures has always been one of the weak points of the Ariel

About 90 subscriptions were taken during enrollment at the beginning of the year Anybody who wishes to subscribe can do so through R P Billings, business manager, at the Sigma Phi Place

STUDENT UNION COUNCIL

Student Union Council will, hereafter, meet every Wednesday noon at 1.30 in the Old Chapel. A new ruling provides that attendance at Council meeting is compulsory and that three unexcused absences automatically release a girl from Council. The offices represented on Council are as follows: Executive Committee of Student Union, the Class Vice-Presidents, Dormitory Presidents, President of the Town Girls, and the Dean of Women and Mortar Board acting as ex-officio members If unable to attend at any time, will Council members please report to Catherine Bassett, President, or to Lucy Morgan, Secretary

Remember the next meeting, on Wednesday, October 3, in the Old Chapel at 1.30.

COLUMBIA HELD TO THREE TOUCHDOWNS

Vermont Catamounts Give Lions Hard Battle in Opening Game of Football Season—Final Score 20-0

CROWD OF 20,000 SEES GAME AT BAKER FIELD

Baker Field received its baptismal Saturday when the Columbia Lions downed the Vermont Catamounts 20-0 There were 20,000 present to see the first battle on the Blue and White's field and they saw a good, hard fight The first half was nip and tuck all the way, with Columbia managing to squeeze in seven points, but until the half-time whistle no one had a real advantage. Time and again the Lions tried to claw their way through the strong Vermont line but each time they struck a stone wall and had to resort to open field plays. However, after the first half the Cats began to weaken and with an aerial attack and continual smashing at the Vermont tackles the Lions gained two touchdowns in the second half. Two of their three tallies were the result of completed passes. Vermont was decidedly weak in this department, failing to complete a single pass

A lot of credit is due to the Green and Gold warriors and one of the New York papers comes out with the statement that Columbia met a harder fighting team than was expected, as reports had stated that the boys from the Green Mountain area had a very incomplete team this season. It did not take Columbia very long to find out that all that one hears is not the truth The Rattanites put up one stiff fight and it was only Columbia's great strength that stopped our boys.

The Lions' first score came soon after the game got under way A series of off tackle plays, end runs and line bucks carried the ball well into Vermont territory and Kumpf, the Lions backfield ace, faked an end run and dove through the center of the line for a touchdown. He also kicked the extra point from placement. No further scoring was done until the third period, when a great drive down the field placed the ball on the Cats' 10 yard line. Here Scott plunged over the remaining distance

The third and last tally came when Kumpf tossed a short forward to Scott, who raced down the field behind excellent interference to the goal line

With but five minutes left to play, Bauer punted to Freddie Robbins, who handed the fans a great scare Starting on his own 30 yard line the Vermont quarterback exhibited a pretty piece of broken field running and reached Columbia's 35 yard line before he was finally downed

Kumpf, Scott, Adler and Tys were the bright lights for the morningside team. Robbins, Derose and A Scu takes were the outstanding stars for Vermont

VOTERS AND STUDENTS

Several hundred University of Vermont students will be eligible to vote in the coming election of the President of the United States. Nearly all the remaining students will be eligible to vote in the election of 1932. National parties realize this and propaganda, of one sort and another, are circulating among college students all over the country.

Students little realize their duty in voting, often times their votes are merely repetitions of their parents' ideas or accumulated over a little chance reading. As members of the more intelligent group they should think of politics in a more serious frame of mind.

Time and again men of ability waive aside political offices because they consider them degrading, and may tinge their character. If this is so, it is time that the method of government is changed, and may be brought about only by "thinking voters."

Students eligible to vote, should register in their home towns and vote on the absent voter's ballot in the November election. Students who vote in 1932 but not in this election, should study the urging of a national political campaign, form an opinion and be prepared to cast their vote in an intelligent fashion, when they do vote.

We wonder if the more human treatment of freshmen has not already shown results in increased college spirit. With less effort their moods from real purpose they may look at the upper classes with a more friendly aspect and attempt to enter college life with whole-hearted cooperation, instead of feeling that "every man's hand is against them." We admire this newest class at Vermont their cheery sportsmanship, as shown in the fourth rate fight their whole hearted participation in the cheers and songs at the meets and their fine representation on their football squad. Great work '32.

Speaking of loyalty support, any "prof" asked members of pep-rooter and committee to send telegrams to the team, at Columbia Saturday. For a small sum each house could easily do it. And that "prof" backer of the Vermont team didn't graduate here, either. Why not do it next Saturday, when they take Columbia, one of the strongest teams in the country? They play the game against these huge proposition in order to make the sport pay. Isn't it worth it, to show an appreciate and back them?

Society Notes

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Among the June [illegible] was Katherine Stuart Codding who was married to Lawrence C. Mercer '25, Delta Chapter of Barnard on June 30. She was attended by her sister Mary Lee Codding of Delta Theta Chapter of Syracuse University. Miss Codding was president of W. A. A. during her Senior year and also a member of Mortar Board.

Mildred M. Chapin '22 became the bride of Edward Padgett on Saturday morning, September 1 at her mother's home on Buell Street. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend C. C. Adams of the First Church. The bride has served as dietitian at Grassmount and Robinson Hall for the past few years. Mr. Padgett is General Manager of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company. They will reside in Burlington.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

On June 30 at Cambridge, Katherine Ellsworth Lang, '25, was married to Harold Cowdray Carter of Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Carter was a member of Lambda Iota and was also graduated in 1925.

Shortly after Commencement, Helen Stevens of Richmond was married to Mr. Henry L. Churchill of New York City. She was a member of Mortar Board and associate women's editor of the Cynic last year. After a honeymoon spent in the Rocky Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Churchill went to New York to reside, where Mr. Churchill is a member of the editorial staff of the Herald Tribune.

Another June Tri Delta wedding was that of Harriet Metcalf, '27, of Burlington and Mr. Harrison Bicknell of New York. Mr. Bicknell is an athletic director at Manlius, a military school for boys.

Ola Keith, '26, was the bride of Wallace Goodrich, Sigma Nu, of Richmond, Vt., at Sheldon in June. They have made New Haven, Conn., their home.

Vera Doyle, '28, was married to Paul Willard '28, late in August. Both were participants in an automobile accident a few days after their marriage, but their injuries were not of a serious nature. Both Mr. and Mrs. Willard are teaching in the high school at Cummington, Mass.

PI BETA PHI

The wedding of Grace H. Norton, '26, to Frank E. Bartlett, Sigma Nu, '26, occurred on the evening of August 24 at Bristol. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett are living in Syracuse, N. Y., where Mr. Partlett is Science Master at the Pebble Hill Country Day School for boys.

Two graduates of '28, Irene M. Bates and Sabin C. Abell, were married in Hudson Falls, N. Y. on July 16. Mrs. Abell was Chief Justice last year and Mr. Abell was president of his class and a member of Kappa Sigma.

Margaret "Peg" Wood, '25 and Lawrence Averill, Sigma Nu '27 of Malone, N. Y. were married in a quiet wedding at the former's home in Flushing, L. I. September 22. They will live in Hartford, Conn.

ALPHA XI DELTA

The engagement of Ruth Strong '30, to Robert C. Noble medic '30 of North Hampton, Mass. was announced at the first fraternity meeting of the year, Wednesday evening. Mr. Noble is a member of Phi Mu Delta and of Phi Chi medical fraternity.

During the summer Elzada Fiske, '29 represented Upsilon chapter at the National Biennial Convention of Alpha Xi Delta at Bigwin, Ont.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The home of Mrs. P. Frederick Jurg of 19 South Union Street was the scene of the marriage of Jeannette L. Hayes, '28 and Jackson Irving Strong of Burlington on the evening of July 7. The bride was attended by Frances Knight also of Burlington and a graduate in 1928. Mrs. Strong is a member of Verona chapter of Mortar Board and during the past year held the presidency of W. A. A. They will make their home at 84 Buell Street.

Martha Baldwin '28, represented Alpha Iota chapter at the National Fraternity Convention at Mackinac Island, Mich., in June.

SIGMA GAMMA

Announcement is made of the marriage of Velma Cochran '27 of Stowe to Robert C. Lance at Hardwick, on August 20. Mrs. Lance has resumed her position in the high school at Stanfordville, N. Y.

KAPPA DELTA

One of the most recent fall weddings was that of Merta E. Munro of Burlington to Ernest M. Brookings of Springfield on September 17. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend L. C. Smart, the double ring service being used. Mr. Brookings is metal buyer for Jones and Lamson Machine Co. of Springfield. They will reside at 29 Wall Street, Springfield.

THE PERISCOPE

Freshmen never. And they danced. Huge heaps at the gallery stood close to each other but support moral of course. Freshmen and Sophomores. Juniors and Seniors passing in a welcome to each other and to the incoming class. They were men and women of Vermont extending a cordial hand and a welcoming smile to all.

* * *

Sideline comment. She's a good [illegible]. Glad to see you back this year. Did I see you at Columbia or were you at Syracuse?" "Going to the game?" "Like to but there's no soap." The band edged around with the swirling crowd. Here and there the steady beat oblivious of his surroundings, expressed the flying minutes and the tempting melodies. Wax on the floor. A Frosh looked at it and said, "What place to strew sneezing powder." He went outside a minute. He stepped uneasily from foot to foot. The sneezing powder didn't go on the floor. One Frosh, and he a prankish youngster, had begun to grow up.

They said, "Going to the game?" I remembered the Middlebury game of six years ago. Then we bummed down to it. Remembered the Thanksgiving vacation that followed and how we bummed to New York. They asked about going to the game. The Columbia game. Well, that's New York City and New York City is 300 miles away. Still it's the first game of the season. And it's my first year in college for a longer time than I like to remember. The flivver may make it. It's only three hundred miles down and we get back someway. The Columbia game and home tomorrow morning. No classes for me on Saturday. Lucky break in the schedule. Cut the column short behind the ears. I'm going to the game. It's 11:38 and it's 300 miles away.

The other men haven't shown up yet. Wonder when they'll get here. Had intended to talk about politics. You know, Freshmen come up to school. Everything new to them. They roll peanuts on Church Street with their noses. Then the rush of "rushing season." Everyone trying to use his best judgment and not having any too much time in which to do it. Well, classes settling down into a grind. First exams and the end of the first year.

Then back on the hill as a Sophomore. Eligible for varsity activities and anxious to get going. That's what I want to talk about. Politics. Looking for the chance to "Do this for me, do that for you," sort of thing. All right for the most part. Have to do it. A man, any real one, is willing to see the other side of the fence. Still, how about it, isn't the matter carried a bit too far sometimes?

Heard a man say, "That's all doped out for the next five years." He was speaking of a real important office on the hill, major honor. Now I wonder, how can that office be filled for the next five years, one year beyond the time almost all of us will be gone from the school, and filled with the very best man to be had for the position? Answer, you and I know it's impossible.

* * *

That's what I meant about politics and the Freshman mixer. Let's keep the same attitude of cordial good fellowship through the year. Let's do the best we can to get the right man for every student office. Not preaching, you understand, just thinking about the crowd tonight and thinking that every one of them would want to do its best for the team. The team's just one branch of our school and we want to do our best for Old Vermont.

* * *

The other men have showed up. I'm going to that game.

Saturday morning now, nearly 10 o'clock and again I'm writing. Quick trip that was to New York and the first game of the season. Want to tell you about the Catamount that didn't leap. More than illustrates the point I tried to make about politics.

Ernest Codding plays football here at school. Has a bad left arm, kind that would make most any man say all sports were beyond him forever. Well, Capt. Rattan told Ernest, "Get to New York and bring your bag and you'll get into the game." Remember, New York isn't exactly in our back door yard. Just before midnight we started for the game. Codding hadn't told me what getting there meant to him. Didn't speak of it till afterward. Cut most of the story of why we came home. Just tell you the flivver stayed in the ditch near Vergennes with a broken axle. We finally bummed a ride back to the city.

"Other games coming this season," that's what Codding said when we were eating breakfast. Spirit of do your darndest and keep it coming. No ifs and no questions. Your best and all the time right up there with all of it.

Accompanist: A. O. Eaton.

The first rehearsal will be in the Music Building, Wednesday, October 3 at 7 p.m. A full attendance important. Candidates who do not pass the first try-outs may attend, may not sing at rehearsals, but may compete at the second try-outs. There is still room for a few more men. Candidates should apply at the Wednesday rehearsal or to Bennett, 2628, or 291-R.

The first Press Club meeting of the college year was held Friday evening, September 28. It was voted that the special committees function one month at a time. Tryouts will be held for members of the Freshman class who are interested in the Cynic. The elections to the society will be held around Christmas time. Owing to the fact that the Women's Press Club has formally taken over the [illegible] Men's organization it is more important than ever that the members keep up regularly and members are urged to bear this fact in mind. It was announced that the upper left hand corner of the bulletin board in the "Y" Room is reserved for the Press Club.

Leaves Tobacco Tin as All-time Calling Card

Gentlemen:

While in Banff, Alberta, in 1909, I climbed Tunnell Mountain. On top of this mountain there is a cairn of stones where tourists leave their cards with remarks about the scenery, etc. Not having a card with me I left a tin of Edgeworth Shred, scribbled my name and address on a piece of paper, and said, "Have a fill on me."

I have kept up a haphazard correspondence with one of three who wrote me thanking me for the Pipeful of Edgeworth. What makes me write you is that today from Australia I received two sheets of Edgeworth with the words, "Have a fill on me," so you see Edgeworth keeps friends friendly.

Yours sincerely,
P. B. Johnstone

WOMEN'S POW-WOW AT GYMNASIUM TONIGHT

It is called a pow-wow, this meeting of all the women students in the gymnasium tonight. Mystery surrounds what lies beyond the gym doors at 7:30 o'clock, but there are hints of splendid entertainment, together with an explanation of all activities which students wish to enter, voting upon rules of vital concern, singing under Estebel Perelman's able leadership, and dancing.

This party replaces the usual Vermonters' Club get-together, and is undertaken this year by the Women's Student Union.

VERMONT CO-EDS MEET MIDDLEBURY IN SPORTS

Saturday marks a new venture in the advancement of women's athletics when sportswomen of Middlebury and of Vermont will meet in friendly contests at the former college. The program of sports has been jointly arranged by Miss Rose Marchiano, '29, president of Middlebury's Women's Athletic Association, and by Miss Marian Backus, '29, president of W. A. A. on this campus. Miss Marion Young and Miss Eleanor S. Cummings, directors of physical education at Middlebury and Vermont will be present as honor guests.

The teams, which will participate in hockey, archery, volley ball, tennis and relays, will not be chosen beforehand; and each will be composed of girls from the two colleges since the interest lies not in competition but in sport for sport's sake and the making of acquaintances.

Already a large number have indicated their intentions to go down on the 12:02 train Saturday. Lunch and a social hour will follow the games and the entire program will allow the Vermont visitors time in which to get the 4:55 northbound train.

The idea of a Sports Day was inaugurated by two co-educational colleges in New York State. It was received with favor in California, where a triangular play day took place last year. Pennsylvania next took up the idea, along with middle-western universities.

FIRST SOCIETY DANCE TOMORROW EVENING

Gold Key is giving the first society dance of the year tomorrow night at the University gymnasium. The Sophomore society has made thorough preparation and with the refinished floor, the dance promises to be a success. The affair will start at eight o'clock and will continue until midnight. Lechnyr's orchestra will furnish music for the dancing and Mr. and Mrs. Leon W. Dean and Captain and Mrs. W. V. Rattan will act as chaperones.

The dance is informal and refreshments will be served at intermission. Special attention will be given to assisting the Freshmen meet their classmates and upperclassmen. Admission will be one dollar per couple.

Committees in charge of the dance are: General, MacBride, chairman, Walker, Smith; tickets and programs, Walker, Tobin; refreshments, Brush; floor, Tobin.

OCTOBER 29 OPENS RUSHING SEASON

Interfraternity Conference Votes to Revise Troublesome Rule Eleven—To Vote on Revision Tonight

LUCIANI AND KINNEY ARE NEW OFFICERS

Anthony A. Luciani, Zeta Chi, assumed presidency and Paul W. Kinney, Sigma Delta, secretaryship at a meeting of the Interfraternity Council held at the Phi Mu Delta House Wednesday evening. The matter of rushing was discussed and contrary to the dates formerly published the nights for rushing will be Monday, October 29, Tuesday, October 30, Wednesday, October 31 and Thursday, November 1. Friday, November 2, will be a neutral period, and at 6 o'clock Friday bids will be given out in the chapel of the Old Mill.

A committee of four has been selected to confer with Professor Carroll regarding Rule 11, which was misinterpreted last year. A new rule, to replace the troublesome rule which states, "The punishment for infraction of the Rushing Rules shall be suspension from the conference for a period of one year, and prohibition from all interfraternity contests. These shall include all interfraternity athletics and Kake Walk. In cases of extreme or minor infractions the sentence may be cut to one-half a year from the time the offense was committed. If a fraternity is suspended the knowledge of such and the reason shall be distributed to the Freshmen of the next year through the Freshman Handbook, and it shall be published in the Cynic. Any Freshman or new student involved in an infraction of the rules may be suspended, i.e., prohibited from accepting a bid from any fraternity even in the Conference for a period of not less than half a year or greater than one year from time infraction was committed."

After the new rule is drawn up, with Professor Carroll's assistance the committee, composed of D. Johnson, chairman, George Rand, Warren Dodge and Paul Hopson, will present the rule for action to the conference at a meeting Friday evening at seven at the Phi Mu Delta House. If approved it will be subject to the wishes of the fraternities and the Faculty Council.

HARRIERS COMMENCE PRACTICE IN EARNEST

Coach Aldrich has his harriers doing their daily grind over the three-mile course getting the "kinks" out of their muscles and their wind in good shape. About ten answered the call for the varsity squad and it is hoped that more material will come forth.

The first few nights have been given over to jogging over the course with no thought of speed or time. The meet with Middlebury is yet over a month away and Coach Aldrich does not want to tire his men before it is time to get down to strenuous training. At present there is some trouble as to the distance that the race will be over this year. The Black Panther hill and daders want to go over the six-mile route, while the Catamounts want to restrict it to three miles. It is expected that this dispute will soon be settled. Last year Vermont nosed out the Blue here. This year the Cats invade the lair of the Black Panthers.

Arnold is the only letterman running but so far he is showing up fine and should have a banner year. Woodward, Vermont's best quarter-miler is trying the long distance and is showing up fairly well. Maynes, another track man, is also training every night and should be one of the strong members of the squad. "Nellie" Gray, "Dick" Blakeley and "Ag" Clain are making strong bids for positions and it is hoped that a stronger team will be developed than was formerly predicted.

The first issue of the Maine Campus did honor to their Freshman class by appearing entirely in green print.

STUDENT ORCHESTRA TO PLAY AT AUDITORIUM

Burlington's new Memorial Auditorium, the scene of the last Junior Prom, is to house dances every Saturday evening this winter, with an orchestra composed of college students working their way furnishing music. This group called the Catamount Collegians won the right to play over several other teams many from outside the city.

They had the distinction of being the first local orchestra to play at Bayside and, as well as playing for many Vermont functions, have played at house dances during the Junior Weeks at Dartmouth and Middlebury.

MORTAR BOARD SOCIETY TO HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

October 11 is the day chosen in the calendar of social activities for the picnic which Mortar chapter of Mortar Board sponsors each fall. In accordance with the usual custom, North Beach will be the scene of the picnic. This may be easily reached by taking the North Avenue trolley car at the corner of South Winooski Avenue and Pearl Street. The beach is located about three miles from the campus and many girls cover the distance by foot in order to earn W. A. A. credit.

Beside promises of entertainment there are hints of many good things to eat. Supper will not be served in any dormitory and therefore no charge will be made for those who board at college during halls. Town girls will be asked to pay a fee of twenty-five cents.

Since the fall picnic is one of the few events which all girls of all four classes enjoy together, Mortar Board anticipates a record attendance. In case of rain or inclement weather on October 11 the picnic will probably occur the following day.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AT LABOR UNIVERSITY

Brookwood—our only labor college of importance—is under fire. Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor is responsible for the decision of the Executive Council to ask affiliated unions to withdraw their support from the college. The college is being charged with anti-religious and pro-Soviet leanings. But who investigated the institution and upon what evidence the charges are based neither students nor faculty nor board of directors can tell.

Fortunately there was a great deal of protest against this summary action and President William Green has promised Brookwood College that no final action will be taken until members of the Executive Council have had "ample opportunity to acquaint themselves with the protests filed." We are happy to find Mr. Green so easily won over to the principle of collective bargaining. Autocratic control of the intellectual life would seem to be the furthest from labor's policy, judging from the fact that the laboring man continually fights against monopoly in distribution of the material benefits of life. A labor college should indeed be a model of democracy in education especially since labor often suffers an intellectual eclipse in the regular colleges. Brookwood has during the seven years of its life been such a democratic college. Faculty and students share in the school's government, all points of view are given a hearing and it has been inevitable that a few Communists should be found within Brookwood's walls. It will be unfortunate if this freedom is curtailed. A Brookwood under the thumb of a Matthew Woll will be of no more significance to true education than a prize fight course at the University of Pennsylvania.

Holy Cross registration shows an enrollment of more than 1200 according to Dean Francis X. Downes, S. J. and is the largest in the history of the institution. The Freshman number of 295, is also a record.

CATAMOUNTS MEET PRINCETON TIGERS

Vermont Pigskin Artists Journey to New Jersey for Second Game of Season—Opponents Have Strong Team

ROBINSON ONLY MAN ON VERMONT INJURED LIST

The Catamounts will play their second and most trying game of the season tomorrow afternoon against the Tigers in Palmer Stadium, Princeton, N. J.

Princeton as usual is expected to have one of the strongest teams in the country and the opening whistle will bless with the Green and Gold team a decided underdog. Coach Bill Roper has been having a great deal of difficulty in picking a line. He has a great wealth of lineamen but none are outstanding and competition has been keen. Stinson and Lawler, the regular ends may not be able to start on account of injuries. In each event the wings will probably be an event the wings will probably be Morrison and Maroney. Barfield and Moore, letter men of last year seem to have a slight edge at the tackles to have a slight edge at the tackles. Captain Howe, Howe last year's center will fill a gap at guard left by Hackstaff and Moore will be his running mate. Caldwell will fill Howe's old berth in the center of the line. Miles, Wittmer and Norman all of last year corps will hold down the halfback and fullback positions and should prove to be an exception ally fast and clever combination. Due to the loss of Barnes who has left college there is doubt about the part the centerback but Bennett on account of his passing ability should get the call at present. Miles was perhaps the greatest defensive back in the East last year and excels in backing up a line. He weighs about 160 pounds but will not be in the best of condition. He returned to the football squad only two weeks ago from a geology trip and will lack practice. Captain Howe accompanied Miles and will be in a similar condition.

Vermont on the other hand will start full strength, with the exception of Jack Robinson who has a wrenched knee. I. Scrutchey is expected to start at halfback as his injured leg is better.

The probable lineup:

KEY AND SERPENT TO HOLD SMOKER AND DANCE

Key and Serpent honorary Junior society held a meeting at the Phi Delta Theta House Tuesday evening, October 2, for a preliminary discussion of the smoker and dance the week-end of the Norwich game, November 2 and 3, Friday and Saturday nights.

Committees were appointed by President R. G. Hawley to have care of the dance and smoker programs. It is fully expected that Key and Serpent will live up to its reputation of putting on a week-end program filled with fun and excitement for everyone.

As customary the smoker is arranged for the night immediately preceding the Norwich contest. It is hoped that Vermont will come out of the fray the victor this year and turn the tables on its old rival. Members of Key and Serpent believe that all the enthusiasm and pep possible is in order on the night of November 2. Friday. The smoker is made the medium through which to do this.

Following this discussion it was decided that Key and Serpent hats for the coming year should be quite dissimilar to those worn in the past. A committee was appointed to choose the hats and make a report at the next meeting.

Large green woolen blankets with the gold block "V" will be awarded as usual to Senior football men, it was decided.

"A BREAK"

[illegible] editorials are intended for the student body. This [illegible] special periods to Vermont professors and instructors.

Last year the University was extremely fortunate in securing [illegible] graduate, a pleasant and likable man, as an instructor of [illegible] languages. Not only did he acquaint much in the class-room, but what is often more important he gave the fellows a "break." Among the fellows a "break" means giving [illegible] a square deal. "Square deal" means more than an honest grade based upon a semester's work. It means helping them, making their work more interesting, laughing over the dull parts of a course and, most of all, being a fellow among fellows. That is [illegible] an art. He was an artist.

To those who believe that a professor or instructor should not bend himself to the level of the student, may we point out what the instructor is gaining accomplished by pursuing such tactics?

1. They are the classes actually learned something. Why? Because they wanted to learn something to please him.

2. His hours were looked forward to with as much anticipation as the advent of the hop.

3. He was able to give out longer assignments than most of his colleagues, with less objection from his pupils.

4. More people attempted to enter his classes than those of any other professor or instructor teaching the same subject.

5. The hallowe'ens at his home were much anticipated gatherings and his seminars before exams were thankfully attended.

These facts were gleaned from constant association with fellows taking his courses and those attempting or wishing to take them. He is no longer at Vermont. His song is ended, but his memory lingers on. Wouldn't you care to occupy such an envious position? The method is simple. Be a fellow among fellows—not a professor among students.

G. R. N.

Some rollers and cement mixers have seemed to disappear and their sense is missed by those having classes on the west side of the college building. By the looks of the new road it was well worth while and nearly a hundred percent improvement over the so-called street of last year. Who says the appearance of the campus is not improving? It's a shame we couldn't have a few more of these concrete lights!

If the team can only survive the Princeton game without too many on the injured list, we should have a good chance to win the remainder of our games this season.

Speaking of games, a local news vendor has the honor of causing the bell in the "Old Mill" to be rung in vain. His code was twisted and he had Vermont winning the game last Saturday.

THE PERISCOPE

This issue of The Periscope is dedicated to the men of the University. [illegible] about us in the halls, infest the library, pre-empt the walks and sometimes make our serious pursuit of knowledge a difficult thing. In rare cases they force us to change our course of study from engineering, commerce and so on pre-med to one in feminine psychology. When this happens they prove themselves merciless teachers. Sometimes they drop us from their course and sometimes the University drops us from all other courses. A sad, sad state. Men, let us rebel against it!

The Vermont Literary Magazine, what does the name mean to you? Is it a magazine which is yours in a peculiar sense? Is it an anemic publication with a plain cover and a blank page where some advertising should be but isn't? Or, and this is more probably the case, is it just "one of those things?"

Founded last year on a prayer and a shoestring, the little sheet made its appearance in response to a real demand for a publication of a purely literary nature. I say it made its appearance in response to a demand. When its board had published the first issue, long before that, in fact, when they were attempting to sell subscriptions, they were doing everything possible to promote the best interests of the school,—for what school of our grade would be without a literary magazine?—and they were also doing their earnest best to fill the real demand for a new publication.

Putting money, even if it is only a dollar, into a new venture requires a certain amount of liberalism. Possibly it requires something of an imagination and a hopeful disposition. At any rate I fear it is not conservative. Now Vermont is notoriously conservative. It might be said, twisting the tail of an old one, we put conservativeness next to Godliness. Students in the University naturally enough desire to preserve the traditions making their state famous. And so, clearly enough, we have the explanation for the pitifully weak support accorded the board of the new magazine. Vermonters did not wish to invest in blue sky. They wished to retain the tradition of safe conservatism. And this they did quite nobly while the board of the Literary Magazine struggled along on 300 subscribers.

A restaurant graces the corridor of the Old Mill. Just across from the bookstore, it offers nourishment for the body, and helps to sustain the energies of many a flagging soul who arose too late for breakfast. Being fed, the would-be student may cross the hall and purchase material with which to feed his all-engulfing curiosity. And so the store and the restaurant supplement each other. But, surprising oversight, the two fail to supplement each other in all possible ways. There are a goodly number of hundreds of us who are not satisfied with a mere sandwich and a text book. Ah no. We must also have the soothing influence of communication with our Lady Nicotina in order to properly digest food, be it pie or calculus.

Sometime soon I hope to purchase cigarettes at the Coffee Corner. There is a real demand for them and when the temperature drops to zero, when the lake is slowly freezing, I remember from my own sad experience, the walk down street after butts is no small task. So I am urging a new enterprise, the sale of cigarettes. There is a real demand and that demand will continue. The counter, once established, will not suffer from the neglect of the student body.

And coming back to The Vermont Literary Magazine, is it to be treated with as much respect as one of the three leading brands? Is it to be accorded the same attention as the one you pick while blindfolded or is it to be left strictly alone this year?

Its board has been devoted and able. They have accomplished wonders when one considers the handicap of student neglect unjustly imposed on them. Through the first year they published every promised issue. They printed part of the Tri-State Literary Contest material. More of it will be published. Ever and incessantly they begged for more support in order to accomplish more for the school and the magazine.

Friends, Vermonters, fellow students, I wish to make a proclamation among you. The Vermont Literary Magazine is no new thing. It has behind it a record of success. That record has been made in the face of your neglect and ill support after your demand called the magazine into existence.

Now you are not asked to invest a dollar in a hope. This year there is no question about the regularity of publication. There is no doubt concerning the value of the material to be published. The board has promised an additional issue for the current year. That issue, like every other issue, will be filled with the best material which you, the students of this University, are able to submit. If the literary worth of the magazine is small it is a reflection on you in two ways. It shows either a lamentable lack of ability for self expression or an almost unbelievable attitude of neglect toward the magazine.

Tradition has been sustained. Conservatism has been upheld and the magazine has prospered. Now uphold conservatism once more; sustain tradition again.

The very theory of all conservatism is the saving of every valuable thing which one possesses. Act in accord with this theory. Support The Vermont Literary Magazine as a proved success and as one of the most worthy student activities in your University. Help the editorial staff by your contributions. Talk it up among your friends. Get the folks at home interested in the magazine. Above all, do not desert the tradition of your state. Support the magazine with your subscription. Put your own dollar behind the theory of conservatism, the preserving of valuable elements in society, and see to it that your roommate does the same.

Subscribe to The Vermont Literary Magazine.

"Wings"

This is the third and last day of "Wings" at a local movie house. On Broadway it is still playing at $2 a seat, so the wise students will see it in Burlington. This picture was actually filmed in the air. The cameramen were strapped to the wings of the machine and literally risked their lives to get those aerial scenes whose filming took 125 hours. The author, Saunders, was an aviator during the war and got his inspiration at that time.

An American general, Malone, says that "Wings" is the best military picture he has ever seen, and a French theatre director, d'Arrast, praises the faithful reproduction of the "Folies Bergere." It promises to be an intriguing combination. And of course there is romance from the following highly romantic cast: Charles Rogers, Richard Arlen, Gary Cooper, El Brendel, "Gunboat" Smith, Henry B. Walthall, Clara Bow, Jobyna Ralston, Arlette Marchal and Julia Gordon.

Poetic Legend Accounts for Woman's Creation

Among numerous legends of woman's creation that in the Sanskrit is one of the most poetical. In the beginning (it says) when Twashtri came to the creation of woman he found he had exhausted his materials in the making of man and that no solid elements were left, says the Detroit News.

After profound meditation he took the rotundity of the moon, the twinkling of the stars, the curves of creepers, the clinging of tendrils, the trembling of grass, the slenderness of the reed, the bloom of flowers, the lightness of leaves, the tapering of the elephant's trunk, the glances of deer, the clustering of rows of bees, the joyous gayety of sunbeams, the weeping of the clouds, the fickleness of winds, the timidity of the hare, the vanity of the peacock, the softness of the parrot's bosom, the hardness of adamant, the sweetness of honey, the cruelty of the tiger, the warm glow of fire, the coldness of snow, the chattering of jays, the cooing of the kokila, the hypocrisy of the crane, the fidelity of the chakravaka, and compounding all these he made woman and gave her to man.

But in two weeks the man came crying, "O, Mighty Master of Mysteries, thou who hast made all the wonders of the world, take again the woman thou gavest me. She tears, tries and tantalizes me, and I cannot live with her any more." And Twashtri took the woman away. But in two weeks the man came back. "Give me back the woman that thou made—I cannot live without her."

Today's great issue and its answer: If a woman were running for the presidency Smith would liquor and Hoover'ly believes that his opponent would not? But, of course, Smith is not "all wet" and Hoover's speeches are too interesting to be called dry.

BOULDER SMOKER FIRST PEP RALLY OF YEAR

A real peppy time, in the form of a smoker, has been arranged by the Boulder Society for next Friday Night at 7.30.

Since the Boston University contest is the first home game of the season, the members of the society have put their utmost efforts into the affffair in order to arouse the potential spirit that lies within the student body. All Freshmen are especially requested to be present.

A fine program has been arranged by the committee in charge which consists of "Sealy" Estabrook and "Doc" Rogers. The smoker will start off with songs played by the crack R. O. T. C. band under the personal direction of Joseph Lechnyr. The first speaker will be Manager F. R. Otto. He will be followed by Captain Loren Palmer, assistant Coach Tully, Dr. "Mickey" McMahon, and last but not least Coach Rattan. The speakers are all well known to the students either for their campus activities or for other reasons. Cheers will be conducted by a staff of cheerleaders during the coarse of the evening.

During the evening, smokes furnished by L. P. Wood, will be passed out to those present. Refreshments of cider and doughnuts will also be served in the cage immediately after the smoker. The committee has procured plenty of refreshments so that every male student will be refreshed if he only shows up at the smoker.

BOULDER GIVES DANCE SATURDAY EVENING

October 13 will witness the second social function of the Boulder Society this season. Preparations are in progress for a dance in the University Gymnasium. Information as to details of the coming occasion are unavailable, as plans have not yet been completed.

The program is under the direction of J. P. Hyland, and the whole affair is sure to be a success. In the past, Boulder has staged thoroughly enjoyable dances and entertainments.

Saturday's event is another step in the new method of Freshman adjustment to college life.

It is to be hoped that it will be well attended, particularly by the Freshmen, in order that they may extend their acquaintanceship with all the members of the U. V. M. family.

The opening meeting of the local branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will be held next Tuesday, October 9, at 7.30 p.m. in the Radio Shack.

Following the business meeting several students who have worked in the Bell System and the Atwater Kent Radio Company will describe their experiences and opportunities open to college students.

A cordial invitation is extended to the Freshmen and to all others interested in attending the meetings.

TIGER ELEVEN TOO STRONG FOR U. V. M.

Vermont Outclassed in Game With Princeton Saturday—Many Substitutions Made on Both Sides

CATAMOUNTS DOWNED IN SECOND GAME 50-0

Princeton uncorked a powerful offense in its first game of the season in Palmer Stadium Saturday afternoon and swamped the Catamounts 50 to 0.

The Tigers scored in every period and proved superior in all departments of the game.

It was the largest score that a Princeton football eleven has rolled up since the war, and one of the biggest in the history of the university.

From the start of the game Princeton outclassed the Green and Gold gaining at will. Vermont gained not more than ten yards through the line and was forced to complete two forward passes for as many first downs, while the Nassau forward line charged ferociously and as a unit, helping to make twenty first downs. Vermont had the ball only a very few minutes and the home team's defense remained untried.

Coach Roper used two full teams in order to test his reserve material for future games. Each combination was as invincible as another.

None of the Vermont men were given an opportunity to shine, although Palmer and Robbins played fine ball.

Wittmer was the big noise for Princeton's first team on the offense while Myles and Howe shone on the defense.

Princeton took the ball on the initial kickoff and marched sixty yards without interruption for a touchdown. This was an omen of what was to follow. As the second quarter opened, Wittmer went around left end for five yards and another six points. Late in the same period Graham Jones took the ball over the goal line after a determined offensive.

In the third period Princeton rolled up thirteen more points. Wittmer went around left end for fourteen yards and one touchdown and place kicked for the extra point. A few moments later Doug. Levick, Tiger sophomore, intercepted a pass and ran fifty-five yards for a score.

The heaviest scoring of the day came in the final quarter with the second team on the field. Requardt swung around left end for thirty yards and then went over for a touchdown.

Smashing runs by Requardt paved the way for the next touchdown and Trix Bennett took the ball over and place kicked for the extra point. The final score came when Bennett took a punt at midfield, ran it to the Vermont fifteen-yard line and then went over for a touchdown.

STUDENTS TO PARADE TO GRIDIRON THURSDAY

All classes will form on the back campus at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon for the annual Boulder week peerade to Centennial Field an event which has aroused more and more interest each year in the student body and especially in the upper classes.

All Freshmen are required to attend as Gold Key will be in attendance at the Field to call the roll. It understood that some ten or fifteen yearlings will be especially dolled up for the occasion in brilliant green and gold placards and in various weird and bizarre costumes as an act of penitence for failing to comply with the various particulars of the Freshman rules.

Joe Lechnyr will lead the parade at the head of his R. O. T. C. Band who are expected to wear for the first time a new type of uniform.

The arrival of the student body on the field will be the signal for plenty of cheering, singing and general pep raising. The peerade will proceed through the field, marching onto the stands and from this point will observe the scrimmage that has been scheduled for Thursday. What the men can do against B. U. in Saturday's game will be evident to the onlookers at the practice session.

Boulder will have absolute charge of the undertaking which it plans to make the best and biggest yet.

WATER FIGHT

The back campus will again be the scene of the annual water fight between the two lower classes. Tomorrow afternoon at 4.15 o'clock the kittens will try to avenge the decisive defeat which they suffered at the hands of the Sophomores in the freshman fight a few weeks ago. The fight which consists of the two teams turning five hoses on each other has always afforded much thrill and enjoyment to both the on-lookers and the participants, and this year will doubtlessly afford just as much amusement as in past years. Some of those who witnessed the fight last year were so excited that they got a little too close and received a good shower bath.

The Boulder Society has charge of the affair. They have arranged a set of rules which must be followed by the participants. In order to be declared the victors the team must win two fights. Each class will play two teams apiece and each one of the teams will be matched up with one of the other class. If both fights are not won by one team each side will play another team made up of the survivors of the first two teams.

Rules have also been arranged as to where the teams will start and the distance that each can move from its starting place. Each team will be allowed to advance only a certain distance towards its enemy but if it is pushed backwards beyond a certain point the other team will score a victory.

Members of Boulder will act as the judges.

REVISION OF RULE ELEVEN ACCEPTED

Interfraternity Conference Unanimously Adopts Changes in Old Rule and Vote on New Ordinance

CHANGES SUBJECT TO FRATERNITY APPROVAL

Troublesome Rule 11 has been revised and the change made voted upon and accepted unanimously by the Interfraternity Conference which held a meeting at the Phi Mu Delta house, Friday evening, October 5. In addition a new rule, making a total of 17 has been proposed and accepted concerning the asking of Freshmen on open house nights their preference for a rushing date.

A committee of four composed of D. Johnson '29, chairman, George Rand '29, Warren Dodge '29 and Paul Hopson '29 with the assistance of Professor D. H. Carroll of the Political Science Department revised Rule 11 and presented it for action at this meeting. After being unanimously accepted by the Interfraternity Conference, the rule is subject now only to the wishes of the Faculty Council where it is reasonably sure to be passed.

With the first open house night tomorrow evening it is only fitting that the Rushing Rules as they now stand should be printed in full. The following are the rules adopted by the Conference for the season of 1928-29.

1. Beginning with the first day of football camp, no fraternity or fraternity man shall entertain, discuss fraternity matters with or extend invitation to membership to any Freshman or new student until the end of the neutral period after regular bidding time, except at open house nights or rushing parties as explained below. (The word entertain is interpreted as meaning accompanying at movies, dinner engagements out of town athletic contests etc.)

2. No Freshman or new student shall be allowed in any fraternity house between aforesaid dates except during open house nights and rushing parties.

3. The Interfraternity Council will designate five evenings in October when fraternities may welcome Freshmen at their houses or rooms from seven to ten in the evening. Entertainment shall be limited to "smokes" and no fraternity matters shall be discussed at these meetings. Personal invitations to open house nights may supplement the general invitation to all students.

4. On the Monday following the last of the open house nights Freshmen shall assemble at 4 p.m. in the Chapel in the Old Mill to receive date cards from representatives of different fraternities filling out same as has been customary. A member of the faculty who is a disinterested party and yet competent shall be designated by the Conference to meet the Freshmen as a body and to make such explanations to them as are necessary before they go through the line.

5. During the same week rushing dates four in number will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. Evening dates will last from 6-12 p.m. No fraternity shall make more than two dates with any one Freshman.

6. From 12 p.m. Thursday after the last rushing date until 6 p.m. Friday shall be a strictly neutral period, during which time no active or associate member of an organization belonging to the conference shall hold any communication whatsoever with new students.

7. At 2 p.m. on the Friday follow

The above mentioned committee was empowered to aid the treasurer in securing subscriptions to defray the expense of these additions, and a popular subscription was raised in the city. Professor Joseph Torrey was chairman of this committee. It was necessary to add to this fund by "hiring the sum of 600 dollars" for the purpose of obtaining specimens and cases "sufficient to put the collection upon a respectable basis." This sum was raised on a single note signed by the following men, whose names have always been identified with the worthy enterprises of our city and University: George W. Benedict, James Marsh, Joseph Torrey and William Seymour. The note was held for twelve years, when the last dollar was paid by the College from its regular income.

In the year 1849 steps were taken to transfer the collections and furniture in the possession of the College of Natural History to the corporation of the University, and to that end a committee of appraisers was appointed. It consisted of Zadock Thompson, Leonard Marsh, George P. Marsh. They reported upon the value of the property as follows. Fixtures, $200, Minerals, $400. Shells, $300, Preparations, fossils, etc., $300, Total, $1,200.

At the time of the transfer of the collections to the University, the membership of the College of Natural History numbered considerably over a hundred. There seem to have been periods of waning interest, but during most of the period of its history occasional meetings were held, seemingly well attended and successful.

At one time it was deemed advisable to provide more space for prospective additions to the cabinet, and a rearrangement was suggested. "We have ascertained that the space underneath one of the cases is sufficient to receive the swan, and that by removing four or five of the shelves from the case and bringing the feet of the heron as near together as possible he may be deposited within it. We are not certain, however, but in order to do this it will be necessary to abridge somewhat the length of one of his toes, but his foot would be completely hidden from view." This reminds one of the efforts that have to be made at the present time to accommodate the specimens in the museum. A glance at the case of mammals will illustrate.

The museum building was erected by the college about 1867, and stood for many years on the ground now occupied by the Science Hall. The difficult task of rolling it down hill to its present position and turning it a quarter around was performed just before the erection of the Science Hall in 1896-7.

REV. GOODLIFFE SPEAKS AT MID-WEEK SERVICE

The power of conviction stirred Rev. G. E. Goodliffe, for the past ten years pastor of the Congregational Church in Morrisville, Vt., is the road to happiness Rev. Goodliffe, who spoke to more than two hundred students at chapel Wednesday morning, and who is one of the outstanding leaders of religious thought in our state, classified people into two classes those who used themselves correctly and those who needed to be saved from themselves. The former were discussed, they had the power of conviction as linked with a moral issue, they were true and self sacrificing.

A man may be cultured and educated, he may be rough and obscure yet if he be an agitator for the right his life will lead to success. If he passes daily from task to task, and in so doing finds out whether or not he is making the right use of himself. Then acts upon his discoveries, his life will be one full of the joy of living.

Reverend Goodliffe has not seen much of the life of college men and women but he has seen the lives of their parents and has found in them an overflowing measure of that loyalty and conviction we should make the guides of our lives.

Can we match that? If not, then the essence of religion, happiness and good living will depreciate. Each must find his kingdom in his own heart and through a true sense of the values of life appreciate all the things surrounding him. It is thus he will have played the game and gained that which everyone seeks: happiness.

MILITARY SCIENCE MEN DIVIDED INTO SECTIONS

Beginning Monday, October 8, Freshmen will attend military on Mondays and Wednesdays at hours designated on the bulletin board in the gymnasium. Wednesday, the first three periods will be 30 minutes earlier than the regular time. The entire battalion will attend military on Fridays.

The Senior class is divided into two sections, as posted on the bulletin board, for the purpose of drilling the Freshman class. The first section will drill during the months of October and January, and the second section during November and December.

All Sophomores should turn in their coats to receive corporals' chevrons and service stripes. There are also some Juniors who have not turned in coats for chevrons and service stripes.

Freshmen ordering military uniforms should pay for same at the cashier's office, in the Medical Building, before October 20, 1928, or receive an extension of time.

As Susan Brown was out calling upon her playmate, Mary Collins, she found the object of her visit very much in sorrow. Susan soon learned that Mary had a bad toothache. Trying to comfort her she asked: "Why don't you have your tooth filled?"

"It is filled," answered Mary.

"With what kind of filling?" asked Susan.

"Chocolate filling," answered Mary.

. . . with their feet on the ground

MEN of vision, yes. But don't overlook the fact that those old Roman road builders and empire builders kept their feet firmly fixed on the ground. They faced the facts squarely. They were demons for detail. They were the world's first great organizers.

Pioneering in the telephone industry is like that. It is a work of vision and of leadership into new fields. But back of it all must be the ability to organize men, money, material and machines.

The telephone executive must coordinate his machine before he can run it. He must understand the possibilities in his organization before he can lead it. That done, his opportunity is empire-wide, vision-broad and ambition-deep.

BOULDER WEEK

This week is Boulder Week. If any student has spunk he will have a chance to demonstrate it before the week is over. Boulder seldom leaves a task half done and it would seem they have planned for a thorough waking up of the student body to the realization that they have a football team which is to play a hard game next Saturday at home.

Thursday the student body is asked to parade to Centennial Field from the gymnasium at four o'clock. Last year several upperclassmen teamed with the freshmen to make up the parade. The group was small but the spirit was right and they made plenty of noise. This year there should be more upperclassmen in line. It's a pretty poor idea to think the squad is going to practice every night and play games to win with a group behind them unwilling to sacrifice even one afternoon to show their appreciation. Men and women students must be in line Thursday and show the team they do represent a group of live wires just as full of pep and fight as they.

One good thing has been decided on by the Green Mountain Conference: scouting among the three State institutions is going to be permitted. The decision not to scout, didn't turn out so well; old grads would write in and students attending games couldn't refrain from telling their classmates. The Barre Times struck the nail on the head when it said, "The three Vermont Colleges, Norwich, Middlebury and Vermont won't go into the State championship series this year feeling like hypocrites."

ALL OUT FOR MOUNTAIN DAY

Eighteen miles away lies our Back Campus. Towering over the surrounding country, its head often buried in the clouds, stands our own Mount Mansfield. It is ours in a peculiar sense. Not only is it the pride of every Vermonter because of its height greater than that of any other peak in the Green Mountains, but to us, the students of the State University, it has a special significance. It is literally our Back Campus. For many years it has been the property of the University.

The tradition of Mountain Day was established many years ago, long before the Outing Club itself was founded. At first a few hardy souls went out to explore the unknown peak. They returned with vivid stories of the beauties they had observed. Interest throughout the State was quickened into a demand for a better knowledge of this beauty spot.

With passing years the climbing facilities have been much improved. Now well-marked, easily accessible, trails lead to the very top of the peak. Underbrush has been cut back from the paths and they may be traveled by any normal person. A hotel has been built half way up the mountain. The once desolate peak, the home of bears and growing Indians, has become one of the outstanding attractions of the State of Vermont.

No other college in this country has such an easily accessible reserve as Mount Mansfield. It is one of the most distinctive things about our college. It marks us out for national attention and we are rightly envied this prized possession by other schools.

The mountain should not be neglected. We who are residents of Vermont should be glad of the opportunity of revisiting a well known and well loved spot. Students from other states should be especially eager to take advantage of this opportunity to visit the highest peak of the Green Mountains, often mentioned by name in their poetry.

Many of us will sometimes travel abroad. Almost all of us look forward to such trips. We dream of visiting the Swiss and Italian Alps. We think of the mountain peaks and plan for their conquest during some approaching summer.

Mountain Day gives us an opportunity to realize a similar dream. We may visit our own mountain and revel in its beauty. We may gaze out over the Adirondacks, over the sweeping length of our Lake Champlain, far over into the White Mountains and north into Canada. If Mountain Day be clear we shall be able to see Montreal far away beyond the coiling St. Lawrence River.

Mansfield is our mountain. It calls to us from its wooded slopes, from its wind-swept peaks and its subterranean passages. The slopes are snowless now although the first snow of the year has already fallen on their scarred surfaces. Snow will remain on the mountain until late June next year. Now it may be easily climbed.

The peak is rich in history and tradition. In one sense it is something of a mystery, for how it came by its name has already been forgotten. From one angle the mountain looks like the face of a brooding, philosophical man.

Let us go out to become closer acquainted with our campus and the face which calls to us. For one day let us close out text-books. Let us learn from the great open book of Nature. All out for Mountain Day.

The Periscope

Did sit me down to my editorial and did begin right merrily to turn out the burning words. And did write a whole page and two goodly lines of it and did sign it R. Hagar and A. Stearns and L. Clayton did begin to talk most noisily behind my elbows. The CYNIC office being too small and too cold for such rigid discussion I did stop for a reading and we had a goodly pow-wow, leaving of my editorial.

Came then Margaret Durick with a band of 40 fellow scouts who have found it within their desire to celebrate the staff. She did say the best typewriter which the office boasteth was in use by the scouts and I do speak of the casting of pearls before those who know not their value. Then she did say that I had a very poor opinion of all the co-eds. And this I do consider libelous, for of a truth I have a right high opinion of our co-eds one having lent me matches the other day when I possessed them not and three frosh men had told me mighty plaintively that they had forgotten to bring matches with them to classes.

Fell a-talking about newspapers and those that do work on them and did say I think the New York Telegram is the best written paper in the city and hath a mighty fine editorial page, although it doth lack the polish of the Worlds. And said W. Lippman was a most inspiring writer and he doth have a great understanding of this thing we call democracy.

Whereon one spoke to me about the editorial by G. R. N. and I did read it with no little interest. Then we fell a-talking again and we did listen to the babble of the many scrubs, hoping the while that some of them would prove to be dependable reporters and would remember to get the names of people and spell them right and would be able to write at least three sentences without coming to the desk for advice or misspelling more than one word in every sentence.

It coming on full late, did go down street with L. Clayton and so home to dinner.

Then sat me down to read the CYNIC and thought it a poor issue indeed with many jokes quite stale and the paper overburdened with feature while there was all too little news. Did remember how once a desk man told me the function of a good reporter was to get all the news and write much about it. Moreover he did say at the same time the function of a d--d good reporter was to get all the news and know how much to write about it. And I do know the editor of a school paper cannot do everything. He gives time and great toil to his sheet while often many who appear upon the masthead as members of the staff are but infrequent visitors to the editorial office and appear to care but little for the publication which doth honor them.

Did read again the editoral by G. R. N. and so fell a-thinking of many who do teach in colleges or in prep schools or are principals of high schools whom I do know intimately. A genial group of people they are and more than once I did chuckle softly as I remembered this party or that dinner and the many good times we had enjoyed together.

I do think a goodly share of misunderstanding between the professor and the student cometh about because the student payeth no attention to his work or doth not remember the classroom is one place and the restaurant or fraternity house another place of a far different kind. Did remember how once I went at 9 in the morning to a class taught by a friend of mine. And at 2.30 of the afternoon we both did go to another class the which was taught by another man. Three times each week we were students together and three times each week I was his student and he my professor. Never did we feel strain and never did we think it strange that things should be as they were.

I do know there are some poor instructors on every campus in this country. But also I do know there are poor students by the thousands and each year a host cometh to the portals of the American college who have no idea of the function of a college but think it a place in which to spend money and raise hades.

* * *

Needs must study at my Latin and give over thinking about professors. Then to finish writing my column, which had to be done again entire, as the first part I could no way manage to find.

* * *

Came in a brother who did tell me the sale of tobacco is prohibited in University buildings. And I do not believe such a prohibition exists for this is a college and not a kindergarten.

HANK FULLER.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Upon the front page of a recent issue, writer G. R. N. in Friday's editorial, means giving all a square deal. "Giving the express a break. Not meaning anything at all, maybe, but our taking, giving them more than they have earned, rating them, often to court campus popularity, and to no proportion to good ascribed. G. R. N. is right when he says it means more than giving an honest grade. It means giving a dishonest grade.

What did G. R. N.'s ideal institute of accomplish by giving breaks? Let the Long, his class expressed a desire to death in order to praise him in the second place, students were slackers to attend his classes, and, more marvelous still, his pupils made no objections to long assignments.

Do students come to college to learn things in order to please their professors? And do students, who come to college for the ostensible purpose of studying, need extra inducements to persuade them to attend classes and prepare assignments? If there are such, and from "G. R. N.'s" words we must reluctantly admit a strong possibility of their existence at Vermont, then it is our humble suggestion that they throw up College and begin a special course at Kindergarten, where fashioning mud pies and playing in the sand-box furnish even more inducements towards class attendance than a College ever can. Better still, instead of spending their days in pursuit of easy-grading professors, why not rather drop preparation for medicine, law, engineering or what-not, and commence an intensive course of study in blacksmithing, shoemaking or ditchdigging? Such courses require less intellectual effort than do courses in Romance Languages and promise to be much more congenial to the type of student that constantly looks for a "break" to offset the effects of his own laziness or stupidity.

A KISS DEFINED

A kiss is a peculiar proposition of no use to one yet absolutely bliss to two. The small boy gets it for nothing. The young man has to steal it and the old man has to buy it. It is the baby's right, the lover's privilege and the hypocrite's mask. To a young girl it means faith, to a married woman hope and an old maid charity.

MORTAR BOARD PICNIC

The Mortar Board picnic in honor of the Freshman women, which the ladies of the faculty and all college women are urged to attend, will take place Thursday afternoon at North Beach promptly at 5 o'clock. Those who do not care to hike out may take the North Avenue trolley car at the corner of South Winooski Avenue and Pearl Street.

WOMEN'S STUDENT BODY HOLD FALL POW-WOW

Women's Student Union's first party, called the "Pow-Wow," was attended by three hundred enthusiastic members Friday evening in the gymnasium. The stage was decorated with the Indian motif, the council members being grouped in front of an Indian tepee. The meeting, presided over by Catherine Bassett, President of Student Union, was opened by singing under the leadership of Estebel Perel man and Helen Taylor. The president then explained the significance of the organization and announced that four parties will be given during the year, the second one to be the last Friday night before Christmas vacation.

The secretary's report was read by Lucy Morgan and the budget for the year announced by Treasurer Elzada Fiske. Upon the suggestion of the council it was voted that the presidents of Y. W. C. A. and W. A. A. become members of the Student Union Council; and that a girl from the two year teacher training course be elected to act as representative from that group on the Council.

Activities were explained by their various leaders. Marion Potter, '29, acquainted the group with the efforts of the Y. W. C. A.; Marian Backus, '29, spoke for W. A. A. and Masque and Sandal; Agnes Wheeler, '29, explained the work of Press Club; Dorothy Strong, '29, gave the students an idea of what the literary society Blue stockings, purposes to do; and Constans Holden, '29, talked about the circulation drive which The Literary Magazine is conducting this week.

The Student Council presented a clever interpretation of the Ruggles family from "The Bird's Christmas Carol"; and W. A. A. carried out the spirit of the pow-wow by presenting the dramatic rescue of Captain John Smith by Pocahontas. Immediately after these stunts, the floor was cleared for dancing. Refreshments of cider and doughnuts were served.

The class was told to write an essay on "The Result of Laziness."

The teacher's astonishment may be imagined, when one student handed in a blank sheet of paper except for the heading.—Penn. State Collegian.

FORTY-FIVE CO-EDS JOIN UNIVERSITY GLEE CLUB

Professor Bennett Finds Many Good Voices Among Women Who Pass Tryouts—Many Freshman Women Succeed

The first tryouts for the Women's Glee Club were held at the Main Building, Thursday evening, October 4. Forty-five candidates, many of them Freshmen, tried out. Prof. Bennett says there are some very good voices among the Freshmen. The prospects for another successful year are very promising.

The following candidates have been accepted for the Women's Glee Club: 1st sopranos: Helen Allbee, Rosena Allen, Elizabeth Butler, Marion Capron, Janice Davis, Mary Davis, Doris Dupratt, Ruth Field, Alice Gay, Esther Gilpin, Lorraine Gotliett, Sylvia Holden, Caroline Howard, Elizabeth Howe, Hazel Ladd, Marian Murray, Clarissa Peters, Margaret Rice, Dorothy Sweeney, Helen Taylor; 2nd sopranos: Dorothy Cottrell, Beatrice Freeman, Hope Grant, Georgina Hubert, Katharine Josselyn, Irene Marcotte, Dorothy Nash, Virginia Noyes, Margaret Parry, Rena Priest, Carrel Sayre, Katharine Skinner, Helen Spalding, Margaret Stanley, Florence Whitcomb, Hildur Wilde; altos: Marion Edwards, Elizabeth Mandigo, Leonora Need, Winona Spencer, Edith Vernon, Anna Wilder; 1st accompanist, Margaret Corbin; 2nd accompanist, Katrina Munn.

Because of the large number of applicants, and the difficulty of balancing the parts, many excellent voices could not be accepted. It is hoped that these will not hesitate to compete at future tryouts, either next year, or this year to fill possible vacancies.

The first rehearsal will be held in the Music Building Thursday, October 18. The late date has been chosen in order not to conflict with the Mortar Board picnic on October 11. A full attendance at the first rehearsal is essential.

FORTY-FIVE CO-EDS OUT FOR CYNIC TRY-OUTS

Forty-five women almost triple the number of contestants last year, answered the call for Cynic tryouts on Tuesday and are at present at work as cub reporters. From this number two Juniors, two Freshmen and four Sophomores will be elected around Thanksgiving time making seventeen members on the women's staff.

With this in mind it is difficult to visualize the time when there were no women on the board. Until 1920 the Cynic staff was composed entirely of men. On March 29, 1892 an amendment was added to the constitution of the paper which provided that one lady member of the Junior class should be elected to the board.

Miss A. J. Babbitt, '93, gained this unique distinction, serving as editor of General Literature. Eighteen years later two women were granted membership on the board. In 1917 the number had increased to five. In 1921 it was seven. In that year the first co-ed Cynic appeared and it has become the usual thing for the women's staff to edit the entire paper after the women's elections in March.

ART EDITORS ANNOUNCE ANNUAL ARIEL CONTEST

Art editors for the 1929 Ariel announce the contest of the art contents with prizes of $5, $3 and $1 for the three best drawings submitted. The contest is open to everyone and the drawings may be used for a section of the annual if they are good. The drawings must be done in India ink except the few main headings which may be done in three colors. Any contestant may offer as many drawings as he or she wishes. There will be a meeting of all those interested in the contest on Monday from 1 to 2 o'clock, October 8, in the art rooms at the medical college. The contest closes on the first of November and all drawings must be sent to the Art Editors on or before this time.

I'm gittin blamed tired o' bein' told I'm gittin ole ever time I express my opinion about a lot o' th' stuff that's been pulled t'day," says Abe Martin in the November College Humor. "Of course there's allus been spoonin in dimly lighted parlors an' on wisteria-clad verandas but girls were somethin besides broach clothes, an' boys didn hold up livery stables fer money t' show em a good time.

Mebbe our girls are wiser more frank an' open an' self reliant than they need t' be but I'd hate t' marry one an have any loose hammocks or book ends layin around, unless I owned a bank. An it's probably true that never has our boys been as nifty lookin', as advanced, an' as capable an' as resourceful as they are t'day, but just th' same I'd hate t' run a fillin station or meet a flock o' them on a dark night.

Y.W.C.A. CONVENTION HELD AT HARTFORD

Dorothy Cottrell '29 Attends as Vermont Delegate to New England Division of National Student Council

MID-WINTER JOINT CONFERENCE PLANS MADE

[illegible] Cottrell, '29, attended the [illegible] of the New England Division of the National Student Council of the Y W C A., held at the Hartford [illegible] Foundation, Hartford, [illegible] on October 5-6-7. The meetings were well attended by a large number of delegates. Afternoon and evening sessions were held. Special conferences covering various phases of the work were arranged between the general sessions of the conference.

Each college organization of the Y W C A affiliated with the National organization has a right to representation on the National Student Council. Almost all avail themeselves of this privilege. This council serves as a clearing house between the individual organizations in the colleges and the Executive Council.

The National Student Council is subdivided into 11 regions extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The University of Vermont is in the New England Division. The Men's Council is subdivided in the same manner. Both New England Councils were represented at Hartford last week in order to formulate plans for the work in the region during the coming year and to offer suggestions for the Midwinter Joint Conferences at Northfield, Vermont, and Poland Springs, Maine.

A. B. Clark, '29, of Yale, is chairman of the Northfield conference committee. Miss Cottrell represents Vermont on this committee. Speakers, date and matter to be brought up at the conference were discussed. These points will be definitely settled at a future meeting of the conference committee.

Plans for making the Student Movement vital on each campus in New England were discussed at the Hartford convention. Chairman of the various committees were elected from the National Student Council members present.

Ardene Lance, '29, Simmons College, Boston, Mass., was elected chairman of the social service committee. Margaret Dicey, '29, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., was chosen to head the committee on students in industry. Lucy Kimball, '29, Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., will direct the finance committee during the coming year. Eleanor Peck, '30, Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., was chosen to lead the committee on Christian world education, while Mary Michel, '30, Mount Holyoke, South Hadley, Mass., is chairman of the New England Council.

Miss Custis Foster, Mount Holyoke graduate, offered her services as editor of the Bulletin, the publication of the New England Council. Miss Frost, '29 of Wellesley, was elected chairman of the Silver Bay Conference committee and will be assisted by Mary Rockwell, '29, Holyoke, who was elected chairman of the National Student Council at the Sacramento convention.

Miss Katherine Butler, secretary of the New England and New York State Council of the National Student Council was the women's leader in all discussions and plans at the Hartford convention. Miss Dinesdale, who has been doing Y W work in Chile for the past five years and who is now doing the social service work in the Geneva office, was among those attending the conference. It is hoped she may visit Vermont after the new year. Able and efficient, the possessor of a charming and pleasing personality, Miss Dinesdale is more than willing to assist local organizations in every possible manner. She will give special aid in planning local campaings, programs and activities.

The content and meaning of the new purpose, recently adopted, was discussed at all the Hartford meetings. It will be stressed in all the work of

TRI-SPORT STAR NEW INSTRUCTOR IN GYM

Vermont is fortunate in having one of its former graduates as instructor this year in the Physical Training Department. Howard A. Prentice, a member of the class of '28, was one of Vermont's most famous athletes. He has won two letters in track, three in baseball and four in basketball of which he was captain last year. He was a member of the Delta Psi fraternity, Gold Key, Boulder, and Scabbard and Blade.

During the past summer he was in Manchester, Mass., where he taught swimming and life saving. He planned to go to Texas to take up aeronautics when the opportunity here came.

His duties as instructor in Physical Training will be among the Freshmen. In the course in calisthenics, the second sports, and the fundamentals of major sports in their season will be taken up.

CATAMOUNT KITTENS TO PLAY PLATTSBURG

Frosh Hope to Continue Good Work of Past Years by Adding Another Victory Over Plattsburg at Plattsburg

Having kept up the high standards set by the teams of the last two years by defeating Clark School eleven last Saturday, the Frosh are looking for another victory tomorrow. While the varsity will be fighting it out with Boston University on Centennial Field, the yearlings will be tussling over the pigskin with Plattsburg State Normal School at Plattsburg. Encouraged by their clean-cut victory in the opening game, the Kittens are hoping to have a clean slate at the end of the season.

Coach Herrick has a wealth of material for the eleven and judging from the game with Clark, has an especially good backfield. Powell, a former B. H. S. star, is a strong fullback and a terrific plunger, while Jay of St. Albans is one of the best broken field runners as well as being about the speediest half that has been seen in the Freshman class for some time. Powell is doubtless the best punter among the Freshman candidates of the last three seasons and is also a good dropkicker. Ehnstorm is another powerful back and an asset to the team. Winaut deserves mention as a good pilot and hard tackler. Morse, an end, and Bedell, a wing, are two other good players. The Kitten line is heavy and powerful and is especially strong on the defense. As a whole, the team this year shapes up as well, if not better, than the one last year.

The reports from Plattsburg have been rather meager but it is said that the Normal team is stronger than for several years, and has scheduled several home games, something not attempted in a long time. The Frosh may have a tough battle before them.

FOUR HUNDRED ATTEND MORTAR BOARD PICNIC

Meeting with the usual enthusiasm and comradeship and fun that characterize the annual Mortar Board picnic, four hundred girls, together with ladies of the faculty, attended the out-door supper and party given by the senior honorary society at North Beach last evening.

The picnic began with a treasure hunt, a happy means of "breaking the ice" among the unacquainted. Inch by inch the beach was scouted but the treasure, undiscovered, was awarded the Freshmen for the prize stunt.

Stunts were presented by each class, and were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

At a summons, a long line was formed along the beach for the supper of rolls, ham, potato salad, pickles, cake and coffee. After all had been served a great circle was formed around a huge bonfire, and the happy crowd sang many Vermont songs, closing with "Champlain."

A short explanation of the fraternal system was given to the freshmen and new members of the college by one of the fraternity advisors, appointed by Pan-Hellenic.

FROSH BEST SOPHS IN WATER FIGHT

Drenched Sophomores Yield to Plucky Team of Freshmen After Winning First Decision

THRONGED BACK CAMPUS SCENE OF WET PARTY

Once more our verdant freshmen and erudite sophomores raised a clamor so plaintive and piercing that the wild yodels nestling in the shoe trees could be plainly heard as they mourned in sympathy while the cow bells in the fields burst with stifled laughter.

All college homosapiens and many other forms of mankind were assembled. The contestants were divided into two parts, so says Cæsar. On the North were those who vainly sought vengeance. Yea, verily, vengeance as related in the old Mosaic law, which was an eye for an eye and a nozzle for a nozzle. On the North, bounded by the green grass growing all around, were those who were valiantly and gallantly endeavoring to maintain their treasured laurels of supremacy so ardently fought for, wetted for and fallen for the preceding year.

Mobs of lower classmen attended the spectacle of arms. Many were called but few were chosen, for quantity is no objective, but rather it is quality and stamina which is of value when a huddle system is used.

Fire hoses being the weapons chosen by both sides, one would naturally expect that water was as conspicuous as a wasp at a picnic, and it really, yes really, was. The resulting fracas was far from being hot and fiery, both atmosphere and environment working against such a condition.

Both sides being prepared—just like Boy Scouts—Mars launched the thunderbolt that drenched the field in water. Our beloved fellow collegians marched forth to make good their classes' names by heroic sacrifice of their bones and trousers, for they had met on a hallowed field and in accord with time-honored tradition and hoary precedent.

With one great spurt and splash water burst forth simultaneously from two tangled and conglomerated masses of bodies. From then on both sides were about as busy guiding and directing the forces of their fire as an iceman's convention selling ice water in the infernal lower regions, only perhaps they were not quite as warm.

In the first round both sides seemed determined but neither was particularly desirous of invading the enemy's territory.

In round two the sophs adopted a variation in their campaign, an aerial attack. Whereat our dearly beloved frosh retaliated with a direct, concentrated drive to the mid-section. This repelled any advancing maneuvers.

Receiving the appropriate command from headquarters the sophs lowered their range and vainly made an attempt to undermine their enemies by picking up the sawdust and making mud pies. The mud did surely fly.

As the bell for round three sounded both contenders "assumed the angle." But the sophs, playing the part of the Good Samaritan, delayed, not through exceeding generosity but rather because their state of preparedness was wanting and their supply of ammunition was retarded. Alas! now they have learned that to be a Good Samaritan is to be one out of 10,000 and also one out of luck.

Meanwhile the frosh, collected both in spirit and in mind, had recuperated from their first onslaught and had firmly determined to do well. And to do well they must do ill to their opponents. They hastened to do it with gestures as swift as though speeded by thoughts of love for '31.

The thirty-firsters, after a hasty recuperation and having discarded discord for unity, retaliated with a misplaced shot which they discourteously failed to call. Whereupon Custer's Last Stand was reenacted. The thirty-twoers with renewed animation and inspired by soon-to-be-gotten laurels marched boldly to the front, determined to sweep from existence the glory that was '31.

The noble sophs their candle of hope flickering, found that they had met the enemy and they were theirs.

COMPETITION KEEN FOR CLASS TENNIS TEAMS

The class teams for the tennis tournament will be chosen this week on Thursday. The elimination try-outs have been going on for the past week. More interest is being shown this fall than ever before, if the number of competitors signifies anything. It is reported that the quality is as good as the quantity.

The teams are composed of two people from each class on the first team, with two substitutes. A second team is to be chosen from each class.

Last fall the tournament was won by the Sophomore class, 1930, represented by Doris Kibbie and Eunice Wilder.

REJUVENATED R. O. T. C. BAND PLAYS TONIGHT

Trips to Springfield for the Vermont-Springfield Game and to Montreal Included in this Year's Program

Vermont's R. O. T. C. Band is speedily rounding into shape under the excellent leadership of the band master, Joseph F. Lechnyr. Much difficulty was encountered in replacing the men who were lost by graduation last June. Much good material was found in the Freshman class.

A unit much better than that of last year, according to Mr. Lechnyr, has been built up as a result of several hard practice sessions. The clarinet department which has always been somewhat weak for the size of the band is at this time of sufficient strength to make the band a well balanced unit, there being eight or nine men playing that instrument.

A group of approximately 55 or 60 men now constitute the R. O. T. C. Band. With every department carefully balanced and trained, the students will be given a chance to hear it play for the first time this year at the Boulder Smoker in the gymnasium tonight. The band will play again tomorrow at the Boston University football game.

Several trips outside of Burlington are included in the band program for the year. On Thanksgiving Day, November 29, the band will play at Springfield, Mass., at the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College and Vermont University football game. This game draws huge crowds, and the band's playing there on that day will give Vermont a good deal of publicity.

Another trip, this one sponsored personally by President Guy W. Bailey, will take the unit to Montreal some time during the winter or early spring to enter into a sort of intercollegiate contest. More information on this matter will be given in the Cynic at a later date.

EIGHT SENIOR ADVISERS AT FRESHMAN DORM

A new system, based on the use of Senior advisers, has been instituted by the administration at Converse Hall to avert in future the misunderstandings which have arisen when Freshmen have unknowingly violated dormitory traditions. Eight Seniors are at present in residence at Converse Hall to advise the Freshmen there on the traditions and ideals of both College and dormitory.

The whole system is entirely informal, nor will the Seniors act in any way as proctors. The system is expected to be of great advantage to the Freshmen at the dormitory, who will for the first time have upperclassmen constantly near them to counsel them on their attitude towards the college and its traditions as well as on their individual problems.

Whether or not the system will be permanent will depend on the ability of the Seniors so to mold day by day conditions as will conduce to the best interests of all residents at the Hall.

President Guy W. Bailey went to New York on Monday to attend a meeting of the directors of the Rutland Railroad.

VERMONT FAVORITE IN OPENING GAME

Catamounts Chosen to Beat the Strong B. U. Aggregation in First Home Game at Centennial Field

CRIPPLED LINE-UPS ON BOTH GRIDIRON TEAMS

Centennial Field will be the scene of Vermont's first home game of the season tomorrow afternoon with Boston University as the visiting team.

Boston University's two first string halfbacks, Hugo Nelson and Bolly Thurman, who proved to be the outstanding B. U. ball-carriers in the dedication game at Weston last week which resulted in a scoreless tie with New Hampshire, were obliged to withdraw from the game in the closing minutes of play on account of injuries and may not be in condition to start against the Green Mountaineers. In case of their inability to start, their places will be taken by a couple of Freshman halfbacks. B. U. has been scrimmaging all week in order to iron out the wrinkles which were noticed against New Hampshire. The Terriers have developed a sensational and dependable overhead game which the Green and Gold will have to watch out for.

The Catamounts are pretty badly shaken up after the strenuous games with Columbia and Princeton. The offense has had very little opportunity to function thus far, but once Deitose or Mace get loose there's no telling when they'll stop. The practice this week was light on account of the condition of the players. Coaches Rattan and Tully pointed out the mistakes made in last Saturday's game and the team is bound to spring a surprise.

The probable line-up:

BOULDER WEEK ENDS WITH DANCE AT GYM

As a fitting climax to Boulder Week the annual Boulder dance will be held Saturday evening, October 13 in the University gym.

J. P. Hyland, chairman of the dance committee, and his assistants, Corbin C. Lyman and Frank H. Otto, have completed arrangements for the function. Lieutenant and Mrs. J. D. Frederick and Professor and Mrs. Leon W. Dean have been secured to chaperon. The Vermonters with Joseph F. Lechnyr featuring C. Heger Ramm, pianist, will play. This is the same popular orchestra that held forth last Saturday evening at the Gold Key dance. This musical organization has played the feature dances in the past few years at Dartmouth, McGill, Middlebury, Norwich and on the hill.

The committee promises that the floor will be in much improved condition over that of last week when many complaints were heard. After a thorough sweeping and scrubbing followed by a generous application of floor wax the floor should be in excellent condition for dancing.

Refreshments of punch and cookies will be served during the dance.

As Boulder Week is for the special benefit of the Freshman class, to help them to become better acquainted, it is hoped that many will take advantage of the dance and will uphold the precedence of a strong attendance.

Vermont Asks An Attitude

At one time Vermont was an independent republic. Wrested from the grasp of New York and Massachusetts, the mountainous territory now enclosed within the borders of our state was elevated to the dignity of separate nationhood by our pioneer ancestors.

When the need for separation passed Vermont was the first state to join the new nation of The United States of America.

These activities of early Vermonters should be remembered by Vermonters of the present day. The spirit behind the acts should be emulated. It was a spirit of real patriotism, of devotion to one's country.

Devotion to one's school, patriotism on a smaller but no less real scale, is an emotion common to all people. It varies only in degree and intensity between different individuals. The underlying idea is constant. That underlying idea is respect and love.

There are as many divergent attitudes toward school spirit as there are towards patriotism. On one hand you have the blind adorer, the man who stands firmly behind any action of his school. At the other extreme you find the perpetual critic who is never satisfied with any action of his institution.

No one can say that one of these persons has more of loyalty, more of patriotism, than his neighbor. Both are really in error. One says in effect, "If it was done I am proud of it." The other takes the equally indefensible position of deploring practically everything which he notices. Yet neither would look at any other matter in the same way. Blindly approving or disapproving policies with whose very reason for being they were not well acquainted.

The effective patriot is the one who takes a position between these two extremes. He does not praise everything but neither does he deplore every action of his school. Many things he believes should be changed and he feels it his duty to do everything in his power to effect the changes. Many things he is proud of and these things he does praise while he constantly attempts to raise them to an even higher level.

The effective patriot is not moved by mass action either to keep silent or to burst forth into frantic rhetoric. He is a man with views of his own and he keeps away from crowd influence. He does not follow any leader as a leader but as a man. His position on the same subject changes from time to time. He is inconsistent in his support of any project as he is consistent with his views, and these are of necessity altered by circumstances.

The true patriot acts in the same manner as did our ancestors who dared both to stand alone and to unite with others. He has the best interests of his college at heart. He wants to see her take her rightful place among representative institutions. He is never satisfied with the status quo but continually demands advances.

It is the duty of every college man and woman to take his stand with the true patriots. This is not always an easy matter. Sometimes it means cutting square across the face of a local custom or prejudice. Just such a disregard of the accepted is often the only way one may advance to a better social, scholastic or athletic standard. Certainly such a course will bring nothing but the highest praise from every open-minded person. It will with equal certainty bring censure from the contented idler, the indolent person who says, "I am caught in a vicious circle. I have a position to support and I can not move."

Vermont asks true, progressive, clear-eyed patriotism from every son and daughter. They must not disappoint her. They must give their fearless best to the support of everything in which they believe. They must give their fearless opposition to everything they oppose. If this be done, The University of Vermont will experience an era of unprecedented advance.

A SPARK OF GRATITUDE

As scrub for the Cynic it seems incumbent upon me to take this opportunity to express a gratitude, which if I am not mistaken, epitomizes the sentiments of the class of '32 towards their brethren, the class of '31.

A university has recently been defined as the "means by which the highest culture of one generation is best transmitted to the ablest youths of the next."

With this mantle of highest culture in our possession, the class of '32 will always scorn a mean act, which for example, induces one college fellow to treat another fellow as a fag.

By the abolition of the severest of the prosaic "frosh rules" the class of '31 has shown itself possessed of that golden mean which tends to make them, show at all times and on all occasions the quality of their distinction.

PAUL J. LACROSSE.

The Periscope

Open-house nights are here. Fraternity men shave regularly. They clean the normal clutter from study table and dresser. Floors are swept and clothes hangers are used for supporting suits and neatly hung top coats in closets often deserted except by dust. All are busily engaged in putting up a front. It is a season of house cleaning and shoe shining, of putting the best foot forward.

The period is one of even more importance to the freshman. He hopes and fears. Fraternity membership, he feels, is the summum bonum of his college life. He trembles in the quiet of his own room and wonders if some forgotten infraction of frosh rules will be held against him by the fraternity men of his acquaintance. There is a distinct feeling of strain among the members of the freshman class.

I remember reading a modern fable. It told of groups of boys who wore peculiar caps and played roughly about on a green lawn. Then after a time some of these boys drew together in groups. Now they wore little pins and played with others who showed the same kind of pins on their coat lapels. There were some of the little boys who played alone. They had no pins. Tears washed the muddy faces of some of these while others said, "I do not like to wear a pin." The traveller asked one of the pinless group why he played alone. This boy was different from most of his companions. He told the truth. "Sir," he answered, "no one has asked me to wear a pin."

* * *

I believe in fraternities. They are not all important. They do not make or break a man. They do some things, or at least they should do some very definite things, for their members. I think this list may cover most of the advantages:

1. Association with other men.
2. Group study and tutoring from men in the house.
3. Social training in the easy meeting of groups of people.
4. A feeling of being at home and among friends.
5. Wider college interests.
6. Continual criticism and advice from older students and upperclassmen beyond the normal association of table and study-room.
7. Contacts with fraternity brothers after graduation.

* * *

There are fraternity disadvantages. Here are a few:

1. The possibility of becoming snobbish.
2. Spending, in some cases, more than the student can afford to keep up with the group.
3. Narrowed acquaintance in the college as a whole.
4. A too intense group identification with consequent loss of individuality.

Go to fraternity houses on open house nights. Go to several of them. Don't try to impress all the men you meet with your importance. Don't try to be the whole show. Don't be diffident and expect to be chased. Believe what is said to you then check up on it later if you question. If someone starts to ride you a little, take it in good part. It's only in fun anyway. Remember you are a guest of the houses and no host ever embarasses his guest or gives him false impressions. Above all, if you are asked to come back to a house, do it. Remember fraternity men are just as glad to meet you as you are to meet them but they can not take the time to chase every individual freshman to his room in order to meet him.

Open-house nights are in your honor. Take advantage of them and be worthy of them.

Don't go to a house just one night or two nights and then think everything is settled.

* * *

Do your studying in the afternoon and keep your evenings free. This is your best opportunity to become fraternity men. It is an important matter, worthy of your most careful attention and heartiest cooperation.

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

I can't stand Old Golds. Not that they aren't excellent cigarettes, but I just can't stand 'em. I don't like the taste of them. My favorite brand is Luckies. Next to those I prefer Camels, and then Chesterfields. Old Golds come last in my choice of the so-called popular four leading brands. Well, after I hooked a left and right to Callaghan's beak for the overweight title, P. Lorillard and Company wanted to get me to take their blindfold test. As it gave me a chance to bum a few butts I accepted.

Now here's the funny part about it. I hate Old Golds and I'm nuts about Luckies.

Yes, sir! Luckies made me the famous figure in the sporting world that I am today and I'll stick by 'em. But these bozos told me they knew I'd pick their product. I didn't like their calm way of being so sure. It began to play on my own confidence and the tune was tuneless. But of course I couldn't back away. A fighter that backs away is apt to get pasted up against the ropes so hard the rebound will toss him out of the other side of the ring.

So they tied the blinders around my cauliflowers and the gong sounded. Here's the way I socked 'em.

No. 1—Right to the heart. Pretty strong.

No. 2—Missed by a wide swing.

No. 3—Clicked him. Count of nine! (They breathed hard; they must have been pretty het up about the fool stunt.)

No. 4—Well, well, I pick this one. In fact.—

"Great work, Al!" they shouted. "You picked the Old Gold!"

"Yes," I calmly replied, tearing the weed to bits, "I picked it to pieces."

TODAY'S LOVE STORY

COMPLETE IN THIS ISSUE

She was only a professor's daughter, but, oh mammy!, what she professed to know. Her name was Emmy, so they called her Emmalita for short. She had dancing blue hair and wavy brown eyes and was consequently the poison of envious jealousy to all the other girls of Wash Wash, Nebraska. But the young men were all crazy about her. In fact, it appears that anyone of them would have loved to have been her brother since every time she passed some enchanted youth would exclaim, "Oh Sister!" She was a sweet young thing and liked nothing better than to stay at home and help mother do the dishes- once a week. On other nights, she preferred to be doing some unfortunate victim of her charms. She was a co-ed at the Nebraska State Institute for Women and was rushed by every man on the campus. Yes, the janitor did fall for our brave little Emmy. Emmalita was a versatile young maiden. She could comb her hair, brush her teeth, play at tennis and at her studies. She said she liked to study at night best of all men were so funny, don't you know?

One day a city slicker came to Wash Wash. Emmy immediately recognized him as such by the yellow oilskin which he donned in rainy weather. He drove a Ford Coupe, (1918 model—said he thought this getting a new model car every year was the newly-rich bunk), wore Spurties and a mustache and showed other outward signs of wealth. The child should have known him for the dastardly hypocrite and heartbreaker that he was, for "by their mustachios, so shalt ye know 'em." But she was innocent. She knew naught of the ways of the world and the weighs of sorrow. She fell for him.

Of course, the smooth ice might have accounted in some small measure for this, but at any rate she fell hard. He picked her up—he was expert at that—and she thought he was a good skate. Girl's Hot Tip Steers Student to Favorite Pipe Tobacco

Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

Since I first started to smoke, I have always smoked cigarettes.

One day SHE said to me "[illegible] dear, why don't you smoke a pipe? I think those long straight-stemmed pipes are so manly-looking."

So, naturally, I had to buy a long-stemmed pipe and a can of well, what you call it "Blubs Mixture tobacco." Immediately with a certain feeling of pride in my new pipe, I "lighted up" and proceeded to have my tongue bitten. I tried almost every brand I ever heard of, but none satisfied.

Sadly, I had to confess to HER that as a pipe smoker I was a [illegible] titian.

"Did you try Edgeworth?" she asked. "That is what dad smokes and he's always smoked a pipe."

So I was forced to try Edgeworth and all that I can say is that [illegible] fellow that has tried to accustom himself to a pipe, started with Edgeworth there would be very few that [illegible] back to cigarettes.

Yours sincerely,

DEANS PATTERSON AND WHITING GIVE DINNER

Dean Marian Patterson and Assistant Dean Isabel Whiting entertained several guests at a dinner given at Grassmount, Tuesday evening, October 9. Catherine Bassett president of Student Union, Dorothy Carroll chief justice, and house presidents Mary Jarvis, '29, Edna Shaw '29, Lucy Bracken, '29, Lois Fiske '29, Agnes Shaw, '30, and Hazel Ladd, '30, were among those present.

Problems of Student Union were discussed and plans were made for a student mass meeting in the Old Chapel. The increased interest in Student Union will no doubt draw a large number to this meeting.

HOME ECONOMICS CLASS OPENS PRACTICE HOUSE

The Practice House on Summit Street will open on Monday, October 15, under the direction of Miss Blundell, assistant professor of home economics. The opening this fall has been delayed because of redecoration which is now near completion. Two seniors, two juniors, one sophomore and one freshman will enter at this time. The seniors and juniors stay for periods of two weeks and the sophomores and freshmen for one week each semester. These girls manage the house under the supervision of Miss Blundell in a very efficient manner. The equipment is modern and the work enjoyable. Under the new arrangement, the "House Family" is smaller than last year when there were three freshman members there at one time.

Mid-Week Chapel Service

Mr Evan Thomas, for many years professor of mathematics in the Engineering College, led chapel service Wednesday morning. He pointed out that all worthwhile things, both spiritual and temporal, come to the diligent seeker, and not to those who wait passively for them to come into their hands. The whole theme might be summed up in a quotation from Professor Thomas' talk, "He who waits for things to turn up, finds that they turn down."

The entire vested choir, including the new members, sang for the first time this year, under Professor H. G. Bennett's direction.

As a result of the try-outs held during the past week, the class tennis teams have been selected as follows: Seniors, first team, Lenore Aldinger, Marion Baldwin, subs, Margaret Cotton, Marion Everest; second team, Bertha Klein, Alice Belmont, sub, Beatrice Hoskins. Juniors, first team, Dorothy Dailey, Frances Hazen, subs, Eunice Wilder, Magdalen Orvis; second team, Elizabeth Robelen, Jayne Richardson, sub, Inez Belmont. Sophomores, first team, Helen Rack, Eleanor Koenig, subs, Cynthia Lynch, Dorothy Nash; second team, Mac Tinkham, Julia Housley. Freshmen, first team, Janet Miller, Caroline Howard, subs, Winifred Graham, Christine Bliss; second team, Beatrice Freeman, Marion Stoney; sub, Marion Berry.

Substitutes for the second teams will be announced soon so that doubles as well as singles may be played off by both first and second teams. Announcements as to the time and place and referees of the matches will be posted on the W. A. A. board.

The Seniors appear with a bunch of experienced players and should give the other classes a run for their money. The Junior team boasts the services of Eunice Wilder, college singles champion in 1925, while the Sophomores have Eleanor Koenig, runner-up at the women's singles tournament a year ago. Of the Freshman team we know little but if they are up to the usual standard they will do their bit toward making the tournament an interesting one. The finals will be played off at the Fall Field Day which will probably be held early in November.

The student tennis coaches met Miss Baldwin Thursday noon for a half hour's discussion on rules and methods.

MARION TALLEY

Twenty-two year old Metropolitan Opera singer who appears at the New Auditorium next Monday

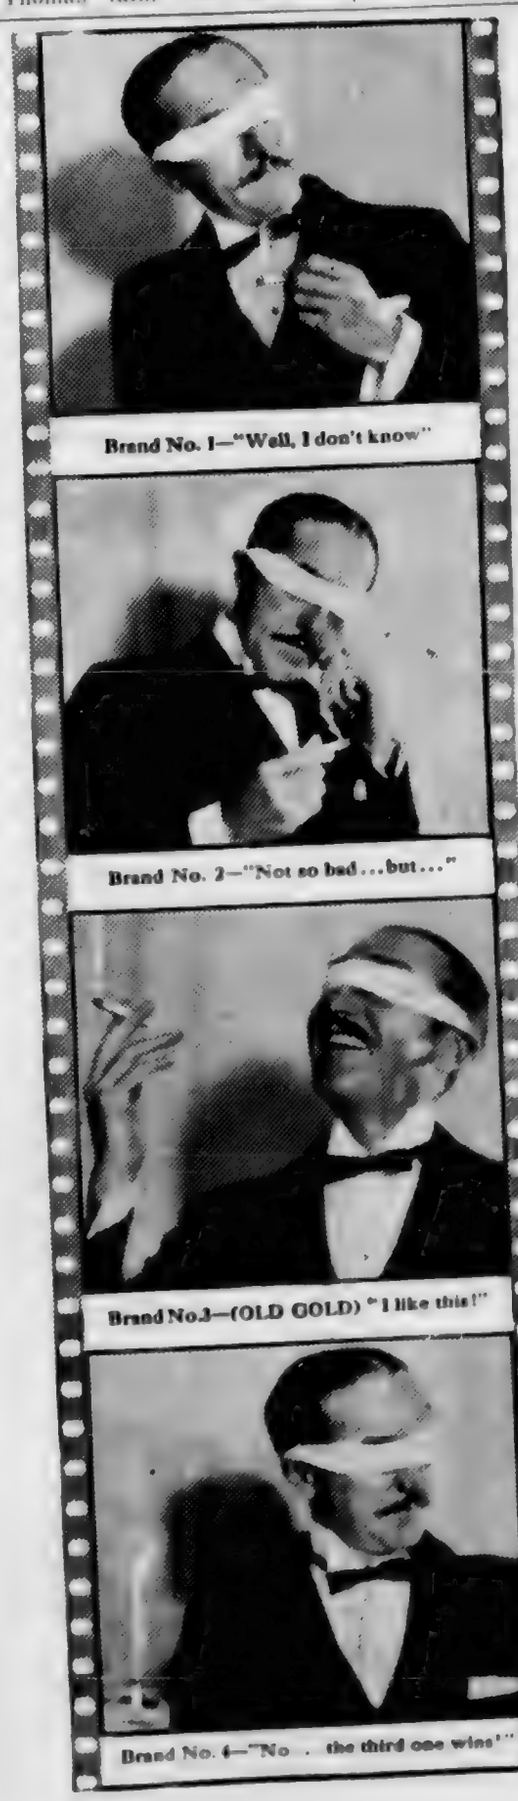
ARIEL NOTICE

There will be a meeting of those wishing to submit drawings to the 1930 "Ariel" on Monday, October 15, at 1.30 P. M. in the Art rooms in the Medical Building.

MARION TALLEY TO SING MONDAY IN BURLINGTON

Marion Talley, twenty-two year old soprano of the Metropolitan Opera ... will appear in the Burlington Auditorium Monday, October 1. The ... Marion Talley who made her ... sensational debut only three years ... in Rigoletto, the same girl who ... walked out of a church choir onto the ... grand opera stage and made an American fairy story that put the Grimm ... brothers to shame. She had had almost no training with orchestral accompaniment and yet she sang with the Metropolitan orchestra faultlessly ... perfectly. Her childhood training on the piano and violin had proved its usefulness.

FRESHMAN WOMEN !



Owing to the fact that the Freshman class requested the use of the Old Mill Chapel for its class election last Tuesday, Dean Patterson has postponed the women's hygiene lectures to October 16 and 23, both meetings to be held in the Old Mill Chapel.

Purdue University had a record class this fall with a freshman enrollment of over fourteen hundred.

"NOT A COUGH IN A CARLOAD"

FROSH PHYSIQUE NOT UP TO SOPHOMORES

Physical Averages and Class Totals of New Class as Compared With Those of Sophomores

STATISTICS GATHERED FROM MILITARY EXAM

Statistics gathered from the records of the physical examinations of the Freshmen men made by the Military Department show that the men of the 1932 class are considerably heavier than the men of the class of 1931 when they were Freshmen. The average of the incoming class this year is 140 pounds that of the Sophomores which was set at [illegible]. Whether or not such differences will continued in the same proportions in regard to the number in positions is not to be discussed but no doubt more striking figures of the same type will appear in that point.

Not one man of the new class is able to balance the scales with "Abe" Kuhn or "Hugh" Davis of 1932 comes the nearest to being able to accomplish the feat with his 200 pounds but even then he needs 20 more to do it. Davis also holds the class record for height as he towers above it at 6 feet 3½ inches and at the same mark Walter Sargent's record for 1931 by a mere quarter of an inch. The shortest man of the class is 5 ft. 1½ inches tall and therefore loses the record set by Sherman Cramer for keeping down to 5 ft. 2 inch. The class as a whole however averages a height of 5 ft. 8 inches and is slightly more than the average of 1931.

If the various ages of the Freshman class were divided equally each man would weigh something over 139 pounds and assuming the same division in connection with the ages each one would be 17 years 11 months old and would be younger by 10 months than the average Sophomore man.

The total height of the class is 12,- 7½ inches and although lying end to end they would stretch nearly a fifth of a mile they would be far behind their 1931 rivals who covered nearly a quarter of a mile at the time the other figures were taken.

The oldest man in the class is 26 and the youngest is 16 and here again they are not up to the age limit of 27 set by the class of 1931 and perhaps find the lower limit because that age is nearer the average usually held by entering classes.

The Shanghai Gesture

Mrs. Leslie Carter, who was a famous actress even way back in the days of great actresses when Gilbert and Sullivan were the last word and the Gibson Girls sported their remarkable pompadours on Broadway, is to appear at a local theatre tomorrow night. There is something magnificent about that, something rather splendid about a woman who successfully defies time and age and has the courage to appear in an ultra sophisticated modern play. Mrs. Carter does just that in "The Shanghai Gesture," she an actress schooled in the days of Victorian drama seizes upon this modern drama conquers it and wears it like a crown of diamonds.

E. W. NEWCOMB ELECTED FRESHMAN PRESIDENT

Edward Wardwell Newcomb of South Orange, N. J., was elected president of the class of 1932 at the recent class meeting held in the Old Mill chapel on Tuesday, October 9 under the supervision of Boulder Society. The other successful candidates are Christine Bliss, Burlington, who was elected vice-president; Lloyd Silas Wright, Jr., of Ossining, N. Y. was elected treasurer, and Marjorie Hope Willis, Waterbury, secretary.

Boulder Senior honorary society had charge of the meeting and assisted in aiding the new men in their business meeting. Newcomb was the first to be nominated and was followed by the nominations of William Bedell, George Collins and Edward Herbert. Miss Kathryn Rauh and Miss Winifred Graham opposed Miss Bliss for the vice-presidency. Joseph Levin and James Halliday opposed Wright for the treasury. Miss Elizabeth Hollis was the only opponent of Miss Willis.

Following the completion of the business meeting Boulder Society spoke to the Freshmen regarding arrangements for the water fight. William Bedell was elected to pilot the Freshmen against the Sophomores in this contest. The meeting was concluded by Boulder urging the Freshmen to participate in all events of Boulder Week.

ATTENTION FROSH

Contrary to the announcement in the last issue of the Cynic, Freshman men will meet at 1:45 p.m. at the bookstore Saturday to obtain their canes for the Rush. All men will then march in a body to the field and will sit together until the close of the game when they will march down to deposit their canes at the direction of Boulder.

LATIN EXAM

The special examination for the Howard Entrance Prize in Latin will be given in room 31 South College from 3:00 to 6:00 p.m. this afternoon. Any member of the class of 1932 may take the examination, whether or not he or she is now taking Latin in college. The Department of Physical Education will allow women who have gymnasium at that time to make up the work at another hour. There is a first prize of twenty dollars and a second prize of five dollars.

The Dopefiend

NAN GILMAN

Next Saturday the Cats take a fourth [illegible] different. It is a wonder that the Vermonters are in as good condition as they are after the gruelling they have taken these last two weeks. Preparation, which is expected to have the strongest team in the state present, and week of the Green Mountain boys because of the fight they did have [illegible]

It might interest a few to read what Coach Brown of Boston University had to say about this approaching contest. This being printed in the Boston Herald. "We will have our hands full when we meet Vermont on Saturday and will have to make every minute count this week as we lose one practice session by leaving for Burlington Friday." He scouted Vermont at the Princeton game and was particularly impressed with the Vermont overhead game. He also remarked on the physique of the Vermont players and said that the Princeton team was no more rugged than the Green Mountain boys. So you see the Dogs don't figure any soft pickings from these bones.

The Pioneers are no duck soup either as they have a hard fighting team. Both the Army and New Hampshire State will vouch for that. The Army downed the bean-eaters by [illegible], but were only able to score one touchdown up to half time. The New Hampshire team played them to a tie, and the White Mountain boys have one strong veteran team this year.

The Dogs have several veterans on the injured list including Nelson and Thurman, backs; Carnie and Barrett, linemen. All these will be unable to face the Cats, but there will be others to fill in the gaps. Injuries have hit them hard.

DeRose is going like a house afire and the line is working hard to develop an impenetrable stone wall defense. Robbins is proving his worth as is Mace. As yet Scutakes has been unable to show his wares, but should be seen galloping down the gridiron on the 13th. This is a bad omen, the 13th, but so are Cats so that the Dogs had better beware.

Basketball Rules Committee Makes New Regulation Regarding Dribbling

Basketball officials held their annual conference in New York City recently for the purpose of revising the rules in preparation for the 1929 season. Most worthy of notice among the alterations was one regarding dribbling, which while it does not limit the dribble to a single bounce, a change that was advocated by some, provides that when a player tries to dribble past an opponent in his pathway, the greater obligation to avoid contact is upon him."

This change is embodied in a new clause under the head of personal fouls, and reads as follows:

"A player shall not hold, trip, charge or push an opponent whether or not either player has possession of the ball. If a dribbler charges into an opponent, or makes personal contact with an opponent, without an apparent effort to avoid such [illegible] foul shall be called.

"If despite the [illegible] avoid contact, personal [illegible] either player or [illegible] but the greater respon[illegible] dribbler if he tried [illegible] opponent who is in [illegible]

Boston University Outplays Catamounts From Start—Scarlet Displays Excellent Forward Passing Attack and Defense

HALLIGAN EXCELS FOR VERMONT ON OFFENSE

FRESHMEN ADVERTISE BOULDER WEEK EVENTS

By order of Boulder about fifteen delinquent Freshmen assembled at the Alpha Tau Omega House on Thursday evening, October 11 to receive punishment for not carrying out the Frosh rules. Some of the crimes committed were: absence from the Peerade, lack of politeness to upperclassmen, failure to wear Frosh caps and black socks and not having a sufficient supply of matches

Contrary to bygone years, the Freshmen were chastised with much discretion. Boulder Week posters were given to each Frosh present and were told to wear them from Friday morning until Saturday after the Boston University game. They were also warned to adhere to all laws and regulations in the future and that the punishment would be far more severe for later crimes.

It was further ruled that all Freshmen must wear garters.

MUCH SPIRIT SHOWN AT BOULDER PEP RALLY

Freshmen and Sprinkling of Upper Classmen Attend First Smoker—Cheer Knowledge Criticized by Manager Otto

A crowd of 200 Vermont men made the Boulder Smoker of Friday night, October 12, an enthusiastic and peppy function. The R. O. T. C. Band played for all the songs and rendered several popular numbers uproaringly received by the audience. The bandmaster "Joe" Lechnyr, had his usual black cigar in action.

"Seeley" Estabrook, '29, President of Boulder, was master of ceremonies. The program opened with a march played by the band. Then followed a more popular song hit, "Sweet Sue." Following several noisy cheers for the team, Estabrook introduced Manager F. R. Otto, the first speaker.

Manager Otto asked that the students should keep off the field during the halves if only as a matter of form. Some upperclassmen and most of the Frosh, he said, did not yet know the songs and cheers so essential in making organized cheering a success.

Line Coach Tully, formerly a Dartmouth football star in the time of Oberlander and Lane, believed that the Princeton and Columbia games had given the Catamounts valuable experience which would be used to advantage against Boston University.

Captain "Sap" Palmer said that Vermont was really opening their schedule against Boston University on Saturday and was confident of success.

Edward W. Newcomb, the newly elected President of the Freshman class, was called upon to speak taking the customary razzing. He finally managed to recite the alphabet.

Doctor "Mickey" McMahon, the fifth speaker of the evening, talked inspiringly on the true requirements of a good football team. Among them are 1. So-called intestinal fortitude; 2. a good coaching staff; 3. a lusty and loyal cheering section. He emphasized the fact that Vermont had the first two, but of late years had been gradually losing the last. He asked for improvement in this department.

Head Coach Rattan, the last speaker, spoke briefly and to the point. "If the student body would only work as hard cheering for their team as their team was working trying to win," he said, "the outcome of the rest of the games was already decided in favor of Vermonth."

With the singing of "Champlain" and with a rousing cheer led by Doctor "Mickey" McMahon the smoker closed in favor of refreshments of doughnuts and cider served in the cage.

TAU EPSILON PHI HOLDS SMOKER FOR FRESHMEN

Kappa Chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi gave a freshman smoker at the Chapter home at 16 Wilson Street Sunday evening October 14. Entertainment was provided and smokes and refreshments were served.

FRATERNITY HOMES WELCOME FRESHMEN

First Open House Well Attended by Eager Yearlings—Second Chance to Get Acquainted Comes Tonight

CARDS AND STUNTS FURNISH DIVERSION

Pursuance of knowledge gave way to the first open house at the men's fraternities last Wednesday night, at which time a large number of Freshmen took advantage of the opportunity to visit the various fraternity houses and to get acquainted with the members of the Greek letter societies

The lowerclassmen were cordially received at all the homes and were given some idea of what fraternity life is Various forms of amusements including cards and feats of skill were the chief attractions during the evening and everybody seemed to have had a general good time.

Not only do the Freshmen find this a means of seeing the inside of the fraternities but also an excellent opportunity to meet the upperclassmen and to meet other members of their own class.

Tonight from 7 until 10 o'clock the fraternities will again open their houses to the Freshmen and an invitation is extended to them to visit any or all the houses. Three more dates for open house are given Saturday, October 20, Wednesday, October 24 and Friday, October 26. The location of the fraternity houses was given in the CYNIC issue of September 28.

HIGH SCHOOL EDITORS TO HAVE CONFERENCE

The annual conference of the high school editors and teachers of English conducted by the University of Vermont will be held here Saturday, November 10. The morning session which will begin at 10 o'clock is scheduled to take place on the second floor of the Medical College

President Guy W. Bailey will open the meeting with an address of welcome. Walter H. Crockett, lecturer in journalism at the University of Vermont, will outline the purpose of the conference. There will also be a talk on Short Story Writing by Professor Leon W. Dean of the English Department, and an address by Howard L. Hindley of the Rutland Herald

The subject for discussion will be "The Problem of the High School Editor" and "The Business Problems of High School Papers." Speakers to introduce the above subjects will probably be an editor and a business manager of a high school paper

The visitors will be the guests of the University of Vermont at a luncheon served on the Hotel Vermont Roof Garden at 12.45 o'clock.

Following the luncheon Carl Ranger faculty advisor at St Johnsbury Academy, will speak on the subject. "The Relation of School Journalism to School Work." A general discussion will follow

The afternoon exercises will be brought to a close in time to allow the visitors to leave by the middle of the afternoon

It has been suggested by the University that each school paper send two delegates, preferably the editor-in-chief and the business manager. A cordial welcome is extended to the English teachers who have co-operated in the work of preparing the school paper, and also to the school principals Other members of the staff will be welcome at the sessions of the conference Names of delegates are to be sent to W H Crockett at the University by November 7

A short business meeting of Grey Friars, men's literary society, was held last Thursday afternoon at four o'clock. It was decided at that time to hold another business meeting this Thursday evening in the Marsh room of the Billings Library at 7.30 o'clock. A program for the year will be drawn up and other matters of importance discussed.

FROSH DEFEAT PLATTSBURG 27-0

The Catamount Kittens annexed another victory to their credit by defeating the Plattsburg State Normal School at Plattsburg Saturday 27-0. The Frosh using a powerful running attack, swept through the lighter Normal School eleven and scored in every period. The freshmen had difficulty in making their aerial attack effective, but their defense against the much boasted passing of Plattsburg made up for their weakness. Jay, the Yearling halfback who surprised fans by his playing against Clark was again very much in evidence as he made several fast end plays and added two more touchbowns against the New Yorkers

In the two games that have been played this season the Frosh have not been scored upon and it is not unlikely that they will finish with a clean slate this year

SOPHS WIN OVER FROSH IN CANE RUSH 42-37

Noses, Knuckles and Ears Injured as Vengeful Sophs Trample Late Victorious Frosh Into Heaving Turf

"Revenge is sweet" was the motto adopted by the Sophomores after the cane rush last Saturday afternoon The two-year men, it will be remembered, lost the water fight The traditional struggle between the lower classes showed that the young Cats gets much enjoyment in thrusting their claws into each other's flesh

A few red noses, not caused by excessive drinking were plainly conspicuous among the contestants, also scratches and bruised knuckles

The Frosh were given canes at the University Store Saturday at 1.45 They were allowed to keep them until the end of the Boston University game, at which time, they were compelled to deposit them on the fifty-yard line The members of the Boulder Society were kept busy trying to even up the sides and keep the upperclassmen and medics from obtaining souvenirs

When the pistol was fired both sides made a grand rush for them. Those that were fortunate enough to get one ran back to hide it but the twenty-five or thirty that were left without one soon started after somebody that had one and small groups of about seven or eight men were formed scattered over the field, fighting for the possession of a cane

After six minutes of fighting the pistol announced the end of the struggle and after interference by Boulder men, the canes were counted The Sophomores won by a margin of five, the final score being 42-37. The score makes the number of participants seem small for the final count last year was 100-50 in favor of the Sophomores

NEWS IN BRIEF

Mortar Board will give its semi-annual dance October twenty-seventh at the Burlington High School gym Johnny Johnson's "Catamount Collegians" will furnish music for the men and their escorts to dance. Yes, that night we may live up to our Leap Year aspirations and ask the man we always wished would ask us! And there will be refreshments too. The tickets may be bought from any Mortar Board member at $1.25 per couple Don't forget to buy them, for under the able management of Charlotte Cleveland the affair will surely be a success

The annual Y. W. C. A. drive for membership started yesterday October 15 and will continue throughout the week under the direction of Florence McKenzie, '30 vice-president This campaign is being carried on among all women students, both old and new. Former members must rejoin this year in order to remain active in the organization

The following girls have been assigned to take charge of the various dormitories: Florence McKenzie Grassmount, Marion Potter Redstone, Marion Tifft, Robinson Hall, Bertha Safford, Campus House; Margaret Corbin, Theta House; Harriett Howard, Allen House, Georgina Hubert, Rand Hall; Margaret Parry, University Terrace.

SEARS ANNOUNCES DEBATE SCHEDULE

New Coach Powers With Manager Arranges Trips to Middlebury and Maine

FRESHMEN PROMISE MUCH GOOD MATERIAL

A schedule which will arrange for a fall trip to Maine to open the men's varsity debating season as well as a larger number of Freshman debates than has hitherto been customary is now in process of preparation under the supervision of Coach M. D. Powers and Manager F. A. Sears

A Maine trip is by no means a novelty for Vermont debating teams, having promised at one time to become an annual event. The last such trip, in March 1926, included only two debates and resulted in a victory for Vermont over the University of Maine and a defeat at the hands of Colby. This year's encounter will be the first since then with Maine and Coach Powers expects to put out a team which will duplicate the feat of Vermont's debaters three years ago. Colby was in Burlington last year, dropping a decision to Vermont on the Nicaraguan question. Bates, which will also probably be included in the trip this year, was another of Vermont's opponents last year in a no-decision debate at Brattleboro on the question of the success or failure of democracy.

The Freshman schedule will of course include the annual scrap with the Sophomores, but, in addition to this event which has usually comprised the whole Freshman schedule, Coach Powers plans a series of debates for the yearling men with other Freshman teams and with strong High School and Academy teams, an entirely new feature on Vermont debating programs.

For both Freshman and varsity teams a return is forecast to the old one-team system of three or four men in which the one team participates in all debates during the year. As soon as the Maine debates are arranged a general meeting of all men interested in debating will be called by Coach Powers to provide for the selection of the varsity team and question

All other debates except those with Middlebury and St. Michael's are still in an embryonic stage but a challenge to a debate which, if accepted, promises to be of more than usual interest has been received from Howard Payne College of Brownwood, Texas The members of this team are all veteran debaters and all are members of Pi Kappa Delta, outstanding forensic society in the United States. The latest communication from the Texas team, which reads in part as follows, is illuminating as to the methods of its debaters

"They travel and debate in their work clothes, the picturesque costume of the western cow puncher boots, spurs, chaps, ten gallon hat and all. They are the most unique forensic squad in the country care-free, attractive interesting boys with pleasing western manner delightful west Texas drawl, and exceptional debating ability"

LOWELL THOMAS WILL SPEAK IN GYM WEDNESDAY

Lowell Thomas, world famous writer And lecturer will address University of Vermont students this Wednesday evening in the gymnasium at eight o'clock The subject of his talk will be "In Forbidden Afghanistan" The lecture will be illustrated by moving pictures

There are three special University lectures this year and as these help to broaden student interests everyone should make some effort to attend Because a student does not understand the title of a talk does not mean he will not understand the lecture and that he will not be properly compensated for his efforts

There is no admission charge Friends and townspeople are also invited

RELIEF

When Vermont faced Boston University on Saturday she did so in a decidedly handicapped position. Practically the entire team had sustained injuries during the past two games. These were both physical and mental injuries. When you break your leg, that's a physical injury. But when you're sent up against two teams on two successive weekends with no idea or hope of winning; when you know that you're merely being used as cannon fodder for larger and more wealthy schools, you suffer a mental injury. It tends to destroy your morale, to undermine your determination. It gives you that "Oh, what's the use?" feeling.

Of course, Vermont fights as hard as she can during those first two games. But that's just the point. Although the fellows know they're battling for a vain cause they refuse to quit. Vermont teams never were quitters. And yet they were forced to go into their first really competitive game of the season crippled physically and mentally.

Why? Financial reasons. Larger universities, realizing the advantages of early stages of training, are willing to pay, and pay well, for their services during the initial games. Yet the amount that the team realized was only a few thousand. Vermont alumni, prominent, wealthy, enthusiastic graduates, stand calmly by and watch the slaughter. Some of them no doubt recall the time when they, too, went through the same experience. If so, it appears that this particular experience proved to be a poor teacher. Why don't the Old Guard get their grey heads together and do something about the matter?

Yes, I know Vermont would rather be independent—to work her way through, as it were. But this isn't playing fair with the team; it may account in some measure for Vermont's mediocre showing during the recent past.

From the wise cometh wisdom. From the veterans cometh counsel. From men of means cometh means. How about it, alumni?

—G. R. N.

What's the matter with the cheering section? The leader tries to get in too many cheers and the result, one group cheers one time, the other the next time. The assistant leaders made a very poor showing Saturday and need smoothing up. We hope they will appear better in the next home game.

All Freshmen at St. Lawrence University are forbidden to walk or talk with women on campus. Rather tough on some of the Frosh "Sheiks" eh what?

The University of Maryland it seems places a world of confidence in the abilities of their alumni. It has been recently announced that a member of the class of '28, formerly a student in the school of home economics, has been appointed a dietitian in the college dining hall.

It has been announced by the head of the department of mathematics at the University of New Hampshire that John Wareham of Keene, N. H., has broken all records in the entrance examinations in mathematics. Wareham, who entered the freshman class of the College of Technology, was considered to be so far ahead in his mathematics that he was given a sophomore examination. He passed this with a high mark and now is taking sophomore and junior mathematics.

A growing tendency on the part of the American undergraduate to sleep too little was noted by President Livingston Farrand in his address to the freshman class at the 61st annual opening of Cornell University. "Get started right in your freshman year and the rest of the years will take care of themselves," President Farrand said after mentioning that a large number of college careers had been ruined because "college was not taken seriously." He stressed the use of good English, display of energy, exercise of independent judgment and honest thinking as those things to him most sought after during college days. "The failure to get the proper amount of sleep is one of the growing evils of American undergraduates, he said. 'Your efficiency, your competency, your health and your future can be wrecked without the proper amount of sleep.'

Napoleon was right when he said an army fights on its stomach" muttered a soldier as he crawled through the mud in No Man's Land.

Campus Comment

[EDITOR'S NOTE—The Cynic is sorry the following letter could not be published in the last issue, but due to the lack of space it was impossible to print it at that time.]

To the Editor of the Cynic:

I apologize. I apologize to the instructor whose presence I injected in a recent editorial. I'm sorry that it stirred up so much comment in the last issue of the Cynic. I'm even sorry that his abilities and actions were so unique as to have made him readily recognizable. But most of all, I am sorry that a person of L. L.'s ability should have resorted to deliberate misinterpretation, the use of new and entirely unwarranted definitions and fallacious conclusions.

May I indict L. L. on these three counts? L. L., I wonder what could have been the motive behind your letter? Are you still pursuing the study of Romance Languages? Was your purpose—no, you needn't answer, as I'll admit the question is somewhat irrelevant—one of righteous enlightenment? Righteous enlightenment means truthfulness, L. L. Truthfulness never prompted unwarranted definitions. Why must you declare that giving students a break means "giving them more than they deserved?" Don't you realize, L. L., that you are on the violent verge of a libellous statement when you say that "giving more than an honest grade" means "giving a dishonest grade?" Was your time so valuable that you couldn't pause to read the entire article before replying? If you had done so, you would have found what I meant by "giving more than an honest grade." My explanation was directly below it. By bringing into print a few detached words you resorted to a practice that is prominent during most city elections. But since I'm sure you have no desire to create a false impression, why jump at this fallacious conclusion?

Was your motive one of defense attorney for incriminated professors, L. L.? I'm certain that they would not desire to countenance deliberate misinterpretations. I write: "His hours were looked forward to with as much anticipation as any others on the hill." You judiciously revise this to read: "Students were anxious to attend his classes." I point out that: "He was able to give out longer assignments than most of his colleagues, with less objection from his pupils." In your ready hands this becomes: "and more marvellous still, his pupils made no objections to long assignments."

Did a hot desire to pick an article to pieces prompt your numerous fallacious conclusions and petty efforts at belittlement, L. L.? Just because students come to college for fairly obvious purposes is no reason why human nature will not permit them to acknowledge the efforts of an excellent, hard-working, unselfish instructor.

Would not this acknowledgment naturally take the form of increased application to the particular subject or subjects for which you had that instructor? Can you truthfully say that you treat all courses alike; that you do not allow merits of professors to determine your interest and application to some small extent? If so, may I congratulate you upon your individuality and uniqueness in this respect?

Now, to lapse into the vernacular, this line about giving up college to attend Kindergarten or take up blacksmithing is prehistoric in its origin, irrelevant in the article, and misleading in its conclusion. Furthermore, it's a quitter's gag and I hate quitters.

Just because anything doesn't suit your fancy is no reason why you ought to give up. First of all, a fellow should make sure that his fancy is not fleeting; then he should proceed in his attempt to remedy what he feels is wrong. Don't you think so, L. L.?

L. L., do you remember what you told me last Spring about your professor of Romance Languages—about the marks he handed out to you and to others? When you recall what I refer to you will realize, I am sure, that your statements about the grades of the instructor I brought forward were not so much higher than they should have been. You are, however, entirely correct in one respect. I am "lazy" and I am "stupid." Your judicious choice of words causes me to commend you most heartily.

In conclusion, I wish to thank you for one distinct thing. You, L. L., have given to the student body an admirable example of what I meant by one who does not believe in giving others a "break." As I have pointed out in detail, you have resorted to deliberate misinterpretation, the use of unwarranted definitions and fallacious conclusions. You have even found it necessary to resort to slander in regard to "dishonest grades" and belittlement in conclusion. Just what was your object, L. L.?

The Periscope

A Krazy Kat comedy opened the program. This was followed by advertising for 9 local firms. The products varied from coal and motor cars to bread and gowns. Slides, a boring profusion of them, followed one another across the screen.

Then came the feature picture, The King of Kings. Effective in spots, rank pathos and padding in others with more than an occasional touch of incongruous matter, the picture was at least a spectacle. Much of it was far more than ordinarily effective. It might well be ranked as one of the better pictures of the year. Of course one can but deplore the mistaken direction which wanders from the simple tale of the Supreme Healer to the gaudy courtesan when that digression is evidently made for the sole purpose of exhibiting costumes and settings. The scenes included in this sequence were far less effective than the simple, unstrained sequence which showed the little blind girl searching for the One who could make the light and the flowers an actuality to her.

College students throng the Majestic nightly. I have seen them waiting in long lines before the doors. Standing room was all taken at a recent showing of Wings. A large per cent of the standees were obviously students. This is but natural as the theater is the most popular movie house in town. In fact it is more than that. It is the most popular picture place in the largest city of the state. Still, in spite of its leading position, this house runs advertising slides as a part of its program. One expects this in a low grade theater. One is reconciled to it in a second or third grade place, but it seems to me such a policy is distinctly beneath the dignity of this theater's position. It is not on a par with other things in our state nor is it in accord with the state's easily apparent policy of improvement and advance. It is obsolete practice carried into the present day. Many will be glad to see its passing.

The University is the largest educational institution in the state. It is situated in the largest city of the state, a city that wholeheartedly supports the school in every way. Yet the city does not provide an adequate amusement program. There is no vaudeville in town. There are few legitimate shows and the less said about the artistic grade of some of these the better. Outside of the movies and the infrequent legitimate production, dances are the only recreation of the student.

Dancing is pleasurable and healthful. College dances go a long way toward promoting and preserving a fine school spirit. They provide an excellent means of social intercourse. Dances should not be neglected but it is possible to over-emphasize them. Too, they are not a recreation enjoyed by all. There is a large group in the University which does not dance. This group is, under present conditions, left to amuse itself as best it can. There is pitifully little diversion offered it.

Courses in advanced composition now offered in the University are attended by a large and interested group. Students in these courses receiving more than credit hours are doing more than routine work. They are being offered an opportunity for self-expression and they are failing to take advantage of it.

A little theater group, however small or weak it might be, would be an excellent addition to the present extra-curriculum activities on the campus. It would offer experience to those interested in the art or science of the mime. It might easily arrange to present frequent sketches at one of the local theaters. I believe it would be heartily supported by the college people and I am sure college dramatic work would be charitably and favorably viewed by local audiences. The situation of the college is excellent for such a venture. There is little or no professional competition. There is one thing which is more important, a spirit of feeling of loyalty and mutual interest between the town and both. We are not troubled as are many large schools with an antagonistic town-and-gown sentiment. The Burlington Free Press recently made editorial comment on the good feeling between the town and college and the town. This was reprinted in the Alumni Weekly.

The advantages accruing to a school from such a venture are not surprising. Chapel Hill was greatly aided in gaining its present nation-wide prominence by the dramatic work done on the campus of the university there. Yale and Harvard have gained much from their extensive theater work. Why cannot Vermont profit in the same way?

* * *

Of course there are obstacles. Are these proportionately greater than those faced by the original Barnstown Players? Are they greater than those faced by the New Hampshire Theater? Certainly they are not. Once a beginning is made no doubt further development will follow. Perhaps a little theater movement be inaugurated. I venture to prophesy Vermont will have as well known five years hence for its theater work as it has at hand, now one of the most successfully conducted and best advertised features of the school.

"Hastily" asks if The Press reflects light from headquarters or does it have a staff of reflectors.

* * *

The Periscope is merely a personal view. It is uncensored and without headquarters. No staff of critics is employed in an advisory capacity. Criticisms are not suggested to me. Constructive contributions and suggestions are welcome.

Surprising news item from the Free Press of October 12

"The Vermont varsity will meet the Connecticut Aggies at Athletic Field tomorrow afternoon."

—Hans

To the Editor of the Cynic:

This letter is written to present a third, and, what I believe to be, the correct side of the G. R. N.-L. L. controversy.

G. R. N., in his editorial, in the October 5 issue of the Cynic, goes at great length to show professors how to teach, and, in a letter to the editor which appeared in the October 9 issue, L. L., at equal length, flays students who are anxious to have G. R. N.'s perfect professors as their instructors. G. R. N.'s perfect professor is one who is a fellow among fellows, and quite willing to give the fellows a "break."

Truth is, professors are individuals like everyone else. One professor's method of teaching is entirely different from that employed by another and so on. No one universal rule for teaching can be laid down; there are as many different ways of teaching as there are professors and instructors. And, it is hardly for a student to judge just which of all those methods is the one and only.

That one professor was an artist at teaching is certainly fine, but I believe that even G. R. N. won't hesitate to favor a system of teaching in which all professors were of his ideal type. There is such a thing as too much of a good thing.

L. L. is hardly sincere in his accusations against the student who prefers the artist professor. A student may choose a professor from among others and still be a student for all of that. Likings may grow up between student and professor just the same as liking may grow up between any two individuals.

Professors who are willing to give a "break" to students under certain circumstances are being only fair and just, but the professor who makes a regular practice of giving "breaks" to students under any circumstance whatever is somewhat negligent of his duties. A student goes to college to be made to learn, not to be pampered.

Sponges. Some of the deep water sponges are experts in glass working. A few examples of the siliceous or "glass" sponges are included in the Invertebrate Section of the museum. These are very different from the commercial sponges of the drug stores although like them, the glass sponges are the skeletal remains of soft, almost undifferentiated animals. All parts of the world have contributed to our collection of sponges but the finest specimens came from Japan and the islands of the tropical Pacific, where they inhabit great depths of the ocean. The delicate lattice work and plumes of some of these are almost too artificial in appearance to be reconciled with the dark caverns of ocean abysses.

Corals. In the case of the corals the bare skeletons are more attractive, in form at least, than the living creatures. The rich colors are wanting but the beautiful patterns of the thin plates and partitions is often most exquisite. In our museum, the variety shown is a good exhibition of the typical sorts of corals from tropical waters. The familiar branching "stag horns" and the brain corals are well represented. A large and unusually flawless example of the latter type is one which was secured in the Bahamas for this museum. This specimen weighs over a hundred pounds, and is 16 inches in diameter. In this same group comes the precious red coral of the Mediterranean Sea. A splendid specimen of this type is to be found in our museum.

Closely allied to the stony corals are the softer leathery sea fans, sea feathers, etc., several good specimens of which are on our shelves, where they lend much, with their lace-like patterns and delicate tints of pink, violet, and yellow, to the beauty of such a collection as that we are describing.

Vermont Defeated by B. U. 25-0

then Walke plunged the remaining distance for the first score of the game. A pass for the point after touchdown was grounded. After the kick-off by B. U. an exchange of punts gave the Scarlet the ball on their own 40 yard marker as the half ended. Score 6 to 0.

SECOND HALF

Vermont kicked off to the B. U. 35-yard line. B. U. punted and Vermont returned the kick. Thurman made two first downs successively. Vermont held so B. U. punted and Vermont again returned the punt. B. U. made four first downs in a row and O'Brien scored off tackle. The attempted goal after touchdown was blocked. B. U. kicked off and Vermont punted back. The third period ended with Boston on Vermont's 15-yard line. On the first two plays of the fourth quarter B. U. made two first downs and a pass gave a third one. Thurman plunged over for six more points. Marston was sent in to kick the goal but he missed. After the kick-off Dorey passed to Halligan for a first down. Marston intercepted the next pass and made his spectacular run for a touchdown from his own 40 yard line. Marston kicked the only goal of the game. After the kick-off Halligan caught two 15-yard passes and Vermont seemed to be headed for the last white stripe but Dorfman intercepted a pass at midfield and carried it to his 35-yard line. During the remaining few minutes Boston made numerous substitutions and the whistle blew for the end with Vermont on its own 25 yard line.

How Gold Prospector "Went Scotch"

Minneapolis, Minn.
April 30, 1928

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.
Dear Sirs

Two years ago last winter I went into the Red Lake gold fields in Canada. It was a tough trail from Hudson, over 140 miles of snow and ice. There were fourteen of us on the trail going in, and frequently at night when seated around a big camp fire, some one would ask me for a pipeful of Edgeworth. These Canadian boys sure like our Edgeworth.

In four weeks' time I ran out of Edgeworth. I was glad to get 'most any old tobacco.

One day, however, I dropped in to Dad Brown's tent, a 72 year-old prospector, and seeing a can of Edgeworth on an improvised table back there 150 miles from the "steel," I perked up at once, saying, "Dad, I'm plum out of tobacco; how's chances for a pipeful?" "Help yourself," he said. So pulling my heavy duty pipe from my pocket, I loaded it with Edgeworth, packing it in so tightly, that I couldn't get the least bit of a draw.

I excused myself for a moment, and stepped outside to remove about three pipefuls to put in my pouch. Dad stepped out, saying, "You're worse than any Scotchman I ever saw." Then I confessed. I told him what happened to my Edgeworth; that I was just dying for a smoke, and he understood right away. He said, "Boy, Edgeworth is mighty scarce in these parts, but I reckon I can spare what's left of that can. Help yourself."

You can just bet your last nickel that I guarded this Edgeworth with extreme care until I got back to the "steel."

Yours very truly,
C. M. Bahr

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

On Sunday evening, October 14, Sara Bliss, '28, entertained the members of her fraternity for supper at her home on Bay View Street.

Dorothy Cottrell, '29, spent the week-end of the 6th at Hartford, Conn., as a representative for Vermont at the Y. W. C. A. Conference.

The fall dance this year is to be given at the Theta House on December 1.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The Delta Delta Delta fraternity is planning to hold their dance on November 24 at the Delta Mu rooms.

ALPHA XI DELTA

The Alpha Xi rooms are to be the scene of the annual fall dance which is to be held on November 24.

SIGMA GAMMA

The tentative date for the fall dance is December 1. It will probably be at the rooms on College Street.

Small Talk

President Hopkins of Dartmouth in his opening address of the fall college term deplores the prevalence of political "small talk. "Temperaments," he says, "personal habits, domestic relationships, racial antecedents, religious affiliations and even physical appearance are discussed for hours, usually loudly and always cheaply, unworthy of the limited intelligence of those participating in the discussion."

More than ever before, prejudices and hates are going to figure in this campaign, perhaps even determining it. And it is encouraging to find a college president who recognizes and condemns this. The most dreary aspect of the whole situation, however, is that the frock coats and with strings of degrees attached to their names are devoting all to spreading this petty bigotry and climbing to power by its use. They did it in other years and they are doing it again. Even Charles Evans Hughes (space forbids enumerating his degrees) made a series of speeches in behalf of Calvin Coolidge in 1924, directed against the late Senator La Follette, calculated to lull the intelligences of voters and fan in their hearts the unreasoning fear of the "red men of the morning paper is not without modern instance. Bishop Can... legislative committee of the Anti-Saloon League has four degrees from important universities, yet the fact does not deter him from leading an organization which has just now announced that Al Smith must be kept out of the presidency because he is an enemy of this "Anglo-Saxon, Protestant" country.

Partiality and prejudice enter into more spheres than the political, as the New York Times warns Dr. Hopkins. "Even in the bosoms of college trustees and faculties they are sometimes felt and sometimes have prevailed when a president or a professor is to be selected." And when the college president wanders into politics he often is no less free from emotion than the ranting parsons of the Protestant churches today. There is the horrid example of President Dwight of Yale who travelled up and down the country warning of dire things that would happen when and if Thomas Jefferson became president. No woman in New England, he predicted, would be safe. Bibles would be burned by executive order.

It seems that the college educated have their special lesson to learn, as well as the unlettered small talkers. And it is this: Be unbiased—and be humble.

MEMBERS OF HOUSE COMMITTEES!

RELIEF

When Vermont faced Boston University on Saturday she did so in a decidedly handicapped position. Practically the entire team had sustained injuries during the past two games. These were both physical and mental injuries. When you break your leg, that's a physical injury. But when you're sent up against two teams on two successive week-ends with no idea or hope of winning, when you know that you're merely being used as cannon fodder for larger and more wealthy schools, you suffer a mental injury. It tends to destroy your morale, to undermine your determination. It gives you that "Oh, what's the use?" feeling.

Of course, Vermont fights as hard as she can during those first two games. But that's just the point. Although the fellows know they're battling for a vain cause they refuse to quit. Vermont teams never were quitters! And yet they were forced to go into their first really competitive game of the season crippled physically and mentally.

Why? Financial reasons. Larger universities, realizing the advantages of easy stages of training, are willing to pay, and pay well, for their services during the initial games. Yet the amount that the team realized was only a few thousand. Vermont alumni, prominent, wealthy, enthusiastic graduates, stand calmly by and watch the slaughter. Some of them no doubt recall the time when they, too, went through the same experience. If so, it appears that this particular experience proved to be a poor teacher. Why don't the Old Grads get their grey heads together and do something about the matter?

Yes, I know Vermont would rather be independent—to work her way through, as it were. But this isn't playing fair with the team; it may account in some measure for Vermont's mediocre showing during the recent past.

From the wise cometh wisdom. From the veterans cometh counsel. From men of means cometh means. How about it, alumni?

—G. R. N.

What's the matter with the cheering section? The leader tries to get in too many cheers and the result, one group cheers one time, the other the next time. The assistant leaders made a very poor showing Saturday and need smoothing up. We hope they will appear better in the next home game.

Intercollegiate News

By Cosmo A. Mastinetti, '30

All Freshmen at St. Lawrence University are forbidden to walk or talk with women on campus. Rather tough on some of the Frosh "Sheiks," eh what?

The University of Maryland, it seems, places a world of confidence in the abilities of their alumni. It has been recently announced that a member of the class of '25, formerly a student in the school of home economics, has been appointed a dietitian in the college dining hall.

It has been announced by the head of the department of mathematics at the University of New Hampshire, that John Walstrom of Keene, N. H., has broken all records in the entrance examinations in mathematics. Walstrom, who entered the freshman class of the College of Technology, was considered to be so far ahead in his mathematics that he was given a sophomore examination. He passed this with a high mark and now is taking sophomore and junior mathematics.

A growing tendency on the part of the American undergraduate to sleep too little was noted by President Livingston Farrand in his address to the freshman class at the 61st annual opening of Cornell University. "Get started right in your freshman year and the rest of the years will take care of themselves," President Farrand said after mentioning that a large number of college careers had been ruined because "college was not taken seriously." He stressed the use of good English display of energy, exercise of independent judgment and honest thinking as those things to him most sought after during college days. "The failure to get the proper amount of sleep is one of the growing evils of American undergraduates," he said. "Your efficiency, your competency, your health and your future can be wrecked without the proper amount of sleep."

"Napoleon was right when he said an army fights on its stomach," muttered a soldier, as he crawled through the mud in No Man's Land.

Campus Comment

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—The Cynic is sorry the following letter could not be published in the last issue, but due to the lack of space it was impossible to print it at that time.]

To the Editor of the Cynic:

I apologize. I apologize to the instructor whose presence I injected in a recent editorial. I'm sorry that it stirred up so much comment in the last issue of the Cynic. I'm even sorry that his abilities and actions were so unique as to have made him readily recognizable. But most of all, I am sorry that a person of L. L.'s ability should have resorted to deliberate misinterpretation, the use of new and entirely unwarranted definitions and fallacious conclusions.

May I indict L. L. on these three counts? L. L., I wonder what could have been the motive behind your letter? Are you still pursuing the study of Romance Languages? Was your purpose no, you needn't answer, as I'll admit the question is somewhat irrelevant—one of righteous enlightenment? Righteous enlightenment means truthfulness, L. L. Truthfulness never prompted unwarranted definitions. Why must you declare that giving students a break means "giving them more than they deserved?" Don't you realize, L. L., that you are on the violent verge of a libellous statement when you say that "giving more than an honest grade" means "giving a dishonest grade?" Was your time so valuable that you couldn't pause to read the entire article before replying? If you had done so, you would have found what I meant by "giving more than an honest grade." My explanation was directly below it. By bringing into print a few detached words you resorted to a practice that is prominent during most city elections. But since I'm sure you have no desire to create a false impression, why jump at this fallacious conclusion?

Was your motive one of defense attorney for incriminated professors, L. L.? I'm certain that they would not desire to countenance deliberate misinterpretations. I write: "His hours were looked forward to with as much anticipation as any others on the hill." You judiciously revise this to read: "Students were anxious to attend his classes." I point out that: "He was able to give out longer assignments than most of his colleagues, with less objection from his pupils." In your ready hands this becomes: "and more marvellous still, his pupils made no objections to long assignments."

Did a hot desire to pick an article to pieces prompt your numerous fallacious conclusions and petty efforts at belittlement, L. L.? Just because students come to college for fairly obvious purposes is no reason why human nature will not permit them to acknowledge the efforts of an excellent, hard-working, unselfish instructor.

Would not this acknowledgment naturally take the form of increased application to the particular subject or subjects for which you had that instructor? Can you truthfully say that you treat all courses alike; that you do not allow merits of professors to determine your interest and application to some small extent? If so, may I congratulate you upon your individuality and uniqueness in this respect?

Now, to lapse into the vernacular, this line about giving up college to attend Kindergarten or take up blacksmithing is prehistoric in its origin, irrelevant in the article, and misleading in its conclusion. Furthermore, it's a quitter's gag and I hate quitters.

Just because anything doesn't suit your fancy is no reason why you ought to give up. First of all, a fellow should make sure that his fancy is not fleeting; then he should proceed in his attempt to remedy what he feels is wrong. Don't you think so, L. L.?

L. L., do you remember what you told me last Spring about your professor of Romance Languages—about the marks he handed out to you and to others? When you recall what I refer to you will realize, I am sure, that your statements about the grades of the instructor I brought forward were not so much higher than they should have been. You are, however, entirely correct in one respect. I am "lazy" and I am "stupid." Your judicious choice of words causes me to commend you most heartily.

In conclusion, I wish to thank you for one distinct thing. You, L. L., have given to the student body an admirable example of what I meant by one who does not believe in giving others a "break." As I have pointed out in detail, you have resorted to deliberate misinterpretation, the use of unwarranted definitions and fallacious conclusions. You have even found it necessary to resort to slander in regard to "dishonest grades" and belittlement in conclusion. Just what was your object, L. L.?

The Periscope

A Krazy Kat comedy opened the program. This was followed by advertising for 9 local firms. The products varied from coal and motor cars to bread and gowns. Slides, a boring profusion of them, followed one another across the screen.

Then came the feature picture, The King of Kings. Effective in spots, rank pathos and padding in others with more than an occasional touch of incongruous matter, the picture was at least a spectacle. Much of it was far more than ordinarily effective. It might well be ranked as one of the better pictures of the year. Of course one can but deplore the mistaken direction which wanders from the simple tale of the Supreme Healer to the gaudy courtesan when that digression is evidently made for the sole purpose of exhibiting costumes and settings. The scenes included in this sequence were far less effective than the simple, unstrained sequence which showed the little blind girl searching for the One who could make the light and the flowers an actuality to her.

College students throng the Majestic nightly. I have seen them waiting in long lines before the doors. Standing room was all taken at a recent showing of Wings. A large per cent of the standees were obviously students. This is but natural as the theater is the most popular movie house in town. In fact it is more than that. It is the most popular picture place in the largest city of the state. Still, in spite of its leading position, this house runs advertising slides as a part of its program. One expects this in a low grade theater. One is reconciled to it in a second or third grade place, but it seems to me such a policy is distinctly beneath the dignity of this theater's position. It is not on a par with other things in our state nor is it in accord with the state's easily apparent policy of improvement and advance. It is obsolete practice carried into the present day. Many will be glad to see its passing.

The University is the largest educational institution in the state. It is situated in the largest city of the state, a city that wholeheartedly supports the school in every way. Yet the city does not provide an adequate amusement program. There is no vaudeville in town. There are few legitimate shows and the less said about the artistic grade of some of these the better. Outside of the movies and the infrequent legitimate production, dances are the only recreation of the student.

Dancing is pleasurable and healthful. College dances go a long way toward promoting and preserving a fine school spirit. They provide an excellent means of social intercourse. Dances should not be neglected but it is possible to over-emphasize them. Too, they are not a recreation enjoyed by all. There is a large group in the University which does not dance. This group is, under present conditions, left to amuse itself as best it can. There is pitifully little diversion offered it.

Courses in advanced composition now offered in the University are attended by a large and interested group. Students in these courses receiving more than credit-hours are doing more than routine work. They are being offered an opportunity for self-expression and they are availing to take advantage of it.

A little theater group, however crude or weak it might be, would be an excellent addition to the program of extra-curriculum activities on the campus. It would offer experience to those interested in the acting and of the mime. It might easily arrange to present frequent sketches at one of the local theaters. I believe it would be heartily supported by the student people and I am sure college dramatic work would be charitably but critically viewed by local audiences. The situation of the college is excellent for such a venture. There is little, if any, no professional competition. There is which is more important, a splendid feeling of loyalty and mutual interest between the town and the college not troubled as are many state schools with an antagonistic town-gown sentiment. The Burlington Free Press recently made editorial comment on the good feeling between the college and the town. This was reprinted in the Alumni Weekly.

The advantages accruing to a school from such a venture are not surprising. Chapel Hill was materially aided in gaining its present world-wide prominence by the splendid work done on the campus of the university there. Yale and Harvard have gained much from experimental theater work. Why cannot Vermont profit in the same way?

* * *

Of course there are obstacles. Are these proportionately greater than those faced by the original Barnstown Players? Are they greater than those faced by the New York Little Theater? Certainly there is no reason why a beginning is made that splendid development will follow. If a little theater movement be inaugurated I venture to prophesy Vermont will be as well known five years hence for its theater work as it is for its band, now one of the most well-conducted and best advertised features of the school.

"Hastily" asks if The Periscope reflects light from headquarters and if we have a staff of reflectors.

* * *

The Periscope is merely my personal view. It is uncensored and has no headquarters. No staff of reflectors in an advisory capacity. Subjects are not suggested to me. Any contributions and suggestions welcome.

Surprising news item from the Free Press of October 12.

"The Vermont varsity will meet the Connecticut Aggies on Centennial Field tomorrow afternoon."

Hot's Pe

To the Editor of the Cynic:

This letter is written to present a third, and, what I believe to be, the correct side of the G. R. N.-L. L. controversy.

G. R. N., in his editorial, in the October 5 issue of the Cynic, goes at great length to show professors how to teach, and, in a letter to the editor which appeared in the October 9 issue, L. L., at equal length, flays students who are anxious to have G. R. N.'s perfect professors as their instructors. G. R. N.'s perfect professor is one who is a fellow among fellows, and quite willing to give the fellows a "break."

Truth is, professors are individuals like everyone else. One professor's method of teaching is entirely different from that employed by another and so on. No one universal rule for teaching can be laid down; there are as many different ways of teaching as there are professors and instructors. And, it is hardly for a student to judge just which of all those methods is the one and only.

That one professor was an artist at teaching is certainly fine, but I believe that even G. R. N. won't hesitate to favor a system of teaching in which all professors were of his ideal type. There is such a thing as too much of a good thing.

L. L. is hardly sincere in his accusations against the student who prefers the artist professor. A student may choose a professor from among others and still be a student for all of that. Likings may grow up between student and professor just the same as liking may grow up between any two individuals.

Professors who are willing to give a "break" to students under certain circumstances are being only fair and just; but the professor who makes a regular practice of giving "breaks" to students under any circumstance whatever is somewhat negligent of his duties. A student goes to college to be made to learn, not to be pampered.

Sponges—Some of the deep water sponges are experts in glass working A few examples of the siliceous or "glass" sponges are included in the Invertebrate Section of the museum These are very different from the commercial sponges of the drug stores although like them, the glass sponges are the skeletal remains of soft, almost undifferentiated animals All parts of the world have contributed to our collection of sponges, but the finest specimens came from Japan and the islands of the tropical Pacific, where they inhabit great depths of the ocean The delicate lattice work and plumes of some of these are almost too artificial in appearance to be reconciled with the dark caverns of ocean abysses.

Corals. In the case of the corals, the bare skeletons are more attractive, in form at least, than the living creatures. The rich colors are wanting but the beautiful patterns of the thin plates and partitions is often most exquisite. In our museum, the variety shown is a good exhibition of the typical sorts of corals from tropical waters. The familiar branching "stag horns" and the brain corals are well represented A large and unusually flawless example of the latter type is one which was secured in the Bahamas for this museum This specimen weighs over a hundred pounds, and is 16 inches in diameter In this same group comes the precious red coral of the Mediterranean Sea. A splendid specimen of this type is to be found in our museum.

Closely allied to the stony corals are the softer leathery sea-fans, sea feathers, etc., several good specimens of which are on our shelves, where they lend much, with their lace-like patterns and delicate tints of pink, violet, and yellow, to the beauty of such a collection as that we are describing.

How Gold Prospector "Went Scotch"

Minneapolis, Minn.
April 30, 1928

Larus & Bro Co.
Richmond, Va.
Dear Sirs

Two years ago last winter I went into the Red Lake gold fields in Canada. It was a tough trail from Hudson, over 140 miles of snow and ice. There were fourteen of us on the trail going in, and frequently at night when seated around a big camp fire, some one would ask me for a pipeful of Edgeworth. These Canadian boys sure like our Edgeworth.

In four weeks' time I ran out of Edgeworth. I was glad to get 'most any old tobacco.

One day, however, I dropped in to Dad Brown's tent, a 72 year old prospector, and seeing a can of Edgeworth on an improvised table, back there 150 miles from the "steel," I perked up at once, saying, "Dad, I'm plum out of tobacco how's chances for a pipeful?" "Help yourself," he said. So pulling my heavy duty pipe from my pocket, I loaded it with Edgeworth, packing it in so tightly that I couldn't get the least bit of a draw.

I excused myself for a moment, and stepped outside to remove about three pipefuls to put in my pouch. Dad stepped out, saying, "You're worse than any Scotchman I ever saw." Then I confessed. I told him what happened to my Edgeworth that I was just dying for a smoke, and he understood right away. He said, "Boy, Edgeworth is mighty scarce in these parts, but I reckon I can spare what's left of that can. Help yourself."

You can just bet your last nickel that I guarded that Edgeworth with extreme care until I got back to the "steel."

Yours very truly,
C. M. Bahr

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

On Sunday evening, October 14, Anna Bliss, '28, entertained the members of her fraternity for supper at her home on Bay View Street.

Dorothy Cottrell, '29, spent the week-end of the 6th at Hartford, Conn. as a representative for Vermont at the Y. W. C. A. Conference.

The fall dance this year is to be given at the Theta House on December 1.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The Delta Delta Delta fraternity is planning to hold their dance on November 24 at the Delta Mu rooms.

ALPHA XI DELTA

The Alpha Xi rooms are to be the scene of the annual fall dance which is to be held on November 24.

SIGMA GAMMA

The tentative date for the fall dance is December 1. It will probably be at the rooms on College Street.

Small Talk

President Hopkins of Dartmouth in his opening address of the fall college year explores the prevalence of political small talk. "Temperaments," he says, "personal habits, domestic relations, racial antecedents, religious affiliations and even physical appearance are discussed for hours, usually heatedly and always cheaply, unworthy of the limited intelligence of those participating in the discussion."

More than ever before, prejudices and hates are going to figure in this campaign, perhaps even determining the result. It is encouraging to find a college president who recognizes and condemns this. The most dreary aspect of the whole situation, however, is that men in frock coats and with strings of degrees attached to their names are lending aid to spreading this petty prejudice and climbing to power on its use. They did it in other years and they are doing it again. Even Charles Evans Hughes (space forbids enumerating his degrees) made a series of speeches in behalf of Calvin Coolidge in 1924, directed against the late Senator La Follette, calculated to lull the intelligences of voters and fan in their hearts the burning fear of the "red menace." The morning paper is not without modern instance. Bishop Cannon, legislative committee of the Anti-Saloon League has four degrees from important universities, yet the fact does not deter him from leading an organization which has just now announced that Al Smith must be kept out of the presidency because he is an enemy of this "Anglo-Saxon, Protestant" country.

Partiality and prejudice enter into more spheres than the political, as the New York Times warns Dr. Hopkins "Even in the bosoms of college trustees and faculties they are sometimes felt and sometimes have prevailed when a president or a professor is to be selected." And when the college president wanders into politics he often is no less free from emotion than the ranting parsons of the Protestant churches today. There is the horrid example of President Dwight of Yale who travelled up and down the country warning of dire things that would happen when and if Thomas Jefferson became president. No woman in New England, he predicted, would be safe. Bibles would be burned by executive order.

It seems that the college educated have their special lesson to learn, as well as the unlettered small-talkers. And it is this: Be unbiased—and be humble

TENNIS TOURNAMENT REACHES SEMI-FINALS

The annual fall tennis tournament is now in full sway. The quarter finals of the tournament should be finished by the end of this week. Until the semi-finals have been reached the matches will be decided by two out of three sets.

Four men have already reached the quarter final division. "Harney" Strobl a member of last year's varsity squad. "Harney" is also captain of this year's varsity. Holbrook, a new man, had some difficulty in beating Jackson 1-6 6-3 6-4 but disposed of Ivan Swift 7-5, 6-2 in an interesting match. Hemund must play Wheeler to decide which one will be in the quarter finals with Wheeler favored to win.

In the lower division Professor Carpenter, varsity coach of tennis won over Sargent rather easily 6-2 and 6-1. Pitt Goddard another former varsity player won over "Lee" Pouch in a fine match 8-6 and 6-1. Two other matches remain to be played in the lower section. Vail vs. James and Hendrickson vs. Norkland, both of which should be evenly fought matches.

It is rather hard to predict the outcome as yet due to the uncertain ability of some of the newcomers. There are some who have yet to pay their entrance fee to assistant managers, P. C. Andrews and F. W. Reed.

The semi-finals and finals will be played off this week. These matches should prove very interesting to watch. These matches will be three out of five to decide the winner.

Bill Roper Looks for Mind and Muscle

Now that Princeton downed Vermont it might be interesting to know what type of man that Coach Roper likes. In a letter to College Humor he tells how he picks them.

"The quality I look for at first is best described as the ability to handle oneself," says Bill Roper, Princeton coach in the November issue of College Humor. "A close correlation between mind and muscle which shows in balance, speed, rhythm and grace. I want not the men with nerve and clear-cut who do not complain too readily of bumps and discouragements and bruises. The successful coach studies his squad and learns the dispositions and temperaments of every player. The unimaginative boy perfectly set up but utterly lacking in fire and spirit to rise to a fighting pitch during a game is a thorn in any coach's basket of roses.

"There is a general impression that only big, brawny men have a chance to excel in football. Coach Yost of Michigan gives five qualities that make up the football player: determination, perseverance, coordination, brains and strength. 'Determination not strength, is the first thing I look for,' he says. 'The strong, brainy coordinated boy is not an athlete unless he possesses the determination and willingness to persevere.'

"Stagg of Chicago believes that football players are born, not made. Certainly he points out physical attributes enter into being a perfect football player but a manufactured tackle or fullback will always remain an automaton, a mechanical player. The boy who is worth his weight in gold is he who is always in every play and every game up to his neck."

As a result of the elections held on Wednesday and Thursday, October 1st and 2, Marion Everest '29 was elected chairman of the program committee of Student Union. Doris Kibbe was elected to this office last spring, but she did not return to college this fall. Miss Everest is prominent in nearly all college activities. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta, Blue stockings, Vermonters Club, Dramatic Club, W. A. A. Council and of the 1929 Ariel Board. She is on the volley ball, hockey, tennis, soccer, baseball, basketball and rifle teams.

At the A. A. U. W. supper recently held in Rutland, Dean Patterson, Mary Powers, '24, Lucy Rich, '23, Constance Weaver, '26, and Lois Robinson, '29, represented the University.

FUTURE LIFE SUBJECT OF ROBERTS' SERMON

After the singing of several hymns, a reading from the Gospel of St. John, and the offering of a prayer, the sermon of the afternoon was preached by Dr. Richard Roberts at the service held in the Ira Allen Chapel Sunday at 4 p.m. The text of the sermon was chosen from the Biblical reading. Jesus answered, Verily, verily I say unto you except a man be born of water and the spirit he cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Dr. Roberts spoke of the character of Nicodemus as a professional theologian and how he investigated the authenticity of the claims of Christ. After talking with Christ, Nicodemus accepted him as a teacher of the people. Yet Christ was uneducated, the son of a common carpenter, while Nicodemus was a member of the Sanhedrain. Thus he showed himself to be liberal-minded which is just an other way of putting intelligence.

"The world," Dr. Roberts said, "is always waiting for some one to say something new and is ever willing to listen when some one does so. No one can understand Jesus until he is born again. The same thing applies to us, who are living today as did to the men of New Testament times. What is it we cannot understand or see? We must see a context, but most of us see the wrong context. To see the context of Jesus, one must see the Kingdom of God. No one knows what the Kingdom of God is. Those who know most on such subjects are too wise even to guess.

One thing, however, is certain. This present life is only the threshold of life itself. What seems darkly mysterious now will become as an open book when we are born again, or when we acquire spiritual insight. This quality, spiritual insight, is the most important thing in life.

Copies of the complete list of rushing rules have been obtained and distributed to each fraternity. These should be posted on the bulletin board of each fraternity.

SECRET PRACTICE FOR GRIDDERS NEXT WEEK

Beginning next Tuesday the varsity football squad will hold secret practice sessions on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Coaches Rattan and Tully have started a scouting campaign and are also developing new plays to be used for the remainder of the season, especially in preparation for the State series.

Centennial Field will be closed to all visitors on the days mentioned above. On Mondays and Fridays the field will be open and the student body is urged to attend the practices on those days.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Practice House, where it is customary for the students of Home Economics to do actual housekeeping during the first semester, is to remain open for the entire year, in order that every girl may spend two weeks there, learning the various duties incumbent upon the housekeeper.

At a meeting of the board of the Vermont Literary Magazine held last Tuesday evening, Wilmond W. Parker, '29 was promoted from contributing editor to a full editorship to take the place of Clifford Morse, '30, who is not attending college this year. Mr. Parker is a member of choir and glee club and won first place in the poetry in the college contest last spring. He has been an active contributor to the magazine and was elected a contributing editor last May.

Coach Aldrich of the cross-country team wishes to have several more freshmen come out for that sport. Only about 5 have reported so far and none of these have had previous experience. This offers a chance to make freshman numerals to those placing among the first seven. Men may report any afternoon at four o'clock at the gym. A contract has been signed with Middlebury so that the meet with them will be run over the three-mile course and not over the six-mile one as they wished.

A briefiet for women interested in handwork and one for persons interested in forestry have recently been issued by the Extension Service of the State Agricultural College, University of Vermont, and may be had on request.

Walter H. Crockett, State Historian, and instructor at U. V. M. and who is also director of state publicity, went Wednesday to Woodstock to speak before the Rotary Club at noon and before a women's meeting in the afternoon.

MEN HOLD MAJORITY IN EVERY COLLEGE

Figures From Administration Offices Reveal a Decrease of 19 Under the Enrollment of Last Year

PROPORTION OF MEN TO WOMEN IS UNCHANGED

Statistics from the Administration office show a total enrollment of 1310 students for all colleges of the University in contrast to an enrollment of [illegible] in October, 1927, a decrease of [illegible] registered for the Academic Colleges and increases being noted in Medicine and in Teacher Training. As usual the enrollment in the Academic Colleges Arts and Sciences, Engineering and Agriculture, far outnumbers the enrollment in any other college, the [illegible] Academic students more than [illegible] the combined enrollment in Medicine and Teacher Training. Men outnumber women 725 to 585 while last year 723 men registered to 599 women. The class of 1932 with an enrollment of 328 in the Academic Colleges and 47 in Medicine outnumbers any other class, the nearest class, 1931, counting only 278 academic members and 32 medics.

Men outnumber women in every class in the Academic Colleges. In the Freshman class 64 more men are registered than women. 32 more men and women are registered in the Sophomore class. Junior men outnumber women by 39 while 28 more Senior women claim membership in the Senior class. Only nine women are enrolled in Medicine against 132 men, three in the class of 1932, two in the class of 1931, three more in the class of 1930 and one in the class of 1929. The distribution of Medics among the different classes is more equitable than in the Academic Colleges 47 being enrolled in the Freshman class, 32 in the Sophomore, 31 in the Junior and 30 in the Senior class. The large excess of men over women in the College of Medicine is offset, however, by the 159 women who have enrolled in Teacher Training courses there being but nine men among their students.

In general, the proportions of students in the various colleges to the total vary but slightly from 1927. Over 70 per cent of the whole student body is enrolled in Academic courses. Seventy-seven per cent of the student body enrolled in these courses last year. Almost 11 per cent are enrolled in Medicine while some [illegible] per cent registered in Medicine last year. In contrast to the 12 per cent enrolled for Teacher Training last year this year 13 per cent of all students are enrolled in this Department.

The decrease in the Academic Department and the increase in Medicine, slight though they are, are nevertheless significant. Since two years ago Academic student enrollment for September has begun a decline for which increased tuition and stricter entrance requirements can account. Whether or not the decrease this year will be made up by post-September entrances or not remains to be seen. The increase in the number of students taking medicine is particularly heartening, in view of the strenuous entrance conditions that apply at present and the necessity for doctors in a large number of towns both in Vermont and throughout the country.

The full enrollment figures follow:

	Men	Women	Total
Freshmen	196	132	328

EXPERT HELPS SOLVE PROBLEMS OF VOCATION

The Personnel Bureau is open for consultation questions relating to vocational problems and problems of adjustment to college life. Students who have difficulties of an emotional or nervous nature, are given an opportunity to consult with an expert in mental hygiene.

Doctor C. A. Bonner, of the class of '13 in the University of Vermont Medical College, a consultant in mental hygiene, will be at the University on Friday, October 26. Appointment for private interviews on personal problems can be made, by women through Dean Patterson or Miss Holbrook, by men through Professor Gifford whose office hours are posted on the bulletin board.

HARD SURFACE ROAD ON COLLEGE ROW COMPLETED

City Cooperates With University to Beautify College Campus by Completion of New Three Way Road Along College Row

An example of the progress that is constantly going on at the University of Vermont and hardly less an example of the interest which Burlington, as a progressive community is showing toward the University is quite apparent in the completion of the new street paving in front of the University Buildings.

The original street along University Row was originally constructed something over a hundred years ago and as such was one of Burlington's main streets. At various times several kinds of surface have been used until it has become a question of a more permanent type and the present paving should last at least twenty years with very little attention.

As a base for the street cement was laid with the proper center "crowning" and curbing with proper drainage. On top of this as a wearing surface as well as a protective covering an inch and a half of asphalt has been laid and finished in such a way that water and other effects of the elements cannot reach the cement foundation to cause cracking and wear usually found in a plain concrete road. Although the cost of this type of paving is slightly more than that of plain concrete it has more wearing surface and the general appearance is much better.

New ornamental lights are to be installed the full length of the campus with underground wiring and at present four different types are being tested in use to determine the most economical and the best appearing type. There will be eleven lights in all set at intervals on both sides of the street.

The program of street construction is to continue as a direct road is to be put in from between Williams Science Hall and the Old Mill extending to Converse Hall and between the rows of trees that were originally planted for this purpose. This will straighten out one of the apparent irregularities of the campus and will improve the appearance of the back campus that has been so long neglected. A slight change in the position of the tennis courts will be made to make way for Converse Terrace.

At a later time the path now extending from the northwest corner of the campus to the library will be replaced by a cement walk and then all walks, or at least those that are intended as such, will be modernized and the approach to the campus improved.

The present building program of the University is progressing rapidly with the construction of the new woman's dormitory on South Prospect Street. This will be another fine addition to the campus and will be ready for use next year.

Considering the number of improvements that have been added to the campus in the past few years, all true Vermonters can look forward with pride to the time when we will have one of the finest college campuses in the country which now extends even to the top of Mount Mansfield.

ST. LAWRENCE FROSH MEET KITTENS HERE

Northern New York Team Will Show Real Opposition to Freshmen in Game Tomorrow

YEARLINGS FORTUNATE WITH AMPLE RESERVES

Fulfilling their part of a two-year contract, the St. Lawrence Freshmen will play the Catamount Kittens tomorrow on Centennial Field. Next year the yearlings will have to meet St. Lawrence on the latter's home grounds. The game tomorrow will doubtless be a harder proposition than either of the last two. As yet, Coach Herrick's team has been undefeated and unscored upon, but a real test may come in the meeting with the St. Lawrence Frosh.

For the last two years the Vermont freshmen have set a record in football that any varsity might well envy. The last defeat came October 11, 1926, at the hands of the Dartmouth Frosh. Since that time the Kittens have been held to two ties, one scoreless, by the Clarkson Frosh in 1926 and one 6-6 tie by Fort Ethan Allen last year. In these two years the yearlings have annexed two state titles and appear to be well on their way to a third.

The last two games on the schedule this year are with the Norwich and Middlebury Frosh respectively. Both of these teams have been defeated this season, and it is not unlikely that they will taste the same medicine again when they meet the Vermonters. Norwich had victories from Lyndon, Montpelier Seminary and Spaulding but since then has lost to Vermont Academy and has been tied by Goddard Seminary. Middlebury's freshman eleven was beaten 19-0 by Clark School of Hanover while the Kittens defeated Clark 13-0.

The backfield is the strong point of this year's frosh eleven and the coach has a bunch of good reserves. Jay, Ehnstrom and Powell are fast and clever ball toters, while Winant, the yearling's quarter, is a good pilot.

A week from tomorrow when the Conn. Aggies meet the varsity on Centennial Field, the Kittens play Fort Ethan Allen on the soldiers' grounds.

SOPHOMORE CO-EDS FIX RULES FOR FRESHMEN

"Just wait until Judgment Day," and, "If you don't watch out!" the Sophomore co-eds say these days with a warning shake of the finger.

Mysterious threats of this kind, together with stories that have come down about the fearful meeting in Lecture Hall A of the Medical Building were responsible for the veritable swarm of shiny noses and Kake Walk stockings, which appeared Monday morning. Blondes and brunettes, wind-blown bobs and curly heads are no longer visible, since the frosh are not to stir out without chapeaux.

Life for the Freshmen is as dark as the hue of their hosiery, for the Sophmores appeared to have anticipated Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" when they made movies at the "Maj" taboo on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. Lunching at the Coffee Corner after 9 o'clock is another forbidden pleasure.

Lest the insignificance and humbleness cause the coeds of 1932 to lose all personality the Sophomores can command at their will any Freshman to exercise her wits at dinner with the recital of a comic anecdote or two.

Present Seniors and Juniors can appreciate more than the other two classes the vast change that four years have made in the nature and number of Frosh rules. The trend toward milder hazing is not purely local but national in scope; and is occuring on many campuses besides Vermont. There is, however no change in the attitude toward infringement of the laws, whatever their scope or nature and the merry war bids fair to last as long as there are Freshmen to obey and Sophomores to command.

REV. ADAMS, WATERBURY, LEADS CHAPEL SERVICE

Rev. C. Adams of Waterbury led the Chapel Service, Wednesday morning. He chose for the subject of his talk "Unguarded Boundaries." He emphasized the fact that unguarded boundaries are the best, for where there are no fortresses or guards all is peaceful and there are no suspicions and no uneasiness. Each one looks forward to the time when there will be no outward restraint on his life. As children each one needs the influence of an external power; but as one matures, the force of the outer power becomes less and there is an increase in the influence that comes from within one, or from the unguarded boundary.

Although we heed the advice of the inner voice, our life is not complete until we recognize the necessity of relying on the Highest Power.

HOCKEY TEAM TO HAVE RINK ON BACK CAMPUS

Only Two Men Lost to Club by Graduation—Schedule Now Being Arranged

Plans for a hockey season are now being started contrary to rumors against it. The athletic budget gives no appropriation for this sport. The Vermont Cynic has consented to donate some of its funds so that a hockey season may be made an actuality this year. Appreciation of this donation should be shown by the student body taking an interest in making the season a success.

This year's rink will probably be located on the back campus whereas Shaw's lot in the northern part of the city was used last year. It has been suggested that any work connected with the rink be done by student labor in some such way as the basketball bleachers problem is to be solved this year. Heretofore the rink has been located at some distance from the town and students have shown a lack of interest. A degradation of the sport has resulted. Hockey is one of the fastest and most interesting games to watch, rivalling even that of basketball and atmospheric conditions here at Vermont usually are ideal for the sport.

Manager W. S. Hall is now working on a schedule for this winter. The assistant managers who were chosen from the scrubs last winter are A. Gloria and F. H. Woodard. No information is obtainable as yet as to who will coach the team this year. There are possibilities in "Wink" Winchenbach, last year's captain, and Demaurels, who coached the team two years ago.

The squad suffered the loss of two men by graduation, namely Asheraft and Winchenbach. This leaves much available material in Captain-elect Harry Shurman, Segal, Bassow, Lawrence, Howard, Wood, and Walker. There is new material among the Freshmen undoubtedly.

Professor William Crockett was in Woodstock on October 17. He addressed the Rotary Club at noontime, and the Woman's League of Voters in the afternoon.

ALUMNI LUNCHEON NOVEMBER 3

The annual luncheon and meeting of the New York Alumnae Association of U. V. M. will be held at the Allerton, 57th Street and Lexington Ave., New York City on Saturday, November 3rd, 1928, at 12.30. Dean Marion Patterson will be present and will speak. Matters of importance regarding organization will be discussed with a view to increasing the usefulness of the association particularly to the members of recent classes and a large attendance is looked for. All former women students are welcome. The lunch is $1.25 and reservations should be made to the secretary by November 1. Address Mrs. K. W. Ross, 60 Mackay Ave., Port Washington, N. Y., or telephone her, Port Washington 532.

VERMONT AT UNION COLLEGE TOMORROW

Catamounts in Better Condition for Game at Schenectady—Union Aiming at Vermont After Stinging Defeat by Hobart

PALMER RETURNS AFTER REST OF TWO WEEKS

After a week of steady drill on a defense for the forward pass and an effective running attack the Catamount grid squad will leave tonight for the game with Union College on Alexandria Field, Schenectady, tomorrow afternoon.

Most of the men who were injured against Columbia and Princeton have fully recovered. Captain Palmer who was able to play for only a few minutes in the B. U. game last Saturday will be back at left end after favoring his injuries for two weeks. The remainder of the line-up is expected to be the same as that which started last Saturday.

A new spirit pervaded the workouts of the Union team all this week when Coach Leary put his charges through their hardest practice sessions of the year, stressing the fundamentals of tackling, handling of the ball, and line plunging. Playing as eleven separate units the Union team just collapsed at Hobart last week and it is this situation which Leary has been trying to remedy for tomorrow's contest. Bullard, tackle, is hurt and did not report all week for practice but all the other injured men, Friederichs, Stranahan and Mosher, were in uniform and smashed their teammates in tackling practice as if they had not played at all Saturday.

Two new men discovered in the Hobart game that probably will play against the Green and Gold are Dietz, stocky scrapping sophomore, and Wally Reid, husky tackle. These players made a good showing.

A scrimmage with the freshmen took place Tuesday afternoon and on Wednesday the first team scrimmaged against the substitutes who used Vermont plays.

Neither coaching staff is taking the game lightly as the teams seem fairly evenly matched.

The probable line-up for Vermont: Palmer, le; Kropper, lt; Burstein, lg; Levine, c; A. Scutakes, rg; O'Keefe, rt; Segal, re; Dorey, qb; Halligan, lhb; Robbins, rhb; DeRose, fb.

CO-ED FIELD DAY TO BE HELD NOVEMBER 1

Fall Field Day, the culmination of outdoor work in physical education, will be held November 1, though the second and fifth have been set as alternate days in case of rain spoiling the original plans. On this occasion the finals will be played off in volley ball, tennis and hockey, after which supper will be served at Grassmount and numerals will be awarded.

Women's tennis teams put in considerable practice during the past week and are scheduled to play off the preliminary and semi-final matches this week. In the first round the Juniors will meet the Seniors and the Freshmen will compete with the Sophomores. The finals will form an important part of Field Day.

The volley ball and hockey teams will be announced next Wednesday, selection being based on the playing in the classes the last of this week and the first of next. Team practice will be held the 24th and 25th while Monday is set for the prelims in volley ball and Tuesday for the first hockey games. In case of rain on either of these days the games will take place Wednesday.

Dorothy Cottrell, '29, has been chosen campus manager of volley ball and the following class managers have been selected to work with her: Bertha Klein, '29, Eunice Wilder, '30, Eleanor Wood, '31, and Lillian Mount '32.

To the class winning the championships in volley ball, tennis and hockey will go 10 points toward the all-sports cup. Second places in all sports get 5 points. The cup is now held by the Sophomore class and will be awarded next spring to any class which has shown its superiority by that time.

EXTRA-CURRICULA

As students, little but praise is heard for activities outside of the classroom. The students taking prominent parts in these activities are praised, honored and made to feel superior to students not as fortunate or as gifted. It must be admitted that many lack the ambition and others the chance.

But of a clear sky, an article in last week's The Nation points out activities as an "outstanding sin in our college life—the undergraduate's absorption in triviality." This is claimed by the authors to be their viewpoint after making a survey for the Institute of Social and Religious Research, interviewing 1,100 undergraduates and officers of American colleges. Perhaps they are partially right.

It is apparent, however, that all students are not going to study, eat and sleep. Younger people are generally bestowed with energy to do more strenuous tasks. Playing football requires not only physical exertion but calls into play mind, and tests the metal of the player, develops sportsmanship and coordination with teammates. This is the same with any sport. Does it appear easy to manage a team? Upon becoming a manager, a man can look back at long hours of hard work, rebuffs and disappointments. He had to be genial at all times or his chances would have been very small. Other activities require like fortitude.

To meet with these rebuffs fits a student to face the world on an even basis. At least more even than the rosy, unpractical outlook that one obtains when viewing life solely through books.

We say, offhand, the sin is that more students aren't interested in extra-curricula activities.

BOXING

Boxing is a royal sport. Almost everyone likes to box. Doctor Aldinger, Dean of the Physical Education department, highly approves of it. He agrees that it develops coordination of mind and muscle, self-control, strength, vigor and character. We judge that he and his assistants would really enjoy teaching it. A large number of fellows have asked that a class be formed in which preliminary instruction could be given. Those who were sufficiently interested to continue could train properly, actually get to know the game, and then put on bouts at the smokers. This would certainly draw the students to these affairs, and if the true Vermont Sportsmanship prevailed among the contestants, the morale or cultural standard of the class would in no way be lowered.

As you well know, boxing can be a brutal professional exhibition or a genuine amateur meet. It can degrade or it can uplift. It depends on the men and the sponsors. Vermont men and Vermont supervisors can be relied upon to see that this sport falls in the proper channel, just as they see that football, baseball and basketball fall in their correct places.

The financial outlay would be comparatively small and the beneficial training highly valuable. The physical training department and many of the students would welcome this addition to our scope of athletic activities. Then why not have boxing?

—G. R. N.

There was a meeting of the Grey Friars held in the Marsh Room at 7:15 Thursday evening. This was the first regular meeting of the year. The business which was considered was that of meetings and of activities for the coming year. It was also decided that the initiation of new members would be taken care of in the near future.

Women's Dramatic Club held its first meeting Thursday, October 18. The members met at 3 North College to hear the report of the committee upon plays selected for presentation. Class plays will probably be given before the Christmas holidays. No former dramatic experience is necessary for a part in the plays, and all women are urged to watch for the dates of try-outs.

Campus Comment

Such tactics as G. R. N. employs in his last communication, proceeding as they do from a presumably intelligent college man, are deplorable indeed. His [illegible]matic accusations of misinterpretation and fallacious conclusions, his attempt to assume the rôle of public prosecutor, his personal insinuations and breezy manner of dismissing with a line of ill-tempered abuse whatever argument is beyond him, are tactics to be employed in mud-slinging campaigns, not in the columns of a college newspaper.

Was G. R. N. disappointed that no professor should deem his editorial worthy of consideration enough for even a mild rebuke? Was it this disappointment and chagrin that led him to make his wild insinuations and to repeat, parrot-like, such phrases of the shyster as "Why didn't you read the entire article through?"—the last resorts of the beaten debater?

G. R. N. is offended at my paraphrasing of his sentences to read that students were anxious to attend the classes of the break-giving professor and that they made no objections to long assignments, were students not anxious to attend his classes? Did they make objections to long assignments, even though they came from him? Then what was the use of the whole "break" system? If, on the other hand, they were anxious to attend his classes, and so on, then why quibble over a paraphrase that states the same facts as the original? Because, though it be the same truth, it is a truth from which much more unpalatable conclusions can be drawn than G. R. N. can brook?

Finally, G. R. N. gives himself away. Somewhere in the middle of his letter he speaks of the desirability of "excellent hard-working, unselfish instructors" and then demands:

"Do you not allow merits of professors to determine your interest and application to some small extent?"

Of course I do, G. R. N. But is a professor who constantly gives his students "breaks" necessarily hard-working and unselfish? And if he is does "giving a break"—that is, a higher grade than the student has earned, a dishonest act since it penalizes those students who have earned high grades, yet are rated no higher than the indolent and stupid—does this system produce better students or does it encourage a striving towards as low an intellectual standard as a student can get away with? In your whole letter, G. R. N., so busy have you been slinging abuse and punching the air at random, that you have not answered my indictment of your original assumptions.

The kind of professor that G. R. N. and his ilk really call for is the kind that will give a student a good grade for poor work—whether it be out of the goodness of his heart or to attain a certain type of student popularity.

You hate quitters, G. R. N. So do I, and the professor or instructor who would read your article and then, to attain popularity among the students you represent, would lower his standards and raise his grades is a quitter and a cad. But the student who must rely on "breaks"—honest or dishonest—is the most contemptible quitter of all and the poorest specimen of humanity that anyone can ever seek to defend.

KNIGHTS OF THE GARTER

After complimenting the "Sophs" for their part in the abolishment of the prosaic "frosh rules," I find, on reading last Tuesday's edition of the Cynic, a sentence to the effect that Freshmen must wear garters. Now if garters were a traditional symbol of our lowliness, such as our caps, then all would be well. But since garters cannot in any way, physical or traditional, be placed in juxtaposition, it remains but to doubt the sincerity of their former acquiescence in abolishing the majority of the antiquated "frosh rules."

Methinks it would be better to bring on all the time-worn "frosh rules" than to have our higher classmen declare them abolished, and in the course of the year, declare them in force. For how can we "frosh" but doubt their veracity in the face of their approval of this so-called beneficial rule. We do not doubt but that they mean well, but that is not enough, we, the "frosh," want an ace to be called an ace, and not a joker.

Should the "Soph" show again their former good intentions by abolishing this ancient order of the Garter, then they would again possess that boulder of common sense which can be only opened by the gold key of union and not of fraternal strife.

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

MEMORIES

I'm thinking now about last year,
And principally about the Dorm,
About it's fellowship and cheer—
A Haven from the Sophomore storm.

I'm thinking now about the time
I sat one Sunday in my room.
The Chapel bell began to chime,
I slouched in homesickness and gloom—

I'm thinking now about the fun
We had in Mort's or Johnnie's den.
Those bull-sessions where everyone
Could have his say so time again.

I'm thinking now about Old Doug,
About Old Abe, and all the gang;
'Bout "Dib," the dog with half-breed mug,
Our loud quartets, the songs we sang.

I'm thinking now about the nights
When we stayed up and hit the books.
We found self-pity for our plights
And gave the profs the dirty looks.

You whom the Dorm now shelters tight,
Just get these few words from this rhyme;
If you'll treat Abe and Old Doug right,
You're bound to have a blame good time!

To Barriette

"A worthy woman who can find?"
Is what the Bible asks.
It's harder still to bring that kind
From out their modest masks.
You, Barriette, if but you will,
Can write at greater length.
Then why not give the boys a thrill,
And add to Cynic's strength?
Your efforts far exceed the stuff
That most of us can pour.
Now, don't you think I've said enough?
And won't you write some more?

Several inquiries have reached my oral appendages as to the whereabouts of Red Hook. For the benefits of those who are not well acquainted with the world's most important sections, I publish the following information:

Location: Lower section of Brooklyn, New York.

Climate: Uncomfortable. Wet latitudes.

Precipitation: Men are often seen precipitated from third story windows and from out of swinging doors.

Temperature: Too hot for comfort or safety.

Winds: Mostly hot air.

Humidity: It's not the heat, it's the humidity.

Major land forms: Rough country, plenty of bumps on natives' heads. Duck!

Vegetation: Forest type; shoe trees predominate.

Animal life: Tough gorillas.

Soil: Yes, most everything is soiled.

Economic Activities

1. Agricultural: Raising checks, etc.
2. Pastoral: A few foolish sheep.
3. Memoricultural: They gather the nuts and shell them properly.
4. Besticultural: Mostly jackasses and laughing hyenas.
5. Saxicultural: Mining gold brick stocks.
6. Manufactural: Sawed-off shotguns, pistols, etc.
7. Commercial: They trade blows with one another.

The correlation of these facts should now be comparatively simple. How about it Clint and Pie?

Heroine of Phi Beta Kappa

The second dramatic refusal of a Phi Beta Kappa Key occurred recently when Miss Olga Rubinow, of Philadelphia, a senior at the University of Wisconsin, declined the award.

Her attitude as expressed in her letter to the society is as follows:

"Because I am opposed to any formal honor bestowed on the basis of high grades, which I do not consider a genuine criterion of true scholarship and intellectual achievement, and which I believe is often conferred upon the unworthy as well as the worthy, constantly excluding a large proportion of those worthy who do not happen to excell in grades—I beg to decline election to the Phi Beta Kappa Society."

Friday and Saturday of last week the Vermont State Medical Society met in the Medical Building. Doctor Eddy, the oldest living graduate of U. V. M., attended this convention. The professors of the Medical College took an active part in the two-day program.

The University Research Club met Tuesday night, October 16, in Morrill Hall. The president addressed the club.

"When an officer, one of the personnel of the sorority, one of the perpetuators of its very ideas and ideals is capable of applying such inter-class prejudice to the selection of members, it is time for all eyes to be turned questioningly upon such a body," writes H. P. L. in the New York University Daily News, as he concludes the telling of a rushing incident.

Washington Square has many advantages which Vermont does not possess. Its geographical situation is excellent. Traffic facilities are exceptionally good. The school is one of the most easily reached places in greater New York. Still, any place where keen class prejudice is exhibited is far below the level of our own school in one important respect, the matter of human contact and broad-minded outlook.

FRESHMEN!!

Third open house night is Saturday evening, October 20, from 7.30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Only two more open nights remain, both coming next week. It is expected that a larger number than usual will take advantage of Saturday evening because of no classes to prepare for the next day.

NEWMAN CLUB MEETS AT CATHEDRAL HIGH SCHOOL

"Speed" Denning, Medic '29, and president of the organization, presided at the first meeting of the Newman Club, which occurred Sunday morning in the Cathedral High School gymnasium following a communion breakfast. Older members acquainted the Freshmen, who were well represented, with the purposes of the club, and its program of social events and theatricals. The Reverend Father Brennen who has served as chaplin of the club for several years, is now in Shelburne, and a successor to him will probably be appointed this week.

The other officers of Newman Club are the following: vice-president, Irene Marcotte; secretary-treasurer, Florence Nelson; entertainment committee, Paul Lawrence and Helen O'Neil.

The Dartmouth Outing Club, at its first meeting recently, numbered among its members for the coming year 350 freshmen.

STUDENT DIRECTORY TO BE IN CIRCULATION SOON

Reports have come from the administration offices that the student directory will soon be published and distributed to the students in the University. Copies of the directory will be available in the University Book Store.

The student directory is edited and published each year by University officials for the benefit of students, faculty, and administration officers. It contains a host of valuable information. There is the name, city address, phone number, college department and rank of every member of the faculty of every officer and employee of the University.

The main part of the little directory contains a complete list of all the students enrolled in the University of Vermont. The name, class, course, city address, phone number, and the home address of every student is to be found in this section. The last few pages are devoted to an enumeration of the officers of student organizations and a summary of resident attendance for the year.

To make the directory complete and up to date, F. W. Kehoe, registrar, requests that all students who were unable to fill out completely their information cards at the time of registration and enrollment to hand in the necessary information to Room 5, Medical Building. Also, if there has been a change of address since enrollment, the student should notify the administration officials at the Medical Building. A correction will be a source of convenience to the officials as well as to the students.

New Department at B. U.

The College of Music is the newest department in Boston University opening its doors for the first time Wednesday, September 19.

"The new and insistent demand for more music courses in the colleges comes from the hitherto uninterested man in the street" declares Dean Marshall. "The average citizen who a short time ago was not supposed to care for music of the better sort is now coming to us more and more each day, asking intelligent questions about definite pieces of music. In my opinion the mechanical piano and the good radio broadcasts are in a large measure responsible for the newly expressed desire on the part of everybody to get close to the virility of good music."

The College of Music will offer the degrees of Bachelor of Music and Bachelor of Music Education. Courses in the curricula include training for qualified students on the organ, piano, violin, voice and general music studies.

For many years Yale has been a solitary figure stressing the Fine Arts in the university curriculum but now both the universities of New York and Boston are taking an active interest.

Sophomore Tactics

In the Freshman-Sophomore rush at Western Reserve University the Sophomores scored a complete victory due to their own ways and means. They took the Freshmen into the woods before the mast and removed any excess clothing which would easily come off. The number of each contesting Freshmen was therefore greatly reduced.

VERMONT KITTENS TRIM ST. LAWRENCE

Herrick's Catamount Pups Win Third Successive Victory by Defeating Red Yearlings 6-0

VISITORS DEPRIVED OF TWO CHANCES TO SCORE

Still upholding their reputation, the [illegible] Kittens turned back the [illegible] Lawrence frosh eleven on [illegible] Field, Saturday. It was a fine game to watch as the teams were evenly matched as the score will indicate. The Reds were much stronger than was expected and [illegible] the can of defeat on the [illegible] tails. In the first half especially the St. Lawrence backs repeatedly tore holes in the Vermont line [illegible] took the secondary defense to [illegible] them. Shortly before the first [illegible] ended the yearlings from St. [illegible] threatened to score when [illegible] rushed the ball down to the home [illegible] yard line. It was here that [illegible] quarter failed to use his head [illegible] a forward that was grounded [illegible] the goal which thus gave the [illegible] to the Herrickites on their 20-yard line. After two rushes at the [illegible] Powell punted out of danger. The second quarter found the ball in the center of the field the greater part of the time with both teams fighting [illegible]. However, Vegarra gave the home team a scare when he caught a [illegible] on his own 35-yard line and [illegible] to the goal line only to be [illegible] offside by linesman Whitmarsh. [illegible] was much comment about that [illegible] if almost caused Whitmarsh [illegible] up after the game.

After the second half the Kittens came back strong and it was in this [illegible] that the only score of the [illegible] was made. St. Lawrence booted [illegible] Wilmant who received it on his own [illegible] line and by clever field running scored the points of victory for the Kittens. Powell missed the try [illegible] goal.

From then on the Cantonites tried [illegible] to overcome the lead, but the [illegible] held and the game ended in [illegible]. Wilson, Schumaker, Vegarra, and Welt starred for the losers, with [illegible] Manning, Morse and Winant for Vermont.

QUARTET ANNOUNCED— ADDITIONS TO CHOIR

At a recent meeting of the Glee Club, held in the music building, the following were chosen to comprise the quartet: R. Towne, E. W. Davis, Sheffield and H. E. Goddard. The competition was very keen and it was only after careful consideration had been given all those who tried out that the selection was made.

The Glee Club will make several concert trips. Dates of these trips will be announced in a future issue of the Cynic. Several local concerts will also be given.

The University Choir has added four men to its organization. They are Mr. Dubois, Hurlburt and Towne. Professor Bennett stated that he was sorry to omit many young men and women who have fine voices, as the number in the choir is limited.

BASKETBALL SCHEDULE REACHES COMPLETION

Bertel W. Gustafson, manager of varsity basketball, has completed his schedule for the coming season by obtaining a game with the United States Coast Guard Academy at New London for the only open date, January 5. The schedule will be released as soon as it is approved by the Athletic Council. The shoes for the team have been selected and it seems to be the general feeling that the uniforms used last year were about the best style. The same style will be used this year. The material is a good grade of white cricket cloth.

PROMINENT DEBATERS FOUND AMONG FRESHMEN

Seven Men Make Up Body of Try-outs for Frosh Debate Team—Many Local Men Who Have Had Experience Enter

Seven men, six of them veteran debaters and orators, three of them products of the Vermont Interscholastic Debating League fostered by the University of Vermont, two paricipants in the last National Oratorical Contest, one an outstanding debater in a Massachusetts high school and only one without previous experience along forensic or oratorical lines, constitute a Freshman debating squad from which Coach M[illegible]owers should have no difficul[illegible]ting a team to match the Catamount Sophomores and to carry out the rest of the yearling schedule.

Three men, Fred Householder, Donald Frazier and Peary Berger, all from Burlington High, have been outstanding among State debaters for the last two years. Winston Freer and Paul LaCrosse represented, respectively, St Albans High School and Cathedral High of Burlington in last year's State Oratorical Contest. Allen Eaton was prominent in debating at the Classical High School of Worcester, Mass. Howard Fleming of St. Johnsbury reports no previous official experience.

Householder, for one year a teammate of Lisman of last year's Freshman team, made the varsity debating team at Burlington High two years ago, won every debate but one in a schedule which included the strongest teams in the State and gained a debating scholarship from Vermont. Frazier was captain of last year's Burlington team which took the State championship by winning five debates out of six in the State League. Berger, a teammate of Frazier's, was manager of the team. Both men hold debating scholarships and both placed on the first team picked by the judges at the final debate, Frazier ranking second in the State and Berger third.

Freer won two oratorical scholarships from the University by placing second in the State semi-finals and third in the finals of the Oratory Contest. LaCrosse placed an unofficial third in the semi-finals against some of the strongest opposition in the State.

Eaton has had three years of debating experience at Worcester Classical. He gained the captaincy of the Senior team in the interclass debates there and was manager of and a debater on the High School varsity. In Fleming, in spite of his inexperience, Coach Powers sees some good material which may enable him to make the regular team.

Of Sophomores only two men, so far, are ready to report when Powers issues the first call—George Nelson and Louis Lisman of last year's yearling team which took the Bailey Interclass Debating Cup. Both men are now varsity debaters and members of Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary debating fraternity.

Freshmen who have not yet reported may do so at any time to Coach Powers in the Y. M. C. A. office in the Old Mill. Sophomores interested in debating will have a chance to come out for the class team when Coach Powers issues his first call. It is expected that a three-man debate will decide possession of the debating cup in the Freshman-Sophomore engagement this year. If not enough Sopho

EDUCATORS TO MEET IN BURLINGTON

University to be Host at Annual Meeting of Association of New England Colleges Thursday and Friday

MEETINGS TO BE HELD IN LIBRARY MARSH ROOM

This year the Association of New England Colleges will hold its annual meeting at the University of Vermont. The convention will last for two days with meetings in the morning, afternoon, and evening of Thursday, October 25, and a final meeting on the morning of Friday, October 26. With the exception of Thursday evening, when a dinner will be served at Robinson Hall, the spacious Marsh Room in the Billings Library will be the meeting place of the representatives.

The problems confronting the modern college president and deans will be discussed at the conferences.

The representatives of the various collegiate institutions will usually comprise the president and one or more deans. Such prominent educators as A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University, Daniel L. Marsh, President of Boston University, and Arthur S. Pease, President of Amherst College, will be among those present at the convention.

The meetings of the Association of New England Colleges have been held for many years past, but this is the first time that one has been held at Vermont. It is expected that the students will follow with a great deal of interest the discussion by such prominent educators concerning the major educational problems of the day.

The institutions and their representatives at this meeting are as follows: Amherst College: Arthur Stanley Pease, President, Thomas Cushing Esty, Dean of the College; Boston University: Daniel L. Marsh, President, William Marshall Warren, Dean of the College, Lyman Churchill Newell, Professor of Chemistry; Brown University: Roland George Dwight Richardson, Dean of the Graduate Department, Henry Barrett Huntington, Professor of English; Clark University: Homer Payson Little, Professor of Geology and Dean of the College; Dartmouth College: Craven Laycock, Dean of the College, James Dow McCallum, Professor of English; Harvard University: A. Lawrence Lowell, President, Clifford Herschel Moore, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, Alfred Chester Hanford, Dean of Harvard College; Middlebury College: Llewellyn Rood Perkins, Professor of Mathematics, Burt Alden Hazeltine, Dean of the Men's College; Trinity College: Remsen Brinckerhoff Ogilby, President, Thurman Losson Hood, Dean of the College; Tufts College: George Stewart Miller, Secretary of the Faculty and Assistant Professor of Government and History; University of Vermont: Guy Winfred Bailey, President, Elijah Swift, Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Wesleyan University: James Lukens McConaughy, President, Frank Walter Nicolson, Dean of the University; Williams College: Harry Augustus Garfield, President, George Edwin Howes, Dean of the College; Yale University: Clarence Whittlesey Mendell, Dean of Yale College; Charles Hyde Warren, Dean of the Sheffield Scientific School.

The October issue of the State Agricultural Bulletin is now being distributed and may be had upon request. It is prepared by the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. This issue announces and describes Short Winter Courses in Dairying, 1928-29. Some of the courses offered are, Milk Testing—Cow-test Work, Feeding and Dairy Farm Management, Modern Buttermaking and Soft Cheese Making.

COLLEGE PLAY TRYOUTS!

Tryouts for the College Play sponsored by Wig and Buskin will be held on October 24 and 25 at 4 p. m. in Room 3 North College. Students from all classes are eligible to try out.

FULLER AND NELSON COLUMNISTS FOR CYNIC

Hank Fuller and George R. Nelson were elected columnists at a Cynic board meeting held last Thursday afternoon in Room 3, South College. Fuller is a junior, coming to Vermont from New York, where he worked on several metropolitan papers. He is one of the charters members of Sigma Alpha Chi. Nelson is a sophomore from Stamford, Conn., and has served on the board for over a year and is a member of last year's varsity debating team.

At the same meeting, L. M. Foster '31 of Evansville, and Charles N. Crockett '31 of Burlington, were elected to the board as assistant editors.

MIDDLEBURY MEETS NORWICH SATURDAY

Norwich Top-heavy Favorite to Defeat Blue and White in First State Series Contest of the Year

In less than two weeks all eyes will be turned toward the first state championship game for Vermont when the Norwich eleven will appear on Centennial Field, Saturday, November 3. The state situation seems to be in favor of Norwich, since the Cadets scored against Dartmouth in the first game, tied Providence, and beat Colby and M. A. C., who had previously defeated Middlebury. This gives Norwich a far more impressive record than the records of Vermont or Middlebury. Middlebury has lost to Amherst, Williams, M. A. C., and Springfield, although the Panthers put up a good game against Springfield and held them to a 13 to 7 score.

The first game of the series is on Saturday, October 27, on Sabine Field, Northfield, with the Black Panthers facing the soldiers. The latter, although confident of a repetition of the 1926 and 1927 victories, are not taking things too easily. There are several veterans on the team and they have all had enough experience and training to keep them from becoming overconfident. Last year Norwich beat Vermont by getting the breaks and the soldiers will be trying to force them their way once again. Nevertheless, a reversal of the common opinion would not be surprising.

Waining, who was injured in the Providence game, is back at quarterback and is ready to star again. Poach, the regular tackle, may not be in the state series due to a broken finger, but otherwise, Norwich is intact. Several of last year's Middlebury men have returned, including Guanlaccia and Willis in the backfield and Bedell at guard, all of whom featured for the Blue and White last year.

RUSHING DATES TO BE GIVEN OUT OCTOBER 26

Friday, October 26, is the date set by the Interfraternity Council, at a meeting held at the Phi Delta Theta House last Wednesday evening, for the distribution of rushing dates.

On that day Freshmen and new students will assemble in the Old Mill Chapel at 4 o'clock, where a non-fraternity faculty member will explain the rules and customs in connection with the awards of dates.

No fraternity may have more than one date with any one man. Also, an amendment recently adopted by the Council reads: "Any fraternity found guilty of asking Freshmen their preference of rushing dates before the cards are regularly given out will be causing a minor infraction of these rules and shall be dealt with as specified in Rule Eleven."

The complete revised schedule for the remainder of the rushing season now stands as follows:

Tuesday, October 23—Open House Night.

Thursday, October 25—Open House Night.

Friday, October 26—Rushing dates.

DROP KICK DEFEATS VERMONT GRIDSTERS

Union Successful in Trial for Extra Point After Touchdown in Final Minutes of Play

VICTORY FOR GREEN AND GOLD SEEMED ASSURED

The Green and Gold was rubbed deeper into the dirt Saturday, when Union gave them a drubbing and took the game from under the very noses of the Cats in the last few moments of the game and pushed across the line for the touchdown that evened the score, and kicked the ball neatly between the posts for the winning point, nosing them out 7-6.

It was a well fought battle on both sides, but Union got the final break that counted, and if the breaks did not play the part that they do in a football game, Vermont would be exalting over her first victory, instead of her fourth straight defeat.

The Garnet aggregation played better football than they have played all season. They uncorked a system of lateral passes for the first time this year that completely fooled the Green and Gold eleven. One of them was responsible for the touchdown and Stranahan got away with two others for long gains. Their forwards were working well, too, the Garnet completing four out of six tries, while the Green and Gold made three out of nine good. In the first period the Garnet team held the Catamounts without a first down, while they gathered in three for themselves. Union also gained more distance than the Vermonters, and made a total of nine first downs, eight for the Vermonters. Stranahan did the best work for the Garnet team on the offensive, while Frederick, Houson and Finnegan also showed some good work.

Scutakes, Donnelly and "Tim" Halligan got in some good work for the Green and Gold. Halligan went like a whirlwind in the third quarter, and was a decisive factor in gaining Vermont's touchdown. He made several good gains on line bucks, and gained some long passes for other gains of ten yards or so. Donnelly had the distinction of conveying the ball across the line for the first score made by the Green and Gold in this season. Levine played his usually good game at center.

The Catamounts made their bid for victory in the third quarter when they marched fifty three yards for a touchdown. Donnelly started off with a line buck that netted one yard, and Halligan received a pass from Scutakes that brought ten yards more. Attempts to crash through the Union line failed, and Donnelly shot another pass to Halligan, who was brought down on the twenty-yard line. Tim made six yards more through the line, and De Rose carried the ball to the one-yard line. Donnelly carried the ball through center for the touchdown. Robbins failed to kick the goal.

Union won the game in the last minute and a half of the game when a lateral, Finnegan to Stranahan, gave the Garnet seventy-four yards, the longest run of the game, and placed the ball on Vermont's ten yards. Mosher was sent in for Nitchman, and reeled off six yards more, and a pass, Finnegan to Stranahan, placed the ball behind the line. Finnegan booted the ball between the posts for the winning point.

The game was Union's first victory and Vermont's fourth defeat, so it can be seen that the teams were of fairly even rating. Most of the experts predicted that Vermont would be victorious. All that can be said is that the Catamounts will have to get looping if they want to turn in a victory this year.

The line-up follows:

Union		Vermont
Engle, l. e.		l. e., Segal
Bullard, l. t.		l. t., Kropper

"The Fighting Catamounts"

Again the score of a Vermont football game has come back home [illegible] against the Green and Gold is on the wrong side of the fence.

On every football schedule, regardless of what school it belongs to, certain games are supposed to be set-ups. Vermont is supposed to have such games on its schedule. However, the set-ups have been turned into up-sets. Against such teams as Columbia and Princeton the Green and Gold is regarded as a loser before the game starts. But when the "Fighting Catamounts" are forced to take a licking from Union it's time they stopped playing football and took up knitting or croquet as varsity sports.

At the start of the season Vermont fans were pleased to learn that Captain Rattan was to be the new varsity football mentor. For the past two years Captain Rattan has turned out freshman elevens that have been a credit to the University of Vermont. His teams were known for their wonderful fighting spirit and thorough knowledge of the game.

If he was able to obtain these results from green freshmen it stands to reason that he should be able to do the same with men (or women?) who have already been coached by college coaches. However the expected results have not come true. Why? Because the boys are laying down on the job. They seem to have the don't care attitude. How did they look against Boston University? Good until B. U. scored on them and then what happened—they simply quit flat.

The writer had the pleasure of watching the Middlebury-Springfield game last Saturday. During the first half Springfield obtained two touchdowns on breaks, one a fumble, another an intercepted pass. Did Middlebury lay down? I'll say they didn't, they came right back for more and they gave Springfield the licking of their life the second half. Springfield came up to Middlebury with 40 men—more than Coach Beck of Middlebury has had out all season. During the second half Springfield used three (3) complete teams in an effort to stop the Blue and White onrush and only time saved them from a possible tie or beating.

When the "Fighting Catamounts" have such spirit they will win football games even if the opposition is good but not until then.

It also has been said that the players do not play as good when somebody they do not like is playing beside them. It is the opinion of the writer that a football field is no place for petty grievances. When a man comes to college it is time he got over his childhood tricks and became broad-minded.

It is our intention to present news as accurately as possible. But mistakes will occur—and while always inexcusable—mistakes on a college paper at this time of the college year are almost unavoidable.

It is also our intention, if we are able to do so, to improve the Cynic. Toward this end we invite communications. We ask for criticism—but we ask, also, that it be constructive and cooperative.

For we believe that only cooperation will hasten the realization towards a greater University of Vermont, and that realization should be the aim of all of us.

Campus Comment

G. R. N. vs. L. L.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

The argument, if there really was one, between G. R. N. and L. L. was at first quite easy to laugh at, but now it has gone to the point of clouding my sense of humor by their home-made fog. Possibly one or both have gained membership to Tau Kappa Alpha and have taken this opportunity to develop supposed forensic abilities with confidence and powers of misinterpretation as their only source of statements. If that be it, then their motive is plausible but its effects are definitely uncommendable. Each admits that the other is throwing mud while observations indicate that the mud has solidified to boulders as the tossing increases over the back yard fence that knows no neighborliness.

This column is for campus comment and as such it should not give attention to any undesirable, seditious influence. It should not be used to rejuvenate scandal nor to discredit a professor. The latter task is the privilege of University authorities whose rank is higher than that of a Sophomore. Among our prospective undergraduates you have made possible the impression that our campus is the lurking place of professors who give "breaks" and have completely messed the whole affair by conflict of definitions.

A "break" constitutes credits and favors both deserved and undeserved depending upon your honest effort and personality used in the attainment of them. You argue of "breaks" because of jealousy. You perhaps lack the personality to secure the undeserved or "favored breaks." I rather hope that you argue because of a possibility that your professors have failed to see your brilliance as you see it. Forget it boys. Console yourselves with the reminder that many traits of human nature are permanent and some of them undesirable. One of these traits is favoritism or the "giving a fellow a break" habit. It is a consistent element in the composition of human nature the world over—a pardonable sin invested in man whether he be a laborer, student, professor, lawyer or president of our country. All professors are glad to give you an "even break" deserved by your work, but it's up to your application of the survival of the fittest principle to make them, as being mere men, give you a "favored break" through tactics and personality. This latter ability is the joy of but a few and, regardless of how magnetic, it is not recognized by all professors.

In closing my attempt to appease the verbal storm in which both G. R. N. and L. L. were tossed about, I beg to suggest that a little more censorship be applied to copy proposed for this column. Let's discuss and work at reformations among ourselves and publicly comment only upon the successes obtained. I wonder if we appreciate all the developments and improvements going on about us? Here is a source of favorable comments.

President Bailey is heading a program of silent progress the results of which will speak louder than words. I nominate G. R. N. and L. L. as a committee of two to use their powers of expression to give the University officials a "break" by thanking them for construction evidences so obviously started in the interest of the student body. Thank you.

"Teddy Bear."

To the Editor of the Cynic:

While in the Cynic office the other day an important and qualified member of the staff told me that this controversy over a previous editorial—A Break—was tending to deteriorate the publication. I think he's right. Upon reading L. L.'s first comment on that editorial I realized that an answer would be inappropriate. Editorials should not be answered; they are not answered on the best newspapers, according to Ed Howe, the well-known journalist. Yet something told me that it would be unfair to the instructor involved to allow such an article to go unchallenged. I excuse myself for the second and last time on these grounds.

There is no need to rehash the argument in question. It stands, as it should, on its own merits and defects. The right of opinion is open to all; critical opinion especially is to be welcomed. However, criticism should be carefully phrased and well based. Issues should not be repeatedly misconstrued and the choice of adjectives should be judicious. Try these few simple rules sometime, won't you, L. L.?

I expected a reply, knowing your spirit and qualifications as a debater. But not knowing you personally I didn't anticipate your procedure and language. I thought the general comment resulting from the phrasing of your first article would in some small measure instruct you as to future procedure. Evidently it has not. Moreover, your violent outburst strongly reminds me of the style of speech employed by Senator Heflin of Alabama.

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

THE BULL SESSION

The Bull Session is here and it's here to stay. It takes up much of a student's time; it even interferes in no small measure with his scholastic achievements, but it's here to stay. Every one likes to get in on one, and once you're in you're set for some time. That's the funny thing about a Bull Session. Before you start one you never realize how much you have to say on such a wide variety of subjects. Just when you're ready to break it up someone remembers some important matter that has not been treated with the consideration it deserves. Result? Another Bull Session.

But they're somewhat valuable and instructive. For not only do you get the latest one about the travelling salesman from Nebraska, but politics, religion and school life receive much attention as well. I'm certain that Herb and Al would be extremely surprised at some of the dirt and merit uncovered in Bull Sessions and attributed to them.

No other course of instruction at the University, requiring the same amount of time, embraces such a wealth of subjects and material. You start with the League of Nations, turn to the coming presidential election, jump to prohibition, receive a few jokes composed at the expense of those individuals who imbibe too freely, swing onto a discussion of this or that professor, branch out on studies in general, flay and defend the football team for its poor showing, fight over the respective merits of football and baseball; and the clock strikes twelve.

What have we accomplished? Well, the hesitant and timid have spoken without hesitancy and timidity, the forward student has refrained from monopolizing the conversation, a multitude of subjects has been treated and much time has been consumed. Worthwhile? Well, what do you think? Let's have a Bull Session on it!

As I write this I'm thinking about the Vermont football team and it's impending battle with Union College at Schenectady. As we see it, they ought to win. 'Bout time they got hot and found out what it's all about. So far, the scoreboard shows something like this: Vermont 0, Opponents 95. Much of the sum total of the scores made by our opponents may be excused. But somehow 95-0 doesn't look so good whether we read it by lamplight or electricity. Think they'll come through tomorrow. Hope so.

Have been following with some interest the discussion in the Cynic re the advisability of the sale of cigarettes at the Coffee Corner. Sounds like good dope. If you smoke, what difference does it make to the school where you purchase your leading brand? Smoking is permitted; it isn't regarded as a particularly vicious habit, and one often runs short of the nefarious weeds while attending classes. Supply rests in some measure upon demand. Let's demand our butts.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

Those in the habit of reading the Campus Comment in the Cynic have probably followed the recent series of bombastic statements with some interest and a great deal of disgust. The articles have degenerated from a mere personal, though childish, opinion by two people into a kiddish throwing of clinging, ill-smelling mud back and forth at not only the ideas of the men but their personal qualities as well. From the opinions expressed about these men no one could form or maintain a favorable impression of whatever merits they possess. The details of this slander contest are not worthy of repetition, suffice it to say that both L. L. and G. R. N. act like small boys attempting to improve their vocabulary of naughty words under the guise of supposed debating ability. I am sure that the student body would be much more interested in watching them fight out their differences with boxing gloves than for them to resort to airing their injuries in this column.

The occurrence of this disgraceful type of Campus Comment by members of the Cynic Board itself seems to bring forth the question of what the column should mean. By all means let this column be devoted to the comment on things approved and disapproved by the students but never let it become a column of slanderous remarks on a subject of no general interest. It is articles of this nature that encourage student and faculty censorship.

—F. A. S.

A senator isn't always a gentleman. A student isn't always a gentleman. But it's indeed deplorable when a student continually refuses to countenance gentlemanly tactics. It places him in his proper category. Don't you think so, L. L.?

FEW BLUESTOCKINGS MEET AT THETA HOUSE

"Bluestockings," the women's literary society, held its first meeting of the year, Thursday evening, October 18, at the Kappa Alpha Theta House. The president, Dorothy Strong, '29 presided. As a quorum was not present, no important business was transacted.

Those who wish to participate in the contest for membership should put their contributions in the Grievance box, below the Student Union board in the "Y" room. Entries of short stories, poems, or essays will be considered and must be handed in within four weeks.

The next meeting of the society will be held at the Theta House, Friday evening, November 2. Catherine Bassett, '29, will be in charge. A play will be read.

DRAMATIC SOCIETIES PICK ONE OF THREE PLAYS

Three plays are under consideration by the Wig and Buskin and Masque and Sandal committee appointed to choose a play for presentation in early December. Devils' Disciples and You Never Can Tell are two of Shaw's well-known works which appeal to the members of the committee. The former is a tragedy and the latter a comedy. The last of the three is Admiral Crichton by Berry.

A joint meeting of the two dramatic societies was held in Room 3, North College, Monday afternoon, October 22, to hear the report of the committee and make a final selection of a play. The committee on plays was composed of R. T. Krogh '30, chairman, B. W. Gustafson '29, A. D. Butterfield '31, Marion Backus '29, Annette Rosenberg '30, and Dorothy Cottrell '29. Results of this meeting were too late to be published in this issue of the CYNIC, but will be announced later.

Try-outs for parts in the play will be held Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, October 24 and 25, in Room 3, North College at 4 P. M. Judges chosen for the occasion are Professors A. B. Myrick, of the Romance Language Department, J. T. Metcalf of the Psychology Department, and W. E. Aiken of the English Department. All of the above-named judges are exceptionally well qualified for their task, having a great deal of knowledge and experience along dramatic lines. Anyone is eligible to try out for the play.

The Dopefiend

NANI GLUCAS

Well once more the Green and Gold is dragged in the dirt of defeat. The alibi is that Union had a break. It seems that when playing Vermont however the other teams always get the breaks. However, it was not the breaks half as much as it was poor football on the part of the Catamounts. Is it the coach? Decidedly no. Is it the lack of material? Of course not. Is it the lack of grit and fight? You're right. That is the common idea of the majority of people that have seen the Cats play, they are licked from the start.

The line is like tissue paper and the backfield men get in each other's way. They are ragged, weak on defense and worse on offense. Many is the time that they are caught sound asleep on forward passes as was evident in the last two contests. They were caught flatfooted. There is no snap and no teamwork. They are ragged and slow in lining up and then they are at a loss of what to do or if they do try to complete a play it is only about half done. Offside play is losing much ground for the Cats, also several 15 yard penalties being imposed Saturday.

Dopesters picked the Cats to triumph Saturday and they very seldom pick things unless they have something to base their opinion on. So Vermont must have something, but it is yet to be seen. There seems to be two football players on the squad and the rest would do better at playing squash. The only men that have really shown any worth are Segal and Halligan. The latter is a great forward pass receiver and not a bad broken field runner, and the former is a darn good defensive end, and Levine is the only other showing anything, but I don't see why the rest should make their appearance on the field at all—unless for the sake of being seen in public with a uniform on.

Norwich gained another victory Saturday, trouncing M. A. C. 18-6. The soldiers have a remarkable offensive and defensive team and are heading for a state title. They have a strong aerial attack and this Coane is one of the sweetest ends that the State of Vermont will see for some time. Middlebury, however, is out to dispute the cadets' right and although they haven't a heavy team, they have a fighting team and that counts a h of a lot.

Nothing more is necessary except that Conn. Aggies comes here to play next Saturday and they have a strong outfit. They were held to a scoreless tie by Rusty Yarnall's eleven Saturday, which gives a great deal of praise to "Rusty," as the Nutmeg Staters have one of their best teams in years.

There is quite a bit of discussion, especially among the Frosh, as to what is wrong with our team. Well boys they're from Missouri and the only way to make them believe that you have got the stuff is to get out there and show them, so what d'ya say, let's go. When you fight they'll all fight and stick with, but the minute you lay down their confidence is gone. For the sake of Old Vermont, let's have it.

Several good men are making themselves outstanding on the Frosh eleven. Probably the most all-round man is Powell, but there is another who is giving him a close run. That Kitten is Morse who holds down an end position. Several of his boots Saturday reminded us of Capt. Jack Smith who used to raise them for 60 yards. Others who have been showing good form are Winant, Manning, Bedell, Collins and Brown.

DEBATERS! ATTENTION!

A meeting of the candidates for both the Sophomore and Freshman debating teams is called Wednesday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Old Mill Chapel. All men from these classes interested in either class or varsity debating should report at that time.

Sailors Beg Master Mariner for Favorite Pipe Tobacco

Larus & Bro. Co. Maldon, Mass.
Richmond, Va. March 10, 1928
Dear Sirs

I have been a Master Mariner for many years, and as a general rule all seafaring men smoke a pipe. I have tried about all the different brands of tobacco on the market, and in my estimation, there is not one make of tobacco that will compare with Edgeworth Slice for a good, cool, long smoke. Sailors would come to me and say "Capt., be sure to put in a good supply of Edgeworth when you fill up the canteen." That speaks for what the average sailor thinks of Edgeworth.

I retired from the sea six years ago, and the largest grocery dealers in Boston keep me supplied with this wonderful smoke. I take great pleasure in boosting it to my friends.

Very truly yours,
(signed) Capt. C. E. Kenney

A HISTORY OF THE MUSEUM

(1) Powell, '29

Part III

Mollusca. The collection of shells in the Museum is large and well represents this great group of animals. There are many thousand specimens and over three thousand species. Into the three families which have some sort of a shell there are some that are without this covering. These are represented in the collection by some models.

There is space in the cases for only a part of the whole collection and we see therefore of the shells only selected specimens. Each of these represents all the shells which physically, mostly all the main subdivisions of the group.

The families of sea shells that are particularly well represented are the Cones, Cowries, Olives, Harpes, Volutes, Murices, Turbos, and there are nearly as fine sets of many others some of the species are very valuable as for instance the cabinet cones, many of which would be worth in gold and of which we have a fine large specimen. In many respects the larger number of shells are from salt water, where the greater number of the mollusks live. But there are also many of them that live on land or in fresh water. Of these especially of the land species, we have a fine series which crowds one case to overflowing and many more are stored in drawers. Though less beautiful than the marine forms as a rule, some of the land shells are gaily striped or blotched.

The whole collection as it is now made up has grown during past years by numerous additions to the really good old collection. As fortunately, each of the principal additions had some important peculiarity of its own, it not merely increased the sum total of the college collection but gave completeness and symmetry by supplying deficiencies.

There have been many gifts of shells in small number but the great additions are three. First, and in some respects most important, came the entire collection of Professor G. W. Benedict, given by his sons. This contained not only some thousands of shells but what is very valuable for educational purposes, a large number of sections of various species which show the otherwise concealed internal structure. A few years later Hon. L. E. Chittenden gave a large case of shells. This collection is especially rich in Panama and Pacific coast species and also in Vermont shells. Then in 1895 the family of Dr. W. C. Hickok gave his large and fine collection. This is especially rich in tropical land shells and in large and fine specimens of many of the salt water forms.

The old collection and these three just named, with lesser gifts, constitute together a mass of material which is probably not to be equaled in scientific value by any collection outside of the very large museums of the country.

Echinoderms.--To the ordinary museum visitor the case containing the Echinoderms will not be very attractive, but no group of equal rank is of greater interest to the zoologist. It is a strange and archaic group, reminding us often of fossil forms long since extinct. Many of the species included in the family are very unlike each other in appearance and only by careful study of the anatomy can the true position of this or that form be determined. Certainly no animals of the same group are more unlike than the sand dollar and the sea egg, or the sea slug and the starfish, and wholly unlike all the rest when superficially examined are the crinoids.

Beginning with these latter, which are the lowest of the group, we find five excellent specimens. Five is a small number, but the time has not long gone by when only the very largest museums possessed a single specimen. These are the lingering descendants of forms most abundant before the coal period, but rare since and now most are only obtained in very deep water by a chance haul of the dredge. They resemble plants much more than they do those animals with which we are familiar and they are altogether quiet and, when studied, very interesting. Then come their next of kin, the star fishes, usually very symmetrical five-parted creatures, but occasionally one species or another seems to have taken a side leap and developed something quite unlike the type. It may be noticed in passing that dried starfish do not by any means do justice to the living animal. Many when alive are bright in color and graceful in movement, but in drying their beauty is mostly lost. The sea urchins are more attractive and some of the shells of these are really elegant.

OVER TWO-THIRDS OF DEAN WASSON MEMORIAL FUND HAS BEEN RAISED

Money Goes to Endow Room at Mary Fletcher Hospital for Use of Women Students

More than two-thirds the amount which has been set as a goal for the Dean Wasson Memorial Fund has been raised, according to a statement from Miss Marian Way, '23, of South Prospect Street, who is chairman of the drive. The original aim was to raise $15,000 with which to endow a room at the Mary Fletcher Hospital for the use of women students when ill. Already $11,770 has been pledged, the women's organizations on the campus contributing $1,500 of this amount.

At the present time there is some discussion of building an infirmary on the Redstone property and devoting the Memorial Fund to that purpose. The decision as to whether a room at the hospital shall be endowed after the goal is reached, or the money saved as a nucleus for a college infirmary, rests with the trustees of the fund.

Copies of Dean Wasson's book, "Sonnets and Lyrics," have been sold at the book stores for several years now. The profit from the sales has gone to the Memorial Fund. In order to advance nearer the $15,000 mark, this year, the committee will sponsor a sale of Christmas gifts. The Vermonters' Creed, which was composed by Mrs. Wasson, will soon be on sale in motto form at the University book stores.

FROSH AND SOLDIERS CLASH TOMORROW

7th Artillery Represents Fort in Annual Contest—Frosh Will Try to Surpass Record of Last Year's Team

Striving to uphold the record established so far this season the Frosh football team will travel to Fort Ethan Allen tomorrow afternoon to meet the 7th Field Artillery team. There are two other teams at the fort but this one was the Kittens after an elimination contest among the three teams which was won by the artillery.

The artillery has practically the same line-up as the one that met the Freshmen last year. At that time the score was a tie, 6-6. The two teams have met no common foes so the outcome is in doubt, with the Green and White seemings a slight favorite by virtue of their splendid record. Coach Derrick has developed a team that can play with their backs against the wall as was the case last week. It is a team that makes up for its weaker offense by supreme defensive fight.

Several of the Frosh were badly shaken up in the strenuous St. Lawrence game but they are expected to be in shape tomorrow. Pelofsky who received a badly damaged face is the only one who has not yet fully recovered. Smith, a giant tackle, and Juliberto, the regular centre, are expected to start again after a forced rest of two weeks.

The probable line-up of the Freshmen:

Morse	le
Bowers	lt
Pelofsky	lg
Juliberto	c
Collins	rg
Smith	rt
Bedell	re
Weisant	qb

CO-EDS CHOOSE CLASS VOLLEY BALL TEAMS

Class volley ball teams have been chosen as follows: Seniors, Dorothy Wheatley, Catherine Bassett, Frances Hawley, Lois Fiske, Marion Everest, Margaret Corbin, Laura Smith, Esther Cowan and Bertha Klein with Edna Shaw, Dorothy Cottrell, and Beatrice Hopkins as substitutes. This is almost a veteran team and all its members are active in other sports.

The Junior nine is composed of the following members: Grace Crofton, Harriet Householder, Margaret Perry, Lois Burns, Clarissa Peters, Helen Peaslee, Helen Martin, Eunice Wilder, Elizabeth Miller and as substitutes Dorothy Colton, Hester Rogers, and Edna Sargent. This is another case of veterans in the past, which augurs well for a strong team this fall.

The Sophomore team has been announced as follows: Gertrude Bingham, Caroline Brandle, Vera Chadbourne, Frances French, Virginia Goodrich, Harriet Johnstone, Georgina Lee, Helen Taylor, and Eleanor Wood. The subs are: Esther Wheeler, Evelyn Slayton, and Flora Remillard. Several changes from last year's line-up are noted, but all players are experienced and will put up a good scrap.

The following girls form the Freshman team: Winifred Graham, Doris Humphries, Jessie Minckler, Marion Pratt, Beatrice Parkhill, Katrina Smith, Elizabeth Smith, Charlotte Wood and Lillian Mount. Their substitutes are Helen Galahan, Ruth Forest, and Florence Cross. The Freshmen, however, assure us that these subs are no good.

The first year outfit, who have a fine record to their credit, there coaches' word that 1932 will be a contender for honors on the floor.

Miss Sanderson, a missionary from Japan is scheduled to speak on her experiences at four o'clock, Sunday, in Ira Allen Chapel.

VACANCIES IN W. A. A. FILLED BY ELECTIONS

Dorothy Dailey, '30, is vice-president of W. A. A. and Mildred Whitney, '29, chairman of the Health Committee as a result of the elections held Saturday and Monday.

Dorothy Dailey is to take the place of Doris Kibbe who is studying in Europe this winter. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega fraternity and has been prominent in tennis and basketball during the past three years.

Mildred Whitney, better known as "Twink," fills the office left vacant by Harriet Puffer, who transferred to Simmons. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity and has been keenly interested in all phases of college life.

Thursday and Friday voting for W. A. A. editor took place. This is a new office and involves the duty of regularly corresponding with a national magazine on Women's Athletic Organizations. The candidates were Phoebe Flint, '30, Elizabeth Hager, '29, and Mary Turner, '29. The outcome of this election will be announced next week.

ETA SIGMA PHI MEETS AT HOME OF PROFESSOR

Honorary Greek Society Entertained by Professor and Mrs. S. E. Bassett Tuesday Evening

Professor and Mrs. S. E. Bassett entertained the members of Eta Sigma Phi, the honorary Greek fraternity, Tuesday evening at their home on South Prospect Street. In spite of the inclement weather, quite a large number was present.

Gladys Kone, '29, president of the chapter, opened the meeting. At this time Virginia Goodenough was elected to serve as reporter to the national magazine, the Nuntius, and Susan Howard was installed as vice-president of the society by Professor Bassett. Initiation service was conducted for Professor Eugene Pooley, assistant in the Greek and Latin departments, and for Hazel D. Ladd, '30, of Richmond Hill, N. Y.

Professor Linsley, of the Latin department, a member of Alpha Epsilon chapter at Lehigh University held the undivided attention of the chapter with an interesting talk on "Roman Private Life in General." Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Bassett.

Last year attention was directed especially to Greek subjects. The program committee announced that it had decided to alternate Greek and Latin interests this year, since the club is a classical society and should include both.

ARIEL ASSIGNMENTS FOR PICTURES IS ANNOUNCED

Most of the groups for the 1930 Ariel will be taken Sunday afternoon and evening. Unless otherwise announced the schedule will be run off as printed below. INTERESTED FENCERS PUSHING SPORT HARD

The Vermont fencing team is again getting under way, with considerable interest shown, and new candidates turning out from the Freshman class. A schedule of at least four matches will be arranged.

At a meeting last Friday, Levio Calcagni, '29, was elected to captain the team, and Don Chamberlain, '29, was chosen manager. These two men, with Musgrove, '30, went to Montreal on Saturday and with the aid of Dr. Aldinger selected and purchased new equipment for the team, including foils, gloves, and masks.

No appropriation has been voted by the Athletic Council, but funds have been secured from President Bailey to finance this sport. The men are handicapped somewhat in having no coach, but even so they hope to put up a strong team against their opponents, with the coaching of veteran members Chamberlain and Calcagni have been bouting for four years, and the others can profit by their experience. Fencing classes are held on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at four o'clock in the gym annex.

The four scheduled matches are two each with Norwich and Montreal A. A. A., and others may be arranged later.

The presence of any additional candidates will be appreciated, and it is hoped that much interest may be shown in the home matches.

PEP RALLY BEFORE NORWICH GAME

In place of the customary smoker Key and Serpent is engineering a pep rally for the Norwich game to take place on the evening of Friday, November 3, as the first of the Key and Serpent events which will include the game on Saturday afternoon and the dance the same evening.

All students, both men and women, will assemble at the gym to march down-street in a body. The parade will be lighted by flares from the gym to City Hall Park. At the park the parade will disband, all students gathering about the bandstand. The events generally on the program of a smoker will then be in order—smokes will be passed out from the bandstand, speakers will be scheduled and cheers and songs will be on the program.

Key and Serpent is now negotiating with city authorities for the use of the park and is working on the program which it plans to make as complete and as pep-raising as possible.

W. C. DURANT OFFERS BIG PRIZE OF $25,000

Award Made to Person Who Devises Best Plan to Make Eighteenth Amendment Effective

Sometime ago it is to be remembered that W. C. Durant the automobile manufacturer who has won and lost millions on the market offered a prize of $25,000 for the best plan to make the Eighteenth Amendment effective.

Durant declared that law observance was the country's chief problem. The flagrant violations of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution by big business men were examples of lawlessness. He believes that in giving such a large prize the best minds in the country will be summoned to devise the most effective plan.

The communication of Durant is printed below.

"The first duty of a good citizen is to obey the law. The highest law of the land is the Constitution. Part of the Constitution is the Eighteenth Amendment. It was put into the Constitution by an overwhelming vote passed by Congress and ratified by the legislatures of forty-six of the forty eight states. Action contrary to the law is a crime and the offender is a criminal.

For the widespread disobedience to the liquor law as embodied in the Constitution, the business leaders of the country are very largely responsible. Had our business leaders frowned upon instead of encouraged bootlegging, had they observed the law and encouraged its observance, had they raised their voices in protest of public and private violations, had they used their money and their influence to obtain a fair trial for one of the best measures ever adopted by this or any other country—in other words, if they had supported the Constitution of the United States—our public officials (including our judges), our children, our servants, our employees, and the thinking public generally would without question have caught the spirit of law observance—a very necessary requisite if we are to have a safe and permanent government.

Bootleg liquor has become the most widely advertised factor in the social life of men whose names are synonymous with success, wealth and power in their communities. The contagion of their lawlessness spreads through the entire population. This means impairment of the carefully built safeguards of personal and property rights. Business leaders, who have the largest stake in law observance, set the example of law defiance.

Competitive offerings must be typewritten and not to exceed two thousand words in length and must be submitted prior to December 1 to the Prize Committee on Eighteenth Amendment, Room 2401 Fisk Building, New York City.

Prize will be awarded and paid December 25."

CATAMOUNTS FACE STRONG AGGIE TEAM

Connecticut Eleven Plays Varsity at Centennial Field Tomorrow

BLUE AND WHITE CLUB YET TO BE DEFEATED

The Catamounts have been growing claws behind locked gates. Coaches Rattan and Tully have been hard at work on the men and they themselves have been furiously plowing up the mud in a series of secret practices. Flood lights have been streaming down over Centennial Field, etching out the drilling men against the sodden turf, for hours after sundown.

Three secret sessions a week have been used for some time. And these sessions are showing results. Practice is snappier. Plays are run off more smoothly and the team is running like a Twentieth Century Limited. And how Rattan and Tully are driving! They've got the old throttle wide open. The Catamount Special is burning up the track in perfect shape.

Tomorrow at 2.30 the re-clawed Catamount machine will clash with the Connecticut Aggies. This team is one of the strong outfits of New England. It has come through four contests with a clean slate. Two of the engagements ended in scoreless ties. The other two were fields of glory for the Farmers from the Nutmeg State. They sunk the United States Submarine Base mud divers to the tune of 13-0 on the underseamen's home field. They showed the Methodists a fine brand of football dogma when they subdued the Wesleyan eleven by the score of 32-0. The two no-decision jousts of the Aggies were with the Pine Tree Boys from Orono and the big Cloth and Thread Makers at Lowell Textile.

McComb and Groat made a fine showing for the Farmers in their last contest, the Lowell game. These boys are a pair of speedy backs. These shifty warriors will require—and get—a lot of attention.

Just who will be numbered among the enraged Catamounts when they trot out for the second home game of the year has not been divulged.

Some important changes have been made in the first string line-up. Charley Mace has been moved up from the backfield to a wing berth. Segal will probably hold down the other end assignment. Tex Nelson, who played the full game at tackle against Union, will probably be Rattan's choice for the same job tomorrow. Art Burbman has been shifted from tackle to guard. Frank O'Keefe has been moved from the pivot position to quarter. Al Sirois, who was in the backfield against Union, replacing Charlie DeRose for a short time, may see action in tomorrow's contest.

Robinson and Palmer are still nursing injured legs. The boys may be in shape to play tomorrow but neither have been able to get into scrimmage during the past week. Halligan has been held out of practice because of minor injuries but may be in there showing the old fight tomorrow afternoon.

The Blue and White boasts of several stars and are strong in the aerial department of the game; this being greatly responsible for their defeating Wesleyan. Flydal the Nutmeg's stocky fullback is a great ground gainer. Knaut and Capt. Sayers are their best bets on the defense. In Ryan they have a flashy and heady quarterback whose knowledge of the game is thorough.

As yet there is some doubt as to the line-up of the Cats but C. A. C. will probably use the following men: Wilson le, Hawkins lt, Colacurcio lg, Knaut c, Gilman rg, Sayers rt, Tombari re, Ryan qb, Fisher rhb, McCombe lhb, and Flydal fb.

DEBATERS! ATTENTION!

GO IT CATAMOUNTS!

Connecticut Agricultural College visits Burlington, tomorrow, with a record of no defeats. They are considered a strong team. Vermont, as an exponent of football, has to look forward to a first victory. We believe in our team. We believe they are capable of fighting to the last minute. We know they have their faults, their discouragements, their hardships. We also know they have the same red blood that beat Middlebury against great odds, in 1925.

Tomorrow we expect to see the same team that has played the first four games of the season, but we expect to see more determination to win, a machine that will yield only when every component part is completely wrecked. Is it too much to expect this? Our team must live up to its name—THE FIGHTING CATAMOUNTS.

Before this time home games were marked by smokers the night before the game. The team goes to battle the "Aggie" team from Connecticut, tomorrow, with no indication of student sympathy. They have had criticism poured in from all quarters, and it would seem as though they were deserted. They represent the University of Vermont. While Vermont has a football team it is up to every man and woman in college to make it their business to be at the home contests, and to cheer to the last gun. The team needs the support! Vermont needs the spirit! Vermont needs the game! Let's show the world U. V. M. is still on the map!

In adjacent columns we have published accounts favoring both presidential nominees of the two major parties. The authors of these articles have spent much time and thought in writing reasons why they favor one or the other nominee. Students who have not followed newspaper accounts of the political battle, that has been going on since nomination time, may form an opinion from these articles.

President Guy W. Bailey has approved the budget for a fencing team. Training will begin shortly in the gymnasium. The Physical Training Department wishes to announce that cards of all Freshmen and Sophomores, who have not yet made arrangements for Physical Training, will be turned over to the Dean on October 26. In order to avoid trouble arrangements should be made immediately.

Wendell P. Roy, graduate of the University in the class of 1928, has formally accepted his appointment as second lieutenant in the infantry reserve.

Rev. Father Joyce will be the successor of Rev. Father Brennan as the chaplain of the Newman Club. It is of interest to note that Father Joyce was editor-in-chief of the Cynic, a member of Boulder and president of the Newman Club while at U. V. M. The members of the Newman Club welcome Father Joyce as their friend and adviser.

WHY I AM FOR HOOVER

By Lawrence O. Clayton '30

Herbert C. Hoover, the man "with the gift of deeds rather than the gift of gab" is my choice for the next president of the United States. He has a greater appeal, I believe, to the youth in America who will be the leaders of tomorrow than does any other presidential nominee. Student polls all over the country prove this contention. In any case, youth is vitally interested in the campaign and coming election as it has never been before, perhaps, due to greater publicity in the newspapers, perhaps due to the radio, or perhaps due to the greater prevalence of student polls and straw votes. No one knows exactly.

Hoover's life has been one of achievement, one of efficient administration, one devoid of back slapping, hand shaking, and the granting of numerous favors in order to get votes. Hoover has led a public life for many years. He has been a public servant not only of the country but of humanity in general for a longer period of time. His life has been spent directly or indirectly toward the salvage of human life. His successful work in Russia in checking the famine there and sending the people back to their farms with enough American food to tide them over the rough spots; his efficient management during the recent war of conservation of the food supply so that the boys across would not suffer; his speedy action during the Mississippi flood in bringing order out of chaos in diverting famine and disease, and placing the homeless in the care of the Red Cross, are but a few of the monuments that can be credited to this administrator.

Everyone will grant that Hoover is an efficient administrator and a great executive after a careful consideration of his deeds. But why has he been so successful in this respect? Simply because he is non-partisan; he puts men ahead of his personal or party affiliations when he wants efficiency; he is not prejudiced. In fact, before the Kansas Convention, Hoover was charged by some that he lacked the necessary political keenness and artfulness to be a vote-drawing exponent of a major political party.

Then there is the human side. Hoover is not cold and unemotional as many claim. He is not a hard hearted efficiency expert. He has a soft spot in his heart for every living thing. Working side by side with the suffering during famine, flood, and pestilence, he understands human nature as few men do. He has bent his whole efforts towards the relief of human suffering. However, he has taken a practical view of the matter.

But how does all this affect a cosmopolitan nation like our own? It is going a long way toward solving one of the biggest problems before America today, that of assimilation, the blending of the strong foreign strains into a national unified product. Hoover can make great progress along this line because in all of his various humanitarian projects he has revealed a rare spirit of tolerance, a large comprehension, and an appreciation of men of different national, racial and religious backgrounds.

Hoover still believes that national temperance can be achieved through the present prohibition law. But in recent speeches he has made clear that he holds no grudge against a dissenting individual if that individual will only work openly for a reconsideration of the issues contained within the prohibition law. He actually defends those who disagree with him. However, he asks, above all things, that reason prevail. With such an independent and clear thinking man at the head of the country, it is only a matter of time when a fitting solution of the problem will be found.

My knowledge of Hoover has convinced me that he will stand for no corruption of any kind regardless of the party affiliations of the man or men who are at the bottom of it. Any semblance of corruption will be promptly stamped out and those persons connected with it properly punished for to Hoover it would mean undermining of an organization that was created for work and service to its country only. And Hoover does not tolerate such actions in his organizations. It impairs efficiency.

Thus, who but Hoover can so ably fulfill the qualifications for the office of the president of the United States? Who but Hoover can reveal such ability as an organizer, an ability which amounts to positive genius? He seems almost to have been created especially for this hour when tasks confronting the next president are so tremendous and far reaching that only a near genius will be able to lead the country to a successful solution of them. Herbert Hoover is better qualified to be the chief executive of the United States for the next four years than any other presidential candidate.

WHY I AM FOR SMITH

By Margaret A. Durick '29

Even voting deserves in this day and age to be a scientific process; and the man who stands pat to the party prejudice his father and his father's father bequeathed him, has not kept pace with the stirring thought and originality of the world in which he lives. The intellectually sincere voter will weigh the capacities of the two candidates, and consider many things before he decides between Mr. Hoover and Gov. Smith. The see-saw in my own mind has come to a standstill with my decision to support Al Smith. The reasons that back this judgment will be set forth below.

Gov. Smith is on the other hand a master politician; not in the spurious sense which the American vocabulary attaches to the term, but as a tried and seasoned philosopher of American institutions. He is refreshingly free enough from the blurb and intrigues one associates with politicians, to have a real notion of a democratic state.

He understands the high and low classes of American people. He renews the tradition of the Democratic party, its raison d'être, in fact, when he denounces plutocracy and class rule, which after all is the work that Roosevelt, LaFollette and Woodrow Wilson began. Al Smith is the champion of the "rank and file," as he himself styles them, and he understands their needs. Mr. Hoover has not served the people so closely nor as a chosen leader. The Republican party asks us to consider how rich and happy we are; "we" signifies the upper classes. Nor does Mr. Hoover officially repudiate the plutocrats of his acquaintance, Fall and Doheny, Sinclair and Hays.

According to Heywood Broun, the Spartan youth who let the wolf remain under his tunic until it gnawed him to death was not altogether bright. Gov. Smith was right, it seems to me, in dragging out upon the Oklahoma City platform the skulking shadow of intolerance and prejudice. Intolerance is a vital question today, and serious enough to be a threatening cloud on the American horizon. Mr. Hoover expresses displeasure at the injection into the campaign of the religious issue, but he does not take an unequivocal stand on the real issues, so that the emotions of America might be distracted from the religious question.

It was my good fortune to hear Mayor John Boyd Thatcher of Albany speak in Manchester two weeks ago. Mayor Thatcher, who bears a marked resemblance to his former instructor at Princeton, Woodrow Wilson, held up the ridiculousness of the whispers and their positive harm. Tear a petal from a rose, he said, and you cannot put it back.

Mayor Thatcher described the Governor's triumphant home-coming to Albany after his fourth election. He suggested to Smith that they walk up State Street to Broadway so as to satisfy the tremendous crowds of enthusiasts. The bands were moving fast, and in order to keep up with the procession, the Mayor took the Governor's arm. The act was spuriously translated, and a report circulated that Gov. Smith was so intoxicated the Mayor of Albany had to support him.

Why should the farmer put belief in the Republican party? Its promises of 1920 and 1924 were paper promises. Is not the enforcement bureau under the present régime the latest and worst pork barrel in American politics? Yet Mr. Hoover declares he will continue his party's policy of enforcing rigidly the eighteenth amendment! Gov. Smith's plain unhesitating stand is an honorable one, and the strictest Prohibitionist may rest assured that when he declared he would enforce the law as a promise inherent in the oath of office, that he meant what he said. The record of the man vouches for that.

Personality fascinates everyone who is human. But we are told that personality turns Americans' heads; that the issues are the all-important questions to be considered in any election. However the issues are not easily understood by large majorities, and Gov. Smith's ability through personality to shake the dust off the statute books and make the people enjoy a discussion of water power and commercial arbitration is conducive to a more thoroughly understood democracy.

Because he is so close to the people, being of them, because he is a progressive candidate who will do progressive things, because he has had more experience with executive situations than any other governor in American history, because he believes every word that he says, every promise he makes, Alfred E. Smith would make a noble president.

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

WELL, WHAT OF IT?

I'm sitting by the window gazing off this line
If the blame thing were mine
I guess the view's fine
Yes, I'm sitting by the window looking into space
And I'm cynical and foolish human race
Don't we think that's fine
Don't we think we're
Don't we think we're decent: that we are what we should?
Well, I want to tell you that I saw a white
For it made me downright sore discover just how
Are the viewpoints of some fellows toward the things that are worthwhile
And how calmly they a sneering, knowing smile
As I sat in the library of last week
I was shaken from my hearing fellows speak
As I grasped what they were saying they were men of
Why I paused a bit to listen, and others did so too
This no doubt was what they wanted
They laughed louder as talked.
Not a Frosh around their table
their conversation centered
Yes, they pointed out the quite a worthwhile thing say we Yet they joked about it's lowness their foolish baby ways
Yet some few were laughing with at the dullness of their
Of course, the world is wrong know, but Human Nature's fine

Well, I got an earful the other evening. Furthermore, the girl who supplied it gave me permission to publish this in the Cynic. (Say, by the way she's a knockout! Bet she'll be sore me for saying so, but I just can't help it. She's a knockout! Guess I won't eat out Friday evening—the Cynic will be out then!)

You see, she'd just told me that she waited an hour or so for a ride—the people were just so mean that they wouldn't even pick a little girl. I glanced at her and professed genuine surprise.

"What! Do you mean to say you couldn't get a ride?"

"No. Not the kind I wanted!"

Ah, the kind she wanted. You see she was not only a knockout, but was a sensible knockout as well. Realizing this, I explained to her that my only interest in the matter was centered about the securing of the feminine viewpoint of this matter, and proceeded to launch a series of questions. She answered these with a prompt and frank expression that was very refreshing. You might be interested.

Q. You just said that you were waiting for a certain "kind of a ride." What did you mean?

A. A girl should not accept rides offered to her, you know.

Q. How can she tell just what the right kind of a ride is before she enters the car?

A. She must rely upon her intuition.

Q. Intuition? How does that apply?

A. Oh, feminine intuition applies everything.

Q. But seriously—aren't there rules which a girl could follow to some degree of certainty?

A. Well, yes. If a good-looking man stopped a good-looking car and asked a good-looking girl if she cared to accompany him, as he neither was going her way—why, that would be all right.

Q. Is she then certain that she should accept his proffered ride? Or should the good-looking girl in the good-looking car act?

A. Like a gentleman would—open the door—not too long a gaze at her with a fresh engaging expression, and a well modulated, cultivated voice and distinctive outward bearing.

Q. Is that all he must do?

A. Ah, but very few men possess all these qualities.

Q. Suppose, to take a hypothetical case, that a ride was accepted turned out to be the wrong kind. Imagine that the driver was a gentleman.

A. The girl should politely command him to stop the car, get out and walk.

Q. And if he refuses to obey her wishes?

A. She should slap his face.

Q. What will that effect?

A. It usually puts a stop to their monkey business. It's very funny, you know.

Q. May I use this in the Cynic?

A. Certainly, if you don't use my name in along with it.

She was modest, too.

She: Oh boy, will you take me this way?

He: No. I'll show you tomorrow night.—Wampus.

Y. W. C. A. MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN SUCCESSFUL

With the mercury rising steadily each day in its novel thermometer chart, Y. W. C. A. has just completed a successful membership drive, under the leadership of Florence McKenzie, '30. Although the drive itself is finished, anyone who did not have an opportunity to join during the past week, is cordially invited to join now. The recognition service for all new members will be held at Redstone, on Sunday afternoon, October 28, at three o'clock. Miss Edith Sanderson, student field worker, will be present. Miss Sanderson is one of the four missionaries tried at Brousa, Turkey, for preaching Christianity. The story of her experiences promises to be interesting since she is one of the most enthusiastic and talented workers in this field today. That same afternoon Miss Sanderson will speak at the Ira Allen Chapel, a four o'clock, for the benefit of the whole student body. Conferences with Miss Sanderson may be had by any who desire them on Saturday, the 27th, and possibly the 26th.

Dorothy Cottrell, '29, who recently returned from the meeting of the New England division of the National Student Council of Y. W. C. A. in Hartford, Conn., explained the full significance of an affiliated organization at the dining halls last week. Affiliation entails responsibility to the National Student Council and the World Student Christian Federation. She urged the students to become a part of this universal movement because Vermont is affiliated with the national Y. W. C. A. It is also connected with the World Student Christian Federation which came into prominence during the World War, by giving food, clothing, shelter and other necessities of life to students of all nations.

FRESHMEN HONORED WITH DANCE GIVEN BY CHURCH

A dance in honor of the Vermont Freshmen was held in the parish house of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Friday evening, October 19, under the auspices of the Young Peoples Fellowship. It was in the form of a garden party with the hall decorated to give an outdoor effect. A large number of Freshmen, as well as upperclassmen attended and danced to music by several members of the Delta Psi orchestra.

Corporate Communion Service Sunday morning and the breakfast which followed were well attended. There will be another such Fellowship service in about a month.

The purpose of the Fellowship is to further the work of young people in the church, and to promote a spirit of good fellowship among them. Every Sunday night, the members of the Fellowship have supper together, followed by a meeting, at which prominent churchmen give little talks. The club members are now rehearsing for their annual play which is to be given shortly.

The officers are: president, Lucene Little; vice-president, Harvey Butterfield; secretary, Lorraine Owens; treasurer, H. C. Cross.

The University has purchased an outfit of white leggings and belts for members of the R. O. T. C. Band. These will be worn on special occasions only. Each Freshman enrolled in the R. O. T. C. is required to have in his possession on or before October 31, 1928, a serviceable and presentable cadet uniform in order to draw the full amount of government computation.

Dear Sirs.

About two years ago I bought a tin of Edgeworth tobacco. I was so pleased with its slow-smoking qualities and wonderful aroma that I became an Edgeworth enthusiast and have smoked no other tobacco since, although up to that time I think I can truthfully say I had tried every well-known British mixture and flake.

Moreover, I introduced one of the other reporters to it. He in turn introduced another and he another until finally it reached the News Editor. There are now five of us all smoking Edgeworth and enjoying it so much that I thought you might like to have this little appreciation of what, to Britishers, is a comparatively unknown tobacco. I wish you every success.

Yours faithfully,

SCHEDULE OF BASEBALL TRIP SOUTH PROGRESSES

Good progress is being made on the 1929 baseball schedule by the manager, W. E. Rogers. The schedule for the southern trip, taken annually by the varsity, is already complete, except for three dates, April 4, 5, and 6. A form letter has been mailed out to the various colleges and universities in the section that will be covered on this trip, asking for games on these dates or for suggestions as to possibilities of getting games with other institutions.

The schedule for the southern trip

April

2 Marines at Quantico.
3 Navy at Annapolis.
4 Open.
5 Open.
6 Open.
8 St. Johns at Brooklyn.
9 N. Y. U. at New York.
10 West Point at West Point.

As the older students know, the southern trip has come to be a tradition at Vermont. The team is sent off at a big pep meeting a night or two before Easter vacation. The trip is the only means Vermont has of getting in enough spring practice to keep in the running with the other colleges which are more fortunate in their facilities. All the first string men are taken, accompanied by three or four substitutes. It will be noticed that the schedule is somewhat different this year from what it has been previously, notably in the absence of Catholic University and Fordham.

STATION WCAX OF BURLINGTON ANNOUNCING

"Station WCAX, the University of Vermont" was again on the air last Friday evening when the state contest in the Atwater Kent Audition was broadcast from our student operated station. Professor Leon W. Dean's voice was also heard announcing the program.

The twelve contestants who were heard at that time had been selected by competition, locally in various parts of the state and were competing to enter the New England district contest to be held in New York during November.

Those who succeed in gaining first places in the district contest will enter the national, and final competition in New York City sometime during December, where the winners in districts throughout the country will meet for national honors.

The names of the singers were not announced over the radio, but a number was assigned to each and judging by the radio audience was based on the quality of the voices as heard.

Frederick E. Blais of Winooski who also won the state audition last year took first honors again and the second prize for men was won by James Farrell of Rutland. Miss Edith B. Start, U. V. M. '27, of Cambridge, won first place for women and Miss Kathleen Blake of Barton second place.

Last year the Atwater Kent Radio Audition Foundation established annual awards for amateur talent to stimulate such interest and competition and has offered five awards to the winners of the national contest.

The first prize offered consists of $5,000 and a two-year's course in an accredited school of music, the second prize is $2,000 and a year's tuition at an accredited school of music, third prize is $1,000 and the same tuition as is offered with the second prize. Two cash prizes of $500 and $250 are given for the fourth and fifth places respectively.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The following girls are in charge of the Practice House this week: Oriana Merriam, '29, Laura Bingham, '29, Marjory Huntley, '30, Alma Farr, '30, Helen Bonicavy, '31, and Martha Udall, '32.

Miss Sarah Holbrook, professor in the department of Education, spent last week-end at a meeting of the State Social Workers at Bellows Falls and, also, at a conference of the Commonwealth Fund Committee, held in New York. While in Bellows Falls, Miss Holbrook was re-elected secretary of the Vermont State Social Workers.

President Bailey gave a dinner on Thursday evening, October 25, at Robinson Hall for the members of the New England College Association which is holding its convention here. Sessions are being held Thursday and Friday in the Marsh Room of the College Library. Fourteen colleges are represented by their presidents, deans, and faculty members.

OFFICIALS OF COMING VARSITY GAMES NAMED

Below is a list of the officials for the remaining football games of the varsity schedule:

Connecticut Aggies at Burlington, October 27—Referee, R. A. Bjornson (Springfield); umpire, J. N. Young (Susquehanna); line judge, W. E. Dunn.

Norwich at Burlington, November 3—Referee, J. N. Young (Susquehanna); umpire, H. R. Goeway (Syracuse); line judge, L. O. Johnson (Amherst); field judge, F. A. Peterson (Colgate).

R. P. I. at Troy, N. Y., November 10—Referee, S. R. Derby (Illinois); umpire, F. L. Laird (Dartmouth); line judge, R. F. Delahant (Wesleyan).

Middlebury at Middlebury, November 17—Referee, J. N. Young (Susquehanna); umpire, H. I. O'Brien (Holy Cross); line judge, L. O. Johnson (Amherst); field judge, H. R. Goeway (Syracuse).

Springfield at Springfield, November 29—Referee, P. R. Carpenter (Harvard); umpire, F. W. Lowe (Dartmouth); line judge, A. F. Keane; field judge, H. DeWindt (Harvard).

EARL CARROLL VANITIES OFFER ATHLETES JOBS

Fifty jobs at $50 a week are to be thrown open for ex-college athletes by Earl Carroll, producer of the Earl Carroll Vanities, within the next few weeks, applications now being accepted by Mr. Carroll at his theatre through personal request or photographs. The men are desired for rôles in a big new musical offering which goes into rehearsal about November 15, and is scheduled to open about January 1.

With the new Vanities cracking all previous records and fully set for a season's run, Mr. Carroll has turned to the work of launching the most pretentious book musical comedy ever attempted in his career. The music is by George L. Bagby and G. Romilli, composers of the Vanities melodies, and the story deals with a new phase of athletic life. For that reason fifty seasoned football, baseball and basketball players, or athletes of any type are wanted for the new production.

For applicants who are not within reach of the Earl Carroll Theatre, photographs sent to the Carroll office, 755 Seventh Avenue, New York City, will receive consideration. Upon the backs of personal pictures the applicants should inscribe measurements and coloring, as well as athletic records. He will not undertake to return pictures submitted unless return postage is enclosed, in the event of a negative answer. All applications must be made before November 15, as actual rehearsals will begin on that date, or the following Monday, at the latest.

LOCAL AVIATION FIELD SOON TO BE ERECTED

Jack and George Lenox, licensed aviators, are completing plans for establishing an aviation school in Burlington. They have yet to make arrangements with the Burlington city officials, in order to have the use of the municipal city field. Passengers, mail, express, and freight will be carried in these planes. The mail route will be from Portland, Me., to Albany, N. Y., with stops at Claremont, N. H., Manchester, N. H., and Springfield, Vt.

The school will be operated similarly to that which Jack Lenox conducted in Springfield, Vt., last year, which had twenty students.

AGRICULTURE STUDENTS TO HOLD FRUIT EXHIBIT

Agricultural students under the supervision of Professor Marshall B. Cummings will hold a fruit exhibit at the Horticultural Laboratory of Morrill Hall on Friday, October 26, from 4 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, October 27 from 1 to 9 p.m.

The first exhibit of this kind at the University of Vermont took place last year and its success was immense. The Horticultural students with the aid of Professor Cummings worked hard and expect to make this exhibit superior to last year's.

About sixty farmers from every part of the state of Vermont contributed their fruits and are highly interested in this exhibit.

The beauty of this exhibit is that it will include not only a great variety of fruits but that it will illustrate the heredity, selection, crossing, variation, origin, and improvements of fruits.

The public as well as the student body is cordially welcome to attend.

We wonder if the only reason undertakers go to football games is to watch 'em kick off.—Campus

WOMEN HEAR ADDRESS BY EDITH SANDERSON

Y. W. C. A. Introduces Missionary at Meeting in Old Chapel Sunday Afternoon

Miss Edith Sanderson, an American Board missionary, on furlough from Turkey, spoke informally Sunday afternoon in the Old Chapel. Marion Potter, President of Y. W. C. A. introduced her to the small but interested gathering who came to hear her speak.

Miss Sanderson's subject was based on the New Turkey, the changes which have come about in the five years in which she has been there and the advances in civilization wrought by those Americans and Turks who have always worked for the highest good in that country. One of the greatest changes is that of the language. Complicated Arabic letters are no longer used but in their place the Latin letters which are much simpler and easier to understand. Men and women who never knew how to read or write any language are now learning their A B C's. Turkish cities are more free now with men and women dressed like Americans, and only the higher spirit of Christian living is needed to make the country great.

Miss Sanderson has been teaching in an American Board School in Turkey for five years. A law forbids any teaching of religion, but the missionaries, feeling that Christian living may be contagious, have taken it upon themselves to live such lives as will make the Turkish people feel the influence of Christ and, along with their Christian teaching, become men and women fit to be citizens of a great country.

The American Board wants more missionaries, and Miss Sanderson ended her talk with a plea for workers who will help to save Turkey from materialistic atheism into which it is being plunged.

CANDLE LIGHT SERVICE FOR Y. W. C. A. INITIATES

New members were welcomed into the Young Women's Christian Association Sunday afternoon in the Redstone parlors, where a recognition and candle-lighting service was conducted. The service was in charge of the president of the Vermont organization of Y. W. C. A., Marion Potter, and other members of the cabinet. Miss Edith Sanderson's presence added inspiration to the meeting.

Each new member lighted a small candle at the large candle which represented the spirit of Y. W., and there by became associated through this impressive ceremony with the local and national Young Women's Christian Association. The ceremony ended with the singing of "Follow the Gleam," and a procession of girls, bearing candles, through the Redstone Halls.

Mary A. Turner '29 of Montague City, Mass., was chosen contributing editor to the National Women's Athletic Magazine in the election conducted by Mortar Board members Thursday and Friday. She is well qualified to report the activities of W. A. A. as Vermont associate women's editor of the CYNIC this year.

The office of editor is a new one, created by the necessity and desire to have Vermont represented in this magazine, which is called the Sportswoman. A copy of this interesting new magazine is at the Billings Library.

VERMONT-NORWICH TICKETS!!

Students desiring to attend the football game between Vermont and Norwich must have their book tickets validated and exchanged for reserve seat stubs. The ticket to be turned in is number 5. This means that every Vermont student has a seat assigned to him. One-half of section C and all of section D and E have been reserved for the student body. Those fraternities desiring to sit together should have their books turned in at the same time. Number 5 ticket will get any student into the Norwich game but there will be no seat available except by reserving them in the above manner. Tickets for the academic students will be exchangeable in the Old Mill Chapel, Wednesday afternoon, October 31.

GREY FRIARS CONTINUE LITERARY ACTIVITIES

Grey Friars, the men's literary society, met Thursday evening, October 18, at 7.30 in the Marsh Room of the Billings Library. Nine members were present. A vote of sympathy was passed for Charles H. Overly, the president, on the death of his mother. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved by the society. Most of the meeting was devoted to business. The constitution was read and revisions were considered. A motion was passed that articles be published in the CYNIC and The Vermont Literary Magazine, written in the styles characteristic of the respective papers.

Two big banquets will be held by the fortunate men this year, one each semester. Also, there is to be a supper each month at some place to be determined. At each of these meetings some member of the faculty or some other eminently qualified man will speak on an appropriate subject, such as, the essay, the drama, or poetry.

The names of various men who desired membership and had fulfilled, or were about to fulfill, the requirements were discussed at some length. Application for admission to Grey Friars consists in submitting to the society some original writing, which may be an essay, a poem, a play, the beginning of a short story, or a short story complete. There are four dates for submitting work each year, November 10, January 5, March 10, and April 20. All men at all interested are asked to give the matter of submitting their work serious consideration.

Grey Friars was founded here last year, at Christmas time. Its charter members were all men who had taken an interest in literary and journalistic activities at Vermont, during the previous parts of their careers as students. The society filled a long felt want among the men students who had always needed such a club to balance the Bluestockings among the co-eds. As may be deduced from the requirements for membership, a man must have some degree of ability in order to gain membership in the Grey Friars, not only in writing, but also in reading, appreciating, and discussing literature.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY HELD BY UPSILON TAU ALPHA

Upsilon Tau Alpha, Teacher Training sorority, held a Hallowe'en party at the Vermonters' Club House Thursday evening. About a hundred and twenty-five girls attended, most of them in costume and masked. At the end of the evening the girls went through a Chamber of Horrors, told ghost stories, bobbed for apples and danced. Refreshments of cider and doughnuts were served.

At the brief business meeting Katherine Wilcox, '29, was elected representative of the two year teacher training students, for Student Union Council. Formerly, the two year girls had no representatives.

Mr. W. H. Crockett spoke to The Moravian Club in Shoreham last evening on the Early History of Vermont.

CAST SELECTED TO FILL PARTS IN COLLEGE PLAY

J. F. Garfield '31 and Gladys Kone '29 Chosen for Men's and Women's Leading Roles

Tryouts for the annual play tendered by the Wig and Buskin and Masque and Sandal were held on Thursday and Friday, October 25 and 26 from 4 to 6 p.m. in Room 3, North College. There were almost a hundred contestants and it was not very difficult to find adaptable characters. The play is Devil's Disciples by George Bernard Shaw and will be presented early in December, probably on the evening of December 6.

After deliberate and careful consideration, the judges, Professors A. B. Myrick, of the Romance Language Department, J. T. Metcalf of the Psychology Department and W. E. Aiken of the English Department decided favorably upon the following:

Richard Dudgeon	John Garfield
Understudy	Charles Overly
Mrs. Dudgeon	Dorothy Cottrell
Understudy	Edith Fishman
Christy	S. W. Householder
Understudy	Arthur Stearns
William Dudgeon	Balcor
Anthony Anderson	Lloyd Turner
Understudy	George Nelson
Judith Anderson	Gladys Kone
Understudy	Annette Rosenburg
Mrs. Williams	Catherine Bassett
Titus	Robert Jenks
Mrs. Titus	Dorothy Fowler
Essie	Dorothy Strong
Understudy	Marion Backus
Attorney Hawkins	R. S. Derby

The presentation of such a play has been the annual event of the two honorary dramatic societies and the students' response has been most encouraging.

Rehearsals will begin very shortly.

COLLEGE CONFERENCE HELD IN MARSH ROOM

About 30 representatives of 14 New England colleges were in Burlington Thursday and Friday for the 17th meeting of the Association of New England Colleges. The conferences were held Thursday morning and afternoon and Friday morning in the Marsh Room in the Billings Library. Thursday evening dinner was served the delegates at Robinson Hall, and Friday morning they visited the chapel.

President Guy W. Bailey presided at these meetings which were the first to be held here since President Buckham's time. The topics under discussion pertain to the problems of College Deans and Presidents and are strictly confidential.

Among those present, a list of whom was printed recently, was Dean Howes of Williams College. He was for years Professor of Greek at the University of Vermont. President Bailey is said to have studied under him.

The conference ran smoothly throughout largely due to President Bailey's leadership. The delegates expressed their approval of the entertainment here in general.

Freshman Debate Try-outs

Try-outs for the Freshman debating team will come off Thursday, November 1, in the Old Mill Chapel. Contesting Freshmen must prepare a short speech on the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, that this house favors the application of the principles of liberal education to American academic colleges." For further information see M. D. Powers in the Y. M. C. A. office.

MANY PENALTIES GIVEN BOTH TEAMS SATURDAY

Connecticut Aggies invaded the Vermont territory Saturday to deliver a 6-0 beating to the Cats. The battle was nip and tuck all the way, the only score coming in the third period on a wide end run by the fleet-footed Fisher, from the 20-yard line. "Tex" Nilsen broke through to block the kick for the extra point.

It was the finest contest to watch that the fans have seen here in some time. There was excitement every minute and Vermont threatened to score several times, but were always held by their opponents. Several times, also, it looked bad for the Green and Gold when the "Kel" or as he writes his name, Fisher, started on one of his long runs. He was just about the whole Connecticut Aggies team and without him the Rattanites might have fared much better. It was the best appearance that the Green Mountain Boys have made this year and only for the large loss on penalties the score might have been different or at least equal.

Connecticut Aggies kicked off to Vermont, Halligan receiving, and was ran back to the 35-yard line. DeRose made five yards; penalty of five yards on Vermont for offside, here Halligan was thrown for a four yard loss, Mace booted to the 50-yard line. The Nutmeggers could only gain four yards in three downs so they punted to Vermont's 20-yard line, Donnelly running it back five yards before being stopped. DeRose made five yards, Scutakes no counted for three and DeRose made first down. On the next play a penalty of fifteen yards was imposed on the Cats. They made two yards on the second down and then Mace made ten yards on a kick formation; Halligan made three yards on the next play. Here Mace booted to Connecticut Aggies' 25-yard line and it was run back four yards; Ryan made three yards and then Fisher made a long run to Vermont's 40 yard line. Here Segal broke through and threw one of the Connecticut Aggies for a ten yard loss. After three more downs, on which the Blue and White gained little ground, Vermont gained the ball on downs. DeRose made five yards, but after this met a stone wall and Mace was required to boot out of danger to the Nutmegers' 25-yard line. Fisher hit the line twice for a total of seven yards and quarter time was called.

Another try gained nothing and Fisher booted to behind the Vermont line. It was placed on the 20-yard line. Scutakes made four yards and Halligan added three more and then Mace was thrown for a loss. Mace booted to Connecticut's 45-yard line, when Fisher received it and twisted and turned until he was finally downed on the 38-yard line. Ryan gained three yards off tackle; then Connecticut completed a pass, Ryan to McCombe, for five yards. Vermont penalized five yards for offside. Vermont held for downs and DeRose made one yard. Connecticut Aggies penalized five yards and Donnelly made no gain. Mace booted to Connecticut's 45-yard line. Fisher made four yards. Connecticut lost five yards off side. Fisher gained this back on the next play. Lamoreaux, who had taken Ryan's place at quarter for the Blue, failed to gain and Fisher was stopped on the fourth down. Mace now at fullback made three yards. A pass, Donnelly to DeRose, gained six yards and another, Donnelly to Segal, netted eight more. Vermont hammered at the line. Vermont was now on the Aggies' 19 yard line. Fisher intercepted a pass and it was Connecticut's ball. On the first play the Aggies were off side and lost five yards and Fisher booted to their 43-yard line, Halligan returning it twelve yards. Here Connecticut showed a stone-wall defense and on the fourth down Fisher intercepted a pass and ran to Vermont's 42-yard line before being downed. The "Kel" made thirteen more on the next play.

AND NOW, NORWICH

We are proud of the fighting Catamounts! Anyone could see a difference in the Vermont team Saturday and the same team in the Boston University game. Last Saturday they showed the fight spirit that meant success and even in defeat it was a moral victory. With the same spirit we know that Norwich will need to play very good football to keep up with the Catamounts.

Every student should be prepared to march in the torchlight procession Friday night. Key and Serpent is making every effort to "put over" the newest affair and arouse interest and spirit among the undergraduates. A parade is going to be very weak if only a few attend. Its going to take a lot of voices to make a big noise in City Hall Park, too. Our Catamount team is fighting for Vermont. It has shown the way to the students. How about, let's turn out 100 per cent strong.

The support at the Connecticut Aggies' game isn't worth mentioning. It's about time half of the student body started to realize we are approaching the end of a football season, and next Saturday, besides being a hard game with our traditional rivals, is the last home appearance of this year's team. A demonstration with no less than 1,000 students should be considered nothing less than a very poor showing.

Smoking Harmless to Girls

College girls who smoke are not harming their health as much as non-smokers who eat lots of candy. This is the conclusion reached by Dr Anna Richardson, Smith College physician, after a survey of cigarette popularity among students at that institution.

In an article entitled "How Well Are the Seniors?" Doctor Richardson gives facts and figures on the student smoking situation. As regards the class that graduated in June, she found that:

Two-thirds of the girls were occasional or habitual users of cigarettes. Twenty-one per cent smoked five or ten cigarettes per day, 21 per cent smoked one to four cigarettes per day, 23 per cent smoked occasionally, "either to be in it socially or not to feel that they are silent rebukes to their friends," 35 per cent did not smoke.

Considering the effect of tobacco on the student's health, Doctor Richardson said that "actual harm in the smoking itself is probably not so great as continuously to nibble sweets."—Vassar Miscellany News.

To Use Glider

Under the direction of Professor E D Hay, five students in the Department of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Kansas are constructing a glider for tests in the aeronautical field.

College for Parrots

A college for parrots has been set up at Brownsville, Texas, to which more than 1,500 birds come from all over the world to be taught how to talk. The phonograph is used in the instruction, and special records have been prepared for the purpose. The birds vary in age from five to eight months, and the course of training lasts three months. Each week the parrots are given examinations and graded, and the value of each is judged by the flow of words on graduation.

Education Required

University students ought to make good hobos. There are very few humans in other walks of life who are able to dodge work as easily and gracefully. A good dinner and a pipe smoke turns a student into a Yogi contemplating nothing for the rest of the day except the satisfactory prospect of the advent of a late supper. We do not worry overmuch about the destiny of mankind nor about the question "Whither Are We Bound?" that so many energetic professors lecture for hours upon.

HOW TO BE A COLLEGE MAN

Wear no garters.

Walk about with a dazed look in your eyes.

Bend forward to get that midnight oil effect.

Wear "Slaughter House" (registered) clothes.

Have something cute painted on your slicker.

Watch the men about the campus and learn to use their captivating talk.

Wear a key.

Interviews with Great Men—Number One of a Series—The Art of Selling Magazines

As told to Ex-Converse by D. I. P.

"No, thanks. I don't smoke, G But no fooling, I want to talk to you about the mag game. I was in it last summer and I cleaned up plenty. Not only that, but it's got a broadening influence; it teaches you how to meet people, how to act.'

The fellow who spoke knew whereof he prattled. I was aware of the fact that during the past vacation he had been an excellent salesman, so I bade him continue his most interesting dissertation.

"'You see, they give you a certain territory to cover and a team to work with. And then they give you the hot dope on how to act and all that stuff.'

"'Well, listen, D., just how should you act to put the sales across?'

"'You gotta know your stuff. Here's the way you do it. You go up to a door, ring the bell and look vaguely into space. You must act disinterested or they'll take you for one of those damn bill collectors and refuse to open the door. If a woman answers your ring, you take off your hat with a sweeping gesture.

"'Good morning, madam,' pleasantly.

"'Good morning!' sharply.

"'Have you received one of the free souvenirs from the ——— Company?'

"'No.'

"'I'm very sorry. A slight mistake on their part, I'm sure. Now if you will give me your name and address I'll see that you receive one immediately.'

"'What is the ——— Company and what's the souvenir?'

"'The ——— Company publishes Rotten Housekeeping, The Saturday Morning Roast, The Literary Indigestion and the Police Gazette.'

"'Their souvenir is a handsome volume of Oh! Oh! MacIntire's complete list of stories, bound in imitation calfskin and printed on imitation India paper. Boldface type is used in all—.'

"'I don't like that type of people.'

"'No, madam, I was merely referring to the print.'

"'Oh, I see. Did you say the book was free?'

"'Absolutely and thoroughly, so you are under no obligations whatsoever to the ——— Company upon your receipt of it. But if you do happen to have a few moments to spare I'd like very much to tell you about some of these magazines.'

"'So you sell magazines?'

"'No, madam. Not very often. That's why I'm asking you to give me a break.'

"'A break! Give you a break! Why, don't you know I'm L. L.'s third cousin's wife?'

"'I'm sorry, madam, but you see I'm a college student and—.'

"'What college do you attend?'

"'Vermont.'

"'Then you're not a student. But I'm interested in your magazines. What do they contain?'

"'Well, let's take the Saturday Morning Roast, for example. That contains stories by flunking college students, grad shaving paper, and excellent furnace material. It sells for the small sum of five simolions, which sum is some buy, if you ask me.'

"'I'll take your word for it, young man.'

"'I'll take your money, madam. Six-fifty per annum at our reduced rate for the Roast.'

"'O. K.'

"'M and X.'

"'Good day, madam.'

"'On the contrary, if you will observe more closely, you will see that it is running. Look out for the dog; he'll bite.'

"'So did you, madam.'"

Famous last words: "Put away all books and notebooks, and get out your pens."

One of the hazing stunts at Lehigh University is the holding of a Bathrobe Parade. All the freshmen, dressed in bathrobes with towels around their heads, meet on the campus. They are marched downtown and back to the stadium to cheer up the football squad.

The New York University Daily News announces the first meeting of the Aviation Club. It also warns that members must attend or be dropped. The "dropped" in this notice sounds rather bad for an Aviation Club, don't you think?

The extension department of the State College of Pennsylvania has offered for a period of four years a number of courses to prisoners in the state penitentiary. The question is just what course would the boys like to take? You guessed it right, sister. ——Ethics

The Periscope

The baby has no political beliefs. He has no religion and his conscience doesn't bother him because he hasn't any. He is devoid of patriotism and social prejudices. Of course he hasn't any mind, whatever that may be, and he is not equipped with the latest model transcendental somewhat. He does not worry about his soul.

The normal baby is a healthy animal. He is a nicely co-ordinated mechanism able to respond to hosts of varied stimuli. He is born with a few fairly definite preponent responses, complicated reflexes which function smoothly after very little practice. The most important thing the baby has is his ability to receive impressions. He is much like a sensitized plate in a camera. His immediate environment is the picture impressed on him. From it he absorbs the beginnings of his ideas just as later he absorbs his prejudices and beliefs, his emotional leanings and irrational likes and dislikes. In the truest sense of the words the baby is moulded by the things about him. Put in one environment a normal child may easily be developed into a banker. The same child, placed in a different environment, may be as easily made into a safe cracker. The destiny of the child is in the hands of those about him.

College students are but children grown a little older and a little larger. Too, they are farther away from the ideal of the healthy normal animal. Most of them have been injured seriously by their environment. They have had fears and prejudices hurled at them. These have been built into their very being, forming repressions and in some cases inflicting serious traumas.

College students are far more important than the average person. They are much more intelligent than the average member of the population and should be more effective members of society. I say they should be more effective members of society than the population-average man and woman. I do not say they achieve these possibilities. I do not believe they realize their great abilities and their pitifully small attainments. They are tremendously lacking in insight and do not understand they are forming habits leading to perfect babbitry every time they give ready acceptance and support to this or that program concerning which they know nothing.

The college student should do original thinking. He should follow the lead of outstanding scholars and willingly confess he knows nothing about most subjects and very little about anything. The college student should be open minded and he should be thoughtful minded. He should examine sources and cease to be a mere rumor monger. He should not be the type which hisses the communist and condemns a man for being a bolshevik when he knows absolutely nothing of either political theory beyond the fact that it is strange to him.

The responsibility for the college man's single track mind and tame acceptance of conventions merely because they are conventions does not rest entirely on his own shoulders. Remember he is merely the baby grown a bit older and larger. He is still a sensitized plate, eagerly recording the pictures presented by his environment. The blame for his under-development must rest to a great degree on his environment, particularly for the outstanding members of his educational community.

Incoming classes are reduced to type by copying those in more advanced classes. These they copy were in turn reduced to type by others who preceded them. Leaders exist on every campus. As long as these leaders encourage originality and non-conformity they are socially valuable. As soon as they begin to demand conformity and acceptance of tradition merely because it is tradition, they are a social menace.

The Freshmen in this college are now looking to the leaders on this campus, the honor society men and women. With these men and women lies a great deal of responsibility. They are forming the Vermont of tomorrow, whether they know it or not, and whether they desire to do so or not. Every time they demand unquestioned obedience, every time they discourage differentiation, they are creating mob-mindedness. They are killing the only thing which can ever make Vermont a truly outstanding school.

Hank Fuller.

CO-ED BULLETIN BOARDS CREATE WIDE INTEREST

For many days one of the bulletin boards in the Y. W. C. A. rooms has attracted much attention. Groups of students have gathered around it between classes, and much favorable comment has been heard. The cause of all this interest is a large multi-colored map of the world, from various points of which black ribbons have led to newspaper clippings. The clippings contain various events of recent interest throughout the world.

The author of this novel plan for acquainting students with current events of international interest is Dorothy Cottrell, '29, chairman of the Christian World Education Committee, New England Division. The purpose of this plan is to acquaint students with significant national and international events. It is planned to replace the clippings with different ones three times a week, and to use only events of recent occurrence.

U. V. M. STUDENTS GOOD FELLOWS SAY BUS MAN

"I've never had a U. V. M. student go back on me yet," said the driver of a city bus today. "I've seen 'em in all stages, good, bad or indifferent. I've seen 'em 'flush' one night and 'broke' the next. But they all treat me fine. I get to know lots of them."

This statement came when a passenger, who looked as though he might have come from the University, made a mistake and tried to palm off a token of the Traction Company. His apology was so profuse that the good impression received from this student gave occasion to the question of how the cordial relations stand between the university and the town.

"Are they good fellows?" he said. "Of course they're good fellows. They're all good. There's been times when they have to give me the high sign when they get off the bus, but they always see me in the morning and fix it up. I always figure that the co-eds have gone a little rough with them when they hit the restaurants. And I can't see a good scout have to walk his girl home just because she doesn't know he's pretty flat. I know very well I'll get my fare when they strike it rich again."

When asked about the rush hours he replied that he doesn't mind them a bit. "It might be pretty tough in New York," he said, "but, you know, this is Burlington. Vermonters are the most considerate people under the sun."

He said that men are more easy to accommodate than women, giving the example that men usually have the exact change in a convenient pocket. "Women have to fish for it," he said, "and by the time they rummage down deep enough in their pocketbook to get their change they somehow manage to have everything from face powder to 'unmentionables' spread all over the bus. But bless their hearts, I like 'em just the same. They're so pleasant about things."—Burlington Daily News.

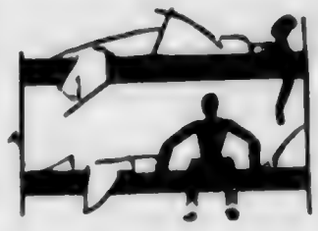
Co-ed Hockey Teams Are Selected

Three class hockey teams, picked to contest in interclass games, have been announced as follows:

Seniors: c.f., Ben Hoskins; r.i., Marion Everest; l.i., Esther Nelson; r.w., Marion Baldwin; l.w., Peg Corban; c.h., Fran Hawley; r.h., Kitty Bassett; l.h., Marion Backus; r.f., Helen Prentiss; l.f., Laura Smith; g., Twink Whitney. Subs: Bert Hazen, Thel Kinder, Betty Hager and Lenore Aldinger.

Juniors: c.f., Nan Owsley; r.i., Dilly Goodsell; l.i., Phoebe Flint; r.w., Ruth Strong; l.w., Marjorie Huntley; c.h., Lib Robelen; l. h., Iva Harris; r.h., Bobby Douglas; r.f., Lib Miller; l.f., Toby Taylor; g., Fran Hazen. Subs: Estabel Perelman, Chris Shaw, and Georgia Bostwick.

Sophomores: c.f., Beckey Beaver; r.i., Nathalie Hawley; l.i., Issy Wathurst; r.w., Jane Corwin; l.w., Nutty Field; c.h., Bunny Murray; l.h., Jean Wappler; r.h., Vera Chadburn; l.f., Edith Abbott; r.f., Hester Rogers; g., Carlotta Grimm. Subs: Honey Drugg, Jean Belden, Ellie Koenig, Harriet Johnstone and Dot Keith.



The Senior-Junior game and the Freshman-Sophomore fray are scheduled for Tuesday afternoon on the new hockey field, located near the Weather Bureau Station. The hockey final is one of the features of field day. Last year's freshman class will be remembered as the champion class team, but dopesters say that the contests this week will be very closely contested.

Father: "Why did you ignore that young fellow? I thought I saw you dancing with him last night."

Young Thing: "Oh, yes, I know him quite well to dance with, but not to speak to."—Punch.

NOTICE!

W. A. A. Field Day will be held November 1. In case of rain November 2 and 5 are the alternative dates. Most of the games will be played on the new hockey field and supper will be served on the Grassmount lawn.

A HISTORY OF THE MUSEUM

G. Stone '29

PART IV

Fossils of the most ancient strata [illegible] and fossils are usually altogether unattractive to the museum [illegible]. [illegible] as strange as [illegible] but are hard [illegible] is [illegible]. Nevertheless, those [illegible] are able to tell to [illegible] what [illegible] read it the story of [illegible] as do other specimens may [illegible] them and by them is written the story of the formation of the many [illegible] of rocks that have built up the surface of the earth and [illegible] plainly, the account of the incoming and outgoing of life from the early ages to the present.

It is always impressive that such a task if it be in any fashion deciphered, even though it be incompletely, shall not be intensely interesting. We have in our museum a collection of fossils that so far as Vermont geology goes, is of [illegible] importance. It is [illegible] the best assemblage of Vermont fossils to be found. It is unfortunate that perforce the fossils are placed in the wall cases where only a part can be seen to any advantage and some scarcely at all. Hence even the trained geologist visiting the museum would not appreciate what we have [illegible] he could have the cases opened.

In speaking of the different groups of fossils one is much hampered by the total lack of common names. It is impossible to speak simply and plainly because often technical terms are the only ones that can be used.

The specimens, some four thousand in all, are arranged in time order, the oldest first and so on to the latest. Beginning in the northeast corner of the second floor, we have a case of Cambrian rocks, with the exception of a few more or less doubtful forms, these represent the dawn of life, at least so far as it is shown in the strata. These forms are so complete and of such rank in the animal, and to a much less degree in the vegetable kingdom, that we are compelled to believe that far simpler forms must have preceded them in the procession of life. If there were such forms they have left few traces and we must begin with the sea weeds, trilobites, mollusks, etc., of the Cambrian.

Some of these fossils though so ancient are exceedingly distinct and surprisingly well developed. They come from Highgate Gorge in Swanton and so on south along the lake, wherever the red sandrock crops out. Most of the Cambrian rock in our museum is from Vermont, but there is a splendid set of trilobites, creatures that in those days represented the crabs and lobsters of today, from British Columbia, and others from Canada and New York.

Passing on to the right the visitor immediately comes to a case crowded with a very unique and to the geologist very interesting lot of fossils from Fort Cassin. These are much more varied and of higher rank than the species of the preceding age, for since the close of that age and the beginning of this life has made great progress. These Fort Cassin fossils appear to have been washed in a cove, or in some way brought together so that in a comparatively small area a large number of animals were buried in the material from which the limestone was formed. The locality was prolific in fine specimens and new forms for a short time and then wholly refused to yield any more. Hence [illegible] cannot be duplicated. Nearly all the limestones of Vermont are near the western border along Lake Champlain and they belong to the great Ordovician age.

Beginning with the very varied fauna of the Fort Cassin rocks, which are older than most of our limestones, we pass on to similar rocks from Providence Island and then to somewhat newer rocks with multitudes of fossils from the large islands and the eastern shore of the lake. In the older limestones we have numerous sponges, corals, molluska, sea weeds, etc., in the later of these and higher species. One case is filled with Isle La Motte specimens, from which place many interesting forms have come. Several cases of fossils of the same geological age follow as one goes towards the right. These are from Chimney Point, Larrabees Point, Button Bay, etc. Last of the Ordovician beds comes the thin soft shale so common on Alburg and North Hero as well as at Colchester Point and other localities. This contains few fossils, but what there are will be found in the case appropriated to this period.

At the close of the Ordovician, Vermont was substantially completed so far as the foundations are concerned. No beds of any magnitude were formed after this. An immense mass of stony material had accumulated during the long ages that had passed, although we are far from the close of the geological time. Out of this material, by means of heat, moisture, pressure upheaval, and no one knows what else, the main mass of the Green Mountains was formed and raised. With less of change, the slates and marbles were also made. During the many long ages that followed the Ordovician, Vermont was dry land and no record of what was passing was kept. Hence for fossils of these times we are compelled to go elsewhere.

The Silurian, which immediately succeeds the Ordovician, is well represented by specimens from New York and various points in the Mississippi Valley. Then come the Devonian with its beautiful corals and abundant fossils of almost every sort below the vertebrates. Here, too, we find remains of the first land plants. Many of the Devonian fossils are very perfectly preserved and elegant in form. Some of the corals are as perfect as if they were just gathered from the sea.

Lone Tally Beats Catamounts in Hard Fought Aggie Game

O'Keefe, substituting for Donnelly, intercepted a pass and Vermont had possession of the ball on her 20-yard line when the half terminated.

Mace kicked off to Fisher for the beginning of the third quarter, the slender half receiving on his 15-yard line and ran it back to his own 53-yard mark before being downed. Here Connecticut was thrown for a 5-yard loss and an attempted pass was blocked, so Fisher lifted one to Vermont's 23-yard line. Donnelly made three yards and Scutakes made first down. However, Connecticut stopped them for three downs and Mace had to punt to Connecticut's 20-yard mark, Fisher returning to the 38-yard chalk line. Several plunges gave the Nutmegers first down and it was here that Vermont received thirty yards in penalties for roughness, which placed the ball on the 25-yard mark. Three bucks at the line netted the Aggies a mere four yards, but it was here that the fleet-footed Fisher was called on and he skirted left end for the only score of the game. Nilsen blocked the try for point.

Connecticut kicked off to Vermont, Halligan making a pretty return to the 35-yard sign. Several plunges by Halligan and a completed forward netted first down. Mace made ten more on a punt position play; Donnelly gained two yards. Here DeRose was stopped and Mace punted to the 15-yard line and the whistle blew as Fisher made a 5-yard gain. Ryan made first down for the farmers, but Vermont held and Fisher kicked to Vermont's 40-yard line. Halligan gained three yards; Scutakes made it first down; Connecticut was penalized five yards; a pass, Donnelly to Halligan, netted eight yards; it looked as though Vermont was going to march right to the goal line. However, Scutakes was thrown for a loss, an incomplete pass and 5-yard penalty and Mace had to kick. Ryan gained eight yards. Harger made first down. McCombe added two more and Fisher contributed five yards more. Another 15-yard penalty was imposed on the Cats and McCombe and Fisher tried on four successive downs to make ten yards but failed and Vermont kicked on the first down to C. A. C.'s 45-yard line, McCombe returning it to the 50-yard line. Fisher made two yards and a 5-yard penalty, with Vermont holding their own, made Connecticut kick. Halligan accounted for eight yards, then Mace kicked to his own 45-yard line. The farmers gained first down on a line plunge and completed forward, but then Mace intercepted a pass, being downed in his tracks. Vermont completed a pass and gained two yards and placing the ball beyond the Cats' 45-yard line as the final whistle blew. Score, Connecticut Aggies 6, Vermont 0.

NORWICH DEFEATS MIDDLEBURY 13-6

Norwich and Middlebury started the series for the Vermont state football championship last Saturday at North field with a game that resulted in a victory for the Cadets by a score of 13 to 6. This shows Norwich to be a formidable contender for the State title and the team that Vermont must defeat next Saturday in order to capture the championship. Coane and Kane scored the two touchdowns for the Horsemen in the first period. Coane put the ball in front of the goal line after a pass from O'Donnel on the 30-yard line. A few minutes later Kane ran thirty yards for a touchdown after the ball had been advanced to midfield by end runs. Coane then kicked the extra point.

Guarnaccia scored the sole tally for the Middlebury boys in the second quarter after Middlebury had brought the ball into Norwich territory by long end runs. The point after touchdown was blocked.

The game with the Catamounts Saturday on Centennial Field will be the last one for Norwich in the State series and a victory by the Cadets will send the championship title to Northfield. The fighting Cats must prevent such a thing from happening and the student body must back their team to the limit.

200 COUPLES ATTEND MORTAR BOARD DANCE

From 175 to 200 couples enjoyed the annual fall dance of Akaia Chapter of Mortar Board in the gymnasium Saturday evening. The attendance was the largest of any of the social functions which have occurred this fall. An eleven-piece orchestra, Johnny Johnson's Catamount Collegians, supplied syncopation for the record crowd. Programs and decorations carried out the Halloween colors, orange and black.

Miss Alla Fitzgerald represented Banshee Chapter of Mortar Board, of Middlebury College. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Leon Dean, Dr. and Mr. Paul K. French, Miss Catherine Bassett and F. F. O'Keefe.

Women's tennis matches, long delayed by unfavorable weather, got under way at the Grassmount court last Tuesday when Helen Buck and Eleanor Koenig, representing the sophomores, met and defeated Janet Miller and Caroline Howard '32, 6-1, 6-0.

Wednesday afternoon the junior second team defeated the senior second team, 7-5, 6-2. The games will continue during the week and finals will be played off at Field Day, Thursday.

FROSH PLAY 0-0 TIE WITH 7th ARTILLERY

Captain Powell Again Stars for Freshmen with Excellent All Around Exhibition—Yearlings Still Undefeated

FORT TEAM UNABLE TO PENETRATE FROSH LINE

In a contest replete with [illegible] lar defensive tactics the V[illegible] tens held the much larger [illegible] experienced 7th Field Artillery [illegible] to a scoreless tie at Fort [illegible] Friday afternoon.

This tie game leaves the yearlings with an almost clean slate [illegible] not having been defeated or scored upon in four games. The [illegible] have a similar record. The Vermont freshmen now have a record of [illegible] teen consecutive games in the past three seasons without a defeat.

The army men were much older and heavier and with their added experience had a distinct advantage over the frosh, but the latter fought until the final whistle and threw their opponents for several large losses. Both teams presented forward walls which were brick-like. Due to the difficulty with which both teams gained on the ground they resorted to a passing and kicking game. Powell as usual boomed his team out of danger with his long yard punts and gained consistently on exchanges. Powell also stood out with his tackling and ball carrying.

Pelopky, the plucky frosh guard was unable to play on account of a broken nose which he sustained in the game with St. Lawrence. He is expected to start Friday against the Norwich freshmen at Northfield. The rest of the team is in good physical condition and the other Vermont college yearling teams will have to play exceptionally good football to score on the Green and Gold.

TOURNAMENT MATCHES IN TENNIS NEARING END

A new inscription is soon to be added on the Lieutenant Perry Aldrich Cup as an honor annually bestowed upon the winner of each fall tennis tournament. The weeding process is now comprised of only three more matches. Just who's name will be inscribed this year will be determined by the one who reaches the finals at which stage Professor Stillwell has been patiently waiting to meet his pleasure. It will be remembered that M. F. Davis, '28, now of New York City, was the winner of the fall tournament last year.

Borkland and Vail are separated by the net for the decision in the quarter finals. The winner of this match will renew his efforts against Goddard who has reached the semi-finals. From this match Professor Stillwell, who has already reached the finals, will be presented with a worthy racketeer to compete against him for the final decision of this fall's tournament.

What Next?

Union College has introduced touch-football as an interfraternity sport. A schedule has been drawn up such as Hopkins had for baseball last year. We wish them better luck.

Varsity Debate Try-outs

Varsity debating try-outs will be held Monday, November 5. Contestants will be expected to speak for six minutes on the affirmative of the proposition, "Resolved, that this house deplores modern trends in advertising."

Candidates for the team, who have not already done so, should report at once either to Coach Powers at the "Y" office or to Manager Sears at the Sigma Alpha Chi house.

How Gold Prospector "Went Scotch"

Minneapolis, Minn.
April 30, 1928

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.
Dear Sirs:

Two years ago last winter I went into the Red Lake gold fields in Canada. It was a tough trail from Hudson, over 140 miles of snow and ice. There were fourteen of us on the trail going in, and frequently at night when seated around a big campfire some one would ask me for a plug of Edgeworth. These Canadian boys sure like our Edgeworth.

In four weeks' time I ran out of Edgeworth. I was glad to get 'most any old tobacco.

One day, nowever, I dropped in to Dad Brown's tent, a 72-year-old prospector, and seeing a can of Edgeworth on an improvised table, back [illegible] miles from the "steel," I [illegible] once, saying, "Dad, I'm [illegible] tobacco- how's chances for a [illegible] ful?" "Help yourself," he said. [illegible] pulling my heavy duty pipe from my pocket, I loaded it with Edgeworth, packing it in so tightly that I could get the least bit of a draw.

I excused myself for a moment, and stepped outside to remove a [illegible] pipefuls to put in my pouch. [illegible] stepped out, saying, "You're worse than any Scotchman I ever saw." Then I confessed. I told him what happened to my Edgeworth, that I was just dying for a smoke, and he understood right away. He said, "Boy, Edgeworth is mighty scarce in these parts, but I reckon I can spare what's left of that can. Help yourself."

You can just bet your last nickel that I guarded this Edgeworth with extreme care until I got back to the "steel."

Yours very truly,
C. M. Bah

UNIVERSITY SOCIAL RULES MODIFIED

Informal Parties Must Be Chaperoned and Registered in the Dean's Office in the Future

COPIES OF RULES SENT OUT TO ORGANIZATIONS

Copies of the modified social rules and regulations governing the giving of dances have been sent recently to all University organizations. After a conference with representative members of the student body, the Administration decided that a definite standard should be given to informal parties.

Much confusion and misunderstanding has arisen this year over the matter of giving mixed social gatherings that were informal in their nature. There have been instances when different student organizations thought that they were in the right because there were no definite rules governing their actions. Informal parties have been given within the jurisdiction of the University this year and without the permission of the Administration. It has been a matter of misunderstanding, and not willful disobedience of any University rules or regulations.

Dean Elijah Swift of the College of Arts and Sciences believed that all confusion and misinterpretation could be done away with if a definite set of rules could be established governing the social activities of the many University organizations. All informal parties given in the future are to be chaperoned and registered in the Office of Dean Swift.

The modified rules are printed below.

1. Please note the following rules. They involve in some cases a more definite formulation of policy than has previously been the case. Your organization will be held strictly responsible for their observance. The University expects, however, that its organizations will not be bound merely by the letter of rules but will in all cases observe the spirit of these regulations which are designed to provide for the proper conduct of University affairs and to make sure that these are given with suitable dignity.

2. In every instance the organization giving a dance will be held responsible for the observance of the usual rules of decorum, both by its own members, their guests and any others present at the dance. Women, whether college students or not, while participating in affairs given by college organizations must conform to the rules laid down for the behaviour of college women.

3. Attention is called to the standard rule that each society can have not more than two dances per semester—not more than one formal dance being allowed each semester.

4. Dances such as tea dances and informal parties which close promptly at five o'clock or earlier will not count in the quota of allowed dances. (See paragraph 3.) They must, however, be chaperoned and registered at the Dean's Office at least two days in advance.

5. Social mixed gatherings at which University students are present must be registered at the Dean's Office two days in advance with the names of the chaperones.

6. In all cases chaperones must be approved by the Assistant Dean of the Women's College or the Dean of Men. For dances which come under paragraph 3 the chaperones must include one person of at least the rank of Assistant Professor.

7. No dance is authorized until written consent has been given by the Assistant Dean. Assignment of date in the calendar does not waive the necessity of petition one week in advance. Petitions, for permission to hold dances under paragraph 3, properly signed and indicating date, place, floor committee and chaperones—must be in the hands of Assistant Dean Swift one

CHAPEL SERVICES HELD BY REVEREND NICHOLS

Reverend W. S. Nichols, pastor of the Unitarian Church of Montpelier, conducted the services at the Ira Allen Chapel, last Wednesday. Rev Nichols took his text from Psalm 107, "They that go down to the sea in ships,
That do business in great waters,
These see the works of the Lord
And His wonders in the deep."

Sailors of old, adventuring on the Mediterranean Sea brought back tales of adventure full of marvel and mystery. Today the tales of marvelous exploit are brought back by those who fly the ocean, explore the poles, and experiment in science and they are the ones who see the works of the Lord and the wonders of the deep. Today men must heed the modern adventurers to be convinced of the existence of an Almighty being greater than man. Though men may gain the whole world, what does it profit them if they lose their own souls by not revering God?

KITTENS TUSSLE WITH NORWICH FROSH TODAY

Yearling State Title Probable Result of Game at Northfield This Afternoon

Again the Catamount Kittens will be given a hard test to keep their record clear when they meet the Norwich frosh this afternoon at Northfield. Behind the yearlings are a row of victories and a scoreless tie while not a single point has been made against them.

Among their victims are Clark School, Plattsburg Normal and the St. Lawrence frosh and they were tied by the heavy Fort Ethan Allen eleven last week. Only two more games remain on the schedule—one with the Norwich freshmen this afternoon at Northfield and the other back here next Saturday with the Middlebury yearlings. Both of these contests will be state title battles.

Today's game will mark the first time Norwich and Vermont freshman teams have met on the gridiron, but the Norwich institution has adopted the one-year ruling this season and appear to have a good freshman team. The Cadet yearlings have defeated Lyndon Institute, claimant for the schoolboy honors, Montpelier Seminary and Spaulding High, but received a set-back at the hands of Vermont Academy.

The Middlebury freshmen appear to be out of the picture as far as the state championship goes. They were defeated by Clark School of Hanover, N. H., while the Vermonters defeated Clark 13-0. Incidentally Clark has lost but eight games in as many years. Seven of these eight games were lost to Dartmouth freshman elevens and the other set-back came at the hands of the Kittens. If these same Kittens can come through on top today, they are practically sure of the state title and of a clean slate for the season.

The yearlings came through the game with Fort Ethan Allen with minor injuries and will be at full strength for the battle this afternoon. Diliberto, husky center who has been out of the game with an injury since the start of the season, will be back at the pivot position, while Smith, a tackle, who has played in but two games so far this season, will be ready to go against the Norwich plebes.

Never admit to yourself your opponent is a better man than you are.

FRESHMAN DEBATERS!!!

Freshman debate try-outs have been postponed to Tuesday, November 6.

CLASS PICTURES

Pictures will be taken of all classes Saturday morning between recitation periods. President Bailey directed that periods will end ten minutes early, each hour, and each class will be assigned an hour for their picture. These assignments will be posted on the bulletin boards Friday or before. Because of the cooperation of the administration, all students should be present. If the weather is unfavorable, classes will continue for the full fifty minutes and no pictures will be taken.

It's not the start that counts most, it's the finish.

COLLEGE PEP-RALLY FOR NORWICH GAME

Parade, Rally, Game and Dance Feature Key and Snake Week-end

CITY HALL PARK SCENE OF TONIGHT'S PEP-RALLY

Parade, rally, game and dance will feature the Key and Serpent week-end which opens officially tonight when the whole student body in a group assembles at the gymnasium at 7.30 to carry the red-light torches downstreet to City Hall Park where Mayor C. H. Beecher will be the principal speaker. The paraders, as soon as they arrive at the park, will form about the bandstand when a program of speakers, music and cheers, modeled on the lines of the traditional smoker, will be sponsored by the Junior honorary society.

The parade and rally have been initiated by Key and Serpent to stir up pep for the Norwich game. The rally, unlike the conventional smoker, will give the entire student body, both men and women, an opportunity to participate and, with the support that is coming from fraternities, sororities and dormitories as well as from the students as a whole, promises to supply plenty of needed pep for tomorrow's game. It is expected that the various fraternities will march in groups in the line behind the R. O. T. C. Band.

The dance, with Joe Lechnyr's Vermonters furnishing the music, will come off at the gymnasium tomorrow night at 8.30.

FIRST MEETING IS HELD BY JOHN DEWEY CLUB

The John Dewey Philosophy Club held its first meeting of the year Tuesday evening at the Vermonters' Club House. A letter was read from Mr. John Dewey, expressing his pleasure that the club had been named for him and wishing the members success in the coming year. The election of officers followed. Harrison Goddard was chosen as president, Cecilia McDonough, vice-president, and Annette Rosenburg, secretary. Professor Gifford then gave a very interesting talk on "Different Realms of Evolution," after which there was a discussion on the subject. A social hour and refreshments followed.

The club invites to membership all students in philosophy or psychology. The present members, most of whom are Seniors, are especially anxious to welcome Sophomores and Juniors who will be able to carry on the work of the club next year.

Hazel Ladd, '29, has been elected leader of the Women's Glee Club. Miss Ladd has been prominent in the musical productions of the College in the past year being a member of the choir. Miss Ladd belongs to the Sigma Gamma Sorority.

FRESHMAN GRIDSTERS GET BIDS AT NORWICH

Vermont Players to Get Bids at Northfield From Luciani—Council Retains Pledging Schedule

At a meeting of the Interfraternity Council held at the Phi Delta Theta House on Tuesday it was decided that Freshman football men should receive their bids to fraternity at Norwich after the game. Anthony Luciani, the president of the Council, will go to Northfield and will issue the bids.

There was no change made in the schedule. Freshmen and new students will assemble Friday at four o'clock in the Old Mill Chapel to receive their bids. Professor D. B. Carroll will speak to them about the rules and customs in connection with the awarding of bids and pledging.

Last Friday, a meeting was held in the same way for the purpose of giving out rushing dates. Professor Carroll, a non-fraternity man, set forth the facts and rules concerning the awarding of rushing dates. He gave some sound advice saying that if any one should receive a blank card that person should not feel slighted. He has merely been overlooked, a fact which is natural among so many fellows.

The rushing dates this year have been four in number: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday nights from six to twelve o'clock. No fraternity may hold more than one date with any one student. On these nights fraternity matters may be freely discussed and the phases of fraternity made fully known.

From the last rushing date on Thursday until the bids are given out Friday afternoon is a strictly neutral period, during which time fraternity matters cannot be discussed with Freshmen.

You may influence thousands for good or bad in your actions on the field.

A. S. M. E. Sponsors Lecture

A. S. M. E., Vermont branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, will sponsor a lecture Tuesday evening, November 6, at 8 p.m. in the large lecture room of the Williams' Science Hall, entitled "One-thirtieth Part of a Hair." The lecture will be illustrated with moving pictures. All students, especially engineers, are invited to attend.

PALMER AND ROBINSON IN CONDITION TO PLAY

Vermont will be after a triple victory tomorrow afternoon when the Norwich eleven journeys to Centennial Field to line up against the Catamounts in the first State championship contest of the season for the home team. A victory over the cadets would also mean the first victory of the season for the Green and Gold gridders and revenge for last year.

The Catamounts have just completed the third week of secret practice and it seems to be producing results. After the first two weeks of secrecy the team lost to Union and Connecticut Aggies by very small margins. Tomorrow one of the objective games will be played and the team is expected by the coaches to be at the peak of form and condition.

As for the physical state of the squad—Captain Palmer and Jack Robinson who have been forced by leg injuries to watch the last three games from the bench will be in uniform with Palmer a sure starter. He has favored his leg for the State series and is now ready to guard the left flank of the line. Robinson will get into the game but on account of the fine work Segal has been doing on the defense the latter will probably start. Damon's minor injury to his knee is gone and he will be in a tackle berth. Kropper has been unexpectedly called to his home in Connecticut and is not expected to be in Burlington in time for the tussle. The only other variation from the team that faced the Aggies will be the playing of Robbins in the halfback position which J. Scutakes held down last week. This will give Vermont the advantage of Robbins kicking ability but when a heavy line plunger is needed J. Scutakes will be rushed in.

Of course Norwich has one leg on the State title in view of the fact that the cadets defeated Middlebury 13 to 7 last Saturday at Northfield. Word from Norwich has it that the soldiers are far from overconfident because they were entirely dissatisfied with the score of the Middlebury game. In fact in the second half of that contest the Panthers looked far superior to the horsemen. The cadets come here with a record much better than that of the Green and Gold. They have been defeated by Dartmouth only and have scored victories over Colby and Massachusetts Aggies besides the one over Middlebury. They tied Providence in the second game of the year. The five Vermont defeats look quite unimpressive but it will be recalled that Middlebury played at Northfield with a similar previous showing and lost by inches at that. The same old fighting spirit that is prevalent on the eve of every State game is much in evidence today and if it is only carried into the hearts of the cheering section and Fighting Catamount's victory should go the U. V. M.

Norwich will be minus two prominent veterans—Hourin and Canon. Hourin, out with a bad knee, is a heavy, rangy tackle who has been one of the mainstays of the line. Canon, a halfback has a broken ankle. Kane, the horseman's best ground gainer will be in shape. He received a slight brain concussion last week, but after a rest he is suffering no ill effects. Gray Coane, star end, is tied for thirteenth place in the list of leading scorers in the country. He is the only lineman among the leading scorers and his forward pass snaring must be guarded against by Vermont. His thirty seven points were scored on six touchdowns—all via the forward pass—and a goal after touchdown.

Football may be a brutal game, but brutes cannot play it. Courage and initiative are its first requisites.

THE PARADE OF LOYALTY

With the Norwich game comes thoughts of red lights burning on the Maroon side of the field. Friday night red lights are going to light the way for a parade of loyal Vermont students to City Hall Park, where the red light sentiments will be somewhat different.

Norwich and Middlebury like to tell Vermont men and women how much better spirit they have than that shown at U. V. M. There will be Norwich students in town, and the spirit of the rally should make an impression, if everyone is there and doing his duty.

The parade should represent the actual sentiment of the undergraduates for their Alma Mater, their sentiments toward their team, which is to fight and attempt to win, against odds, and their desire not to have their institution lowered, even on the athletic field, by defeat.

Parades end, but the spirit of the parade should be renewed in the Vermont stands at the game. Loyalty is not a duty, but a privilege, and should be developed and not allowed to grow stale.

In the face of odds and disappointments our team has managed to raise its morale to the point where it refuses to be defeated while it can still fight. It takes grit and determination and fight to come back and try harder than before. There isn't a man on the team who will admit Norwich is even capable of winning; the team as a whole won't concede Norwich the victory. With a group like this representing the University, Vermont must have wonderful spirit. She has, and should show it. Every student should have these words first on his tongue Saturday, BEAT NORWICH.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of The Cynic:

[illegible] old story—should we [illegible] Wednesday from 10 [illegible] should we stand around [illegible] Mill to gossip? If I might [illegible]sic as to quote Poor Richard [illegible] been reading "The Way To Wealth—If Time be of all Things the most precious, wasting time must be the greatest Prodigality"—and I should add on Wednesday mornings, two-thirds of the Vermont students are the worse offenders of this axiom I ever saw!" Those students who go to Chapel are very much in the minority.

You will say, "But we don't all stand around in the Old Mill and gossip some of us go to the Library to study."

Yes, I'll admit some of you do study, but if it were Tuesday you would not leave your studying to do at this time, so why leave it on Wednesday?

Recently, I was looking over some old Cynics and in the Senior Questionnaire, I repeatedly found this question—What is Vermont's greatest need? Answer—A Chapel.

Vermont's need was answered by a faithful Alumnus but how did Vermont's student body react? It went—at least a large part of it—to the first two or three Wednesday morning services, but then sometimes it must have shamed the leader to have to introduce the speaker to an audience of fifty people!

Twenty minutes during the college week is not a long time to give to God's devotion. We are old enough to go into Ira Allen Chapel, lay aside our Cynics and participate in the services. I, for one, would be ashamed to have James Wilbur walk into Chapel on any Wednesday morning and count, by the number of students present, the thanks Vermont renders him for his beautiful gift.

Let's study, let's gossip, but let's go to Chapel!

I. H., '30.

Dear Editor:

Would call attention to an oversight in the October 26 issue of the Cynic. Your politics are all right so far as they go. The articles favoring the nominees of the Republican and Democratic parties were indeed timely, but what of the Socialist party? What about Norman Thomas the Socialist aspirant for the same high office that Governor Smith and Herbert Hoover are campaigning?

Mr. Thomas is a high-spirited man. The working people and the colleges are supporting him. And well they might. The man voices some sound logic when he says, "The two major parties are now really one. Raskob was a Republican until ten minutes before he was made chairman of the Democratic national committee. Hoover thought he was a Democrat back in 1920."

"I don't admit that I won't win. I say so," says Thomas. And does he care? Well, he's campaigning in a flivver and having a right jolly time doing it. Doesn't his attitude and his flivver appeal to you?

ELIGIBILITY MANAGERS AID VERMONT ATHLETES

One of the least known yet one of the most important student organizations on the hill is the Eligibility Department which has as its chief function the oversight and maintenance of the scholastic standing of the members of the various athletic teams.

The department is composed of a manager, Charles H. Overly, '29, three assistant managers, Herrick Macomber, '30, John Moore, '30, and Eno Bundy, '30.

Several Sophomores are also working with the department for future positions.

Each month the standing of the men in the various sports is studied up to determine what men are in need of help in order to keep passing grades. It is the work of the manager and his assistants to see that tutoring is given where needed and to see that it is effectively carried out.

The department looks into the standing of men who will later on be out for track, basketball, and baseball as well as of those who are actively engaged in a sport at the present time.

The Eligibility Department was organized several years ago as being a "necessary and proper" organization and has since proved its worth to such an extent that it is now a recognized college activity and a man who is elected to managership during his Junior or Senior year is awarded the Eligibility Department letter.

The Periscope

Bunk makes living easier. There is no question about it and there is no possible alternative in view. Bunk fills in where knowledge drops out. It takes the place of effort and it takes the place of achievement. It appears on tombstones and in weighty scientific tomes. It is a prized possession of both the year-old infant and the creaking centenarian. It is the one thing that makes life attractive to both the imbecile and the learned doctor who scatters half an alphabet after his name.

* * *

Without bunk we could not dare to live. We may complacently and effectively drown ourselves in its embrace without expending the amount of energy necessary for committing suicide in some more messy and honorable manner. Besides if we drown ourselves in bunk we may be socially accepted during and after our college course. We may rise to affluence and importance and achieve a presidency, if not of the nation then of an automatic vending company, an ice man's union or a Boo Wah for High Exalted Pish Posh Club. We may distribute ribbons and wave emblems, we may make love and rear children and do the right thing at the right time and grow fat below and above the ears if we are swathed with the correct amount of bunk. If we use a bit too much of it we may be tagged as a fourflusher and a cheap tin horn. However, we learn man's wants are indefinitely extensible and the amount of bunk one may safely use is almost as limitless. It is the one commodity never known to be a drug on the market. It has had a strong, steady demand since Eve tried to make Adam think she was no longer knock-kneed by covering the homely members with a brand new green fringe of poison ivy. Of course Adam was curious and of course he was a gentleman. On the next day, if the ancient records are to be trusted, Adam too came to believe in bunk. He still does and he still yammers, "Two can live as cheap as one." Eve still kids him in the same old way and yet she believes him when he comes back with the same inane responses.

Right here I have substantiated the statement I made above. I said we could not dare to live without bunk. Well, if we could dare to live without it, why haven't we? Why does Eve still pretend and why does Adam still believe her pretenses and make other in his turn? Why do we, every one of us, rave of "progress" and chortle happily of "advance?"

Frankly, the idea of progress is all bunk. Much touted advances are the same stuff and more of it. For the last 20,000 years man has been a nice, constant specimen. Give him credit for that. He hasn't managed to slip back into being an oyster and he hasn't reverted to crawling on his belly as a means of locomotion. He only does belly-crawling now when he wants to get something he feels he is not sure of obtaining. In other words belly-crawling is a part of the bunk by which he lives.

But man has not advanced. His physical makeup is just as poor now as it was before the sun ever slanted across the foundation of the oldest pyramid. His feet are flat. His eyes are poor. His ears are third to fifth rate and his viscera are woefully unprotected. And his brain is just the same muddled up mess as ever. Man today has no more ability to learn than had his great granddaddy of the cliffs or caves. He is just as weak at birth and at maturity and he is often a far worse specimen than his remote ancestor. There is, perhaps, a better development of bunk in the world today than there was in the world of yesteryear. If this be true a real advance toward comfort has been made but no advance toward reality and the direct coping with actuality is marked by such a development, if it exists.

A genuine "advance" may become visible in the next few centuries, if present trends are followed, as the world becomes smaller and the average man becomes more of a stereotype and a cosmopolite. This "advance" will be a significant thing. It will mark the passing, ultimately, of the ill-adapted and bunk-filled homo sapiens from the surface of a small, uncaring planet.

* * *

Oh, well, it won't come in our day. Our children will never see it. So we may as well forget about it and do the usual thing. We may as well hop onto the band wagon and preach the uplift. We may as well frown on science and hold out a welcoming hand to superstitution and we may as well support the shush-shush policy of the middle ages.

The paragraph immediately above this is bunk. It's crude bunk but it is what 99$\frac{44}{100}$% of us will do. Even Ivory soap can't beat that record.

HANK FULLER.

The Training of a Liberal

(By New Student)

In the early autumn [illegible] and somewhat clumsy [illegible] —part of the proper [illegible] of the period—drove [illegible] of a backwoods sout[illegible] tional college seated [illegible] hind a rather stodgy [illegible] later there was a fu[illegible] dormitory window, up[illegible] ter, and sounds of a [illegible] mage. An attempt had [illegible] blindfold the new boy [illegible] walk on all fours wh[illegible] ers spanked him vigorously [illegible] clapboard. A student [illegible] commotion: "He wouldn[illegible] fought like a tiger. H[illegible] of the boys down."

Walter Hines Page, [illegible] the staid Atlantic, men[illegible] publishing firm, and Am[illegible] sador to the Court of St[illegible] arrived at Trinity Colleg[illegible] Duke University.... It [illegible] like a Horatio Alger st[illegible] ter Hines Page was no Alger he[illegible]

The same spirit which made [illegible] fuse to bow to the hazers at T[illegible] made him refuse to accept [illegible]ly ex cathedra dicta from his pr[illegible] sors. Somewhat of this same spi[illegible] was, Hendrick reports tradition a[illegible] ing, which caused young Page to [illegible] Trinity for Randolph-Macon. R[illegible] at least, chronicles that Page [illegible] clashed with Braxton Craven th[illegible] dividualistic president of the N[illegible] Carolina college. At any rate [illegible] at the Virginia college the young [illegible] unfolded rapidly under the genial [illegible] fluence of freer thought, more mode[illegible] religious doctrine, and greater po[illegible] cal tolerance. Page's experience [illegible] is the experience which makes [illegible] student happy when he meets in [illegible] intimate acquaintance of a rare [illegible] scholarly professor. No commence[illegible] ment oratory that I have heard [illegible] years pays such eloquent tribute to [illegible] influence of the enrichening qu[illegible] of real education as do those pa[illegible] of Hendrick's book* which re[illegible] young Page's ripening under the k[illegible] ing sun of a great teacher—Th[illegible] Randolph Price, professor of En[illegible] and Greek at Randolph-Macon.

For formal scholarship which [illegible] lighted in classifications and ma[illegible] Page cared little. Except for Gil[illegible] and Gildersleeve, life at the Hop[illegible] irritated him.

His letters are full of this disd[illegible] for scholarship per se. But Page [illegible] more than a mere rebel. He did [illegible] stop with damning pedantry as [illegible] many disgruntled students do. [illegible] made a positive effort to get what [illegible] knew was there for him in his e[illegible] cation...."The good and the gro[illegible] that a man gets by contact with [illegible] lenism—that and that alone drove [illegible] .... I manage to steal much time [illegible] read generally in fine literature. [illegible] can never lay Tennyson aside. Sh[illegible] ley, too, I am enjoying at inter[illegible] that I wish were not so far ap[illegible] I am going to begin on Italian n[illegible] I have joined a class to read Dan[illegible] That will take much of the time [illegible] had hoped to put to some French a[illegible] German poetry, but I can't do [illegible] things at once. Just now too I [illegible] enjoying Homer." This persistent [illegible] tellectual curiosity was, I take [illegible] from this biography, the chief dis[illegible] guishing characteristic mar[illegible]ing Walter Page from the ruck of stude[illegible] Education for Page meant, as He[illegible] rick says: "not an addition to [illegible] capital for piling up success, [illegible] merely the machinery for the exp[illegible] sion of his own spirit. He started [illegible] with no equipment—except the equip[illegible] ment of a trained mind, stocked w[illegible] a few ideas."

From old Braxton Craven at Trin[illegible] he learned well at least one lesson—[illegible] responsibility of the state to educate [illegible] youth; and his later life was one [illegible] sistent effort to bring popular edu[illegible] tion to his native North Carolina [illegible] particular and to his South in gene[illegible] At Trinity, too, he garnered the [illegible] nificance of a combination of the [illegible] tical with the ideal. From Randol[illegible] Macon he carried away life[illegible] in religion and politics and [illegible] Hellenism and clear thinking [illegible] writing which marked his [illegible] editor. His enthusiastic love [illegible] lish literature—Shakespeare [illegible] ular—may more than likely [illegible] at the root of his success [illegible] with the English as Am[illegible] ambassador at St. James. [illegible] rick's biography shows us [illegible] lieve it does, the steps in [illegible] tion of a liberal, it also [illegible] most convincingly the sig[illegible] that liberal education in a [illegible] ture service to society [illegible] should be of real significan[illegible] thoughtful student in an [illegible] educational institution toda[illegible]

UNKNOWN THIEF INVADES ROBINSON HALL DORM

Eighty Dollars Stolen From Women's Dormitory Last Monday Night During Dinner Hour

Eighty dollars was stolen from Robinson Hall during the dinner hour last Monday. Some individuals lost as much as $20 and almost every room in the house showed signs of a hasty search. No jewelry was stolen. Rooms whose doors were closed were not entered although the thief went into every part of the building. The rooms occupied by the house director, Mrs. Ryder, and by Miss Edith Sanderson, a missionary on furlough from China who recently spoke before the local Y. W. C. A., are isolated from other rooms in the house. However they were entered and the top bureau drawers showed evidences of a hasty rifling.

No telephone calls were received during the dinner hour. This is a very unusual occurrence and it has been suggested that the thief removed the phone receivers in order to silence them. If any person had left the dining room during the meal the thief would have probably been apprehended.

There are several possible means of entrance to the building and there are various ways of reaching the second floor. The outside doors are commonly left unlocked during the day and early evening while anyone within the building may use any of several stairways to the second floor without attracting attention.

As yet there are no clues to the identity of the robbery. An investigation has been started by the University authorities and a thorough search for the culprit will be made.

Practice House Scene of Dinner Party

On Wednesday evening a formal dinner party was held at the Practice House on Williams Street. The guests were Professor and Mrs. Dean, Professor and Mrs. Burroughs, and Professor and Mrs. Dykhuizen. The dining room of the Practice House looked most attractive in the candle light, and the dinner was a delightful pleasant event. In the accessories including place cards, the Hallowe'en element was stressed.

The hostess this week is Virginia Noyes and her assistant, Lois Fiske. The waitresses are Helen Wilson and Narcissa Bissell, waitresses Janice Davis and Dorothy Emery, and Freshman, Doris

THE PARADE OF LOYALTY

With the Norwich game comes thoughts of red lights burning on the Maroon side of the field. Friday night red lights are going to light the way for a parade of loyal Vermont students to City Hall Park, where the red light sentiments will be somewhat different.

Norwich and Middlebury like to tell Vermont men and women how much better spirit they have than that shown at U. V. M. There will be Norwich students in town, and the spirit of the rally should make an impression, if everyone is there and doing his duty.

The parade should represent the actual sentiment of the undergraduates for their Alma Mater, their sentiments toward their team, which is to fight and attempt to win, against odds, and their desire not to have their institution lowered, even on the athletic field, by defeat.

Parades end, but the spirit of the parade should be renewed in the Vermont stands at the game. Loyalty is not a duty, but a privilege, and should be developed and not allowed to grow stale.

In the face of odds and disappointments our team has managed to raise its morale to the point where it refuses to be defeated while it can still fight. It takes grit and determination and fight to come back and try harder than before. There isn't a man on the team who will admit Norwich is even capable of winning; the team as a whole won't concede Norwich the victory. With a group like this representing the University, Vermont must have wonderful spirit. She has, and should show it. Every student should have these words first on his tongue Saturday, BEAT NORWICH.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of The Cynic:

[illegible] old story—should we [illegible] Wednesday from 10 [illegible] should we stand around [illegible] Mill to gossip? If I might [illegible] mic as to quote Poor Richard [illegible] been reading "The Way To [illegible] alth—If Time be of all Things the most precious, wasting time must be the greatest Prodigality"—and I should add, on Wednesday mornings, two-thirds of the Vermont students are the worst offenders of this axiom I ever saw!! Those students who go to Chapel are very much in the minority.

You will say, "But we don't all stand around in the Old Mill and gossip; some of us go to the Library to study."

Yes, I'll admit some of you do study, but if it were Tuesday you would not leave your studying to do at this time, so why leave it on Wednesday?

Recently, I was looking over some old Ariels and in the Senior Questionnaire, I repeatedly found this question—What is Vermont's greatest need? Answer—A Chapel.

Vermont's need was answered by a faithful Alumnus, but how did Vermont's student body react? It went—at least a large part of it—to the first two or three Wednesday morning services, but then sometimes it must have shamed the leader to have to introduce the speaker to an audience of fifty people!

Twenty minutes during the college week is not a long time to give to God's devotion. We are old enough to go into Ira Allen Chapel, lay aside our Cynics and participate in the services. I, for one, would be ashamed to have James Wilbur walk into Chapel on any Wednesday morning and count, by the number of students present, the thanks Vermont renders him for his beautiful gift.

Let's study, let's gossip, but let's go to Chapel!

I. H., '30.

Dear Editor:

Would call attention to an oversight in the October 26 issue of the Cynic. Your politics are all right so far as they go. The articles favoring the nominees of the Republican and Democratic parties were indeed timely, but what of the Socialist party? What about Norman Thomas the Socialist aspirant for the same high office that Governor Smith and Herbert Hoover are campaigning?

Mr. Thomas is a high-spirited man. The working people and the colleges are supporting him. And well they might. The man voices some sound logic when he says, "The two major parties are now really one. Raskob was a Republican until ten minutes before he was made chairman of the Democratic national committee. Hoover thought he was a Democrat back in 1920.

"I don't admit that I won't win. I say so," says Thomas. And does he care? Well, he's campaigning in a flivver and having a right jolly time doing it. Doesn't his attitude and his flivver appeal to you?

Socialist Sam.

ELIGIBILITY MANAGERS AID VERMONT ATHLETES

One of the least known yet one of the most important student organizations on the hill is the Eligibility Department which has as its chief function the oversight and maintenance of the scholastic standing of the members of the various athletic teams.

The department is composed of a manager, Charles H. Overly, '29, three assistant managers, Herrick Macomber, '30, John Moore, '30, and Eno Bundy, '30.

Several Sophomores are also working with the department for future positions.

Each month the standing of the men in the various sports is studied up to determine what men are in need of help in order to keep passing grades. It is the work of the manager and his assistants to see that tutoring is given where needed and to see that it is effectively carried out.

The department looks into the standing of men who will later on be out for track, basketball, and baseball as well as of those who are actively engaged in a sport at the present time.

The Eligibility Department was organized several years ago as being a "necessary and proper" organization and has since proved its worth to such an extent that it is now a recognized college activity and a man who is elected to managership during his Junior or Senior year is awarded the Eligibility Department letter.

The Periscope

Bunk makes living easier. There is no question about it and there is no possible alternative in view. Bunk fills in where knowledge drops out. It takes the place of effort and it takes the place of achievement. It appears on tombstones and in weighty scientific tomes. It is a prized possession of both the year-old infant and the creaking centenarian. It is the one thing that makes life attractive to both the imbecile and the learned doctor who scatters half an alphabet after his name.

* * *

Without bunk we could not dare to live. We may complacently and effectively drown ourselves in its embrace without expending the amount of energy necessary for committing suicide in some more messy and honorable manner. Besides if we drown ourselves in bunk we may be socially accepted during and after our college course. We may rise to affluence and importance and achieve a presidency, if not of the nation then of an automatic vending company, an ice man's union or a Boo Wah for High Exalted Pish Posh Club. We may distribute ribbons and wave emblems, we may make love and rear children and do the right thing at the right time and grow fat below and above the ears if we are swathed with the correct amount of bunk. If we use a bit too much of it we may be tagged as a fourflusher and a cheap tin horn. However, we learn man's wants are indefinitely extensible and the amount of bunk one may safely use is almost as limitless. It is the one commodity never known to be a drug on the market. It has had a strong, steady demand since Eve tried to make Adam think she was no longer knock-kneed by covering the homely members with a brand new green fringe of poison ivy. Of course Adam was curious and of course he was a gentleman. On the next day, if the ancient records are to be trusted, Adam too came to believe in bunk. He still does and he still yammers, "Two can live as cheap as one." Eve still kids him in the same old way and yet she believes him when he comes back with the same inane responses.

Right here I have substantiated the statement I made above. I said we could not dare to live without bunk. Well, if we could dare to live without it, why haven't we? Why does Eve still pretend and why does Adam still believe her pretenses and make other in his turn? Why do we, every one of us, rave of "progress" and chortle happily of "advance?"

Frankly, the idea of progress is all bunk. Much touted advances are the same stuff and more of it. For the last 20,000 years man has been a nice, constant specimen. Give him credit for that. He hasn't managed to slip back into being an oyster and he hasn't reverted to crawling on his belly as a means of locomotion. He only does belly-crawling now when he wants to get something he feels he is not sure of obtaining. In other words belly-crawling is a part of the bunk by which he lives.

But man has not advanced. His physical makeup is just as poor now as it was before the sun ever slanted across the foundation of the oldest pyramid. His feet are flat. His eyes are poor. His ears are third to fifth rate and his viscera are woefully unprotected. And his brain is just the same muddled up mess as ever. Man today has no more ability to learn than had his great granddaddy of the cliffs or caves. He is just as weak at birth and at maturity and he is often a far worse specimen than his remote ancestor. There is, perhaps, a better development of bunk in the world today than there was in the world of yesteryear. If this be true a real advance toward comfort has been made but no advance toward reality and the direct coping with actuality is marked by such a development, if it exists.

A genuine "advance" may become visible in the next few centuries, if present trends are followed, as the world becomes smaller and the average man becomes more of a stereotype and a cosmopolite. This "advance" will be a significant thing. It will mark the passing, ultimately, of the ill-adapted and bunk-filled homo sapiens from the surface of a small, uncaring planet.

* * *

Oh, well, it won't come in our day. Our children will never see it. So we may as well forget about it and do the usual thing. We may as well hop onto the band wagon and preach the uplift. We may as well frown on science and hold out a welcoming hand to superstitution and we may as well support the shush-shush policy of the middle ages.

The paragraph immediately above this is bunk. It's crude bunk but it is what 99 44/100% of us will do. Even Ivory soap can't beat that record.

Hank Fuller.

For formal scholarship [illegible] lighted in classifications and [illegible] Page cared little. Except for [illegible] and Gildersleeve, life at the [illegible] irritated him.

His letters are full of this [illegible] for scholarship per se. But Pa[illegible] more than a mere rebel. He did [illegible] stop with damning pedantry as [illegible] many disgruntled students do. This persistent [illegible] tellectual curiosity was I take [illegible] from this biography, the chief dis[illegible] guishing characteristic marking [illegible] Walter Page from the run of stude[illegible] Education for Page meant as He[illegible] rick says: "not an addition to [illegible] capital for piling up success [illegible] merely the machinery for the ex[illegible] sion of his own spirit. He started [illegible] with no equipment—except the el[illegible] ment of a trained mind, stocked w[illegible] a few ideas."

From old Braxton Craven at Tri[illegible] he learned well at least one lesson—[illegible] responsibility of the state to educate [illegible] youth; and his later life was one [illegible] sistent effort to bring [illegible] tion to his native North Carolina [illegible] particular and to his South in gen[illegible] At Trinity, too, he gained the [illegible] nificance of a combination of the [illegible] tical with the ideal. From Randolph Macon he carried away a real [illegible] in religion and politics and a [illegible] Hellenism and clear thinking and [illegible] writing which marked his work as [illegible] editor. His enthusiastic love for [illegible] lish literature—Shakespeare in par[illegible] ular—may more than likely have [illegible] at the root of his success [illegible] with the English as Ambassador [illegible] ambassador at St. James. If Hendrick's biography shows as we [illegible] lieve it does, the steps in the [illegible] tion of a liberal, it also shows [illegible] most convincingly the truth [illegible] that liberal education is a man's [illegible] ture service to society. The [illegible] should be of real significance to [illegible] thoughtful student in any American [illegible] educational institution.

HOOVER GETS 2 TO 1 VOTE IN 1104 COLLEGES

In the first American college straw vote ever taken by College Humor magazine and the college dailies Hoover received a two to one vote.

At the September registration this year there were 992,808 students in the 1,104 American colleges, of which 544,684 were men and 348,123 girls. This army of voting voters, most of whom had never had any experience at the polls, having turned to immediate and impassioned politics as the hope of America, the two parties should be interested in figures obtained.

The cooperation of the college press was secured, the majority of them running ballots on their front pages. Voting booths were placed at strategic spots on the campus. Returns were wired to Chicago at the latest possible moment. Thousands of sound trucks were placed by College Humor to fraternities and sororities in every college. In many schools partisanship of the southern states the students did strenuous campaigning for their favorites.

Analysis of the vote showed that Herbert Hoover had the majority of student votes in thirty-eight states and the District of Columbia. Alfred E. Smith carried ten states: Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

Dividing the country into zones, every one of the following eastern states voted for Hoover, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware. The largest vote for him was in Connecticut, nine to one. Smith made his best showing in New York, where the vote ran nine to five for Hoover. The total votes in the eastern states gave Hoover a three to one majority.

In the southern states, Smith carried every state with the exception of West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Arkansas and the District of Columbia. The vote was closest in Kentucky and West Virginia, Hoover winning curiously enough—by only three votes in both cases. Smith's majority was a comfortable one in every other state he carried, Texas and Louisiana going over to his standards four to one. Of all votes cast in the sixteen southern states, Smith led by a majority of seven to five. The heaviest vote was cast in Virginia and the lightest vote in Arkansas.

Of the central states, Hoover carried every one of them. The west central states (North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas) all went Republican by a total vote of three to one.

Hoover carried every western state (Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Washington, Oregon and California). Taking the total of all votes cast in this section he led three to one. In Colorado the Democrats were strongest, three to two, and in Montana the weakest, thirty-nine to one. Of all the states in the Union, Montana was the strongest for the G. O. P. forces.

Virginia cast the greatest number of individual votes for Smith, and Pennsylvania the most votes for Hoover. The largest percentage in any one college was twenty-one for Smith in Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md. The largest percentage for Hoover in any one college was eighteen to one at Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

Will Rogers obtained one-half of one per cent of the total student vote. The following was received from the St. John's Collegiate, Annapolis, Md.: "Hoover 125, Smith 120, Texas Guinan 2. Students dry and faculty all wet."

Hoover authorized the following exclusive statement to College Humor and the college world, preferring it to be put in the third person:

Back in the late 'eighties when the Republican nominee for president was an office boy for a land company in Salem, Ore., a mining engineer mustered into the office and captured Bert Hoover's imagination with talk of that profession. He decided to go to college and become a mining engineer...

And so in the fall of 1891, Bert Hoover became a Freshman in the first class at Stanford. He had one hundred dollars as his capital and he had a big task on his hands to find a means of supporting himself and to keep up with his studies.

"The first job that came to hand was in the office of the registrar, handling the newly arrived students. Then he was local agent for San Francisco papers, which helped out the condition of the exchequer. Next he discovered that there was an opportunity for a laundry agency at the university and he entered into an arrangement for this with the Red Star Laundry at San Jose. This grew to goodly proportions and he eventually named sub-agents in the fraternity houses.

"During his second year he organized and managed a co-operative student boarding house, along with other things. Returning for his Junior year after a second summer with a geological survey of Arkansas, he brought forth a plan for control of student activities by a student body. This was put through and he became treasurer of the student board without salary. He also managed a lecture and concert course.

"Between his Junior and Senior years he spent another summer with the survey. It was while he was a Senior that he met Miss Lou Henry, also a geology student, whom he later married. Receiving his diploma in May, 1895, he worked as a mine laborer for a brief time and then set out for San Francisco to link his fortunes with those of Louis Janin, leading mining engineer of the West, from which point his career began."

The following letter was received from Smith:

"I am glad to comply with the request of College Humor for a short message. It is this. Humor is the balance which steers us in the direction of sanity. Without it man loses his sense of proportion and that means his capacity to appraise human values. With it he sees the other fellow's point of view, a quality especially important with public men.

"A sense of humor is consistent with earnestness of purpose. It conserves our vision without making us visionary.

"I want my message to appeal to youth. That to me is a test of whether the future is with me and also whether my arteries have hardened.

"Keep humorous and don't be cynical. Be funny but don't have that coat of varnish which some folks call sophistication.

"In this spirit I shall conduct my campaign."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Definite steps in the direction of a revival of debating at Norwich have been taken through the formation of the Norwich University Forum, it was announced recently by Professor A. W. Peach, head of the Norwich English Department. This is especially gratifying to us as Vermont is always glad to meet Norwich in any active way which tends to enliven the spirit of intercollegiate competition. Plans are already being negotiated by Manager Sears for a debate with them in the near future.

A committee is at present considering plays to be given by the four classes in the near future. Their choices will be made known by the end of the week, and tryouts announced. All women are eligible for their own class play.

Try-outs have been held for assistant director of the Glee Club.

Tonight, a Home Economics Club meeting will be held at the Practice House at 7.30 p.m. All Home Economics students are cordially urged to attend this meeting.

ANNUAL MILITARY BALL IN GYM NOVEMBER 12

Formal Dance is Sponsored by Scabbard and Blade Society and Military Department

Biggest of events on the social calendar for the first semester, namely the Annual Military Ball, will take place in the Gymnasium on Monday evening, November 12, from nine o'clock to one o'clock. This formal affair which is sponsored by the Scabbard and Blade Society is in charge of Warren A. Dodge, '29, chairman of the dance committee. The other members of the committee are: B. W. Gustafson, L. C. Morgan, J. P. Hyland and R. M. Averill. The committee is vigorously working on this event as it has always been a very popular dance and the committeemen are endeavoring to make this year's ball surpass all previous ones in every respect.

Schemes for decorating the hall are being considered and it is expected that although a military atmosphere will prevail, fraternity emblems and banners will be conspicuously placed about the hall. F. F. O'Keefe will have charge of the decorations.

The dance is the first formal dance this year. Cadet officers will be the only ones who will not be out of place in not wearing the customary tuxedos as they have the privilege of wearing their newly-acquired uniforms.

Music will be furnished by the popular Middlebury orchestra, "The Black Panthers." The orchestra, composed of nine pieces, has played at various social functions on the campus during the past years and has always met with much favor. Those chosen to chaperone the dance are Lt. Colonel and Mrs. F. F. Black and Captain and Mrs. W. E. Lauer.

The Military Ball was supposed to have originated in 1918 when Company A, stationed at the University at that time and quartered in the Gym, held a dance in the fall of that year. This dance proved to be very successful and so another one was held in 1919. In 1920 with Major Larned as chief adviser and promoter, the dance was such an exceptionally brilliant and successful affair that it became an annual affair. Each succeeding year has seen added successes, new features and new ideas. Four years ago the Scabbard and Blade Society assumed the sponsoring of the dance and has done its best to make it what it now is—one of the best dances of the college year. The dance has become so popular of recent years that the sale of tickets has had to be limited in order to afford sufficient room for dancing.

The committee is not alone in its efforts to make the affair a success for every member of the society is also working in co-operation with the committee. The active members of the society are: B. W. Gustafson, J. P. Hyland, H. J. Kropper, C. C. Lyman, F. F. O'Keefe, L. C. Morgan, F. R. Otto, F. E. Robins, L. C. Robinson, R. M. Averill, J. C. Donnelly, W. A. Dodge, and R. H. Stewart.

COLLEGE FRUIT SHOW HAS SUCCESSFUL ENDING

The College Fruit Show, staged in Morrill Hall by the students taking horticultural courses, and open to the public Friday evening and all day Saturday and evening, has proved to be very instructive to students, and interesting to the faculty and townspeople.

The show was mainly of apples of many varieties, displayed in many types of attractive, fancy and commercial packages, especially cartons, plates and pasteboard boxes with individual compartments for separate apples. One thing that made the show of especial beauty was the free use of lace paper, especially around the packages and the interspersing of different colors of shredded oil paper. This special paper was not merely for enhancing the beauty of the display, but is an accessory used commercially to retain the freshness and color of the skin of apples and to retard scalding. Shredded oil paper is used in barrels and boxes of commercial products by most orchardists.

The University from its own orchard contributed the largest number of packages, there being 17 of them attractively filled and dressed up to reveal their intrinsic value. These cartons were filled for the most part with commercial varieties. There were also 15 plates of apples from the University orchard.

The University of Vermont contributed the following: Artic, Jonathan, Pound Sweet, McIntosh, Rhode Island Greening, Baldwin, Bailey Sweet, Yellow Bellflower, Quebec Sweet, Delicious, Fameuse, box of Jonathan, box of Baldwin, box of Quebec Sweet, box of Twenty Ounce, box of Northern Spy, box of McIntosh, box of Delicious, box of Wealthy, box of Golden Delicious, two boxes of Artics, box of Haas, one bushel carton of Artics.

The University of Vermont's display of U. V. M. lettered in two colors, placed in a fancy tray composed of Rhode Island Greenings and Artics, was designed by Miss Alice Miller and Keith Hooker, students at the college.

Attractive Apple Dishes

The Department of Home Economics, under the direction of Miss Bertha Terrill, featured an attractive display of many varieties of apples which were contributed for the purpose by the Winnie Orchard at Milton, owned by the Misses Winnie. Products were: Apple cabbage and apple salad, apple sauce, scalloped apples, apple pine, apple sponge, apple garnish for meats, apple snow pudding, apple meringue.

Apple scab and its control was the subject of a very interesting display in colors by the Department of Entomology, under the direction of Dr. P. J. Lutman. The colored charts showed life cycle of apple scab, its control, immunity and susceptibility of various varieties to this disease. They were worked out jointly by Miss Nellie Bailey and Miss Katherine McCallum.

There were also placed on the tables two large and beautiful relief pictures of Vermont orchard scenes executed by W. H. Crockett of the State Publicity Department. One of these shows the Loomis Orchard at Bennes where crops of 1,000 bushels are produced each year, and the other shows the Kinney Orchards on South Hero in the middle of which was built, thirty years ago, one of the first farm apple storage houses in all New England. In the same room were also displayed several horticultural charts on planting and spraying and other orchard operations.

Dares Fate for Favorite Pipe Tobacco

Gentlemen:

I have a mania for crawling throug a number of unexplored caverns b tween the towns of Woodstock a Mt. Jackson in the Shenandoah Valle One cave was exceedingly dangero with its tight passages, etc. I spe three hours in this cavity, grop blindly with a "dead" flashlight a a severed guiding string.

To cut my story short, I was final rescued by a searching party after terrible experience. It was a wond ful feeling as I sat at the mouth of t cavern telling my friends that I wou not go back in there for love money. I meant it—until I reac for my can of Edgeworth. It was go and I recalled dropping someth during the excitement in the cave.

It is queer what a man will do wh his favorite tobacco is concerned. realized that without my tobacco would be as bad as being lost in t cavity—so I crawled back.

It was a grand and glorious feel as my hand came in contact with Aristocrat of Tobacco.

102 ACCEPT BIDS OF 12 FRATERNITIES

Ten More Men Than Last Year Accept Invitation to Fraternity at Bid Table in Old Mill

STRENUOUS PERIOD OF RUSHING CLOSED FRIDAY

Rushing season for men's fraternities closed last Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock with the giving out of bids in the Old Mill. A record number of freshmen were pledged with a total of 93, 10 more than last year and 15 more than the year before. Members of the Freshman football team who made the trip to Northfield received their bids immediately after the game from Anthony Luciani, '29, president of the Interfraternity Conference.

Contrary to the general belief this year that the number of pledges received from the bid table would be much less than before, the large number that did is quite surprising. It was generally conceded that the freshmen did not take advantage of open house nights with such vigor as last year and due to the inclement weather and monthly examination period the results of bidding are very satisfactory.

Kappa Sigma again leads the list with 15 pledges and three repledges. Sigma Nu with 13 and Phi Delta Theta with 11 are a close second and third.

Immediately following the acceptance of a bid, the men went to their fraternity houses where they received a rousing welcome. Cheers could be heard all over the hill as each fraternity warmly greeted its new members.

FORMER GRADUATE HEAD OF RED CROSS DRIVE

Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance Company, and a graduate from the University of Vermont in the class of 1887, has accepted the chairmanship of the Twelfth Red Cross Roll Call Drive for New York City. In announcing this fact, the New York Times says

"The American Red Cross was highly praised yesterday by Darwin C. Kingsley, who issued a statement giving his reasons for accepting the chairmanship of the Twelfth Red Cross Roll Call Drive.

"Under Mr. Kingsley's direction W. Breese Evans is organizing local industrial establishments, in the hope that 5,000 industries, each of which has an appointed chairman in charge, will respond to the roll call to start this year on Armistice Day."

NEW CUT SYSTEM FOR MILITARY DEPARTMENT

Unexcused Absences Will Lower Grades—Attendance to Count as Fifty Per Cent of Semester Mark

Unexcused absences from military drill will no longer have the privilege of make-up and will lower semester grades as the result of a new cut system which went into effect on Monday, November 5. A special rule is made in the case of Juniors and Seniors taking the advanced course who will have fifty cents deducted from their quarterly commutation of rations for each unexcused absence.

Attendance will hereafter count as fifty per cent. of the whole semester grade for Freshmen and Sophomores enrolled in the basic course while written tests and examinations will make up the rest of the grade. Thus, a student whose attendance is perfect will have a semester grade of no less than fifty per cent. On the other hand absences will lower students' grades as follows:

Absences	Reduction From Semester Grades	Total Reduction
3	4	9
4	4	13
5	4	17
6	5	22
7	5	27
8	7	34
9	7	41
10	9	50

In this way a student who incurs as many as nine unexcused absences automatically flunks. Students enrolled in the advanced course may be dismissed for an unwarranted number of cuts

An absence will be regarded as excused upon written notice from the Dean of College, Major Stanley of the Medical Corps or the Commandant and will have the privilege of make-up at the time and in the manner prescribed by the student's instructor. If arrangements for making up an excused cut are not made at the first attendance after the absence the cut will be treated as an unauthorized absence and the student's grade will be lowered accordingly. All cuts incurred before November 5 may be made up by arrangement with the instructor but if arrangements are not made soon enough they too will be treated as unexcused cuts. All cuts will be made up either by special drill or by examination as the instructor may direct.

This new system supplants the old Saturday morning make-up period which was introduced at Vermont to compensate for the necessity of attending drill at 7:30. Colonel Black, however, commandant of the R. O. T. C. unit at Vermont, after conference with President Bailey and other administration officers, has come to the conclusion that a system which tolerates an almost unlimited number of unauthorized absence is hardly a suitable one for a military unit one of whose aims it is to encourage exactitude and punctuality. As a result this new method, based in principle on the practice of other colleges and universities, has been adopted

KITTENS AND CADET YEARLINGS PLAY TIE

Game Featured by Inefficient Referring—Jay Scores Touchdown for Green and Gold on Intercepted Pass

BOTH TEAMS FAIL AT GOAL AFTER TOUCHDOWN

For the second time in two successive games the Vermont Kittens battled to a tie last Friday afternoon when they met the Norwich frosh on the Sabin Field gridiron, Northfield. The score was 6 to 6. From a Vermont viewpoint the game was a heart breaker with the officiating the direct cause. Several times the Little Green freshmen pushed the ball across the goal line only to be called back by one of the officials for some violation which they did not seem to have executed

Throughout the entire game the local eleven outplayed the cadets and by tearing up the opposing line time and time again the kittens scored four touchdowns in vain. In the second quarter Jay intercepted a forward pass thrown by Tomasi of Norwich and ran 25 yards for a certain score. Powell missed the goal after touchdown by inches

In the third quarter Tomasi scored for Norwich after the Maroon yearlings had made a steady march from mid-field. The point after touchdown was lost when a forward pass was knocked down by Vermont. Norwich threatened only once after that but an attempted field goal in the closing minutes of play failed

The Vermont frosh as a whole played an exceptionally good game and deserved a better fate. Their record was slightly blemished since the cadets were the first team to cross their goal line. Powell and Jay shone in the backfield. Morse played a fine defensive game at end and he and Pelofsky were the only men to play the whole game. Most of the Vermont gains were made through the line due to the holes which Pelofsky opened in the center of the forward wall. Tomasi and O'Brien were outstanding for Norwich

The line-up:

Vermont '32		Norwich '32
Morse	l.e.	O'Donnell
Bowers, Kruse	l.t.	Consoletti
Pelofsky	l.g.	Eaton
	l.g.	Woodward

STUDENTS WILL RAISE FUND FOR MISSIONARY

Vermont Alumnus to be Helped With His Agricultural Work in South Africa

University of Vermont students are raising $500 for R. H. Smalley, Vermont graduate in the class of 1920, and at present an agricultural missionary in Kanene, South Africa. Mr. Smalley is interested in and promoting an educational institution known as the Congo Institute. The Congo Institute is in need of funds as well as other kindred organizations, and the two Student Christian Associations on the Vermont campus have conceived the idea of sponsoring a campaign among the students and faculty for some of the necessary money. Similar projects are sponsored by the Yale students, students at the University of Maine, at Dartmouth, Williams, Amherst and many other colleges. But this will be the first time that the University undergraduate body has ever attempted to give money for the support of a foreign institution with the $100 excepted that the Student Y. W. C. A. gave to the Women's College at Velore, India.

Consonant to the ideals of Mr. R. H. Smalley the campaign will be conducted for voluntary giving.

Mr. Smalley graduated in 1920 and married Miss Ruth Hubbell, '21. Ruth Hubbell is remembered on the campus for her skill as a tennis player. She still holds the championship among the University women. The work of these two Vermont graduates among the African natives certainly deserves high praise, recognition and reward. And it is up to the undergraduate body to do their share in the recognition. Few people give themselves up wholeheartedly to as great a cause as these two young people have done.

In describing living conditions in Kanene, South Africa, Mr. Smalley says, "The people here are poor all right. We have about sixty workmen costing us on the average about five cents a day, and it can be said that they live more comfortably on this stipend than the natives who do not work..... There are many fine things about our natives an outsider could not recognize because of some of their outstanding faults. Most of these may be brought under control through education..... In summing up the inherent traits of our people that keep them from advancing by their own will I should not fail to mention the tendency to cling to old customs, the desire for 'luxuries,' lack of sufficient forethought, and in some cases pure laziness .... Economic conditions of course affect the people to a great extent. There is a rush to the larger centers and the problem

VERMONT TEAM MAKES EIGHT FIRST DOWNS

Norwich 0, Vermont 0. A moral victory for the Green and Gold. The "fighting" eleven took on a new lease of life and clearly outplayed the invaders from Northfield who were decided favorites. The rain made the game all the more interesting and all either team could resort to was straight football, and here was where Vermont clearly outshowed Norwich getting eight first downs to only two for the cadets. Very few passes were tried, Captain O'Donnell tried to get a couple to Coane but it was to no avail as Halligan and Lyman were always there to stop them, Halligan intercepting one of them while Coane stood there dumbfounded and looked on. There was a great deal of punting done and both punters must be given credit for the fine booting. The ball was wet and heavy but very seldom a punt less than 45 or 50 yards. Robbins was doing his punting only four or five yards behind the line scrimmage, but still was cool and got off many fine kicks. He saved the Cats many a time.

The field was a quagmire but both teams fought like dogs. In the first half Norwich threatened to score but then met a stone wall and lost the ball on downs. Vermont had a great chance to score also but on one of its plays near the goal line the slippery ball was fumbled and when the last man was taken from the pile it was a Norwich man thus giving them the ball. Vermont was clearly gaining ground on punts and threatened to push the ball through several times. It was the best game this season and it looked like a new team on the field of battle.

Kane, the Speedy Norwich half was dropped many times in his tracks and many was the time Captain Palmer threw him for a loss

THE GAME

O'Donnell booted to A. Scutakes and then his brother pulled off a twelve-yard gain. Halligan made eight more around left end. Here Norwich held and by a bad pass to Robbins unabling him to boot it was Norwich's ball on our 35-yard line. Kane was thrown for a loss by Segal. O'Donnell punted outside on the 9 yard line. Robbins booted over Kane's head and well into Norwich territory. O'Donnell returned the punt to O'Keefe who fumbled, but it was recovered by J. Scutakes. Halligan gained 5 yards through right guard, Scutakes gained 12 more off tackle. Halligan added 4 diving over the line. Scutakes made 3 more; an incomplete pass and Robbins booted outside to the 12 yard line. O'Donnell returned the punt to the 40-yard line but here Norwich held Vermont to 8 yards. Robbins here placed another one outside on the 8 yard line. O'Donnell booted and Halligan gained 5 yards. Robbins made it another first down but here a 15-yard penalty lost it for them and an exchange of punts ensued. Tim Halligan made it another first down Lyman for O'Keefe.

"Corb" made 4 yards. Scutakes gained but it was lost on a penalty. Titus blocked the punt and here Norwich threatened. However, with a 15 yard penalty and a stone wall defense Vermont held for two downs. The "Ref" allowed Norwich a pass on interference by Scutakes and the teams now lined up on the Green and Gold 8 yard line. It looked bad the Norwich stands were wild. Three incomplete passes and then Palmer broke through and tossed Kane for a loss. Robbins booted to his 30 yard line. No gain by Kane. Halligan blocked two long passes to Coane. O'Donnell punted. Robbins kicked Vermont out of danger. Mace for T. Scutakes and DeRose for J. Scutakes. O'Donnell booted to Vermont's 3 yard line. Robbins booted right back to the 35 yard line. A lateral pass Kane to O'Donnell

TORCHLIGHT PARADE WAS HUGE SUCCESS

Key and Serpent Society Responsible for Fine Success of Innovation Which is Full of Pep and Enthusiasm

WEEK-END CLOSES WITH KEY AND SNAKE DANCE

University of Vermont men and women displayed a type of enthusiasm and pep that aided the varsity football men to account for themselves in the creditable way in which they performed Saturday against Norwich. The torchlight parade was considered in every respect a large success and townspeople and students are looking forward to other such demonstrations. Key and Serpent Society closed their successful week-end with a dance at the gymnasium. At this dance Norwich men intermingled with Vermont men.

Starting from the University of Vermont gymnasium at 7:30 the long torchlight procession led by the R. O. T. C. Band went to Prospect Street, from there to College Street, and down that street to Willard Street where a left turn was made and the column marched to Main Street and down to the City Hall and across the park to the Bandstand.

Led by Cheer Leader Philip Perry and assisted by Francis Bolles, a great deal of enthusiasm was manifest. Pep speeches were made by Graduate Manager H. A. Mayforth, Head Coach R. V. Rattan, Line Coach George Tully, F. A. Winchenbach, alumnus, and Captain Lyon Lanier. The many hundreds of students crowded around the band stand cheering their coaches and football team with songs which could be heard for many blocks. The rally was brought to a close after about 30 minutes of cheering and speeches with the singing of "Champlain," the college song.

Head Coach Rattan was given a rousing cheer when he climbed the platform to speak. He declared:

"I'm going to give you the close-up of an official secret. The team is going to fight tomorrow and is going to win that championship." Assurance was given that the team would be prepared to give the best battle of the season in the game today.

Graduate Manager Mayforth, the first speaker, said that Norwich, by virtue of its defeat of the University of Vermont last year, claimed the 1927 State Championship. Because Norwich did not play Middlebury last year there should be a question as to the championship, he said.

"Our alumni demand that we win the championship this year and there is no reason why we cannot do it," the graduate manager declared.

"Beam" Winchenbach, four-sport letter man, who was graduated last year, was called from the crowd and escorted to the speaking stand. He declared his faith in Vermont's ability to emerge victorious on the field today in spite of its record of no victories thus far this year.

"This year has been a great year for football upsets and I expect Vermont will upset the dope today and come through with a victory. Captain Rattan and Coach Tully have produced a fighting team who will give more than 60 minutes of fight 65 if necessary," he said.

Coach Tully said that he was a witness at the Norwich-Middlebury game last week. He said that he watched Norwich play and was firmly convinced that Vermont would be able to produce a victory.

"Tomorrow is our day. Tomorrow night we want to hear the chapel bell ring," declared Loren Palmer, captain of the team. All of the members of the team are physically fit to play, he said.

SOPHOMORE CO-EDS WIN CLASS TENNIS TOURNEY

Women's interclass tennis matches, which were commenced Thursday afternoon by the Sophomores winning from the Juniors, 7-9, 8-6, 6-2, together with the tennis classes, entirely separate from these interclass games, were especially successful in spite of rainy weather throughout October. Interest and appreciation is due Beatrice Hoskins campus manager of tennis for her success in getting the tournament completed in view of the fact that since the teams were picked there have been so few days suitable for the semi-finals to be played off.

Coaches who have assisted the Department of Physical Education in tennis instructions, were chosen from among the best tennis players on the campus. Under Miss Baldwin's fine direction they have given beginners a good start in the fundamentals of the game. These instructors were: Lenore Aldinger, Elizabeth Allen, Helen Buck, Dorothy Dailey, Frances Hazen, Constafa Holden, Beatrice Hoskins, Bertha Klein, Eleanor Koenig, Dorothy Nash, Joyce Richardson and Eunice Wilder.

BASKETBALL PRACTICE BEGINS IN TWO WEEKS

Vermont's varsity basketball candidates are to report Monday, November 19. There has been some comment in past years that practice has not started early enough. Some of the candidates will not report until after the football season. This early start gives the men a chance to condition themselves for the strenuous season.

This year there will be no freshman squad. All freshman candidates will report at the varsity call. After midyears, freshmen will be eligible for the varsity.

This year the Catamounts will be coached by Claire Cayward. Claire captained the Vermont squad in '24 and '25. He played a back position. Cayward was one of the best basketball men that Vermont has ever had.

Manager Gustafson announces that the schedule is complete and will be announced soon. An extensive schedule is to be played this year. Vermont will not go to the Yale tournament this year at Christmas recess.

There is some promising material this year. Seeley Estabrook, who will captain the squad this year will be available, as will "Tim" Halligan, a fine forward. Lee Morgan a center is to play but may report late because he has just had an operation and is recuperating slowly.

Johnny Pike and Hughie Wallace, a pair of good forwards will see a lot of action this year. Other forward material is Lyman, Durfee, Agel and other freshmen may come up.

Sargent last year's freshman center will prove of value this year. Substitute guards from last year are Dinniman, Tobin, Jackson, Palmer, Mackay, Manning, and freshman material.

Vermont lost three stars last year in Prentice, Price and Marvin. They have been the nucleus of the team for three years. However, prospects for a fine team are in sight and everything points to a successful season despite this loss.

Pipe Convert Ends Agonizing Tobacco Hunt

New York, N. Y.
June 30, 1926

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

I started smoking on cigarettes, but after meeting a young lady for whom men who smoked pipes had a greater charm, I promptly switched to one.

Then my agony began. I tried one brand of tobacco after another, always working on the theory that the more you paid for tobacco, the better it would be.

I tried imported special mixtures. I paid as much as fifty cents an ounce. All to no avail.

Then came the day I tried Edgeworth. It was at a ball game. I had run short of the certain brand I was smoking, and a casual acquaintance offered me a pipeful from his pouch.

Imagine my delight when after the first few puffs I did not feel the old familiar bite. I puffed on, inhaling the delightful aroma, and oh, boy! It was sweet right down to the bottom.

Nothing has separated me from my pipe, or my pipe from Edgeworth, since then.

Yours very truly,

the government now faces is one of getting the country better organized and labor-saving devices into more universal use."

To quote Mr. Smalley further, "The CONGO INSTITUTE is the name that we have given to the central training school for our mission in the Belgian Congo. It is located here in Kanene . . . . . Perhaps if I tell you that everything we do here is to support and advance the Congo Institute and then quote you some instances that come up in it you will understand best about our educational work. The Institute is considered a university in the native mind as it is much higher than anything they have ever known or heard of. . . . . We teach them the New Testament, simple arithmetic, reading, writing and languages. . . . . They devour languages. Most of them know two or three and many of them five. This accomplishment exceeds that of the average American. . . . . Superstition is one of the great problems we have to combat. As yet we have been unable to teach science only through religion. A science is very difficult for the natives to grasp."

University of Vermont students should grasp the great significance in aiding such a project. To follow every step of advancement in the Congo Institute and the problems it has to solve will be like observing the development of human beings under controlled conditions in a laboratory where the influence of Christian civilization plays the molding part.

Book Review

"IRA ALLEN—FOUNDER OF VERMONT"

Editor's Note. The following review of a two-volume biography by Hon. James B. Wilbur is written by John L. Southwick, editor of the "Burlington Free Press" and appeared recently in the "Alumni Weekly." It should be of tremendous interest to the student body for it takes as its subject, Ira Allen, the founder of the University, and is written by a man who has done much for Ira Allen and the University.

Genius has been described as the capacity for taking infinite pains. The Hon. James B. Wilbur, a benefactor of Vermont in manifold ways, would be the last man in the world to lay claim to genius. Yet his fine work on "Ira Allen, Founder of Vermont," is plainly the product of prolonged as well as intense application and infinite pains. It represents years of research and thousands of dollars in service.

Mr. Wilbur in his two large volumes, totaling 1,114 pages, has well illustrated the difference between merely telling about a thing and showing the thing itself in addition. Prof. Moses Coit Tyler, long head of the department of American History at Cornell University, used to tell his students in his seminars they should get their information at first hand. If they were writing about a statement of George Washington, for example, they should, if possible, consult his statement.

Mr. Wilbur has adopted this policy in his work on Ira Allen to a greater extent than we ever before saw exemplified in any biography. Lights that Fill the Skies with Commerce

THE air map of America is now in the making—on the ground.

Ten years ago, there were 218 miles of air mail routes with two station stops; to-day, a network of sky roads bridges the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Can you imagine this growth without electricity—without illuminated airports—without trunk lines studded with electric beacons?

Men of vision are building for increasing traffic of the air. Soon, the skies will be filled with commerce.

Just as electricity is helping to conquer the air, the land, and the sea to-day, so to-morrow it will lead to greater accomplishments in aviation and in every human activity.

A majority of the beacon lights used in airport and airway illumination have been designed and manufactured by the General Electric Company, whose specialists have the benefit of a generation's experience in the solution of lighting problems.

Gold Key Meets

Gold Key will hold its first meeting in three weeks tonight. The meetings for the last two weeks have been postponed on account of rushing and open house. There will be considerable business to come up tonight, mostly regarding the discipline of Freshmen. Because of the election of a new vice-president, the committees have had to be rearranged quite a bit, and President Maynes will bring up the new ones for approval of the society tonight.

UNIVERSITY RECIPIENT OF A COOLIDGE SPEECH

Some time ago the University was made the recipient of an autographed copy of a speech given by President Calvin Coolidge at Bennington, September 21. There were only six copies printed and autographed. The other five recipients were the Vermont Historical Society, Bennington Historical Museum, the Capitol Building in Montpelier, the Coolidge Homestead at Plymouth and John Spargo of Bennington. The speech reveals the intense affection that chief executive has for his native state.

The speech, beginning with the line, "Vermont is a state I love," is handsomely printed on sheets of about 9 by 12 inches on the finest paper manufactured in large type hand set. A neat red border was put around each copy and after they were autographed the copies were framed. The printing is the work of the Ben Lane Press at Burlington. After the six copies were made the type was broken up. The work was done at the request of John Spargo, a nationally known lecturer and writer.

The printing had to be done twice because the first copies were made from the newspaper accounts of the speech, which misquoted Mt. Killington as Mt. Whittier. On receiving the request for the autographs, President Coolidge wrote that he was delighted with the work but that he felt that since the copies were for such public display he wished the wording to be exact. He sent a copy of the text as authenticated by himself and Attorney General Sargent. New copies were made and the type destroyed as before. On Saturday after he had signed the copies the President had the exact text sent to every newspaper in Vermont.

The exact text which is thus printed and autographed is:

"Vermont" from the speech of President Coolidge at Bennington. September 21, 1928.

"Vermont is a state I love. I could not look upon the peaks of Ascutney, Killington, Mansfield and Equinox without being moved in a way that no other scene could move me.

"It was here that I first saw the light of day; here that I received my bride; here my dead lie pillowed on the loving breast of our everlasting hills.

"I love Vermont because of her hills and valleys; her scenery and invigorating climate, but most of all, because of her indomitable people. They are a race of pioneers who have almost beggared themselves to save others. If the spirit of liberty should vanish in other parts of the Union and support of our institutions should languish, it could all be replenished from the generous store held by the people of this brave little state of Vermont."

The copies are autographed as follows: To John Spargo, Calvin Coolidge; To the Vermont Historical Society, Calvin Coolidge; To the Town of Plymouth, Calvin Coolidge; To the University of Vermont, Calvin Coolidge; To the Capital of Vermont, Calvin Coolidge; To the Bennington Historical Museum, Calvin Coolidge.

The Journey to Europe," "The St. Lawrence Canal," "Enemies at Home," "Plots and Plotters," "The Fourteenth State," "British Justice," "British Courts and French Prisons," and many other subsequent developments, the concluding chapter being entitled "He Had Fought a Good Fight."

Mr. Wilbur shows that although Ira Allen wrote many more books and pamphlets than Ethan Allen, he was less known, and includes this significant estimate: "The span of his life from 1751 to 1814 is comparable to the period just one hundred years later in the great changes which occurred, not only in the map of the world, but in the lives of the people. While his part in these world changes was an active one, it is not strange that his service and personality have been obscured in the teeming record of these eventful years, starred as they were with the names of Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, Madison and others of illustrious fame; and marked by changes in thought and political systems momentous to the world."

The breadth of horizon shown throughout the different parts of this monumental work by Mr. Wilbur and his entire grasp of world affairs is indicated by his utterances preceding his dealing with Allen's efforts to secure the construction of a St. Lawrence canal. He says among other things:

"The world in 1796 was unsettled. France for seven years had been engaged in her bloody revolutions, whose horrors make the acts of the present Soviet government in Russia seem trivial. Napoleon with his army was striving to conquer the world. France had taken Holland and Germany and was about to conquer Italy. England's sea power alone saved her from capture. France was at war with England and desired to recapture Canada. England's navy was sailing around the world, taking every port and country that it was thought would strengthen the British Empire.

"England had hopes of making the United States a part of that Empire and was engaged at this time in aggressive acts contrary to the Peace of 1783 and the Jay Treaty of 1794. If the Republicans had been in power in the United States instead of the Federalists at this time, it is quite possible that what is now Canada would be a part of the United States."

After dealing with these conditions which prevailed when Allen sailed to Europe to engage in some speculations and also to promot the St. Lawrence canal, Mr. Wilbur says:

"Allen, on January 19, addressed a letter to the Duke of Portland on the subject of a canal connecting Lake Champlain and the St. Lawrence River, and sent it to his acquaintance, George Hammond, who had been the first British minister to the United States, now Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs at Downing Street. On Saturday, the 23d, he received an invitation to call between three and four o'clock at Burlington House, the Duke's residence. To supplement his conversation with the Duke on Sunday, Mr. Allen, on the 26th, addressed a memorial to him, giving a concise statement of Vermont's resources and its future possibilities. This paper revealed him as possessing the broad vision of a statesman as well as an enthusiastic confidence in the future of the new State.

"In his opinion the building of this canal, instead of promulgating republican doctrines in Canada, as feared by the Duke, would tend to cement the two countries together. The Duke expressed the opinion that Allen should obtain a charter in Canada for a canal, but Allen answered that General Haldimand, Lord Dorchester, and Chief Justice William Smith had informed him that he must apply to the British ministry. He stated that, if the government would enter into an agreement with him, he would undertake to build the canal, if he was allowed to earn not to exceed fifteen per cent on the investment. He wrote to and conversed with leading merchants of London regarding the canal and gave them copies of his memorial to the Duke."

In another chapter Mr. Wilbur quotes a circular which Allen issued relative to the ship canal:

"To the Citizens of Vermont and Inhabitants on the west side of Lake Champlain in the State of New York ... The principal object of this address is to call your attention to the subject of commerce, connected with a ship canal... I introduced this subject to General Haldimand in 1784 in 1785 Captain Twist, engineer of the Province of Quebec...made a survey and reported in favor of a ship canal, sufficient for ships of 200 tons."

Mr. Wilbur says: "Allen pointed out that the building of the canal would tend to keep peace between Great Britain and the United States for commercial reasons." As to exporting Allen added: "I believe it will be granted by Mercantile men, that every bushel of wheat exported from Burlington Bay, through said canal, would be worth two shillings and six pence more than it is now on account of land communication to Troy... Imports of salt, fish and other goods would be cheaper; hence the value of lands would rise."

Readers can judge from these quotations as well as from others of the way in which Ira Allen prosecuted his campaigns for the development of Vermont. He went at the founding of the University of Vermont in the same thorough way.

The whole work is written in a way to make it as interesting as a romance. Indeed American history has no more romantic story than that of the founder of Vermont. The quotations also afford a slight idea of the thoroughness with which Mr Wilbur has gone into every detail in every chapter of this work. It is published by Houghton Mifflin Co. for $12.50. It is handsomely bound in red buckram and gold. It should be in every library in Vermont

VICTORY

Saturday evening University students were glowing with new enthusiasm for their Alma Mater for Friday, one of the greatest exhibitions of spirit was demonstrated in City Hall Park, and Saturday an equally large body of students turned out at a game, in pouring rain, to see their team hold the highly-tooted Norwich crowd to a nothing to nothing score. The team was quite dissimilar to the eleven that played against Boston University, and in the face of great odds played superior football.

The drizzly rain didn't seem to extinguish the fire of enthusiasm of the Vermont rooters. The meeting was the best that has been held for some time.

An evidence of increased spirit was the desire of several hundred U. V. M. men to remove the flaming Norwich redlights from the gridiron. The cadets seem to take for granted that Vermont students are prone to ... on the wrong side, because redlights have been allowed to burn in the last two or three years, unquestioned.

Ten more Freshmen were pledged to fraternities this year than at the same time last year. Fraternity spirit is a fine thing but for the benefit of Vermont it is possible to say that it has been carried too far in the past. The University should be put before fraternity and not fraternity before University, as appears to be the idea of many. We hope these newly pledged men will carry through their four years and hand down to younger classes, the idea of University loyalty and welfare before fraternity.

Today is election day throughout the United States. Twenty million more voters have registered in this election than in the previous one, according to an estimate made recently. Little change is offered in government by either party and we wonder why this sudden interest in presidential elections.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Did you ever go to a Hard Time Dance? Purdue has made this annual event a tradition on their campus. Wear your oldest and raggedest, plus a pleasant smile—solved, the eternal question of "What to wear?" Can't you imagine how Vermont co-eds and co-eds would fall for the idea of something new and diverting? Instead of dolling up in your most ... or somebody else's and going and doing the same old things, better to go knowing that you were really out for the best time you ever had. Who wouldn't be keen about a novelty like this?

For instance since the gym floor, just at present is on a par with that of most any barn let's carry out the idea and dress ... like one, with all the fixings. That should be informal enough for anyone and scare away all the high-hat ones who must dress up. Nothing must match—shoes and stockings, trousers and coat or what have you? Naturally, a prize for the most original, worst looking, and least expensive costume, would be in order.

The all-important thing is to come in your most rollicking, merry-making mood, prepared for fun of the most carefree sort. With a hot, harmonious hobo band syncopating can't you picture every inch of that gym floor packed with a happy crowd of camouflaged us, having the highest time of the year?

Note: Purdue takes in a big sum every year at their Hard Times Dance—why don't we?

Healthful Atmosphere

The atmosphere at Haverford is unusually conducive to longevity according to a dispatch from the C. N. A. News Bureau. A graduate of that institution has 50 per cent. more chance of a longer life than a man who drops out before he gets his diploma; 75 per cent. of the 1,731 graduates are now living, while only 50 per cent. of the non-graduates are alive.

No Classes for Yale

Yale will celebrate its two big football games by taking complete holiday from any and all classes. On Saturday, November 17, when Yale plays Princeton, and the following Saturday when Harvard invades New Haven, all classes have been suspended.

Was It a Dream? Was It a Dream?

Take ... that light out of my eyes, Charlie. Stop it, I tell you! It's ... I can't see a thing. My ... For God's sake, Charlie, take that light out of my eyes. Please please, Charlie. I tell you it's blinding me. I can't see. I can't think. My head is whirling. Won't you please turn it off. It's ... burning right into my eyes. It's burning them—it's blinding them. Won't you please, Charlie?

It's warm here. It's soft and warm. The air is filled with the scent of orange blossoms. I can hear some birds singing not far away. Yes, they're singing, they're not just chirping. They must be beautiful birds. Everything's beautiful here. Soft, easy and beautiful. I feel free—free from all work and duty, free from all the petty worries I once knew. Yes, I think I was once harassed by work and worry. I'm not certain, but I think so. Well, I'm free now.

What's that? A group of army officers being drilled by some imbecilic looking fellow wearing a small green hat? That small green hat ... familiar. Wonder where I saw it. And say, those officers look familiar. Why, I think I once knew that man—that sergeant. I think ... well, Sergeant Conner! Just look how well he responds to the commands. Sure knows his military cold! Good natured, too. Like his grin even if army officers aren't supposed to grin. Shows they're human, thus contradicting their stand on the idea of 7.30 formations. Wonder how come the fellow in the green cap with the yellow button, uh huh, a yellow button on top of it—wonder how come he's drilling all those men. This must be Utopia.

What's this now? A classroom? In this old wooden building with a big sheet-iron furnace in one corner? Why there's the same fellow with the tiny green hat and yellow button and the same officers. The young and foolish gink is asking questions. The men before him are grinning sheepishly and evading the answers.

"Sergeant Conner, what should a scout do at night?"

"Go to bed."

"Very good, sir. Now you know that there are all kinds of scout patrol formations. In view of this, what do you call a man who crawls along a fence until he reaches a house and then looks through a window to see what is going on?"

"A Peeping Tom, sir."

"Yes, but supposing he's on military duty."

"Then he's a gallant hero, sir."

"Now then, what should the leader of a patrol do when he comes to a river?"

"Drown himself."

"Water pollution is a serious offense, you know."

"Yes, but a serious offense is the best defense. (Bury Middlebury!), and the best defense is always desirable in military maneuvers."

"Hmm. Well, yes. Just one more question, Sergeant. Supposing you were getaway man in a scouting patrol, and during an unfortunate scrimmage you were blinded and lost both your legs, as well. What would you do?"

"I'd shoot myself and then run back and report the casualty to the company headquarters."

"Now, Lieutenant——"

Charlie! Charlie! It's dark here, I tell you! Gee! It's dark. It's pitch dark. I can't see a thing. It's so dark that I can really feel the inky blackness. Please turn on the light Charlie. It's dark. No, I'm not afraid, but it's awfully dark. I can't see. I can't think. It's dark, very dark, very dark, very dark Charlie. Please turn on the light, Charlie.

COMMITTEES NAMED IN WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB

Women's Press Club met Friday afternoon at the Theta House for the first social meeting of the year. Prior to the meeting a group picture was taken of the club at the Vermonters' Club House.

New committees were appointed to serve in carrying out the routine of Press Club's activities. Gertrude Bingham, Elizabeth Clark, Dorothy Bailey, Florence McKenzie and Margaret Rice were chosen to comprise the newspaper committee. The school paper workers will be Margaret Stanley, Winnifred Stone and Sara Westcott.

Professor Leon W. Dean, faculty advisor of Press Club, was present and congratulated the club upon its excellent work and service to Vermont. Dainty refreshments of tea and wafers were served by Dorothy Cottrell and Margaret E. Miller, who were hostesses on this occasion.

THE BOOKWORM

Time—10:30

Scene—Billings Library

As the curtain goes up several people are seen strolling about the stage. There is a large circular table in the center foreground. Around it is a row of chairs. Magazines are strewed over the reading table. Two people are seated at the table and none of the strollers pause there for an occasional rest period during their marathon walk.

Red. (Entering from door L. and approaching reading table). Hi, Tim! (Slams Tim on back and guffaws loudly.) Not turning into a bookworm, are you eh Tim? (Glances contemptously at other person seated at table. The other is a student and glares at the disturbers.)

Tim. No danger Red. Don't you know me yet?

Red. Sure do old chap. C'mon down to Rand's for coffee and—(They leave. The student resumes his studying but is interrupted by the entrance of a Sophomore man walking as though he owned the place and followed by a Frosh who walks as if he didn't care a damn who owns the place. The student looks beseechingly at both. He begs for quiet with mute imploring eyes. Fagin-like the two ignore the student. They yell to one of the walkers who is now seated at the table.)

Frosh. 'Lo boy, still dreaming of the Plasterers Ball?

Walker. Nope. Thinking of all the pie eating and milk drinking contests I missed by not going to the Bayside Barn Dance.

Another Walker. Mighty glad you don't eat where I do. We have one of those contests every meal and the prize is what you get. No malice aforethought and mightly little to raise malice on afterward.

(The student by this time has gone insane. He leaps to his feet and is seen galloping æsthetically and diagonally across the library. He hurdles the table, drags books from the shelves and tears their pages into confetti which he scatters behind him. The walkers applaud vigorously. The Frosh and Sophomore begin to talk with co-ed walkers. The audience leaves in disgust as the curtain refuses to fall.)

Prejudices and biases are a part of the make-up of every one of us. Where they come from we do not always know. Neither do we realize how deep-seated they are until we encounter some one with equally unreasonable ideas which conflict with ours. Then we mark the other person as a despicable bigot and in so doing we give our own irrational beliefs a little more strength. We saddle ourselves with just a little heavier load of misconception and ideational blindness.

I am firm-willed.

You are stubborn.

He is a pig-headed idiot.

The above comparison of character is one which almost all of us employ. Of course when we use it we show one thing very clearly. We demonstrate our own pig-headedness and our own lack of a broad view.

* * *

Prejudice appears very often in the realms of politics, religion and morals. This is but natural as most of us know very little of any of these subjects. They are vague things at the best, things about which even the expert knows little, if anything, that is definite.

No one knows what the ideal state would be like. Man has built Utopias ever since his ancestors walked down out of the trees. He will continue to construct them until he passes out of existence as a species.

These Utopias have had one striking feature in common. They have failed to work. Going back to the excellent code of laws established by Hammurabi about 2250 B. C. we find one outstanding thing. The laws were unjust to many classes of people. They failed to respect the rights of some humans. They did not establish an ideal working state.

At the present time Italy furnishes us a fine example of a system that can't work. The country is dominated by the grotesque figure of Mussolini, the one time Socialist, now power drunk and strutting bantamlike to a certain fate. Nearly all Dictators have a common end. Revolution overthrows them and the system they have built disintegrates with their passing.

The liberal element of the world agrees Mussolini is at best a comic figure and at worst a grave menace to international peace. FRESHMEN WILL PLAY POST-SEASON CONTEST

Arrangements have just been completed for the Freshman football team to play a post season game in the southern part of the state at Rutland November 15

An all star team made up of strong men from the Marble Valley League of high school teams from West Rutland, Black River, Brandon, Pittsford, Middlebury, Fair Haven and Vergennes will be put together to meet the Frosh

In spite of the fact that a certain amount of strong opposition may be shown in the opposing team's line the lack of any particular organization there would perhaps give the U. V. M. team a decided advantage

SOPHOMORES EXCEL IN TENNIS

Helen Buck and Ellie Koenig downed Dot Dailey and Fran Hazen 7-9, 8-6, 6-2 in one of the most closely contested matches ever played by the women on this campus. The first two sets were played on the Weather Bureau Courts and the last, due to darkness, was staged in the cage. Beatrice Freeman, '32, refereed the match.

Features of the contest included the difficult and swift service of Helen Buck and the accurate placing of Koenig as well as the perfect cooperation of these two representatives of the class of 1931. Fran Hazen's play at the net was fascinating to watch and very effective in collecting points for the Juniors. Dot Dailey played a good all-round game but her service and her fast forehand drives deserve special praise

Game after game went deuce and the first two sets required extra games, but in spite of the more decisive score of the last set, it was the most closely contested and the most interesting to watch. What the players lacked in form they made up in swiftness.

At the same time the Sophomore second team was busy trouncing the Juniors 6-3, 6-0. Judy Housley and Mae Tinkham played a pretty game for the sophomores and displayed excellent form at all times. Elizabeth Robelen and Inez Bellmore played a good game but theirs was a losing fight from the beginning, this in spite of bursts of brilliant playing and many close games. Dorothy Nash, '30, served as official at this match.

CO-ED FALL FIELD DAY ATTRACTS LARGE CROWD

Frosh Excel in Hockey and Volley Ball While Sophs Excel in Tennis—Supper Closes Exercises

With honors divided between the two lower classes, Freshmen excelling in hockey and volley ball and Sophomores in tennis, the outdoor season of women's sports was brought to a close on Thursday, November 1, with the annual Fall Field Day. A goodly number of students were on hand when the tennis and hockey matches began shortly after four o'clock, and the number increased as class rooters hurried to cheer these teams which had fought their way to the finals

The hockey game started off with a bang and whirlwind playing characterized the afternoon. During the first half, after a clever run down the field, Marion Berry hit the ball between the Senior goal posts for the one and only score of the game.

During the second half the Seniors strove desperately to score and time after time Nelson, Hoskins, and Corbin rushed the ball down the field only to have it turned back by the quick hand of Linney.

On the defense Hawley and Everest starred for the Seniors and Thibault, Bray, and Humphries for the Frosh.

The line-ups follow:

Seniors: c.f., Hoskins; r.i., Everest; l.i., Nelson; r.w., Baldwin; l.w., Corbin; c.h., Hawley; r.h., Bassett; l.h., Backus; r.f., Prentiss; l.f., Smith; g., Whitney.

Freshmen: c.f., Mandigo; r.i., Thibault; l.i., Berry; r.w., Humphries; l.w., Crane; c.h., Rauh; r.h., Bray; l.h., Gay; r.f., Linney; l.f., Lowd; g., Stoney.

In the Yale Daily News three communications were carried from associate editors in which the News and individuals connected with it are arraigned for alleged "playing up" of non-college Republican news and the "playing down" of Democratic news

The communications are from Ralph D. Paine, Jr., president of the college Al Smith Club; James T. Patterson Jr., and R. M. Calfee, Jr.

SUPPER FOLLOWS VOLLEY BALL CONTEST

After the games the classes gathered on the Grassmount lawn where a supper of baked beans, ham, pickles, pumpkin pie, cheese, fruit and coffee was served around the class bonfires. This was followed by competitive singing, which the seniors, under the leadership of Marion Everest, won by a unanimous vote of the judges. Miss Baldwin, Miss Parker and Miss Muse Marion Backus, president of W. A. A., introduced the speaker. Miss Young, director of physical education at Middlebury, Miss Rosevear, and several Middlebury seniors were present

Miss Young spoke a few words of congratulation on the success of Field Day and expressed the pleasure of the Middlebury delegation at being present. Miss Whiting, assistant dean of women, spoke in a charming manner, urging the cooperation of the girls.

Mrs. Florence Farr Hard, as representative of former W. A. A. presidents, was eagerly welcomed. She stressed the importance of athletics in the formation of friendships by saying, "You freshman girls will find the girls with whom you are playing on the teams now will be your best friends all through college." She praised the freshmen for winning so many points, and closed with a lamentation for the seniors who lost first place for the first time since they came to college. "But then," she added with a sly smile, "you seniors must remember that the freshmen have youth in their favor."

"Twink" Whitney announced a "Health for All" and "All for Health" contest to begin at once. Health cards may be procured from the health director of the various dormitories or from Miss Cummings.

Dith Wheatley took a vote on how many were in favor of renting a camp on Coates Island for the season. Anyone wanting to hike out, ride horseback, or even roller skate would be cordially welcome. W. A. A. credit could be gained by these hikes The vote was unanimous for the camp

Marion Backus, president of W. A. A. brought up the question as to whether or not the W. A. A. awards should be white sweaters or green blazers. Those in communication with other colleges have found that practically all have given up sweaters and are now awarding blazers. A vote will soon be taken on whether the green blazer with gold insignia will be awarded in place of the white sweater

Marion Baldwin was awarded the Old English V. This is the highest honor given by W. A. A. For this award a girl must have made two varsity teams, and have 1,200 W. A. A. points in addition to 400 gained in her Senior year. She must also have a high scholastic average and be typical of the true sport.

Lenore Aldinger and "Dot" Bailey received their U. V. M., and sweaters were awarded to Peg Corbin and Laura Smith.

The Varsity Hockey Team has been picked as follows: c.f., Bea Hoskins; r.i., Natalie Hawley; l.i., Esther Nelson; r.w., Doris Humphries; l.w., Marion Baldwin; c.h., Fran Howley; r.h., Marion Backus; l.h., Jean Wappler; r.f., Barbara Loud; l.f., Mildred Linny; g., Mildred Whitney.

Those chosen for the Varsity volley ball team are: "Dith" Wheatley, Esther Nelson, Bert Klein, Laura Smith, Eleanor Wood, Helen Taylor, Lillian Mount, Winifred Graham, and Doris Humphries.

The all-sports cup usually awarded in the spring was presented to the Sophomores

SENIORS BOW TO FRESHMEN IN VOLLEY BALL

In an interesting and rather well played game the Frosh trimmed the Seniors 13-9, 15-13 in volley ball. The Senior team, with only three players who hadn't just come from the hockey field put up a valiant effort and for a while it looked as though they would turn the tables on their opponents and avenge their earlier defeat, but the fates were against them.

During the second game the Seniors displayed better teamwork and seemed for awhile to really get their gait, but they were unable to keep it up and the final score registered another victory for the entering class

THE Panama Canal diggers had engineering brains and money aplenty. But they were blocked by the malaria and yellow-fever bearing mosquitoes, which killed men by thousands.

Then Gorgas stamped out the mosquito. The fever was conquered. The Canal was completed.

The importance of little things is recognized in the telephone industry too. Effective service to the public is possible only when every step from purchase of raw material to the operator's "Number, please" has been cared for.

This is work for men who can sense the relations between seemingly unrelated factors, men with the vision to see a possible mountain-barrier in a molehill—and with the resourcefulness to surmount it.

A HISTORY OF THE MUSEUM

G. Prouty '29

PART V

Periods of Later Ages—With the [illegible] it is followed by what is known as the Middle Period. Our specimens of this time begin with the rocks of Connecticut River sandstone of which the Library building furnishes good examples. On the most slabs which furnished material for this stone there are innumerable foot prints of animals which seemed for the greater part of the time to walk on their hind legs though they did now and again come down on all fours. There is a very large slab of this stone, a fossil mud flat which bears some large tracks of one of these unknown animals. In the cases there are others smaller.

Perhaps the most generally interesting of the later periods is the Cretaceous or Chalk. In this period we find [illegible] upon modern fishes and modern trees. Fortunately the life of the Cretaceous is well exhibited in the Museum by numerous specimens, some of them of unusual excellence, from the chalk of Europe and that of western Kansas. For example, one case is filled with very perfect impressions of the leaves of familiar trees, poplars, beeches, willows, etc. It is interesting to compare the contents of this case with those of the just east containing the coal plants. At a glance one can see the change in vegetation of the two periods and though these cases exhibit only a very small bit of the whole vegetable life of either time, yet the specimens are very typical and therefore do indicate the life of the globe in those times.

The same advance towards modern forms which is seen in the plants is also as well shown in the animals. There are several cases filled with remains of reptiles and fishes of the chalk of Kansas. One of the fish skeletons is said to be with one exception the finest ever found in the Kansas beds. It is now in five slabs because there is nowhere room to display it as a whole, but whenever room is available, these five can be put together and then the entire skeleton will appear and measure from head to tail, thirteen feet. There is another slab of chalk in which is part of a fish that must have been much larger. Then there are numerous fragments, jaws, fins, etc., of smaller fishes. Of the mollusks, and others of the various groups below the vertebrates, there are some very pretty specimens of many different sorts. Some of these retain the original pearly nacre of the shells and are more attractive than most fossils.

After the Cretaceous, comes the [illegible] and with it the [illegible] age ends. The Tertiary has a peculiar interest to the student of Vermont geology because, after passing through all the long ages since the close of the Ordovicians without any deposits of rock strata, Vermont in some unaccountable way took upon itself some beds of Tertiary material, it can hardly be called rock in the ordinary sense. Near Brandon there is a small bed of lignite, half wood, half coal, in which are most interesting fossil fruits and seeds. Altogether we have abundant evidence that in the Tertiary there were forests of trees like those of the Southern States today growing in this State. None of the species are probably the same as any now growing anywhere, but all are similar. Most strangely there are no animal remains in the lignite so far as we can discover.

It is not to be imagined that no animals lived in the forests of this time but somehow they have left no account of themselves.

The last age in the great geologic procession is the Quarternary. This immediately precedes the present. It was a singular age and subject to very diverse conditions. In the early part the land northward rose a thousand feet or more and as a result vast masses of snow and ice accumulated in the northern regions and immense glaciers slowly moved down over the whole United States north of the Ohio River. While this was going on no life could exist and no fossils formed. We have instead smoothed and straited ledges and boulders rounded, scratched, and transported, rocks ground into mud or sand and such like phenomena. Specimens of these results of glacial action are common and fine examples may be seen in the Museum. Later the land sank, the sea came in over parts of it and numerous old sea beaches with numerous shells are now found. Then at the close of the period, the land rose again somewhat, though not as high as at first, and now animals and plants could live in this region.

The lower forms of animals and, probably all the plants were the same as are now living, but the mammals were not yet brought to modern forms. Here in Vermont there were at least two species of elephants and almost certainly other forms wholly foreign to this part of the world since the memory of man. Even later than this elk and moose were common here.

Did they fight? And how! Did they deserve to win? Look at the newspaper accounts of the game. Was Norwich swept off her feet? Ask anybody that witnessed the contest.

How they did fight. They played the best football seen here this year and deserve a world of praise. With Norwich a 6-1 favorite it looked bad for the Cats, but they upset the dopesters and outplayed the cadets in every department of the game. Vermont's interference showed up considerable, it was a great improvement.

The Norwichites seem to offer the alibi, "If there was only a dry field." That's a lot of bologna. The way the Rattanmen were battling Saturday it would have taken the whole corps to beat them and then some. It was a new team, the usual raggedness was lacking, penalties were few and they did surprisingly well in not fumbling more than they did with such a wet ball.

If Vermont can display that fight in the remainder of her contests it is goodbye to the rest of her opponents.

It was seen that the student body was behind the team by the way they paraded Friday night and by their presence, even though it poured Saturday afternoon. A similar showing in every contest would place the Green and Gold on a different rung on the ladder of college athletics. It can be done.

Each and every player deserves all the praise that can be given him for the fine football they demonstrated. Captain Palmer was probably the most outstanding player while he was in the game. Time and again he was the first man down under a punt and the shifty Kane was dropped in his tracks. It was tough that "Sap" had to leave the game, but his leadership was what kept the men fighting.

Norwich was at a loss most of the time and kept punting most of the game. She was waiting for a break, but it never came. With Coane closely guarded by Halligan and Lyman and a stone wall in front of them, the Maroon and Gold backs were "buffaloed." Coane several times tried to slip away unnoticed, but there was always some Cat's eye on the army rat. Even Haurin could not stop the Cats, and he is their greatest defense man.

Levine, Robbins, Halligan, Segal, Nilson, in fact, all of them played a stellar game.

"Bump" tried Fisher's trick when the game was about one-third over. He didn't wear a helmet. It reminded us a lot of that flashy Connecticut back, but of course there was a little difference in size.

When a substitution was being made you couldn't hardly tell who was leaving the field. Even their own mothers didn't know them, they were so covered with Centennial Field. However, just think of all the handsome boys we are going to have now after their beauty treatment of a mud bath.

Next week we tackle Rensselaer at Troy but the following week the Cats pay the Boys in Blue a visit. Every ed and co-ed should be down to that contest if they have to hitch on to the back of a car in a baby carriage. Middlebury has got to be buried and it will take student support to help win it. So save up your pennies by abolishing lipstick and gum for the next two weeks and be there when we "Bury Middlebury."

Grieve Loss of Hens

The University of Arizona has suffered a severe setback in the egg-laying contest in which its prize poultry is entered. Last week five valuable hens who were leading the contest were stolen. Without these hens the records are incomplete and consequently the University's chances are practically ruined. Terrible catastrophe, indeed.

netted 12 yards. Robinson for Segal. Here Norwich tried several laterals but Levine threw O'Donnell for a 12-yard loss on the last one. Halligan intercepted a pass and Robbins booted Norwich could gain nothing and Kropper intercepted a pass.

HALF TIME

Robbins booted off and the ball was run back ten yards before the cadet was down. Here Norwich gained little and O'Donnell booted. This exchanging of kicks continued for a good five minutes Vermont ever gaining. At last Vermont was on the soldiers' 15-yard line as a result of DeRose carrying the ball to two first downs in succession. Lyman crashed through the line but fumbled but T. Scutakes recovered on the 4-yard line. Here a trick play failed to materialize because of a slippery ball and Vermont fumbled to lose it to Norwich. Here O'Donnell quickly booted out of danger and it was just a series of punts and plunging for the rest of the game with the Cats still gaining on their punts. When the game ended the ball was well in Norwich territory.

Hourin, O'Donnell and Kane starred for Norwich while Captain Palmer, Halligan, Levine, Robbins were the prize winning Cats for Vermont.

The line-up and summary:

RENSSELAER LIKE CATS PLAY SCORELESS GAME

Rensselaer, the team Vermont meets there next Saturday, played to a scoreless tie with C. C. N. Y., while the Catamounts were doing the same with Norwich on Centennial Field. The week before, R. P. I. trimmed Union by the score of 14 to 0 which looks bad for the Vermonters who lost to Union 7-6. However, Williams defeated the Troy boys 26-7 and was in turn beaten by Columbia 20-6.

Last Saturday Middlebury won from Hamilton 8-0, but lost the two previous games to Springfield 18-6 and to Norwich 13-6. Springfield, Vermont's opponent on Thanksgiving Day, was beaten by Boston University in a 7 to 6 contest and has also lost to New Hampshire State 6-0.

The following is a list of football scores of games played last Saturday:

Vermont 0, Norwich 0.
Yale 18, Dartmouth 0.
Harvard 39, Lehigh 0.
Amherst 13, Mass. Aggies 0.
Brown 6, Holy Cross 0.
Boston University 7, Springfield 6.
Boston College 60, Manhattan 6.
Maine 0, Colby 0.
Tufts 0, New Hampshire 0.
Bowdoin 12, Bates 0.
Connecticut Aggies 20, Coast Guard Academy 0.
Columbia 0, Cornell 0.
Georgetown 7, New York Univ. 3.
Princeton 6, Ohio State 6.
C. C. N. Y. 0, R. P. I. 0.
Army 38, DePauw 12.
Williams 37, Union 0.
Middlebury 8, Hamilton 0.

Of Sandino's original army of 1,200 men, 2,510 have now been killed or surrendered.—San Francisco Blue Cow.

MIDDLEBURY FROSH TO BATTLE KITTENS

Blue and White Yearlings and Freshmen To Battle For State Title In Game At Centennial Field Saturday

PANTHER FRESHMEN DEFEATED NORWICH '32

The Catamount Kittens play the last game on their present schedule tomorrow afternoon when they meet the Middlebury Freshmen on Centennial Field. This is likely to be the hardest contest of the season and the Vermonters will do well to come out on top. To the winner of tomorrow's game goes the Vermont State title, which the Catamounts have won for the last two years, and the Frosh will have to fight to annex the title for the third successive year.

The Green and Gold team started the season with a rush by defeating Clark School of Hanover, N. H., Plattsburg Normal and the St. Lawrence Frosh, but since then a tie with Fort Ethan Allen and another with Norwich have been the only results. Last Friday the Norwich Freshmen had the distinction of being the first team to score against the Kittens this season and the game ended in a tie 6-6.

At first the Middlebury Yearlings appeared to be out of the picture, but they succeeded in tramping on the Norwich Plebes 19-7 while the Kittens got only a tie game from the Cadets. Also Middlebury defeated Plattsburg Normal as did the Vermonters. On the other hand, Middlebury lost to Clark School, whom Coach Herrick's men defeated, and was also beaten by Goddard Seminary. However, all this can throw only little light on the game tomorrow, but an interesting contest may be expected.

Coach Herrick has shown up several good players on the Freshman eleven and these have done much to account for the team's showing. Jay has been the chief offensive man with 32 points to his credit of the team's total 52. The Kittens also have some good line men and can play a defensive game.

NOT ENOUGH RELIGIOUS THOUGHT SAYS REVEREND

One of the saddest pictures in literature is that which is given us of Charles Darwin, said the Rev. S. Cunningham Graham, of Manchester, Vt., who spoke at the regular weekly chapel service last Wednesday morning to a large gathering of students and members of the faculty.

As a young man, Charles Darwin loved music and poetry. Then, as he progressed on, he became so engrossed in his investigations and literary pursuits that he forgot Jesus Christ and lost all taste for those things that pertained to Him.

Just as there was no room for Jesus when Joseph and Mary sought a lodging for the night in Bethlehem, in many life there is no room for Him in people's lives. The people are so filled with their activities in this world that they do not find time for Jesus Christ, they have no place within themselves for Him. The Rev. S. Cunningham Graham strongly urged that room should be taken and a place made for Jesus Christ in our hearts. On the campus, often there is no room for Him but this should be overcome. We should moved by the spirit of Christ on the field, in their activities, in all their activities.

Parkes Cadman will speak on Sunday next Sunday afternoon. He made a bet, which he claimed he would make before to his congregation in Worcester, Vt., when Dr. Cadman was going to speak the afternoon of Sunday when he made the bet to his congregation, the Rev. S. C. Graham said that Dr. Parkes Cadman's talk next Sunday would give more evidence to Jesus Christ; and that Dr. Cadman would not fail

BEGINNERS' BASKETBALL ARRANGED FOR CO-EDS

From four to five on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons during the month of November, instructions in beginners' basketball are being given by Miss Alice Blanchard. Seventy-five girls have enrolled in this course. These lessons provide a valuable opportunity for Senior and Junior girls, who have never played basketball, to learn the fundamentals of the game, in case they may be called upon some time to coach basketball teams in secondary schools.

The course will be devoted for the most part to instruction in the rules and fundamental throws and passes.

VARSITY DEBATE TEAM CHOSEN FOR MAINE TRIP

Sears, Lisman, and Fuller Chosen By Coaches To Be Vermont Representatives on College Team For Maine Trip

As a result of try-outs held last Monday before Professor Evan Thomas, Professor L. M. Prindle and Coach M. D. Powers, Franklin Sears, '30, Louis Lisman, '31, and Hank Fuller, '30, with George Nelson, '31, as alternate, were chosen to take the Maine debating trip, the first Varsity debate affair of the season, scheduled for November 19.

"Resolved, that the modern trend in advertising is deplorable" is the question that Vermont debaters will use in a series of Oregon-type contests against Bates and other Maine colleges on the three-day trip.

With a team every member of which is a veteran debater Vermont is out to win on this trip. Sears, who is at present manager of debate, made his first team more than two years ago when he earned a berth on the champion Freshman team. The same year he entered Varsity debating and, since then, has again made his class team and has participated in debates with such teams as Bates and Yale. Lisman made the winning Freshman team last year, gained his first Varsity experience against Bates and has recently made the Sophomore team.

Fuller entered varsity debating circles at Vermont in 1921, his Freshman year. He was a member of the Freshman team the same year and was initiated into T. K. A. He left Vermont the following year. During the five years Fuller was absent from the University he engaged in debating at Syracuse University and did considerable political organizing and campaigning.

Nelson participated in the class debate last year, debated against St. Michael's and Yale and has made the class team again this year.

All four men are members of Tau Kappa Alpha, national honorary debating fraternity. Whether Coach Powers is planning a change in the composition of the team or what lineup he will use is not yet known.

Immediately after the Maine trip, except for the annual class debate, debating will cease until after midyears when a squad of six men who will conduct all debates thereafter will be selected for the rest of the season.

HEALTH CLUB APPOINTS CO-EDS FOR MEMBERSHIP

At the meeting of the Health Club in the Gym office Wednesday noon, the following girls were appointed for membership: Carolyn Whitney, town girls; Frances Timpson, Theta House; Isabelle Warhurst, Robinson Hall; Nancy Capron, Redstone; Pearl Jennings, Rand House; Edna Herridon, Allen House; Nan Owsley, Grassmount; Ruth Field, Campus House.

Nancy Capron and Ruth Field were elected Publicity Manager and Secretary respectively.

Health cards have been delivered at all dormitories and a prize is to be given to the girl who keeps the greatest number of them within a stipulated time. There was some discussion of Health Week Campaign which will soon take place.

NEXT SATURDAY BIG DAY FOR ATHLETICS

State Championship Football Game and Cross-country Meet To Be Run Off At Middlebury

CLASSES SHOVED AHEAD ONE HOUR NOVEMBER 17

Vermont's Catamounts meet the Middlebury Panthers at Middlebury on Saturday afternoon, November 17, in the game which will decide the championship of the state. Norwich has already defeated the Panthers and the Cadets and Catamounts battled to a scoreless tie in the driving rain at Centennial Field last Saturday.

The Green and Gold harriers will compete against the hill and dale men from Middlebury over their three-mile course during the morning of the same day. This will be a double engagement, both the varsity and Freshman teams lining up against the wearers of the Blue and White. It is Vermont's first and only track engagement for the fall season. The championship football game and the cross country meet make up the most important sport program of the current season and special attention will be paid to athletics by the University on this date.

President Guy W. Bailey and student members of the Boulder Society formulated complete plans for the big date last Tuesday evening. At this time Boulder Society was entertained by President Bailey at the Hotel Vermont.

Classes will be advanced one hour, the final period of the day closing at 11.30 instead of 12.30, on November 17. This will enable all students to reach Middlebury before the game begins. President Bailey is especially anxious to have the entire Vermont student body march onto Baker Field in a body. The game is scheduled to begin at 1.30 and all Vermonters should arrive at least 20 minutes before game time.

The University Band will be tendered a special luncheon before the Middlebury trip. They will be taken to the game in two busses chartered by the University.

The Boulder Society joined with President Bailey in cautioning all students against any disturbance in Middlebury. Several times trouble has broken out between the Vermont students and the Middlebury students or townspeople. Some of these riots have caused considerable property damage to stores and buildings in Middlebury. These damages have been a financial drain on Vermont and they have also caused a certain amount of hard feeling toward the school.

"Frosh caps show the college colors and no Freshman in our University should be ashamed to wear one. He should be proud of the privilege," said President Bailey when the matter of Frosh rules was under discussion.

Boulder has taken over the disciplining of Freshmen from the Gold Key Society and a meeting of the yearling men will probably be called in the near future. Prof. Arthur B. Myrick, head of the Romance Language Department, may act as faculty interpreter of the Freshmen rules at this meeting. The traditions of the college, especially the wearing of distinctive caps will be stressed to the men of '32.

Plans for sending the University Band to Springfield at Thanksgiving for the Springfield College game were also discussed at the meeting. If the band is sent they will go in two special coaches and live in the cars during the trip. This plan was successfully carried out last year.

Boulder men voiced the opinion that the Catamounts have at least an even chance at the state football championship. They seemed much impressed by the splendid showing of the team last Saturday.

Prospects are not too bright for the cross-country team according to Bichard, Boulder man and track manager. He stated that 17 men would make the track trip. They will not be strangers on the Middlebury course as Coach Aldrich sent his charges over the route last Sunday. Wilder, a yearling distance man, is expected to be the individual star of the meet.

Military Ball Postponed

Since it is feared that many students who expect to spend the week-end at their homes will find it inconvenient to attend the ball, Monday, November 12, Scabbard and Blade Society has postponed the Military Ball to Friday, November 23.

SMALLEY CAMPAIGN TO BEGIN NEXT TUESDAY

Fund of $500 is Set as Goal—Charitable Work is Sponsored by Vermont Christian Associations

All guns are set for the launching of the Smalley Campaign for $500. It will begin next Tuesday and last for three days. R. H. Smalley, who graduated in '22, and Mrs. Ruth Hubbell Smalley, '21, at present missionaries in Kanene, South Africa, are to be the recipients of this fund given by the undergraduate body and faculty of their college, and to be used in the educational program of the Congo Institute. This institution is a university in the mind of the natives in Kanene and the Belgian Congo. It well serves this function.

R. H. Smalley has been "the power behind the throne" at the Congo Institute the last few months in the absence of its official head. He is a man of sterling quality with simple and forceful virtues. He originally went to the Belgian Congo as an agricultural missionary but has adapted himself to the doing of many other things, such as teaching general academic subjects, managing the 60 natives employed by the Institute and improving and enlarging the whole project. Mrs. Smalley besides taking care of her household nurses and cares for the sick and teaches practical subjects to the native women about the care of self, the home, and the children. She was a volunteer nurse during the World War and was known in her college days for her skill as a tennis player and as a young woman interested in the happiness of her fellow students. There are few people who give their life and work to as great a work as these two Vermont graduates. The University is rightfully proud of them.

The University of Maine students gave to a project in Turkey that is similar to the Congo Institute in South Africa, only at present their college is nearer American academic standards. It can be prophesied that within a few years Vermont will be claiming affiliation with a project even greater than "Maine in Turkey." Maine students call their support to the International College, "Maine in Turkey," for the obvious reason that three Maine graduates are teaching in that far off place. Amherst College gives $1,800 a year to a university in Japan. Williams College gives $800 to a similar project in China. Yale gives $5,000 to "Yell" in China. Nearly every college in New England does something of the sort.

Ruth Hubbell, '21, was a Home Economics student; a member of Kappa Alpha Theta; the Literary Club; Home Economics Club; basketball her first and third years; manager of Class Basketball her third year; the tennis champion in 1919 (she still holds the championship); on the hockey team and track team her Junior year; member of the Executive Board; member of Y. W. C. A. Cabinet; treasurer of W. A. A. in 1920; and a delegate to a Des Moines Conference her third year.

Ray Smalley, '21, was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity; on the Sophomore Hop committee; treasurer of the Agricultural Club for two years; a sergeant in the R. O. T. C.; Special Committees; a member of the Y. M. C. A. Cabinet; and class treasurer. He was known for his managerial ability and as an industrious student.

Both Christian Associations, the College Y. M. and Y. W., are sponsoring the campaign. Merle Duval, '30, is the chairman. Harvey D. Butterfield, '31, vice-chairman, and the following are co-workers on the Smalley Committee: Dorothy Cottrell, '29; Marion Potter, '29; Arthur Merrill, '30; Harriet Howard, '30; John Eliot, '30; Florence McKenzie, '30; and Ralph Bond, '31.

CATS TACKLE R. P. I. AT TROY TOMORROW

Coaches Rattan and Tully Predict First Victory of Year for Green and Gold Warriors—Squad Has Been Driven Hard All Week

R. P. I. HAS VICTORY OVER UNION WHICH BEAT U. V. M.

Invading New York State for the third time this season the Vermont gridders will strive to record their first victory of the season tomorrow afternoon when they meet Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy. The Rensselaer team defeated Union two weeks ago 14 to 0 and although Union defeated Vermont 7 to 6 the latter is conceded a good chance to down the Tech team if it displays the same punch that it did against Norwich on Centennial Field last Saturday.

Rensselaer began the season by defeating the easy Cooper Union team 32 to 0. In their second game they lost to St. Lawrence, because of their inability to score extra points after touchdowns, 14 to 13. In a hard fought contest against Clarkson, Rensselaer triumphed 13 to 2. Williams then whitewashed the Engineers 27 to 6. Last week they held the C. C. N. Y. eleven to a scoreless tie on a muddy field. This gives Rensselaer a fairly good record with two defeats in six games. The Trojans have several stars in Captain Daday and DiAddario in the backfield and Kennedy and Bliss in the line, the latter a spectacular punter.

The Catamounts have been drilling long, hard, and faithfully all week with the Middlebury game as the chief objective. Captain Palmer, whose old injury appeared again in the Norwich game, will in all probability be saved for Middlebury, leaving Robinson and Segal for wing duty. The rest of the line-up will be the same as last week's. That arrangement seemed to give Vermont an effective offense with Robbins doing the kicking, Scutakes hitting the line, Halligan catching passes, skirting the ends, and hitting off tackles, and O'Keefe directing the team in an efficient manner. Mace and DeRose will be ready to enter the fray if called upon. DeRose is a great defensive player and a good ball carrier while Mace is fast in an open field and is a fair punter.

The probable line-up:

VERMONT		R. P. I.
Robinson	l.e.	Bliss
Kropper	l.t.	Kennedy
Burstein	l.g.	Steers
Levine	c.	Howland
T. Scutakes	r.g.	Montie
Nilsen	r.t.	Bauer
Segal	r.e.	Pinto
O'Keefe	q.b.	Diehl
Halligan	l.h.	DiAddario
J. Scutakes	r.h.	(Capt.) Daday
Robbins	f.b.	Bates

Referee: S. R. Derby (Illinois)
Umpire: F. L. Laird (Dartmouth)
Head Linesman: R. F. Delahant (Wesleyan)

Y. W. C. A. is to hold an Armistice Day meeting at Robinson Hall at two-thirty Sunday afternoon. Dorothy Cottrell is to have charge of the meeting. The Y. W. C. A. has subscribed to Vox Studentium, a monthly magazine which deals with many world-wide questions.

Y. W. C. A. has given up the date for its Christmas dance to the Dramatic Club and the first association will not hold any dance this year.

NOTICE!!!

The closing of the Art Contest for the 1930 Ariel has been postponed for two weeks. All material must be in by November 23. These drawings include headings for the classes, faculty activities, fraternities and athletics. All material must be done in India ink and may be handed in to Charles Mace, Sigma Phi Place, or to Harriet Woodruff, Kappa Alpha Theta House.

Those Early Games

Quoting the Barre Daily Times the Burlington Daily News says in an editorial:

"The Barre Times delivers a gentle slap at the financial necessity which urges smaller colleges to take on heavy early season football games that invariably leaves it crippled, often physically and sometimes mentally, for the remainder of the season. The Times says the outstanding of the state college season was the feat of the University of Vermont 'finding' itself against Norwich after being 'mauled about the gridiron in five successive defeats.'

"Our opinion is,' the Times adds, 'that the team is just getting its nerve back after being battered cold, almost stiff by Columbia and Princeton at the outset of the season.'

"It is generally conceded that these early season games with the big fellows do no good except swell the treasury coffers. But there doesn't seem to be any move among the small colleges to surmount this barrier.

"Nor do we believe the players on the small college team are altogether averse to taking the long chance of humbling the big college team. We believe the mental hazard is negligible but with the dearth of material at Vermont and similar comparatively small institutions, there is always the danger that injuries may block realization of a really good season against colleges of its own size. If it wasn't for that we'd say go ahead. Take on the big fellows and wallop them if you can. Few of the early season games provide any mental strain whatever, providing the players are in the physical condition they should be.

"And now we hear Vermont is to play Yale and New York University in "those early games" next year. We can't understand the policy of the athletic heads to continue to send our teams against such odds. If it is money, two or three dollars apiece from each student would make up the difference between the guarantees of a large university and a smaller one.

"Even after they have played large teams, like Princeton and Columbia, the men aren't given what is due them. It used to be customary to have a football table, where the men would receive proper nourishment. Now they have to provide their own food and oftentimes are not in a position to know the right kind to select. Several of the men have to work for their meals, and after spending a tiring three or four hours in practice, must work, again, to eat. Some of those men, according to a doctor who is in a position to know, are undernourished. This should be corrected before another season.

"Another attitude appears to be that Vermont receives publicity in playing large teams. We agree they receive publicity, but such as it is is not the kind favoring us in the minds of prospective students, alumni or general public. How much better it would be, if we could only appear, with a little less publicity, in the winning column, playing against teams of our own size! This change may be brought about if students would only co-operate and bring pressure to bear in the right channels.

Perhaps our cheer leading would receive some benefits if a scheme similar to the following proposal, made by the Wesleyan Argus, was adopted:

"The proposal has been made that a member of the Physical Education department should act as Coach of Cheer-leading.

"Cheer-leading would then be put on exactly the same footing as any athletic team. Two or three try-outs would be held in the near future, in which any junior or senior might compete. From this number the coach would select about ten men who would constitute the cheer-leading squad for the rest of the college year. Then, before every game, the coach would pick four or five men from the squad, to lead cheers during that game; and letters would be awarded according to the amount of service performed.

"This plan (very similar to the Amherst method) would insure an intelligent and absolutely impartial selection of cheer-leaders. It would also provide an incentive to high-quality performance, entirely lacking under the present system. As things stand now, a man's worries are entirely over as soon as he is chosen cheer-leader. He can then loaf, without fear of losing his job. (Imagine a football team run on such a basis!) But under the proposed plan every cheer-leader would have a continual incentive to do his best, for fear of being kept 'on the bench' the following week.

"Cheer-leaders are now given official recognition in the form of letters. It does not seem too much to expect that these letters should be awarded on as sound a basis as any other letters given out by the college."

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE RAINY LOW LATITUDES OF AFRICA

By Lang Abemonthy

As told to Ex-Converse

I was proud the night they pinned the Badge of Courage and Valor upon my manly breast—that is, I mean chest—my manly chest—he, he, don't you know—and bade me go forth into the deepest, darkest and most dangerous depths of Africa. Of course, they chose me because I was brave, earnest and active. Of course, they couldn't very well have picked anyone else so well suited for the important mission of discovering the haunts and habits of the whoozishank bird. I knew I'd be chosen—he, he—and I was!

Gathering together a few belongings, a few trusty friends, and my high-powered, double-barrelled Bee-Bee gun I made ready for the journey. On the seventh of May, 1491, our intrepid party set sail from Boston Harbor on the bad ship Water of the Svelte Line. While on board, to while away idle hours, don't you know, he, he—I composed this little poem, which runs to a well-known tune:

Sailing, sailing over Niagara Falls!
I sleep tight throughout the night
While Doug sweeps out the halls.
Sailing, sailing over the briny deep!
While others work I like to shirk
Just lie in my bed and sleep.

Well, we finally reached Kachoo on the African Gold Dust Coast where we stopped over a few days to arrange for our plunge into the hitherto unexplored wilds of the Rainy Low Latitudes. All set? Let's go! Native bushwhackers bushwacking ahead, carrying the provisions and beating out the way; the guards, lithe, stolid boys, protecting the rear and flanks; myself on a fiery black charger, and my companion explorers behind me—to ward off the enemy. I insisted upon the charger for two reasons. First, I didn't want to get my feet wet tramping through the early morning dews, and secondly, it made me feel like a knight of old going forth to do great battle against unknown forces. So strong, indeed was this feeling—he, he—that I composed this poem about the famed knights of yesterday:

In days of old, when knights were bold,
And cigaretts weren't invented
They watched the stars, smoked big cigars,
Then went to war contented.

Finally, after weary days of marching, when my men were footsore and I was saddle-sore, we left the last tiny settlement behind and began to hew our way into the jungle. Bright steel flashed through the air, vines and creepers fell or parted. Bit by bit, hour by hour, day by day, we fought and tore to reach that wild and overgrown region known as Saint Albans, the home of the far-famed but little-known whoozishank bird. I was dead tired; it takes it right out of you to direct men in their endeavors to cut paths, ford streams and make and break camp. But I wanted that bird. It really isn't a bird, you know—he, he—they only call it a bird because it has wings. But it walks, it talks, it crawls on its belly like a reptile. It has fiery breath and steel claws; its hide is as tough as a boarding house steak.

"Whoa, there Beowulf!" I interrupted. "Are you sure of all this?"

Sure of it? Sure of it? Why, just look at this thumbtack. Is it made of steel?

"Yes."

Well, during my single combat with a whoozishank bird I tore off a claw. From it was made this thumbtack. Don't you see?—He, he! But that's getting ahead of the story. At last, at last we got to the Saint Albans section of the wilderness. You are no doubt aware of the fact that there is no other wilderness where both the natural vegetation and the animals are so dense and thick. We hid behind trees for three successive days and nights without seeing hair nor hide of the critters. The others began to get discouraged, but I, I stuck it out.

One night I had a dream. I dreamed that an enormous dark-green monster, covered with armor plate hide, bearing massive wings and sharp, deathly, steel-like claws, came creeping toward my bed. I could feel his burning, fiery breath, could smell the singeng of my youthful curly locks. I tried to wake up but couldn't. The creature stalked forward. He was upon me! Help! Help! Take him off! He'll kill me!

I felt a cold, sharp pain tear through my anguished limbs, and awoke to find myself dripping with water. A grinning assemblage told me in an imbecilic tone not to retire afterwards with a cigarette in my mouth. I was disgusted—awfully disgusted.

"What about the whoozishank bird?"

Oh, I gave up that idea. The fire had burnt up my pyjamas and I was afraid I'd catch cold so I headed for home muy pronto.

"But you said that that thumbtack was made from a claw of one of the birds you'd come to a disagreement with."

So I did. So I did. Well, young man I fought that bird on the way home and I'll fight any other bird who is at all skeptical about this journey!

I hastened to assure him that I realized he spoke as truthfully as the Cook Book, and after beating around the bush to excuse myself, I beat a hasty retreat.

Blood Sellers

Students at the University of Michigan have discovered a queer but not unusual way to earn money for college expenses. Selling blood at the University hospital, they have learned, is a comparatively easy way to add to their meager fortunes, and the discomfort is less than that induced by hard labor.

A system has been devised at the Michigan hospital whch makes the transfusion of blood a fairly simple process. Students who wish to sell their blood have it tested and classified according to the four types. The students' names with the result of their blood test records are filed and kept for future use. The people who are to receive the blood have to have their blood put through the identical test so that they may get blood from a person whose blood is in the same class as theirs.

Of course the blood donor must have a hardy constitution to stand the loss of blood without its affecting him. The transfusion is made from the arm of the donor to the arm of the patient and sometimes a pint of blood is transferred. The stimulating effect of the added blood is a remarkable medicine to brace up the patient.

Besides the money which the student gets for his blood there is the added sentiment of having saved somebody's life. According to Dr. Russell L. Mustard, of the University of Michigan Hospital, a great number of lives have been saved through blood transfusions.—The U. of R. Campus.

STILLWELL WILL PLAY GODDARD FOR TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

Vermont's annual fall tennis tourney has finally been completed. Herb Barkland lost to "Phil" Goddard.

This made Goddard and Stillwell the finalists. Stillwell overcame Goddard 6-2, 6-2 to be the champion.

The inclement weather has retarded the progress of the tournament somewhat, the last of the tournament being played on the court on College Street. Much promising varsity material has been uncovered for the varsity this coming spring and Vermont can look forward to another fine tennis season.

The matches in the quarter finals, semi-finals and finals have all been close and interesting to watch. Vermont should have some fine matches next spring with the material that Vermont has as shown by the results of the tournament.

N. Y. U. Students Earn $27,000,000

Students enrolled in the New York University employment bureau earned approximately $27,000,000 last year. Seventy per cent. of the student body were entirely or partly dependent on such incomes. The average salary for those doing full-time work was over $1,500 a year.

The Periscope

There are towering [illegible] impressive piles of masonry [illegible] from city streets or [illegible] green of shaved country [illegible] are buildings of marble [illegible] there are brick buildings [illegible] along private streets [illegible] little rickety wooden [illegible] crowded with students [illegible] them, are school buildings [illegible] sity buildings. They are [illegible] plant of institutions of [illegible] ing. But they have [illegible] with culture, with education [illegible] polish. They are only [illegible]

I have seen some of the [illegible] during construction. Once [illegible] ten, I carried water to [illegible] masons and carpenters [illegible] building a new high school. [illegible] a student I watched [illegible] erecting the shell of a [illegible] And, most revelatory [illegible] chance sightseeing loafer [illegible] construction work at [illegible] southern universities.

Classes were in session [illegible] Boys and girls wandered [illegible] campus. There was a [illegible] statue near the front [illegible] could not read the inscription [illegible] base but I believe it [illegible] portrayal of some not [illegible] man who first had the [illegible] college in that town. He [illegible] would have been the first to admit that he was not heroic. Dreamers are modest before the world. Perhaps that is why they are able to become dreamers, to see just a little clearer and just a little farther than [illegible] average man about them.

One of the students at the college told me in an awed voice that the school was going rapidly to the devil. He said it was infested with radicals. I asked him for particulars and then he admitted the staggering truth that there were five or six people in the school who questioned the virgin birth.

Shades of Darwin and Huxley and Haeckel! This in the country dedicated to freedom and in a college dedicated, supposedly at least, to the advance of human knowledge and the broadening of the human outlook. The student told me he did not believe these dissenters, these heretics in fact were sincere in their stand. He thought they were merely posing in an attempt to gain publicity. Who knows, he may have been right.

Well, this was the outlook on the campus. And ox teams and steam shovels were busily engaged in building new buildings. Men were digging cellars and laying foundations for more buildings in this school. Preparations were being made to extend the influence of this institution to additional hundreds of young men and women. A picture of such a college is distressing. It becomes acutely so when one sees such a school expanding.

Here at the University of Vermont we have a really precious heritage. It is the heritage of freedom. I quote below the rule governing the conduct of students at this school. When it was first enacted I do not know. It is quoted verbatim from the Bulletin of the University:

"The conduct of the student [illegible] all men is to be regulated [illegible] plain rules of politeness, [illegible] religion which are binding [illegible] free and virtuous community. [illegible] are to conform to every [illegible] of the Faculties, which [illegible] from their relations as [illegible] counselors and guardians. [illegible] right men and good citizens [illegible] use all lawful exertions [illegible] and to expose all violations [illegible] laws of God and of the [illegible] whatever is at variance with the objects of the University."

This, the Vermonter's [illegible] duct, states that we shall [illegible] cial beings in society. It [illegible] no static precedent on any [illegible] sets no limit aside from [illegible] rent convention. It makes [illegible] ment about the length of a [illegible] carrying of concealed firearms [illegible] use of rouge. It is concerned [illegible] with the current scene and [illegible] wording shows that the [illegible] enacted it were looking far [illegible] shows their clear knowledge [illegible] fact that morality, like conventions [illegible] but a matter of time and [illegible] tory and geography. It shows [illegible] as clear-sighted progressives [illegible] liberal men looking toward [illegible] ing future.

Why did I come back to [illegible] Well, gentlemen, additional [illegible] dreds of students aren't [illegible] Neither are buildings. I [illegible] to be a member of an [illegible] where students are governed [illegible] a rule.

FIVE FRESHMAN CO-EDS INITIATED INTO K. E. L.

Five members of the Freshman class were initiated into the K. E. L. Society, Sunday, November 4, at the home of Estabelle Perleman, '30. Annette Rosenburg, '28, conducted the ceremony according to ritual, with the assistance of Mollie Levin, '28. A short social hour followed the initiation. In the evening a banquet was held at "Sally's." The initiates were: Eleanor Isaacs of Newark, N. J.; Sophia Levin of Burlington; Lottie Cohen of Springfield; Irene Hall of Cambridge, Mass.; and Esther Fishman of Hartford, Conn.

On Thursday evening a dinner party will be held at the Practice House. Lois Fiske is the hostess this week-end and she will entertain President and Mrs. Bailey, Prof. and Mrs. Myrick, Miss Terrill and Mrs. Stetson.

Vermont Independents held a short meeting Friday at 7 p.m. before the Key and Serpent parade. In the absence of officers, E. M. Codding, '31, called the meeting to order. A committee was appointed to arouse interest in the society, and to call the next meeting, consisting of Codding, chairman, Johnson, '29, Pierce, '31, and Wells, '32. The officers will be elected at the next meeting.

Lady Fanny ..... Hope Ranslow
Lord Algernon .... Doris Humphreys

It is possible to gain entrance to Dramatic Club by writing a composition on "Make-up," or "Properties." These compositions will be submitted to judges, and if they show sufficient knowledge of the subject, their authors will be assigned the work of either properties or make-up in the coming productions.

"JUSTINIA" DONATED TO CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES

"Justinia," the Ford that is much in the limelight on the Vermont campus, has been donated to the Smalley Campaign Committee by Marion Everest, '29, her owner and trainer and sometimes repairman. "Justinia serves a purpose," she is open and free. Her cough is often a wheeze but her courage and endurance know no bounds. Ask Miss Marion Everest about her qualities and she will keep you listening for a solid hour completely enraptured with a romance on four wheels. Such are the qualities of Vermont's noted and far famed speedster. Wherever she goes good luck follows in her wake. She is a super-intelligent mascot and typically collegiate. Students can hear her a mile away. Chug chug... chug... bang chug-chug-chug chug...chug...chug-chug-chug... she rambles her way up hill and down hill around and about. She is always sure ...and easy. Sure! If you don't believe it just hop in sometime during her flights around the campus while she is giving her services to the over worked members of the Smaly Campaign Committee. Just ask the vice chairman for a ride—he'll give you one, and a merry ride, too! Just ask.

The chairman of the Smalley Campaign appreciates the donation of the services of "Justinia" for the three days of campaign work beginning November 13, extending through the fourteenth and closing the afternoon of the fifteenth.

Dean Marion Patterson has returned from New York City, where she went as representative from the University administration to the alumnae luncheon, an annual get-together of women graduates of Vermont who are residents of the metropolis and vicinity. Thirty alumnae were present at the luncheon, which took place at the Allerton Hotel in 57th Street Saturday noon. Miss Mary L. Tracy, '03, presided as toastmistress. Dean Patterson talked to the alumnae about recent changes in the college and plans for the future.

Dorothy Dailey, '30, of Plattsburg, N. Y., and Marion Tufft, '30, of Bennington, were elected Junior members of the Judiciary Council by Student Union Council Wednesday noon.

"TEA FOR THREE" TO BE THEATRE CLUB PLAY

Will Be Presented at Strong November 15 — Professors Myrick and Andrews Cast For Prominent Parts

The Theatre Club of Burlington, on November 15, is to present Rol Cooper Megrue's brilliant three-act comedy "Tea for Three," at the Strong Theatre.

The University is closely associated with these Theatre Club plays, three of which are put on during the year. Faculty members and graduates have always been prominent in the casts. Some of those who have established excellent reputations in the college plays having gone directly into the Theatre Club productions.

The cast of "Tea for Three," a light, frothy, witty play, numbers five, and two of them are closely associated with University interests. Prof. Arthur H. Myrick, who takes the important part of Carter, the husband, has figured popularly in eight Theatre Club plays. Phillip, the friend, will be played by Max L. Andrews, at one time a professor in the University, who has coached many college plays, including the Junior Week play last spring, and who long has been connected with amateur and professional theatricals. Another member of the cast will be Mrs. J. Warner Bott of Shelburne, who was for five years on the professional stage playing important rôles. Mrs. Harrison Cooke and George Hagar of Burlington are cast for the other parts.

It has always been the policy of the Theatre Club to stage plays of the better class that might not be seen on the road, and "Tea for Three," plausible, pungent, human, representing the best work of its author and considered by critics one of the best New York plays of the 1918-19 season, is of that type.

HARRIERS PREPARING FOR MIDDLEBURY MEET

Vermont's cross-country team will journey to Middlebury to engage the Panther harriers in their annual meet next Saturday. The meet is scheduled to start at 10 a.m. This will be the day of the Vermont-Middlebury football clash.

The harriers have been working out regularly and some promising material has been discovered by Coach "Milt" Aldrich. Some fellows, who never knew they were runners, have turned in very satisfactory times. Despite the lack of material, from last year, it looks as though Vermont would give the down state harriers a run and a lot of competition.

"Midd" has already engaged in two meets. They lost to Rensselaer last Saturday and won over Union two weeks ago.

The Freshman cross-country team is also doing fine work and by next year these men will push the varsity men of this year hard for positions on the squad. The Freshmen will engage the "Midd" Freshmen at the same time.

Seven or eight men from each team will make the trip and there will be some competition for a position on this trip during the coming week. Promising varsity material is as follows: Captain Arnold, Blakely, Collins, Clair, Maynes, Thomas, Walker, McAllister, Parker and others who may show better stuff before the week is out. Coach Aldrich is proving to be a fine man to work with and under his leadership Vermont should maintain its track standard this year as before under Jack Latty.

The Freshmen have been working out every night with the varsity and are doing fine work. Among the best of the various Freshman men are Wilder, Cloud, Stark, Goldman, Parker, Holbrook, Bliss and others. Many of the Freshmen of ability have not been reporting regularly and as a result they will not make the trip unless more interest is shown.

JOHN DEWEY CLUB WILL MEET TUESDAY EVENING

Assistant Dean Elijah Swift will address the members of the John Dewey Club next Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. The meeting will be held at the Vermonters' Club. The topic of his address is mathematics and philosophy.

These subjects are very closely related to each other and many of the world's most famous philosophers have been equally outstanding as mathematicians. Bertrand Russell, probably England's most famous citizen today, is the best current example of the philosopher-mathematician.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Mr. R. Flanders, Manager of Jones and Lamson Machine Co., of Springfield, will give an illustrated lecture on "Automatic and Semi-Automatic Machines" next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock in the Engineering Building.

At the last meeting of the student senate which was held last week it was voted that a cheer leader should receive his letter at the end of his Junior year. The Senior cheer leader has complete charge over the cheer-leading squad. In turn the Junior cheer leader has charge over two Sophomore and three Freshman cheer leaders.

The Junior cheer leader is chosen from the two Sophomores, the two Sophomores from the three Freshmen. Each year two cheer leaders are eliminated and one graduates, but three Freshmen are elected to the squad.

A. K. ALDINGER LEAVES ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT

With the resignation of Dr. A. K. Aldinger from his position as head of the Department of Athletics, which took effect on November 1, the Department of Athletics has become separate from the Physical Education Department. Dr. Aldinger has received and accepted the opportunity of returning to the position he formerly held in New York City which is the supervision of over a million children in the New York City Public School Athletic League. Dr. Aldinger came here from New York City just three years ago on November 1. Since coming here he has discovered that he likes city work much better than work in such a place as Burlington, so that he welcomed the chance of getting away.

Taking Dr. Aldinger's place as instructors in Physical Education are H. A. Prentice, a graduate of the University of Vermont last year, and J. Robinson, a member of the class of 1929. They will continue this work for the rest of the year. It has not yet been decided what will be done about the Athletic Department, except that it will not be connected in any way with the Physical Education Department, as it formerly was. It is hoped that by this division the importance and standing of the latter department may be bettered, and may come to be regarded as a real one.

New Italian Department at California

The University of California now has a separate and independent Department of Italian. The chair of Italian culture has been inaugurated and endowed by the Italians of California. A member of the faculty of the Royal University of Rome will fill the new chair this year as a visiting professor. This department is said to be the only one of its character in any American university.

A University of Minnesota student recently was accused of being a deserter of the Foreign Legion because of the realism of a story he wrote of life in the Legion. Considerable explanation finally cleared the unfortunate author.

Gentlemen:

While in Banff, Alberta, in 1909, I climbed Tunnell Mountain. On top of this mountain there is a cairn of stones where tourists leave their cards with remarks about the scenery, etc. Not having a card with me, I left a tin of Edgeworth Plug Slice, scribbled my name and address on a piece of paper, and said, "Have a fill on me."

I have kept up a haphazard correspondence with one of three who wrote me thanking me for the Pipeful of Edgeworth. What makes me write you is that today from Australia I received two slices of Edgeworth with the words, "Have a fill on me," so you see Edgeworth keeps friends friendly.

HOLIDAY DECLARED FOR MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12

J. Lawrence Hills, Secretary of University Council, Officially Announces No Classes For Monday

No classes will be held on Monday, November 12. Secretary J. Lawrence Hills of the University Council has officially announced that Monday will be observed as a holiday. This year Armistice Day comes on Sunday, and according to custom a legal holiday arriving on Sunday is observed on the day following.

The attention of the students is called to the Regulations of the University. The rule concerning the cutting of classes immediately before or following a holiday reads as follows:

"A student——who absents himself without permission from University exercises the day immediately preceding or following recesses or holidays ——may be placed on probation." Probation excludes the student from beneficiary aid, from University employment, and membership on sundry teams and organizations.

This rule operates in respect to any and all absences on Saturday, November 10; Tuesday, November 13; Wednesday, November 28; Friday, November 30; and Saturday, December 1. It operates in the same manner before and after all the remaining recesses or holidays throughout the school year.

Secretary Hills asks that all students desiring to be excused on any of the above dates should file their requests in writing (with mail address indicated) at his office in Morrill Hall, not later than Wednesday, November 7, at 6 p.m. for Monday, November 10, or Monday, November 26, at 12 m. for November 28-December 1. IT SHOULD BE UNDERSTOOD THAT EXCUSES WILL BE GRANTED ONLY IN EXCEPTIONAL CASES AND FOR IMPELLING REASONS, AND ONLY IN CASE THE STUDENT ASKING EXCUSE IS PASSING HIS COURSES. Applicants will be notified in writing of action taken on their requests not later than twenty-four hours from the final dates of filing, i. e., November 7 and November 26.

CORA HODSON TALKS ON ASPECTS OF HEREDITY

Cora Hodson, secretary of the British Eugenics Society, who is at present studying the eugenics movement in the United States, delivered the second of the special University lectures last Wednesday evening to several hundred students, professors, and interested townspeople who filled the Old Chapel to over-flowing. "Psychological Aspects of Heredity" was the subject of her talk.

She went at great length to show that in the past mind and body were considered to be two entirely different things, they were thought to be as separate and as distinct from one another as could be.

Several charts were used by the speaker to illustrate various points in her discussion. These charts are the result of studies made of prominent families. In one instance, it was shown that a great musician married a woman who possessed no musical ability or talent and the result of this union was a number of children who also possessed no musical ability. At the death of this woman, the musician married again, this time a musically-gifted woman, and the result was a great musician in their child.

In another case, it was shown, that in a certain private school in England to which the sons of wealthy merchants and the sons of men in the professions, went, all grades of mental intelligence were present; while in a certain locality in Scotland the sons of very poor families showed the highest intelligence of all groups investigated. According to the speaker, these things clearly indicate that environment plays a small part in mental ability and general intelligence. Psychologists do not give heredity full consideration, and lay too much emphasis upon the part played by environment.

In marrying, one should choose a partner who shall aid in uplifting his own germ plasm. In this manner, there is unconscious selection, and a better race of men is assured. There is one other important requirement necessary and that is that the number of children be a reasonable one; this is all-important, said the speaker.

SMALLEY CAMPAIGN FUND IS GROWING

Contributions From Faculty and President Bailey Start Drive For $500

SUM TO BE USED IN EDUCATING AFRICANS

The Campaign started Tuesday with contributions from Pres Bailey and members of the Cabinet members of Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. who are sponsoring the campaign have, during the week, been diligently working in connection for the campaign and are receiving the students' support at various tables about the campus and also at the Green and Gold booth in South College. Contributions will be accepted at these depositories at all times during each day until the campaign ends at 4 p.m. Thursday, November 15. The fund minimum is $500.00, an amount which is reasonably attainable from voluntary giving.

The student body is raising this fund known as the Smalley Fund, for an alumnus, R. H. Smalley '21, who is an agricultural missionary in Kanene, South Africa. Mr. Smalley is interested in and promoting an educational institution known as the Congo Institute. The institute is considered a university in the native sense as it is much higher than anything they have ever known or heard of. Quoting Mr. Smalley: "We teach the natives the New Testament, simple arithmetic, reading, writing and languages...They devour languages. Most of them know two or three and many of them five. This accomplishment exceeds that of the average American....Superstition is one of the great problems we have to combat. As yet we have been unable to teach science only through religion, as science is very difficult for the natives to grasp." Due to a lower cost of living in South Africa, $10.00 will pay for eight months of schooling. So with this comparison to our own cost of education it is readily obvious that a fund of $500 is capable of considerable influence for the advancement of the Congo Institute.

University of Vermont students should grasp the great significance in aiding such a project. To follow every step of advancement in the Congo Institute and the problems it has to solve will be like observing the development of human beings under controlled conditions in a laboratory where the influence of Christian civilization plays the moulding part.

Few people give themselves up wholeheartedly to as great a cause as Mr. and Mrs. Smalley have done. The work of these two Vermont graduates among the African natives certainly deserves high praise, recognition and reward. And it is up to the undergraduate body to do their part in the campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. Smalley are both graduates of the University of Vermont in the class of 1921. Only a glance at the record of their class is needed to see how varied and commendable were their activities while on the campus. Mr. Smalley was prominent in athletics having played on the hockey, track, basketball and tennis teams. He won the tennis championship of 1921 and at that time made a record which has never been equaled on the courts. Mr. Smalley was known for his scholastic ability and as an industrious student.

A special feature of the contributions is the Green and Gold booth in South College. It is very appropriately and attractively decorated and is but one of many evidences of the sincere effort which the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. cabinets have made in the campaign.

The "Justiana" and the "Lizzy of Pi Phi" flivver shivers of the Vermont campus have been loaned by their respective owners, Miss Everest of the Pi Phi's to the Smalley Campaign Committee. These Fords, trained to do "business" and with appreciation that the committee accepted the donation of the cars which both "Justiana" and "Lizzy of Pi Phi" can render. They have a record of getting anyone to the

PAN HELLENIC HOUSE ERECTED IN NEW YORK

New Women's Fraternity Home in Metropolitan District Similar to Organization to Men's Interfraternity Clubs

At First Avenue and 49th Street, something new in the way of club hotels opened its doors on the morning of October 15. This beautiful cream-colored building, of the towering graceful style which New York has contributed to architecture was built by the twenty national women's fraternities in the country. It is known as the Pan Hellenic House. The idea of a home for fraternity girls who are in the metropolis, was suggested by Charlotte Manning of Delta Delta Delta, when she represented that fraternity on the New York Pan Hellenic Council in 1921. Rooms may be obtained from $7 to $24 per week. The building represents an investment of $1,650,000. The architect was John Mead Howells, son of the famous author.

The location of the Pan Hellenic House was chosen with a view to the future of First Avenue, which influential New Yorkers are promoting. A subway is in the process of construction across town under 43rd Street and East River; and arrangements for a bus line on 49th and 50th Streets are progressing, the Arrow of Pi Beta Phi discloses. Miles of East River are visible from the novel terraced roof the zoning laws have created.

The hotel is a steel structure with an outer covering of cream brick. It accommodates 390 girls. The last five stories, set back from the base of the building, compose the tower. The Trident of Delta Deta Delta so describes the interior: "On the first floor on First Avenue, there will be six useful shops opening into the house, and an attractive dining room. On the second floor is a social room which will be attractively furnished and which will seat 450 people. Directly over it is the roof garden, an outside covered porch exposed to the sun, which will afford unusual opportunity for air and exercise. On the top floor is the solarium with a balcony on all sides commanding magnificent views."

Miss Mildred Loper, of New York City, a charter member of the local chapter of Alpha Chi Omega, who visited recently on the campus, gave enthusiastic accounts of the delightful furnishings of the Pan Hellenic House. The 390 bedrooms and the foyers are furnished easily in the style of the early American period. Miss Loper said. But the rooms of the individual fraternities are striking in the modernistic tone of them, and in the unusual but charmingly new combinations of colors which blend in the decorations. A Kappa Kappa Gamma, for example, upon showing her pin at the main desk of the Pan Hellenic house, will be given the key to the Kappa room.

Residence in this hotel will not be limited strictly to fraternity women, but will welcome any young women who desire a friendly environment in which to make their New York home.

The fraternity leaders who were most closely concerned in putting across this tremendous project, were Miss Sarah Blue Cathey of Kappa Delta, who for seven years has been chairman of the building committee, and Mrs. A. B. Hepburn of Kappa Kappa Gamma, whose work it was to keep the barometer of interest running high until the last polished door knob was in place.

MIDD FROSH COP FOOTBALL TITLE

Southern Invaders Hand Catamount Pups First Defeat in Two Years — Game at Centennial Field Saturday Attended by Large Crowd

BLUE YEARLINGS OFFER SMOOTH OFFENSIVE PLAY

Coach Hessler's Middlebury Freshman football team invaded Burlington Saturday afternoon and made good its bid for the Vermont State Freshman championship by humbling U. V. M. Frosh 19-6 on Centennial Field before a large crowd of spectators.

The Midd yearlings uncorked a smoothly working offensive attack that netted them a touchdown early in the first period and another one in the last period. The third tally for the Midds came as the result of an intercepted pass from Powell to Attick.

As the opening whistle sounded Powell booted the ball deep into Middlebury territory where it was carried back about 15 yards by one of the Blue and White backs. Working only straight football to mid-field, they then let loose a couple of passes that finally resulted in the first touchdown of the game. The passing combination was composed of Howard Duquette and William Conroy.

The first of these passes was for about 20 yards. Conroy caught it at an awkward angle and was stopped in his tracks. After a few more plays with about 25 yards to go Duquette tossed another pass to Conroy who caught it behind the line and touched it down. The try for the extra point failed.

The second period saw both teams fighting hard with the ball in Vermont territory most of the time. The Midds slipped up on two or three chances to score in this period. Then, near the end of the half with but a few minutes to go Vermont Frosh began a steady march down the field. The whistle blew for the end of the first half with the ball on Middlebury's four-yard line.

The second half began a kicking game with U. V. M. getting a big advantage. This quarter also saw many fumbles on both sides. Powell was the mainstay of the Vermont attack and defense. His smashing off tackle plays, fine punting and end runs were largely responsible for the lone touchdown which he scored himself in the third period.

A 60-yard punt off the expert toe of Powell sailed over Duquette's head in the period and after futile attempts on the part of Middlebury the ball was given to U. V. M. A little later Powell crashed through for the tally.

In this same period, down in Vermont territory, that Powell hurled a flat pass to right end but Attick, Midd back, came tearing in at top speed, snared the pass and ran 30 yards to the goal line. Duquette kicked the extra point. The game ended soon after that intercepted pass.

The victory gave Middlebury Frosh the Vermont State Championship for freshman football teams and gives Vermont the only defeat in two years.

NEWS IN BRIEF

On Friday afternoon Miss Terrill gave a tea at her home in honor of Miss Edith Thomas, at which she entertained friends and members of the faculty. Miss Thomas was in Burlington four years ago. All who knew her then were glad to see her once more and hope that she will return again soon.

A new feature this year is the class in Beginners' Basketball which meets every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at four o'clock. The purpose of this group is to give those who have never played the game a chance to learn the fundamental rules and shots before the regular season opens. More experienced players may also take this opportunity to brush up on rules and to get in some pre-season practice.

Bluestockings Aspirants!!

All contributions for membership in Bluestockings must be placed in the Grievance Box in the Y room, not later than Thanksgiving Day. No papers will be accepted after that date. Information regarding this contest may be obtained from any member of the club, or from reading the Bluestockings Notes in this issue of the Cynic.

CAST REHEARSING DAILY FOR ANNUAL FALL PLAY

"The Devil's Disciple" Is Classed As Study In Temperament — One of Bernard Shaw's Best Dramas

The cast is rehearsing daily for the college play, "The Devil's Disciple," which will be given at the Strong Theatre on the evening of December 6. A play is given annually each fall by the two dramatic societies, Wig and Quill and Masque and Sandal.

"The Devil's Disciple" is one of Shaw's ripest and most characteristic work, and a wonderful study in temperament. The play was presented before by Richard Mansfield and his excellent company, and those who were then so fortunate as to see this play may well cherish a most satisfying dramatic memory.

The various persons who were chosen by the judges to present this play soon are:

John Garfield who will act the part of the chief character, Richard Dudgeon, the self-styled "Devil's Disciple."

Gladys Kone who will impersonate Judith Anderson, a parson's wife who secretly admires Richard.

Fred Householder who will act the part of Christy, a stuttering, blatant brother of Richard Dudgeon.

Dorothy Cottrell who will take the part of Mrs. Dudgeon, a religious fiend of a mother.

B. Baker who will portray the part of William Dudgeon, uncle of Richard, who appears to be no ascetic at a dinner table.

L. S. Turner who will act the part of Anthony Anderson, a parson who ingratiates himself to his countrymen by saving Richard from the gallows.

Catherine Bassett who will take the part of Mrs. William Dudgeon, a matronly type of a 1777 wife.

W. C. Dodge who will impersonate Uncle Titus, the lady's man of the Dudgeon family.

Dorothy Fowler who will act the part of Mrs. Titus, another buxom woman of the early period.

Dorothy Strong who will portray the part of Essie, an orphan child who is kindly taken care of by Richard Dudgeon.

Robert S. Jenks who will take the part of Attorney Hawkins, a brisk old barrister of olden days.

H. M. Sheffield who will take the part of Gen. Burgoyne, the renowned British officer.

E. W. Knapp who will play the part of Major Swindor, an upstart British official.

A. O. Aronson who will act the character of a British sergeant not above accepting a bribe from a pretty girl.

C. H. Overly who will play the part of the chaplain, a typical chaplain of ye olden times.

EDITH THOMAS SPEAKS TO HOME EC. STUDENTS

Miss Edith Thomas, a federal agent of Home Economics Inspection from Washington, was entertained at dinner at the Practice House on Friday evening. After the dinner a meeting of the Home Economics Club was held at which Miss Thomas spoke in a most entertaining manner concerning her work. She explained the organization of the National Economics Association in detail and urged everyone to join it after graduation.

Miss Thomas has been in Burlington since Wednesday and has been looking over the Home Economics work that is going on both within the University and the state through the extension workers.

VERMONT DEFEATED BY R. P. I. 9 TO 6

Field Goal In Third Quarter Gives Rensselaer Victory After Having Been Outplayed By Catamounts — DeRose and Robbins Shine

PASSES EFFECTIVE BUT FUMBLE PROVES COSTLY

By means of a 30-yard drop kick Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute gave the Vermont Catamounts their sixth defeat of the season 9 to 6. The Green and Gold played winning ball throughout the game. It was a long pass that gave the Engineers their only touchdown and the field goal came after the Trojans had been held on Vermont's 26-yard line without a gain for three downs.

Robbins saved the Cats several times with his superior punting and also threw several forward passes which Halligan caught for long gains. DeRose was a tower of strength with his off-tackle plays and Bliss plunging Goldwyn of course, was outstanding with his neat boot but Diehl and Capt. Dady were the star ball carriers for Rensselaer.

Soon after the start of the second quarter Robbins caught a punt at his own 35 yard line and tore off 17 before being downed by Pinto. Robbins tossed a short forward to Halligan for seven yards gain. DeRose sliced off tackle for four more and a first down. Then Robbins swept the flank for 16 yards and another first down. Hal Bevan shot through the tackle and placed the ball on the 15-yard line. Robbins repeated the play for an eight yard gain and DeRose crashed through the wall for Vermont's lone tally. Robbins failed at the place kick.

Rensselaer tied the count at the end of the same period. The Vermont line held for downs on its own 20 yard mark and Robbins punted out. Diehl, on a fake end run, threw a long pass to Dady who ran 35 yards for a touchdown just before the whistle blew.

In the second half Bliss kicked off to Robbins. Scutakes fumbled on the next play. After a first down for R. P. I. Vermont held three times and Goldwyn dropped back to kick the ball for the three points which spelled victory. Another Vermont touchdown was in sight in the last few minutes when Pinto intercepted a pass in the shadows of the goal posts and carried the ball to midfield before being downed.

The summary:

Vermont		Rensselaer
Palmer (Capt.)	r.e.	Bliss
Nilsen	r.t.	Venner
A. Scutakes	r.g.	Teute
Levine	c.	Howland
Burstein	l.g.	Montie
Kropper	l.t.	Kennedy
Segal	l.e.	Pinto
O'Keefe	q.b.	Wade
Halligan	r.h.	Goldwyn
DeRose	l.h.	(Capt.) Dady
Robbins	f.b.	Staten

Score by periods:	1	2	3	4	T
Vermont	0	6	0	0	6
Rensselaer	0	0	3	6	9

Substitutions: Vermont, DeWitt for Segal, Damon for Nilsen, Robinson for Palmer, Lyman for O'Keefe, Donnelly for Lyman, J. Scutakes for Halligan, Dorey for DeRose; Rensselaer, Hallock for Howland, Steeves for Teute, Bauer for Venner, Diehl for Wade. Touchdowns, DeRose, Dady; field goal, Goldwyn; referee, Berry (Illinois); umpire, Laird (Dartmouth); linesman, Belchant (Wesleyan); time, two ten and two twelves.

Y. W. C. A. held an inspiring Armistice Day service at Robinson Hall last Sunday afternoon. Dorothy Cottrell, '29, was in charge of the service.

Then and Now

Ten years ago America, with her allies, signed an Armistice terminating her latest war. War meant hardship for every person in the land; it meant death for many and giving up of positions by the younger men. Peace was welcomed with open arms by the entire population. Last Sunday it was a thankful and solemn occasion for many. By proclamation the people spent two minutes of silence in memory of those who had died fighting for a principle made sacred by the late President Wilson.

How to avoid this useless expense of lives and property has been a problem confronting the wise men of many generations. Practical minded people agree that war seems inevitable. The next best plan would make war so dangerous and undesirable that it would only be used as a last resort.

The United States was wholly unprepared for the last war, or it would have entered sooner, because of the strong sentiment aroused by the sinking of the Lusitania and numberless other outrages. Without a doubt this would have shortened the length of the war, and also the number of lives sacrificed. Firm resolve was in the minds of statesmen when they were confronted with the possibility of another war. In spite of pacifist propaganda, a strong measure of preparedness is being taken.

Members of the R. O. T. C. should be proud to learn how to be of aid to their country in time of need. Their duties should be taken in the right spirit and assumed as future protectors of this land. As long as other countries maintain armies, it is poor policy to allow this country to become subject to their whims and desires. Let us remember those who gave up their lives to preserve our institutions by guaranteeing future safety for our country.

The College Vote Strong For Hoover

The result of the first really thorough canvass ever taken of American colleges and universities on the presidential vote, gathered this year by College Humor, showed that Herbert Hoover had the majority of student votes in thirty-eight states and the District of Columbia. Alfred E. Smith carried ten southern states. Virginia cast the greatest number of individual votes for Smith and Pennsylvania the most votes for Hoover. The largest percentage in any one college was twenty to one for Smith in Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md. The largest percentage for Hoover in any one college was eighteen to one at Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

At the September registration this year there were 892,508 students in the 1,104 American colleges, of which 544,685 were men and 345,123 girls. The cooperation of the college newspapers was secured in running ballots. Voting booths were placed at strategic spots on the campus. Returns were wired to Chicago at the latest possible moment.

Will Rogers obtained one-half of one per cent of the total student vote. The following was received from the St. John's Collegian, Annapolis, Md.: "Hoover 148, Smith 120, Texas Guinan 2, students dry, and faculty all wet."

Earning and Learning

"As its sixth term begins Commonwealth College has modified its constitution to permit student participation in school government. All third-year students are now taken into the association which owns and controls this unique institution in the Arkansas hills. At the present time there are as many students as faculty members in this governing body.

"There are no deans or regents to act upon the 'recommendation' of these students and teachers. Their say is final, whether it concerns conduct or breakfast pancakes. A Ph. D., when he has completed a year in residence at the college, is given the same authority as a country boy, no matter what his previous schooling, who has done two years of satisfactory work in the college. And by satisfactory work is meant not a high average of grades nor an attendance record but simply continuous progress in those lines of study selected by the student and a certain reasonable efficiency in chopping wood, building houses or washing overalls."

A common saying: I've lived, I've loved, I'm satisfied.

The college version: I've lived, I've loved.—Columbia Jester.

The Periscope

Blood. Mud. The stench of rotting flesh. Men dying in hospitals. Men creeping about in a blackness that to them would be eternal. Men raising themselves with hoarse shouts of fear from unquiet sleep. Fertile acres plowed by shells and sown with barbed wire. The killing stench of poison gas. Factories miles behind the lines, oceans away from the lines, working night and day, turning out munitions, clothing, food, supplies of all kinds to be turned into the melting pot of war. Banners in the streets and cops on the trail of slackers. Non-combatants, those who did not catch the war fury, incarcerated in federal prisons. A world gone mad, war mad. A world throwing itself away in a raging insanity of death lust. Future generations being weakened by the destruction of the best of the breeding stock the while oily war lords smiled as they talked of blood and steel. They smiled at the running of red blood from the bodies of young men. It was not their blood and it did not run from their bodies. They smiled at the sound of the word steel. They made a profit from the manufacture of steel. They mouthed high words of patriotism and organized loan drives. They forced the little man to over-buy government securities and then they forced down the price of the bonds and they squeezed him out. Sedition laws and censorship and ordinances of all kinds flocking at the heels of the average citizen. Thou shalt not do this and thou shalt buy this and so much of it only. Meat on some days and bread on some days but never bread and meat on the same day. No. The war, the war to end war, must be won.

And this picture was not the one presented in America. It was the one presented by the world. The portrait of an insane world ruthlessly hurling itself to destruction at the command of the overlords and at the order of the profiteer. Such was the world view of eleven years ago.

The war, that war to end war, was finally finished. November of ten years ago heard the bells of the cities ringing out a story of returned peace. It saw the peoples of cities embracing each other in hysterical joy as they celebrated the end of the mad carnage.

The war was over but the merry race of hate making and war breeding was but begun. Versailles says the making of the peace treaty and the establishment of more than a score of new international boundaries. Under the protection of the high-sounding phrase of autonomy to minor national groups, buffer states were created. More than a score of new tariff boundaries, new national armies and new national governments sprang up to fight each other and their creators. The world took another backward plunge toward nationalism and petty sectionalism and away from broad-bordered tolerance and internationalism. More than before the map of the world reminded one of several groups of small boys gathered in adjoining back yards enclosed by hedges. The attitude of many of the states was like the attitude of such a grouping of boys. It was as though one group was determined to steal some of the playthings of its neighbor band while the neighbor was in turn trying to hurl a dead cat at the invaders.

The war to end war was ended and the battered world was all set to start on a bigger and better hate-making, death-breeding, waste-insuring program.

However, there was another side to this picture of years ago. In Russia, the New Russia, harried and torn by internecine factions and hedged in by a merciless economic blockade, men and women were groping toward freedom. They had risen from the soil and refused to be longer stamped into the earth by the foot of an autocratic and inefficient government. Lately slaves, serfs to use a more polite title, the men and women of New Russia had risen. They had shouted to each other—calling strange words such as bread and peace and freedom and land—across the width of an empire. They had seen a light and followed a vision. And much of the rest of the world had risen up to call the light of Russia darkness and the vision a vicious hallucination. There had been railing and condemnation extended to the mere words communism and bolshevism by good solid citizens of all countries, by solid citizens who often did not even know the meaning of the terms they so hotly condemned.

Lenin lies buried beneath the Kremlin wall. Trotsky is in exile. Jack Reed, America's shining contribution to the freedom of Russian men and women, has received the greatest honor which the people of Russia can extend to a comrade. He, too, has been buried beneath the Kremlin wall, but his book, "Ten Days That Shook The World," lives on. Communism, in the strict sense of the word, has been abandoned. But still Russia gropes for light. Still she searches for freedom and still her men and women call strange words across the breadth of an empire—call state and nationalization of industries and production for consumption rather than for profit.

If these words are ever realized, if the groping of Russia leads her far on the road to freedom and equality of opportunity and away from wage bondage and inequality through the inheritance of wealth and the protection of vested interest, the starvation and disease and pariahism of the years gone by will be amply atoned for in the new day. The Russian revolution will have justified the cataclysm of the World War, the war to create more states, more barriers between men, and to wipe from the earth the choicest of the young men, making corpses from potential race fathers while the unfit were left intact to propagate their kind.

HANK FULLER.

Bob Zuppke Asks "How Hard Is Football?"

"Was the old game harder on the players?" asks Bob Zuppke of Illinois in his article, "How Hard Is Football?" appearing in the December College Humor. "From everything I have heard about it from old-time coaches and players, there is no doubt but that it was. Can you imagine a football team of today packing up its equipment and gayly starting off on a trip to play six games in eight days? It hardly seems possible that this ever could have happened, yet back in 1892 Illinois' squad actually played this schedule. This was not a steady diet, but I mention it to show that they did play longer, more arduous schedules in the olden days. Today the number of games played during a season is limited to eight, with rare exceptions.

"Football is not as hard today because the coaches have more experience than their predecessors. A coach, first of all, is a pedagogue. He is a good coach because has the ability to judge the amount of work and rest his players require, rather than because he is an adept in divising plays and drilling his players in the fundamentals of the game. He knows better than to let his players batter each other into insensibility; his goal is not to develop idiots. He knows that all of the energy of his players must not be used up by muscle, that some must be left for the brain. Football today is easier on the players; the practice hours are shorter, and shorter hours reduce the possibility of mental and physical fatigue. The rest periods are more frequent.

Some player may squawk against the dullness and the hardships of football practice because his vanity has been hurt by his failure to do well in the sport, or perhaps he has played on a losing team. There is always drudgery, if we must use the term, in preparing yourself to play any game. Nothing in life is gained which is worth while without hard work and a certain amount of sacrifice. Football will always be too hard for some boys who have been reared in a soft, pampered environment, with plenty of money to spend and cars to drive, which assure them of feminine company. Golf is more likely to appeal to this class than football. Have you taken note of some of the names which are bobbing up in the line-ups? The Raskowskis, the Nowacks, the Truskowskis? This simply means that these first generation descendants of the newer immigration come from rugged stock and less enervating homes where existence is more of a struggle, where the coonskin coat and its implications are as far away as Mars.

"Don't think of football as recreation or exercise," Zuppke continues. "It is only the old who talk about such things. In football youth finds the safety valve for his spirit. Football is more than a game; it is not a physical expression, although it is expressed physically. It is a symbol of sportsmanship and it is virile drama."

Styles

Although fur coats seem to be the predominating note on campus again this year, many smart cloth creations have appeared lately at the much-patronized Coffee Corner or on College Row. The use of fabrics with slenderizing lines which produce those envied Parisian silhouettes is acknowledged. Tweeds for sport are more important than ever, while, with the addition of various rich furs, we find them among dressy coats. For the college girl is suggested a coat with straight lines and a long shawl collar and cuffs of Japanese mink. The cuffs are set just above the bottom of the sleeves and are of considerable width. At the side is inserted a group of plaits in order to insure easy walking. The resulting garment is both practical and smart.

"Nothing special. Why?"
"Just thinking. Like to do something?"
"Sure. That's awfully sweet of you, Bob. Was waiting for you to call, y'know."
"Were you?"
"Um-huh. What'll we do?"
"What would you like to do?"
"Well, there's a dance and a musical comedy on. Doesn't make any difference to me."
"Yeh. Er—I was just thinking that later—a little parlor date would be kind of—well, nice tonight."
"Parlor date? Well, if you'd rather. Oh, pardon me, I forgot that I had an appointment to be tutored in Physics. Speaking in just half an hour. Am awfully sorry."
"So am I, Ev. Can I see you afterwards?"
"I don't think I'll have time. You see, I'll have to study for the exam tomorrow. Call up some other time, won't you?"
"Sure thing. Good night, Evelyn."
"Night, Bob."
Operator—"And that's that!"

"What has a man got to do to break a crotch hold, body scissors and head lock on you?"
"He's got to turn into an octopus, Sir."

"What do you know about the Kentucky Derby Mare?"
"She won the Kentucky Derby in 1918, Sir. 1.36 flat. Track fast. Got a bad start, broke at first turn. Won by a neck—which greatly pleased the seventeen spectators."

"What should you do if a man steps on your leg."
"Sir, I'll have you know I am not that kind."

Music Department Has Been Greatly Enlarged During Past Three Years

the Music Department ity of Vermont was very n students and equip Harrington, one of the music teachers, taught training girls, and what who wished to study 1925, Howard Gordon here and built up the ment. Professor Bennett from Harvard in the and his M.A. from the on in 1924. Before com- nt, he taught at Denison d at Vassar College. He rses in harmony, coun- alysis, history, apprecia- ory of music.

Bennett's associate in Miss Marston and Ma- sh. Miss Marston is a Boston University, and certificate from the In Music Pedagogy at North ass. She has been an in piano and organ here since Bradish studied in New Richard Hagemon and Al oni of the Metropolitan ompany. She has also studied and German. She has been structor in the University ast three years.

ipment this year includes grand pianos, two upright Stein- ilt, a Chickering grand piano, an Estey upright, a Duo-Art re producing piano, a three-eighth Brunswick Panatrope and over six hundred rolls and records illustrating the literature of music from the thirteenth century down to modern times. A three-manual Welte-Mignon organ, with reproducing attachment, has been installed in the new Ira Allen Chapel the gift of Mr. James W. Wilbur, of Manchester, Vt.

There are several musical organizations. The Men's Glee Club has 38 members, the Women's Glee Club has 43, and the University Choir has 30. These organizations are under the direction of Professor Bennett. Once a year they join forces in a large musical production. Two years ago, they gave Purcell's "Dido and Aneas," an opera. Last year, they put on the comic opera, "The Mock Doctor," by Gounod. Both of these operas were very successful, and a third opera will be given in the spring.

This year there are five organ students, eight piano, and eleven vocal. These students, with the organizations, give concerts throughout the year. Recently, a trio composed of Miss Marston, piano, Julia Waterman, '30, violin, and Glen Aiken, '29, 'cello, played at the Autonoe Club of St. Albans.

Many thanks are due Professor Bennett and his assistants for their splendid achievements in the field of music at this University.

MOTION PICTURES TO BE USED IN TEACHING

(By New Student Service)

It is very probable that the grade school teacher's load will soon be lightened by the use of films in teaching. The Eastman Kodak Company, working with the National Educational Association, has just completed an experiment that seems to demonstrate conclusively the superiority of the new method over the old. In geography a seventy-five per cent. gain was registered by the pupils taught by means of films and a fifteen per cent. gain in general science. Approximately 5,500 children were taught with films and 5,500 more were taught the same material without the aid of motion pictures, in public schools scattered over several cities.

A 500-word report has just been completed by Dr. Ben. D. Wood of Columbia and Dr. Frank Freeman of the University of Chicago, directors of the experiment.

"In this experiment," the report says, "we have studied the films not as panaceas to be substituted for other instrumentalities of the school nor as a means to revolutionize the aims of education, but as an addition to the present pedagogical devices of the schools which may help in the attainment of currently accepted goals." As one might expect, many of the teachers and schools reported that the use of classroom films had been "more effective in arousing and sustaining the child's interest, in improving the speed and quality of their reading, and in enabling them to correlate features of the lessons with personal experience and community conditions."

How About It?

An American fisherman from the liquor producing district of Calvados discovered America, declared Senator Pierre Cheron in a recent conversation with Ambassador Herrick. "You are all wrong," he said; "your country was not discovered by Christopher Columbus. It was first visited by a Norman." And he came back to Normandy and told the Ambassador.

Monsieur Cheron replied that the fisherman probably foresaw prohibition.

One Hundred Million Dollars Can't Be Wrong!

(By College Humor)

"What makes Harvard almost as good a subject as the mother-in-law?" asks Gilbert Seldes in the December College Humor. "Why do Yale and Princeton rank ace high in a metropolitan musical comedy, while Harvard is the only sure-fire laugh in the three-a-day? The Harvard man believes that Harvard is the butt of college jokes because Harvard is so enormously and unquestionably the greatest college in America. The superiority is taken for granted. I do not mean that the Harvard man thinks being at Harvard automatically makes a superior man of him; he merely has the profound conviction of the superiority of the college itself. It is the conviction and consciousness of Harvard's superiority whih eventually marks its undergraduates. They flaunt their accents in the ears of muckers; they have or assume an air. And to a great extent this connects with the circumstance that Harvard to a surprising extent lacks college spirit.

"Aside from a few peculiarities of nomenclature, like calling its campus 'the Yard,' it seems to escape most of the adolescent tricks; it despises the tattooed slicker; its general ambition is not to look collegiate; there is a slight affectation of shabbiness. It will sound implausible — to some people it will sound terrible — but it must be said, there is a large body of students at Harvard who simply do not give a damn about the football team, win, lose or draw. I recall how class leaders and coaches worked to bring out a few handfuls of men to see the team in practice and the hundreds of men who did not even go to the scoreboard in the Union to find out what our team was doing at Princeton or New Haven.

"Harvard, it seems to me, has succumbed to the pressure of the practical. After all, it could not go on as a college if it persisted in turning out impractical dreamers or happy men who failed to make their million. The majority of Harvard undergraduates do not come to college with any fixed intentions on culture; fifty-eight per cent are satisfied if they get passing marks. The Harvard degree still has a certain social standing, and it is often said the friends you make in college help you in after life—the money touch again. These motives have their effect on the tone of the place.

"Harvard did not cast its graduates into a mold; it left them free to live as independent human beings. It did not, a decade ago, make conservatives out of liberals, aesthetes of practical men. If the majority of its graduates seemed always recognizably Harvard men, it was because the majority of men, lacking sufficient character, will always take on the tone of their surroundings; but at Harvard diversity and independence were always part of that tone. Its typical men were always its exceptions. Today to be called a Harvard man is grateful libel."

Hostesses at the Practice House last week were Lois Fiske and Virginia Noyes, both of the class of '29 Others who shared in the work were Helen Wilson '30, Narcissa Goodsell '30 James Davis '31, Dorothy Emery '31, and Lucile Robinson, '32

Soccer started last Wednesday with some thirty-five girls, mostly upperclasswomen, reporting for practice The class will meet Monday and Friday afternoons at four o'clock as long as weather permits

Owing to the lateness of the season class teams will probably not be chosen but the hours spent in practice will count toward outdoor exercise and it gives an opportunity to learn one more popular game besides having a good time.

Eta Sigma Phi wishes to call particular attention to the fact that the meeting, which was originally called for tonight, the thirteenth, has been postponed until November 30. It will then be held at eight o'clock in 34 South College. Edith Fishman '30, will speak on "Aristotle's Poetics" All members are urged to attend

First call for Women's Rifle found over a hundred Co-eds who attended a meeting last Thursday afternoon to hear Capt. Marion Baldwin and Manager Edna Shaw explain the plans for the coming season and announce that practice would be held every afternoon from two to five o'clock under the supervision of Coach Sgt. Connor

The first cut in the squad will be made before Thanksgiving when the group will be limited to sixty. The final squad will be announced before Christmas when a team of twenty will be chosen Cuts will be based on a rating in position, handling of rifle, triangles made, and number of shots fired. Practice begins Wednesday, November 16

Miss Consuelo Northrup, who has just been re-elected to the office of State Attorney, was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1921. While in college she helped found the Sigma Gamma Sorority and took an active part in debating. In 1926 Miss Northrup was graduated from Boston Law School and soon thereafter she was elected States Attorney, the first and only woman to hold this position in Vermont.

Can you imagine Cynic reporters carrying guns? Just picture them striding into the office, and throwing their weapons on the desk. Well, reporters do in Mexico. All reporters in Mexico have revolvers as their best friends, because of the bandits and political factions. When an assignment is not on time, the excuse is "a bandit held me up just around the corner."

One day a man's gun knocked against the desk and exploded, the shot going over the chair of the chief feature writer. If the chief had been in his chair, his talent would have been lost forever to the newspaper staff. A ruling was then made that all guns were to be checked on entering the office. The holes in the wall were mended much to the chagrin of the entire staff.

The football squad at the University of Orgeon will play two games during the Christmas holidays with teams in Hawaii. Twenty-two players, a trainer and a faculty representative will make the trip.

The present minimum salary of $6,000 for full professors at Columbia will be raised to $7,500 while those "of exceptional service or distinction" may be given as much as $12,000. The new minimum for instructors is $2,500, an increase of $400

Politics As A Career For The Collegian

(By College Humor)

"Politics never used to be considered a gentleman's game," says Leo A. Borah, in the December issue of College Humor. "College folk looked down on the whole business with disdain. They wouldn't give it a minute's consideration. But the attitude of the college student is changing today; he recognizes politics as a real force in the country. If the students who really feel an active interest in government will consider politics as a career and enroll in the courses intended to prepare them for it, the United States will be able to mix in world politics without fear. It will no longer be the tenderfoot sitting in the other fellow's game.

"The student who would go in for politics needs to obtain first a thorough cultural education. At the same time he must learn how to put his knowledge to work, how to get out of the academic rut and talk the language of the electorate. A charlatan with a full complement of campaign tricks can beat the most brilliant theorist in the world if the theorist does not know how to put his stuff over.

"The trouble with most American college students today is that they know nothing about public affairs. In an examination in current events in a certain university, one student identified George Washington English as a famous negro educator. Another thought Maxfield Parrish was the headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan. With that sort of knowledge, how can college students expect to do anything at politics? Fortunately not all students are like that. With the coming of professors of practical politics has come a growing interest of students in the business of government

"Politics is not a crowded profession. It gives you a chance to use your personality and your education and at the same time to be a regular human being."

A HISTORY OF THE MUSEUM

PART VI

In addition to the collection of specimens and models already there on the second floor in the Museum a good display of native animals and birds as seen when living in their natural surroundings and foreign countries. This collection includes birds of the United States, mammals of Vermont and the game fishes of Lake Champlain, aquatic mirgs, African birds, bird eggs, skeletons, skulls, and reptiles. Notable in this collection are the cases showing the beaver, the skunk and the red fox at home. All these of these groups are arranged in a group, because of the great rarity of [illegible] animals in all parts of Vermont. Admirable [illegible] and all breeding of these [illegible] specimens of the most [illegible] Just to see this exhibit alone would repay [illegible] the Museum.

The group is designed to show a bit of landscape in the heart of the great Maine woods where the beaver is still found. The locality was visited by Mr. W. E. Balch who camped there for several weeks making studies and collecting specimens for the group. The work has been executed from beginning to end with the utmost fidelity to nature, everything being as far as possible, represented exactly as it was found in the forest. So far as practicable, all the materials used were brought from the beaver settlement in the Maine forest. The group is not only of great scientific value, but is one that is also artistic and beautiful.

Another room which contains many [illegible] of interest is the Ethnology room, found also on the second floor, to the east. In here are found the Captain Read Collection of North American Indian Relics gathered by Captain Ogden H. Read, U. V. M., ex-1881, the Lewis Collection of Chinese objects gathered by R. E. Lewis '92 during the Boxer War in China and presented by him, the South African Collection gathered by the Rev. Lewis Grout when a missionary to the Zulus 1857-62, and left by him at his death to the [illegible] and the Ormsbee Collection [illegible] by Professor [illegible] and his wife while he was [illegible] Commissioner in Samoa 1891-93, and presented by their daughter, Carrie [illegible]. Here too we find an Egyptian mummy in wrappings of linen, [illegible] by time, just as it has lain these many hundreds of years. On the wood case in livid dyes some heathen god is painted. There are also cases showing ethnological collections from the Hawaiian Islands, Australia, Melanesian Island, Fiji Islands, and New Guinea.

Among these collections we find many interesting examples of life in those strange and distant lands. Plaited mats are implements fashioned by hand and pottery engraved with intricate designs by native [illegible] such as the Hawaiians live in, mats and [illegible] woven of bark, taboo poles, [illegible] and feather head dresses of the North American Indians and a variety of other strange articles of [illegible]. In the Chinese collection we see a [illegible] black silken robe worn by a Chinese [illegible] of the Imperial Court and an image of one of their many heathen gods. Besides the many [illegible] examples of Oriental pottery there are [illegible] fine specimens of the handiwork of the Navajo and Pueblo Indians of this country, many of which are decorated most artistically. Of especial interest to Vermonters should be the Indian jars found in Bolton, Vermont in the early part of the nineteenth century and another found in the latter half of the same century and in the same locality. In short, one may in this room become intimately acquainted with modes of living different and far simpler than our own.

We must not forget too, to mention the goodly collection of moths and butterflies mounted and in cases hanging on the upright supports in various parts of the Museum. Here we find a wide variety of specimens, ranging from the colorless everyday moths to the large gorgeously-colored moths of the tropics.

On the third floor are found numerous oil paintings and engravings, together with several works of statuary. Among these we recognize the ruins of the Coliseum of ancient Rome, a copy of the Venus of Melos and Venus Genetrix. Theseus, Mercury of the Vatican, and several others easily recognized by the student of ancient art and sculpture.

FORMER GRADUATE RETURNS HOME FROM SYRIA

Miss Mary Cashmore, U. V. M., '21, and a member of Sigma Gamma Fraternity, has returned from Syria, where she has been teaching for the last three years, in a school for Armenian fugitives, at Aleppo. Miss Cashmore was in Burlington recently, and spoke to the women of the College Street Church.

Aleppo, she said, is a city of about 300,000 inhabitants of many races, representing all types of Europeans. She described the city vividly, its beautiful gardens, its huge [illegible] stone houses surrounded by courtyards, and its narrow, winding streets, through which the Latins ride on their donkeys.

The curriculum of the high schools is similar to ours. Much work is done along the lines of religious teachings in which are felt the far-reaching hands of the Y. W. C. A. and the Christian Endeavor.

BOSTON POST COMMENTS ON NORWICH AIR FLYING

The Boston Post of November 7 carried the following editorial commenting on the airplane demonstration staged by the Norwich cadets at the Norwich-Vermont game last Saturday. The editorial which was entitled "Bad Business" read as follows:

Somebody should get after the pilot of the airplane that flew over the crowd at the Norwich-Vermont game at Burlington on Saturday, and "threw consternation into the Vermont cheering section by showering the home rooters with paper signs which carried in large red letters the admonition 'Beat Vermont.'" It is reported that the machine swooped over the gridiron several times.

Such flying is grossly unsportsmanlike, and is forbidden by most states that have airplane regulations. We don't know whether Vermont has them or not, but she ought to have. If the pilot, who is a Springfield man, also has a federal license, he is apt to lose it, as he most certainly should.

Any flier who will expose a crowd to the menace of a low flying airplane, directly over it has no business operating at all. And not much more can be said of the two Norwich cadets who rode as passengers and distributed the dodgers.

STATE H. S. EDITORS MET AT UNIVERSITY SATURDAY

At the annual meeting of high school editors of the State which was held Saturday morning in Hall B of the College of Medicine there was a record attendance, 125 editors and teachers of English being present.

There were representatives of 24 high schools and academies at the meeting. The following schools were represented: Spaulding High School and Goddard Seminary of Barre, Bradford Academy, Bristol High, Edmunds High of this city, Chelsea High, Enosburg Falls High, Essex Junction High, Fair Haven High, Hinesburg High, Montpelier High and Montpelier Seminary, People's Academy of Morrisville, Newbury High, Newport High, Proctor High, Randolph High, Richford High, Richmond High, Rutland High, St. Jonhsbury Academy, Stowe High, Troy Conference Academy, Vergennes High.

Dean J. L. Hills of the College of Agriculture welcomed the visitors. W. H. Crockett, lecturer in journalism at the University, presided and outlined the purposes of the conference.

Howard L. Hinckley, editor of the Rutland Herald who was one of the judges who awarded the scholarships offered by the University for the best high school papers, explained the reasons for choosing the prize winners.

Prof. Leon W. Dean of the University gave a short talk in which he outlined the essential features of the short story.

The visitors were guests of the University at dinner served at the Van Ness House at which President Bailey was present. After the banquet Carl Ranger, faculty advisor at St. Johnsbury Academy, discussed the relation of the English department to the high school paper. This address was followed by a general discussion of the editorial and business problems of the high school newspaper.

BATTALION APPEARED IN UNIFORM LAST FRIDAY

On Friday, November 9, 1928, the University of Vermont campus turned into a temporary army camp, for on that day all students taking military science reported for drill in their military uniforms, which they will wear every Friday thereafter.

A few hundred students composed mainly of Freshmen and Sophomores lined up in the gymnasium and the cage dressed in their uniforms. It made a colorful sight, to say the least. Especially handsome and commanding were the Senior Advance Military students whose uniforms are not unlike those of commissioned officers. They were in charge of the three companies and conducted a snappy and speedy drill. Observing their superiors, many a Freshman doubtless decided to pursue Advance Military Science as soon as he will become a Junior.

Colonel Black informs us that the Sophomore class will have their first written examination on Thursday, November 15, 1928, at 7.30 a.m. There will be no military classes for Sophomores on Wednesday.

Freshmen will begin target practice on Tuesday morning.

Cap And Skull Sponsoring Pep Smoker in Gym Tonight

Medics Will Put On One of Their Famous Smokers Filled With Novelty Acts and Stunts at 7.30 P.M.—Cayward Is in Charge of Affair

SOMETHING UNUSUAL IS PROMISED TO AUDIENCE

Cap and Skull, the honorary Senior Medic Society, is putting on one of its famous smokers in the gym tonight at 7.30 p.m. Dr. C. H. Beecher, Mayor of Burlington, has been secured to give the main speech of the evening. There will be novelty acts and unique stunts galore.

The Medics have in years past established an envious record in sponsoring smokers. Cap and Skull usually takes its turn at giving a smoker before one of the state title games. Boulder and Key and Snake, the honorary Senior and Junior societies respectively, have each made a huge success of their smokers. The Medics augur well to climax the football season with a smoker that will go down in history as other Medic affairs have.

Claire Cayward, the new Green and Gold mentor in basketball and Senior at the College of Medicine, is chairman of the committee in charge of tonight's pep raiser. Cayward with his long connection with the University is in a position to know what constitute real smokers. The Medics have been quietly working among themselves the past week devising stunts and novelty acts that will arouse the enthusiasm of the audience.

A special quartette will render vocal numbers. Speeches by the Coach, Manager and Captain of the team will be in order. Refreshments of cider and doughnuts will be served in the gym immediately following the program. The R. O. T. C. Band will play special numbers and accompany in the singing.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Miss Terrill, head of the Home Economics Department, left for Boston Wednesday to attend the New England Home Economics Association meeting. From there she will go to Washington, D. C., to be present at the annual Land-Grant College Convention.

The following girls from the Home Economics Department are in charge of Practice House this week: Lorraine Owens and Jacqueline Lanou, '30, hostess and assistant hostess; Emma Douglas and Helen Albee, '30, Cooks; Ann Wilder and Thelma Lamson, '31, waitresses; and Theodora Wakefield, '32, Freshman helper.

Miss Sarah Holbrook of the Department of Education, will speak at the meeting of the Women's Protective League next Monday on "The Challenge of the Problem Child." She will address the Women's Club of Windsor next Wednesday.

The Women's Health Council is making plans for Health Week to be held during the week of November 19. At the end of the week, there will be selected from the various dormitories the girl with the best posture. Each day of the week, as in former years, will be devoted to a different way of guarding the health.

W. H. Crockett of the University at Colchester, Vt., on Tuesday, is writing about the work of the University Publicity Bureau.

Examinations for the fall semester will be held next week. Make-up examinations for those having cuts in physical education will be held during the week beginning December 3 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 4 o'clock.

SMALLEY FUND ATTAINS HIGH GOAL FIRST DAY

Over $100 Raised Tuesday in Three-day Campaign—Congo Institute Secures Many Contributions From Students

With $118 in pledges and cash raised the first day the Smalley Campaign Committee was well on its way last Tuesday evening in the three-day campaign to raise the sum of $500 toward the missionary labors of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Smalley in the Congo Institute at Kanene in South Africa. Not only individual contributions swelled the total at the Old Mill booths and at the campaign table on the Billings Library steps but pledges and contributions came in from a number of fraternities whose members made their donations collectively.

The Congo Institute for which the Vermont Student Christian Associations opened their campaign is a missionary institution with an educational purpose similar to Yeli in China and to similar organizations in Asia and Africa supported by such colleges as Dartmouth, Maine and Williams. The Congo teaches New Testament, simple arithmetic, reading, writing and languages. It furnishes work of some kind to a number of natives and room and clothing to the natives in its charge. In order to extend its work and to enhance the effectiveness of the work it now does, the institute has for some time been in need of money. Accordingly, Mr. Smalley, a Vermont alumnus in the class of 1921, and Mrs. Smalley, Vt. '21, appealed to their University for the necessary sum. At present 60 men are employed on its farm to work and learn better agricultural methods. With the money raised during this last week employment can probably be given to many more men.

A week's wages is $1.75. Fifteen cents will pay for a native's food for one week. Ten dollars will support a native child in school for eight months.

Most interesting of all concerning the natives and one of the most difficult problems the Smalleys have to deal with are their superstitions.

"To the average man here," writes Mr. Smalley, "all death and sickness are the product of evil charms to be overcome with stronger ones." Dead spirits, believe the natives, may return to eat live people, an earthquake to them is the dead moving. Lightning, says the native, may be an animal—for does it not "claw" a tree? Internal pain is looked on as a snake to be liberated by such methods as cutting.

It is not unusual to "consult" the spirits of the dead at the time of any trouble and the medium gets a fat fee. To make a dog fat, his tail is cut off and fed to him. Beads are hung up in front of dovecots to insure the safety of the birds.

Their games are mostly dances with a moral significance but the boldest natives, says Mr. Smalley, "would blush to dance as we do, actually holding the girls."

In a letter to Merle Duval, chairman of the campaign committee, Smalley writes:

"The Congo Institute's educational standards are low but very high compared to those it serves and its ethical standards are of a much higher rank comparatively.

"The Congo Institute was founded four years ago and was finally central-

PROF. STILLWELL VICTOR IN ANNUAL FALL TENNIS

From forty odd entrants, Prof. Stillwell emerged victorious from the annual fall tennis tournament. His victim in the finals was Goddard whom he defeated by the scores 6-4, 6-4, 6-4. The winner came into the finals by trimming Wheeler in the quarter finals, 7-5, 6-0, and Shedd in the semi finals, 6-4, 8-6. Goddard took out Pouch in the quarter finals and Borkland in the semi finals, both in straight sets.

Prof. Stillwell's name goes on the Lieutenant Perry Aldrich cup, along with Freddie Guild's, which appears in 1925 and 1926, and M. F. Davis, ex-'31, who won it last year. For permanent possession the cup must be won three times.

ASSISTANT DEAN SWIFT SPEAKS ON PHILOSOPHY

"Relation of Mathematics to Philosophy" is Subject of Dean Swift's Talk to Members of John Dewey Club

Assistant Dean Swift spoke on the "Relation of Mathematics to Philosophy" to the members of the John Dewey Club last Tuesday evening at the Vermonters' club house on Summit Street.

He stated that there is a tendency among mathematicians today to attempt to discover the source of their science, to find out how mathematical concepts arose, and to get a clear understanding upon what basis the present science of mathematics is built. When mathematicians attempt thus to get at the foundations of their science, they must revert to philosophy, he said.

Geometry, as we know it, is largely built upon assumptions which might be wrong. We attain knowledge through our senses which may deceive us, said the speaker, and our senses tell us we live upon a plane, and so we have built a system of geometry based upon planes. This system of geometry has proved very useful to us, he said, and we are likely never to discard it for any reason; but that it has been demonstrated that it is useful is no reason to assume that there may not be other systems of geometry in existence upon other planets and among other men that are just as useful to them and their world and which, at the same time, may be entirely contrary to our system of geometry in this world.

By means of a diagram, the speaker showed a hypothetical spherical world in the center of which was heat in which objects expanded, and upon the outer edge of which was cold of such intensity that objects would contract to nothingness if brought there.

In such a world, Mr. Swift stated, a straight line would be a curve. A straight line, explained the speaker, is the shortest distance between two points. Since objects would expand toward the center of the spherical world, then the shortest possible way a person living in that world could go from one point to another would be to take steps inclining towards the center since expansion would reduce the number of steps which would need to be taken to reach the destination.

In such a world, too, any number of parallel lines could be drawn through a point, and these lines would never intersect that line to which they were made parallel. Parallel lines are lines which never meet. In such a world the lines would have contracted to nothingness at the edge of the sphere and so could never meet.

Our geometry is Euclidean, stated Mr. Swift. The geometry of such a world as pictured above would be non-Euclidean, that is, it would not conform to the geometric concepts we hold in this world and which were formulated for us by Euclid. But their geometry would serve the needs of that world, he declared.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE INT'NAT'L CLUB MEETS

Local Branch of National Organization Meets at Professor Carroll's Home to Ouline Annual Program

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the International Relations Club was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Prof. Carroll, faculty advisor of the organization. Plans for the current year were discussed and the program of the national organization was outlined.

The International Relations Club at this University is one of many similar groups located in the various colleges and universities throughout the country and functioning under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. All students interested in this field are invited to attend the discussions and take part in the work of the club. The organization is primarily organized as a study club, but this year it is planned by the local group to hold two banquets at which professors or other men qualified in the field of foreign affairs will be asked to speak.

If the club keeps up a reputation as an active branch of the national society and covers the work as mapped out by it, the International Relations Clubs of the University of Vermont will probably be entitled, in common with groups from other universities, to send a delegate to the British-American Student Conference on International Relations which will be held at Oxford University next summer. This student will have his expenses paid by the national organization but he must be a member of an active International Relations Club.

Following the lines laid out by the National Organization, the first semester will be devoted to a study of Inter-American Relations. For this purpose the Vermont chapter has already received several books and pamphlets on the various South American countries, the Pan-American Union, the Cuban Republic, and Mexico.

The first meeting of the local group will be held at four o'clock Thursday afternoon, November 22, in 37 North College. At this time officers for 1928-29 will be elected, plans for the time and place and frequency of meetings will be discussed and voted upon, and the general nature and work of the club will be outlined. As the future success of the organization will depend largely upon the work done at this meeting, it is hoped that all who are interested in the field of International Relations will be present at this convocation.

Friday, at 4 p.m., in Hall A of the Medical Building there will be a lecture by Dr. Bonner, which all Freshman women are required to attend. The subject will be phases of the problem of personal adjustment. Two years ago, Dr. Pratt gave a similar series of lectures which were very interesting and helpful and Dr. Bonner's talks will be equally worthwhile. The second of these talks will take place on December 14.

NOTICE!!!

First practice for basketball candidates will be called Monday evening at 7.30 in the University Gymnasium. All letter men get their uniforms on Monday afternoon.

BOTH TEAMS REPORTED IN PINK OF CONDITION

Middlebury vs. Vermont. Porter Field, 2 p.m. Saturday, November 24. That is the final state contest that will be played this week-end to help decide who can call themselves champs this year. As it stands now Norwich has won one and tied one. Vermont has tied one and Middlebury has lost one. It is impossible for Middlebury to win the hunting but they can prevent the Burlingtonians from disputing the rights of the cadets, if they hang a can of defeat on the Cats' tail.

The Blue eleven is in fine condition however and some idea may be gained of the strength of the team by an article from the Middlebury Campus by Ward S. Yunker.

The Panther will be in shape for the Vermont game. This is good news to the followers of the Middlebury team because all through the season the Blue and White has been hampered by injuries. From the very start, Coach Beck has been nursing a crippled team and much of the poor showing this season can be laid directly to the fact that his men have been in poor physical condition.

Jacobs, who has been out since early in the season with ripped muscles in his shoulder has been able to take practice and will be able to get into the game with Catamounts. If the game is played on a dry field, Jacobs should show up to advantage as he is fast and shifty.

MacNary is once again in condition and with Valois on the other wing, the Cats should find gaining through these sections hard. In case Whitman is unable to play the entire Vermont game, Webber will take his place. Webber has been playing center since Whitman was injured and has been putting up a good game.

The squad came through the Tufts game without any further injuries and with the exception of Keenan, who is still laid up with a bad leg, and Grugget who has been out of the last two games because of injuries, will be able to face Vermont at full strength.

Schmidt is out for the rest of the season, but his place will be capably filled and with the line once more at its full strength, the Kittens from Burlington should find gaining through the line a bit more than they can accomplish. The Vermont line is heavier than the Blue and White forwards, but the Panther has found this to be so in most all of the games to date and none of the opponents could gain with any degree of ease through the bulwark that Coach Clogston has moulded out of fairly green material.

Willis will be cavorting around in a Middlebury football uniform for the last time and "Bo" is expected to put up his best game of the season. When in form, Willis is a hard man to stop and he promises to be in form for Saturday's game.

McLeod has been improving steadily and will be all set to crack the Vermont line for gains. This husky full back has been a tower of strength on the defense all season and many a Green and Gold back will have occasion to be reminded of this fact before the game is over.

Our own "Sammy" has been the most consistent ground gainer on the team this year and has been especially brilliant in his own backyard on the two occasions that he has played there. Of course the Middlebury rooters will expect to see Guarnaccia in fine trim for the melee with the Cats.

Coaches Beck and Clogston have labored long and hard to give Middlebury a winning team. They feel that at last the time has come for them to show the results of their labors.

and so the Blue and White followers can expect to see the Panther bite and claw his way to heights never before reached this season. Reverses have been numerous and victories have been scarce, but before the week is over we expect to see another one chalked up on the right side of the ledger.

The Catamounts are also in excellent condition following the R. P. I. contest. The game against the boys in blue is figured to be a bigger and harder one than against Norwich even though they did defeat Middlebury. The Blue has a rather light team but it is a snappy outfit and has a better record so far this year than Vermont can boast of. However, the Green and Gold eleven has not been playing the football it is capable of up until the last few games.

With the adoption of a training table and sleeping quarters it can be readily seen that they are taking this game seriously and the students are back of them to the last man. Since the Norwich game student spirit has been at a high pitch on the campus and if there is a possible chance to take this next game it is going to be done.

Coaches Rattan and Tully are putting their men through stiff workouts every night and the men are working harder than ever before this season. The line will probably be the same as in the R. P. I. and Norwich games and the strongest backfield seems to be the one used against Norwich, that is O'Keefe at quarter, Halligan and Scutakes halfbacks, and Robbins at full. The front wall will probably be Capt. Palmer and Segal, ends; both of these men showing unusual strength on the defense. Kropper and Nilsen will no doubt take care of the tackle positions with Burstein and A. Scutakes next to "Bump" Levine at the pivot position.

How they will probably line up for the big game tomorrow:

DEBATING TEAM LEAVES SUNDAY ON MAINE TRIP

Vermont's debating prowess invested in George Nelson, Franklin Sears and Louis Lisman will take its first stand against Bates College at Lewiston, Me on Monday, November 19. The topic is: "Resolved, that the modern trend in advertising is deplorable."

The team including Coach M. D. Powers will leave for the long awaited Maine trip on Sunday morning, November 18. They will travel in an automobile. Lewiston, Me. is their destination. They will complete their forensic ability against Bates College, the University of Maine and other Maine institutions of higher learning. This is a three-day trip and the team is expected to return on Wednesday.

Each of these three men is a veteran debater and speaker of promising ability which means that Vermont is out to win. Lisman and Nelson were members of the last year's cub team which took the Bailey Interclass Debating Cup; Franklin Sears, the manager, made his first team about two years ago. In addition, all three men are members of Tau Kappa Alpha, national honorary debating fraternity.

This will be the first and only series of debates that the team will participate in until after mid-years when three more men will be ordered to conduct all debates thereafter.

The co-ed varsity debating team is communicating with Dartmouth men regarding a debate to be held here.

The Dopefiend

NATE GLUCAS

Middlebury and Vermont hold their annual gridiron clash tomorrow at the fair of the Black Panther. A great deal depends upon the outcome of this contest as it will tell whether Norwich has full claim to the state title or whether Vermont will dispute this claim. In case there is chalked up another defeat for Middlebury an effort will be made to get Norwich to play off the tie with Vermont on November 24. The cadets rode the alibi around about the field being muddy the day that they played Vermont, so all they have to do is accept the proposition if the Green and Gold is victor Saturday. However if they don't accept, which will seem mighty strange as they tote around, "If we could only play them again," and Vermont defeats Middlebury by a better score than 13-6 it seems to me that there would be no dispute but what the Cats hold the bunting.

The Rattanites are raring to go after the raw deal that was handed them against Rensselaer last Saturday. Everyone will grant that they outplayed R. P. I. and proof of this is that they gained more ground than the engineers. However no alibies offered, we lost but it will be some fight this week-end. The Cats are physically fit now having a training table and training quarters at Converse Hall. This is a decided advantage as a good football team needs a training table and training quarters.

"Sammy" Guarnaccia is the Blue Boy that the felines will have to watch. He has been their most consistent groundgainer. He is fast and an excellent broken field runner and besides is a bulwark on the defense. Another hard-running back is Willis who promises to cause the Cats plenty of worry.

However the Black Panthers will have to keep their eyes open and claws ready if they expect to stop "Tim" Halligan, who has torn off game after game for the Cats this year. If "Tim" ever gets loose Saturday it's goodbye Middlebury.

It is figured by the dopesters that both teams will resort to straight football this Saturday and pick out each other's weaknesses as they go along. In the R. P. I. fray the Burlingtonians had the Trojans "buffaloed" for a while with their overhead game. In case straight football doesn't work Vermont can fall back on a strong aerial game.

Our line is going to prove to be a cog in Middlebury's running machine. Each game the fronter wall becomes stronger and now is pretty strong being built around "Bump" Levine through which very few can plow their way.

Every member in the school should make it his business to be at Porter Field Saturday. Where there's a will there's a way to get down even if you have to bum your way be at the game.

PROOFS OF INDIVIDUAL PICTURES FOR ARIEL BACK

Work on the 1930 Ariel is being held up by the absence of L. L. McAllister, the official photographer, who is on a vacation. The proofs of the individual pictures, however, are here, from numbers 124 to 225. The others will be here soon. Juniors should consult their receipts to see if their proofs are among those which have arrived, and are in the Y. M. C. A. office.

Miss Lois Fiske, '29, was hostess at a formal dinner given at the Home Management House last week. The guests were President and Mrs. Bailey, Professor and Mrs. Myrick, and Mrs. Stetson.

BUSINESS MEETING HELD BY BLUESTOCKINGS CLUB

Bluestockings held a business meeting at the Kappa Alpha Theta House Friday, November 9. Julia Waterman, '30, vice-president, presided in the absence of the president. Catherine Bassett, '29, resigned as chairman of the Program Committee, and Priscilla Campbell, '30, was elected to take her place. Dues are now payable to the treasurer, Mary Freeman, '29, and may be paid in quarterly or semester payments. At least a quarterly payment must be made by the next meeting, which will take place at the Kappa Alpha Theta House, Friday, November 23, at four o'clock. This is to be a social meeting, and all members are expected to be present. In the future, all business meetings will be held in 3 North College, at 1.30, on the Fridays when the business meetings are scheduled, unless otherwise announced. The next business meeting will be held on December 7.

Papers submitted by those women who wish to try out for membership to Bluestockings must be placed in the Grievance Box in the Y room not later than Thanksgiving Day. Any contributions handed in later than that date will not be considered. This is definitely the final date and no time extension will be granted for any reason whatsoever. Any form of writing is acceptable. Stories, sketches, essays, and poems, are the usual contributions, but any other form of composition will be equally welcome. There are no qualifications as to length or subject matter; typewritten material is preferable, but not required. This contest is not only for Freshmen but for all college women who are interested in literary achievement. A committee has been elected to read the papers before presenting them to the club for consideration. Esther Nelson, '29, will read the short stories, Mary Turner, '29, the essays, and Janice Goodrich, '30, the poems.

STUDENTS INSPIRED BY REVEREND RAVI-BOOTH

"What should a student get out of his college career to justify the time, expense and sacrifice of his parents and himself?" was the question which the Reverend Vincent Ravi Booth, for ten years the leader of religious thought in Old Bennington, answered in his talk at the Ira Allen Chapel Wednesday morning.

First a student should get some "great and good ideas." Ideas are at the back of every great movement Puritan Revolution, French and American Wars. The result depends on the value of the ideas. "Ideas are dynamic," said Rev. Ravi-Booth, "and in party to your spirit, a measure of greatness."

In the second place a student should enter into intellectual freedom for freedom comes through knowledge. "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

As the last point, he brought out the idea that as a result of his college experience a student should enjoy a prophetic vision. As a great leader once said, "Where there is no vision the people perish." The spirit of America is suffocated by material wealth and needs the visions of life in order to establish the Kingdom of God upon earth.

In conclusion the Reverend Ravi Booth stated that if a student during his college life acquired, even in a small measure, great and good ideas, intellectual freedom, and prophetic vision, his college experience was worth anything that it had cost in effort, time, money and sacrifice.

Gentlemen

Having been a user of Edgeworth for over eight years, I can truthfully say that it is the best on earth. I am enclosing a little ditty that I believe expresses my sentiments entirely.

Old Man Joy and Old Man Trouble
Went out for a walk one day
I happened to pass when they met on the street

And I overheard them say,
Said Old Man Trouble, "She's as wrong as she can be,
There ain't no fun in anything to me, why
I was just talking' to Old Man Sorrow,
And he says the world will end tomorrow."

Then Old Man Joy he started to grin,
And I saw him bring out that OLD BLUE TIN,
Then OLD JOHNNY BRIAR was next on the scene,
And he packed him full from the OLD BLUE TIN,
And I heard him say as he walked away,
"You have to have a smoke screen every day.
When a man gets the blues, and he needs a friend,
He can find consolation in the OLD BLUE TIN,
And I just don't believe on all this earth
There's a thing that'll match good old EDGEWORTH."

Yours very truly,
F. H. McMurray

BURY MIDDLEBURY

All roads will lead to Middlebury Saturday. The great football classic of the State will be played at Porter Field. The coveted state championship is at stake. The stage is all set for another one of this season's history-making epochs. Vermont with a comparatively poor season behind it with the exception of the Norwich game is out to bring home the state title. And the fighting Catamounts can do it if backed by a big cheering section of Green and Gold rooters.

Norwich claimed the state championship last year, but had no clear title to it because the game between Norwich and Middlebury was never played off on account of the flood. Norwich defeated Vermont, but the Catamounts in turn won from the Black Panthers. The Catamounts are going down to Middlebury tomorrow in an attempt to establish a clear claim to the title.

The Northfield News in the writeup of the Norwich-Vermont game of two weeks ago was dissatisfied with the outcome of the contest blaming the scoreless tie on prejudiced refereeing and umpiring. A decisive victory over Middlebury Saturday would cause these alibies to disappear into thin air.

A decisive victory can be Vermont's but not without student support. The University will be represented on Porter Field by an eleven carefully picked and trained men. The University should be represented in the stands by every loyal Vermont student. The team always shows its true fighting spirit in the state title series. A noisy and peppy cheering section will augment this fighting spirit to a greater pitch.

In former days, over 500 Vermont students annually made the trip to Middlebury or Northfield to cheer the team on to greater efforts. Special trains were run. But these specials have been discontinued with the increasing popularity of automobiles, a fact which in no way should lessen the number of Green and Gold rooters at Middlebury. Fully 500 Vermont supporters are expected to fill the cheering stands at Porter Field tomorrow afternoon.

Let's BURY MIDDLEBURY and bring that state title back on the Hill.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

All I know is what I hear, but judging from that the Vermont-Middlebury game tomorrow is going to be something to write home about. Vermont's team is a different one from that which opened the season, and Middlebury will give its best to beat Vermont tomorrow. Vermont's backfield is faster and surer than it has been and the line—but we're all betting on that. Middlebury is having [illegible] and the expected [illegible] work out victoriously.

Let's not be cocksure, but everybody be down and out! Down to Midd and out to that game! Middlebury's [illegible] to be buried and we don't want anyone to miss the funeral service!

Abe Martin On Thrills

(By College Humor)

"The great unsettlin,' disturbin' factor in American life today is th' insistent an' growin' thirst fer thrills," delcares Abe Martin in the December College Humor. "Women especially crave thrills. Look how they rush t' go under th' knife fer th' thrill of an operation. Ther hain't a thrill left in housekeepin', 'cept perhaps climbin' on a stepladder now an' then. Men, too, are beginnin' t' complain. They git a thrill out o' spendin' money, but earnin' it is growin' tiresome an' prosy.

It's the great variety o' present day thrills that's alarmin'. Robbin' a bank when you don't need th' money, drinkin' anything that smells like [illegible] startin' off t' Paris in one-motor planes, walkin' home from thickets at three a.m. I don't believe there's any thrill left t' a first kiss; it comes so easy these days. We're gittin' so blasé that we walk out on a lion act."

Professor H. F. Perkins went to Montpelier November 9 to attend an executive committee meeting of the Vermont Commission of Country Life.

Prominent University hunters recently announced they would not go cow shooting this year. When interviewed by your reporter one of them said, "Last year we went deer hunting. Because of the unusual amount of comment occasioned by this trip the episode will not be repeated."

Farmers in seven townships and nine surrounding counties sent their heartiest congratulations to the young Nimrods.

No small amount of enthusiasm was stirred up on Wednesday morning when a Frosh dashed out upon the campus waving a deck of Camel cigarettes. An eager group of students crowded about him, all asking if he purchased the humps in the bookstore. "No, fellows," he said, "I did not purchase them in the bookstore. I bought them in Winooski." First aid was given one boy who fainted when he heard the sad news.

Garfinkle McGaugnitzky has been appointed official census taker among the campus squirrels. He has not yet completed his work and could tell your reporter but little when interviewed at his home in Port Henry last evening. However, Census Taker McGaugnitzky stated that there are many squirrels upon the campus. He further said they were the nut-eating variety of squirrel. Pressed for an opinion on the results of the election, one of Garfy's shrewd old eyes dropped meaningly. "Did you know," he said, "squirrels eat nuts? Where you find squirrels, Sir, there you are bound to find nuts." Just how this fits in with the draping of the statue of Andrew Jackson by Virginia students your reporter does not know.

McGaugnitzky insists there are squirrels on the Vermont campus. "Moreover," he adds, "lay on't, where they's squirrels they's bounden to be nuts."

Your reporter found no nut trees on the campus. Further details are eagerly awaited.

Local Save Our Girls League is all wrought up about Justina. At a mass meeting held in the Old Chapel last evening, at 12 sharp, it was unanimously voted to remonstrate with Justinia's owners. Justinia's owners have as yet refused a statement to the press. Justinia herself seems well fed and happy. She would make no comment on her new occupation.

SAYINGS OF NAUTES

by

P. VILLIUS VALTRO

I. Children are said to make for themselves imaginary companions and heroes. How like man, who makes for himself many gods, each one the only true God! many many religions, each the only true belief!

II. The rain falls and the world is clean. But in the minds of many is hatred of the rain—it spoils the game, they say.

Be of good cheer for in case of defeat, lo! there is the reason. In case of victory, what a team we have to have met and overcome that obstacle! And in case of tie, lo! although the weather stopped our offense, our defense held!

III. Think, in the midst of your studies,—pardon the laughter, my son, I was about to continue, but that is joke enough.

IV. The sun also rises in the morning and sets at night; but does it ever, in its course, shine on a student who knows more than he knew three days before?

Ask yourself and the question will be answered.

V. For verily, the youth learns the next lesson while forgetting the one he learned a week ago, and that also in its turn is forgot.

VI. Yea verily, what a system.

VII. Bunk, saith the thinker, and again bunk, all is bunk. Bunk was in the beginning and so it will be, ever increasing till the end. For by leaving bunk you become able to produce bunk.

And so it goes on, ever greater like a snowball growing as it rolls.

VIII. When reason and bunk, side by side attain their highest point, suddenly all superstition and bunk reign alone again.

All else is forgot and suppressed.

IX. But as long as intelligent men live all is well.

X. Whatever happens, in the end is all right.

XI. Revile not fate for petty worrits. What is, is, and is to be rejoiced in, not hated.

XII. Art is not mechanical. Then disregard the mechanics.

XIII. Styles are many, yet think you the present one the best; for so it is taught? Read and then judge for yourself.

XIV. Why marks? except roughly as indications of intelligence? Otherwise they are valueless, for do you pretend to know a man well by the way he acts in an artificial unit, the class, and speaks or writes on an artificial subject? There is more needed than that.

XV. You say: "Take this course and pass it. Then you will be an educated man and a gentleman." But what is that course? The learning of that which other men have written. Do you believe then what you say? For verily, I do not.

XVI. It would be a good thing for the world if everything written were forgotten and men started again to discover everything for themselves.

XVII. That would be real learning.

XVIII. Think.

Hazing Being Abandoned

The National Student Federation organized at Princeton in 1925 and now representing over two hundred colleges and universities in the Nation, sent delegates this summer to the annual conference of the Confederation Internationale des Etudiantes.

This Confederation was founded at Strasbourg in 1919, and now includes the student bodies of forty-eight nations.

South Africans, New Zealanders, Filipino and Chinese were among the 1,400 who met at the Sorbonne in August.

The Conference was called for: determination of international norms of measurement for scholastic degrees; the creation of university archives to house an international exchange of books, publications and scientific and technical films, management of an international sanitarium for students, and the organization of international athletic meets to be held in connection with the annual conferences.

French Universities and Military Colleges have bidden farewell to hazing, following an edict sent out by M. Herriot, Minister of public instruction, and Mr. Rainleye, Minister of war.

The edict forbids "brimades," or practical jokes and hazing and specifies that freshmen must be "cordially welcomed and treated fairly and kindly."

The world's laziest man started to cut down some trees last week. A storm came along and saved him the trouble. Later, lightning struck the brush pile and saved him the trouble of burning it. The rumor is that he is now waiting an earthquake to shake the potatoes from the ground.—Thalia.

Pick Their Classes

The interested student, when determining on the courses which he will follow is continually faced with the necessity of eliminating many studies which hold an intrinsic interest for him and of consequently hindering a certain breadth of intellectual interest.

While the value of concentration in the field is self evident, the fact that excessive focusing of interest upon one subject is likely to produce a narrow, biased point of view is to our mind equally obvious.

Even for those students whose interests are centered essentially upon the field, an observation of the contrasting methods of approach employed for that same subject by different departments should be of great interest as well as of considerable broadening value. For the student of Shakespearian literature there should be the usefulness in a consideration of the approach of English history upon its own. For the student of psychology a knowledge of the determinations of physiology, biology, or physics and some of his material should carry with it breadth of view which he might not otherwise attain.

The University authorities can make such a healthy interchange of ideas by permitting undergraduates to elect freely any courses in which he may be interested although not en-

CATAMOUNT HARRIERS READY FOR MIDD MEET

Vermont's cross-country men will journey to Middlebury this week-end to engage the Midd harriers in their annual meet. Coach "Milt" Aldrich has turned out some fine runners despite the lack of veterans to work with. Both the varsity and freshman teams have been taking jaunts over the course nightly.
